28 And the angel came in unto her, and said, * Hail, thou that art † highly favoured, * the Lord is with thee: blessed art thou among women.

29 And when she saw him, † she was troubled at his saying, and cast in her mind what manner of salutation this should be.

priest; had he not loved the service he was engaged in, he might have made the loss of his speech a pretext for immediately quitting it. But as he was not thereby disabled from fulfilling the sacerdotal function, so he saw he was bound to continue till his ministry was ended; or till God had given him a positive dismissal. Preachers who give up their labour in the vineyard because of some trifling bodily disorder by which they are afflicted, or through some inconvenience in outward circumstances, which the follower of a cross-bearing, crucified Lord should not mention, show that they either never had a proper concern for the honour of their Master or for the salvation of men; or else that they have lost the spirit of their Master, and the spirit of their work. Again, Zacharias did not hasten to his house to tell his wife the good news that he had received from heaven, in which she was certainly very much interested: the angel had promised that all his words should be fulfilled in their season, and for this season he patiently waited in the path of duty. He had engaged in the work of the Lord, and must pay no attention to anything that was likely to mar or interrupt his religious service. Preachers who profess to be called of God to labour in the word and doctrine, and who abandon their work for filthy lucre's sake, are the most contemptible of mortals, and traitors to their God.

29. hid herself five months] That she might have the fullest proof of the accomplishment of God's promise, before she appeared in public, or spoke of her mercies.

25. To take away my reproach] As fruitfulness was a part of the promise of God to his people, Gen. xvii. 6, and children, on this account, being considered as a particular blessing from heaven, Exod. xiii. 26. Lev. xxvi. 9. Psal. cxviii. 3. so barrenness was considered among the Jews as a reproach, and a token of the disapprobation of the Lord. 1 Sam. i. 6. But see ver. 26.

26. A city of Galilee] As Joseph and Mary were both of the family of David, the patrimonial estate of which lay in Bethlehem, it seems as if the family residence should have been in that city, and not in Nazareth; for we find that even after the return from the captivity, the several families went to reside in those cities, to which they originally belonged. See Neh. xi. 3. but it is probable that the holy family removed to Galilee, for fear of exciting the jealousy of Herod, who had usurped that throne to which they had an indisputable right. See on chap. ii. 39. thus by keeping out of the way, they avoided the effects of his jealousy.

27. To a virgin espoused, &c.] See on Matt. i. 18. and 23. The reflections of pious father Quesnel on this subject are worthy of serious regard. At length the moment is come which is to give a son to a virgin, a saviour to the world, a pattern to mankind, a sacrifice to sinners, a temple to the divinity, and a new principle to the new world. This angel is sent from God, not to the palaces of the great, but to a poor maid, the wife of a carpenter. The Son of God comes to humble the proud, and to honour poverty, weakness, and contempt. He chooses an obscure place for the mystery which is most glorious to his humanity, its union with the Divinity, and for that which is most degrading (his sufferings and death) he will choose the greatest city! How far are men from such a conduct as this.

28. And the angel came in unto her] Some think that all this business was transacted in a vision; and that there was no personal appearance of the angel. When divine visions were given, they are announced as such, in the sacred writings; nor can we with safety attribute any thing to a vision, where a divine communication is made; unless it be specified as such in the text.

Hail] Analogous to Peace be to thee—May thou enjoy all possible blessings!

Highly favoured] As being chosen in preference to all the women upon earth, to be the mother of the Messiah.

The Lord is with thee] Thou art about to receive the most convincing proofs of God's peculiar favour towards thee.

Blessed art thou among women] That is, thou art favoured beyond all others.

29. She was troubled at his saying] The glorious appearance of the heavenly messenger, filled her with amazement; and she was puzzled to find out the purport of his speech.

31. Thou—shalt call his name JESUS] See on Matt. i. 20, 21. and here on chap. ii. 21.

32. He shall be great] Behold the greatness of the Man Christ Jesus: 1st. Because that human nature that should be 30 And the angel said unto her, Fear not, Mary, for thou hast found favour with God.

31 * And behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and † shall call his name JESUS.

32 He shall be great, † and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and † the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David:

33 † And he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever: and of his kingdom there shall be no end.

34 Then said Mary unto the angel, How shall this be, seeing I know not a man?

35 And the angel answered and said unto her, † The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall h Ch. 2. 21.—1 Mark 5. 7.—k 2 Sam 7. 11, 12. Isa. 9. 6, 7. & 16. 5. Jer. 23. 5. Ps. 132. 11. Rev. 3. 7.—l Dan. 2. 44. & 7. 14, 27. Obad. 21. Mic. 4. 7. John 12. 34. Heb. 1. 6.—m Matt. 1. 32.

born of the Virgin, was to be united with the divine nature. 2dly. In consequence of this, that human nature should be called in a peculiar sense, the Son of the most high God; because God would produce it in her womb, without the intervention of man. 3. He shall be the everlasting Head and Sovereign of his church. 4. His government and kingdom shall be eternal. Revolutions may destroy the kingdoms of the earth, but the powers and gates of hell and death shall never be able to destroy or injure the kingdom of Christ. His is the only dominion that shall never have an end. The angel seems here to refer to Isa. ix. 7. xvi. 5. Jer. xxiii. 5. Dan. ii. 44. vii. 14. All which prophecies speak of the glory, extent, and perpetuity of the evangelical kingdom. The kingdom of grace, and the kingdom of glory, form the endless government of Christ.

33. The house of Jacob] All who belong to the twelve tribes, the whole Israelitish people.

34. Seeing I know not a man] Or, husband. As she was only contracted to Joseph, and not as yet married, she knew that this conception could not have yet taken place; and she modestly inquires by what means the promise of the angel is to be fulfilled, in order to regulate her conduct accordingly.

35. The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee] This conception shall take place suddenly, and the Holy Spirit himself shall be the grand operator. The power, descends, the miracle working power, of the Most High shall overshadow thee, to accomplish this purpose, and to protect thee from danger. As there is a plain allusion to the Spirit of God brooding over the face of the waters, to render them profitable, Gen. i. 2. I am the more firmly established in the opinion advanced on Matt. i. 20. that the rudiments of the human nature of Christ was a real creation in the womb of the Virgin, by the energy of the Spirit of God.

Therefore also that holy thing (or person) shall be called the Son of God] We may plainly perceive here, that the angel does not give the appellation of Son of God to the divine nature of Christ; but to that holy person or thing, which was to be born of the Virgin, by the energy of the Holy Spirit. The divine nature could not be born of the Virgin; the human nature was born of her. The divine nature had no beginning; it was God manifested in the flesh, 1 Tim. iii. 16. it was that Word which being in the beginning (from eternity) with God, John i. 2. was afterward made flesh, (because manifest in human nature) and tabernacled among us, John i. 14. Of this divine nature the angel does not particularly speak here, but of the tabernacle or skrine, which God was now preparing for it, viz. the holy thing, that was to be born of the Virgin. Two natures must ever be distinguished in Christ: the human nature, in reference to which he is the Son of God, and inferior to him, Mark xiii. 32. John v. 19. xiv. 28. and the divine nature, which was from eternity, and equal to God, John i. 1. x. 30. Rom. ix. 5. Col. i. 16—18. It is true, that to Jesus the Christ, as he appeared among men, every characteristic of the divine nature is sometimes attributed, without appearing to make any distinction between the divine and human nature; but is there any part of the Scriptures in which it is plainly said that the divine nature of Jesus was the Son of God? Here I trust I may be permitted to say, with all due respect for those who differ from me, that the doctrine of the eternal Sonship of Christ is, in my opinion, anti-scriptural, and highly dangerous; this doctrine I reject for the following reasons:

1st. I have not been able to find any express declaration in the Scriptures concerning it.

2dly. If Christ be the Son of God as to his divine nature, then he cannot be eternal: for son implies a father; and father implies, in reference to son, precedency in time, if not in nature too.—Father and son, imply the idea of generation; and generation implies a time in which it was effected, and time also antecedent to such generation.

3dly. If Christ be the Son of God, as to his divine nature, then the Father is of necessity prior, consequently superior to him.

4thly. Again, if this divine nature were begotten of the Father, then it must be in time; i. e. there was a period in which it did not exist, and a period when it began to exist. This destroys the eternity of our blessed Lord, and robs him at once of his Godhead.

5thly. To say that he was begotten from all eternity, is in my opinion absurd; and the phrase eternal Son, is a positive self-contradiction. ETERNITY is that which has no beginning, nor stands in any reference to TIME. Son supposes time, generation, and father; and time also antecedent to overshadow thee; therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee, shall be called <sup>the</sup> Son of God.

36 And behold, thy cousin Elizabeth, she hath also conceived a son in her old age; and this is the sixth month with her, who was called barren.

37 For with God nothing shall be impossible.

38 And Mary said, Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word. And the angel departed from her.

39 And Mary arose in those days, and went into the hill country with haste, into a city of Judæa;

40 And entered into the house of Zacharias, and saluted Elizabeth.

41 And it came to pass, that when Elizabeth heard the salutation of Mary, the babe leaped in her womb; and Elizabeth was filled with the Holy Ghost:

42 And she spake out with a loud voice, and said, Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the fruit of thy womb.

43 And whence is this to me, that the mother of my Lord should come to me?

44 For, lo, as soon as the voice of thy salutation sounded in mine ears, the babe leaped in my womb for joy.

45 And blessed is she that believed; for there shall be a performance of those things which were told her from the Lord.

1 Mat. 14. 32 & 25. 64. Mark 11. John 1. 34. & 20. 31. Acts 9. 37. Rom. 1. 4.—
1 Tim. 3. 14. Jer. 22. 17. Zech. 3. 6. Man. 19. 23. Mark 10. 27. Ch. 15. 27. Rom. 4. 21.—
1 Joh. 2. 1. 11.—4. Ver. 25. Luke 9. 84.—Or, which believed that there.—1 Sam. 1. 1. Ps. 22. 2. & 25. 1. Heb. 3. 18.—1 Sam. 1. 1. Ps. 136. 6.

such generation. Therefore the conjunction of these two terms son and eternity is absolutely impossible, as they imply essentially different and opposite ideas.

The enemies of Christ's divinity have, in all ages, availed themselves of this incautious method of treating this subject, and on this ground, have ever had the advantage of the delusion of the godhead of Christ. This doctrine of the eternal Sonship destroys the deity of Christ; now, if his deity be taken away, the whole Gospel scheme of redemption is ruined. On this ground, the atonement of Christ cannot have been of infinite merit, and consequently could not purchase pardon for the offences of mankind, nor give any right to, or possession of, an eternal glory. The very use of this phrase is both absurd and dangerous; therefore let all those who value Jesus and their salvation abide by the Scriptures.

36. Thy cousin Elizabeth) Thy kinswoman, συγγενής. As Elizabeth was of the tribe of Levi, ver. 5 and Mary of the tribe of Judæa, they could not be relatives but by the mother's side.

She hath also conceived) And this is wrought by the same power and energy through which thou shalt conceive. Thus God has given thee a proof and pledge in what he has done for Elizabeth, of what he will do for thyself; therefore, have faith in God.

Who was called barren) It is probable that Elizabeth got this appellation by way of reproach; or to distinguish her from some other Elizabeth, also well known, who had been blest with children. Perhaps this is the reproach which Elizabeth speaks of, ver. 25. her common name among men, among the people who knew her, being Elizabeth the barren.

7. For with God nothing shall be impossible.) Words of the very same import with those spoken by the Lord to Sarah, who he foretold the birth of Isaac, Gen. xviii. 14. Is any thing too hard for the Lord? As there can be no doubt that Mary perceived this allusion to the promise and birth of Isaac, she must have had her faith considerably strengthened by reflecting on the intervention of God in that case.

38. Behold the handmaid of the Lord) I fully credit what thou sayest, and am perfectly ready to obey thy commands, and to accomplish all the purposes of thy grace concerning me. It appears, that at the instant of this act of faith and purposed obedience, the conception of the immaculate humanity of Jesus took place; and it was done unto her according to his word. See ver. 35.

39. In those days) As soon as she could conveniently fit herself out for the journey.

Hill country) Hebron, the city of the priests, Josh. xxi. 11. which was situated in the tribe of Judah, about forty miles south of Jerusalem, and upwards of seventy from Nazareth.

With haste) This probably refers to nothing else than the earnestness of her mind to visit her relative Elizabeth, and to see what the Lord had wrought for her.

41. Elizabeth was filled with the Holy Ghost) This seems to have been the accomplishment of the promise made by the angel, ver. 15. He shall be filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his mother's womb. The mother is filled with the Holy Spirit, and the child in her womb becomes sensible of the divine influence.

Blessed art thou among women) Repeating the words of the angel, ver. 23. of which she had probably been informed by the Holy Virgin, in the present interview.

42. The mother of my Lord) The prophetic spirit which appears to have overshadowed Elizabeth, gave her a clear understanding in the mystery of the birth of the promised Messiah.

45. Blessed is she that believeth; for there shall be, &c.) Or, Blessed is she who hath believed that there shall be, &c.) I believe to be the proper arrangement of the passage, and is thus noticed in the marginal reading. Faith is here represented as the foundation of true happiness, because it re-

46 And Mary said, My soul doth magnify the Lord,

47 And my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour.

48 For he hath regarded the low estate of his hand-maiden: for, behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed.

49 For he that is mighty hath done to me great things; and holy is his name.

50 And his mercy is on them that fear him, from generation to generation.

51 He hath showed strength with his arm; he hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts.

52 He hath put down the mighty from their seats, and exalted them of low degree.

53 He hath filled the hungry with good things; and the rich he hath sent empty away.

54 He hath holpen his servant Israel, in remembrance of his mercy;

55 As he spake to our fathers, to Abraham, and to his seed for ever.

56 And Mary abode with her about three months, and returned to her own house.

57 Now Elizabeth's full time came that she should be delivered; and she brought forth a son.

58 And her neighbours and her cousins heard how she had h Mal. 3. 12. Ch. 11. 27.—1 Pt. 7. 19. & 108. 2, 3.—k Ps. 111. 9.—1 Gen. 17. 7. Exod. 26. 6. Ps. 103. 17. 18.—m Ps. 95. 1. & 119. 15. Am. 4. 0. & 51. 9. & 62. 10.—n Ps. 33. 10. 1 Pt. 5. 6.—o 1 Sam. 6. 4. & Job. 5. 11. Ps. 113. 6.—p 1 Sam. 2. 9. Ps. 94. 10.—q Ps. 93. 3. Jer. 21. 3, 20.—r Gen. 17. 19. Ps. 132. 11. Rom. 11. 28. Gal. 3. 16.

ceived the fulfilment of God's promises. Whatever God has promised, he intends to perform. We should believe whatever he has spoken—his own authority is a sufficient reason why we should believe. Let us only be convinced that God has given the promise, and then implicit faith becomes an indispensable duty—in this case, not to believe implicitly would be absurd and unreasonable—God will perform his promise, for he cannot lie.

46. And Mary said) Two copies of the Dala, and some books mentioned by Origen, give this song to Elizabeth. It is a counterpart of the song of Hannah, as related in 1 Sam. ii. 1—10. This is allowed by many to be the first piece of poetry in the New Testament; but the address of the angel to Zacharias, ver. 13—17, is delivered in the same way: so is that to the Virgin, ver. 30—33, and so also is Elizabeth's answer to Mary, ver. 42—45. All these portions are easily reducible to the hemitich form in which the Hebrew poetry of the Old Testament is found in many MSS., and in which Dr. Kennicott has arranged the Psalms, and other poetical parts of the Sacred Writings. See his Hebrew Bible.

My soul doth magnify the Lord) The verb μεγαλύνει, Kypke has proved, signifies to celebrate with words, to extol with praises. This is the only way in which God can be magnified, or made great: for strictly speaking, nothing can be added to God, for he is infinite and eternal; therefore the way to magnify him, is to show forth and celebrate those acts in which he has manifested his greatness.

47. My spirit hath rejoiced) Exulted. These words are uncommonly emphatical—they show that Mary's whole soul was filled with the divine influence, and wrapt up in God.

48. He hath regarded) Looked favourably, &c. εὐθελάει. In the most tender and compassionate manner he has visited me in my humiliation, drawing the reasons of his conduct, not from any excellence in me, but from his own eternal kindness and love.

All generations shall call me blessed.) This was the character by which alone she wished to be known; viz. The blessed or happy virgin. What dishonour do those do to this holy woman, who give her names and characters which her pure soul would abhor; and which properly belong to GOD her Saviour! By her votaries she is addressed as Queen of heaven, Mother of God, &c. titles both absurd and blasphemous.

49. He that is mighty hath done to me great things) Or, miracles, μεγάλα. As God fills her with his goodness, she empties herself to him in praises; and sinking into her own nothingness, she ever confesses, that God alone is all in all.

Holy is his name) Probably the word which Mary used was ἁγία, chese, which though we sometimes translate holy, see Psal. lxxvii. 2. cxlv. 17. yet the proper meaning is abundant goodness, exuberant kindness, and this well agrees with the following clause.

50. His mercy is on them that fear him) His exuberant kindness manifests itself in acts of mercy to all those who fear or reverence his name; and this is continued from generation to generation, because he is abundant in goodness, and because he delighteth in mercy. This is a noble, becoming, and just character of the God of the Christians: a being who delights in the salvation and happiness of all his creatures, because his name is mercy, and his nature, love.

51. He hath showed strength) Or, He hath gained the victory, κέρως κέρως. The word κέρως is used for victory, by Homer, Hesiod, Sophocles, Euripides, and others.

With his arm) Grotius has well observed that God's efficacy is represented by his finger, his great power by his hand, and his omnipotence by his arm. The plague of lice was the finger of God. Exod. vii. 18. The plagues in general were wrought by his hand, Exod. iii. 20. And the destruction of Pharaoh's host in the Red Sea, which was effected by the omnipotence of God, is called the act of his arm, Exod. xv. 16.

had showed great mercy upon her; and they rejoiced with her.

59 And it came to pass, that on the eighth day they came to circumcise the child: and they called him Zacharias after the name of his father.

60 And his mother answered and said, Not so; but he shall be called John.

61 And they said unto her, There is none of thy kindred that is called by this name.

62 And they made signs to his father, how he would have him called.

63 And he asked for a writing table, and wrote, saying, His name is John. And they marvelled all.

a Ver. 14.—b Gen. 17. 12. Lev. 12. 3.—c Ver. 13.—d Ver. 13.—e Ver. 20.—f Or, things.—g Ver. 20.—h Ch. 2. 19, 21.—i Gen. 32. 2. Psa. 30. 17. & 59. 21. Asa 11. 21.

He hath scattered Δυσκοπῶν, hath scattered abroad; as a whirlwind scatters dust and chaff.

The proud Or haughty, υπερηφανῶς; from υπερ, above, and φαινω, I show—the haughty men, who wish to be noticed, in preference to all others; and feel sovereign contempt for all but themselves. These God scatters abroad—instead of being in his sight, as in their own, the most excellent of the earth, he treats them as straw, stubble, chaff, and dust.

In the imagination of their hearts While they are forming their insolent, proud, and oppressive projects—laying their plans, and imagining that accomplishment and success are waiting at their right-hand, the whirlwind of God's displeasure blows, and they and their machinations are dissipated together.

62. He hath put down the mighty from their seats Or, He hath taken down potentates from their thrones. This probably alludes to the removal of Sauki from the throne of Israel, and the establishment of the kingdom in the person and family of David. And as Mary spoke prophetically, this saying may also allude to the destruction of the kingdom of Satan and his allies, and the final prevalence of the kingdom of Christ.

63. Filled the hungry—the rich he hath sent empty away. God is here represented under the notion of a person of unbounded benevolence, who is daily feeding multitudes at his gates. The poor and the rich are equally dependant upon him; to the one he gives his affluence for a season, and to the other his daily bread. The poor man comes through a sense of his want to get his daily support, and God feeds him; the rich man comes through the lust of gain, to get more added to his abundance, and God sends him empty away—not only gives him nothing more, but often deprives him of that which he has, because he has not improved it to the honour of the giver. There is an allusion here, as in several other parts of this song, to the case of Hannah and Peninnah, as related 1 Sam. i. 2, &c. ii. 1—10.

54. He hath holpen [supported ἀνταβήσθω] his servant Israel Israel is here represented as falling, and the Lord comes speedily in and props him up. The house of David was now ready to fall and rise no more; Jesus being born of the very last branch of the regal line, revived the family, and restored the dominion.

In remembrance of his mercy By mercy, the covenant which God made with Abraham, Gen. xv. 18. is intended: this covenant proceeded from God's eternal mercy, as in it salvation was promised to all the nations of the earth. See Gen. xvii. 19, and xii. 18. and this promise was, in one form or other, given to all the fathers, ver. 55.

This song properly consists of three parts.

1. In the first part Mary praises God for what he had done for herself, ver. 46—50.
2. In the second, she praises him for what he had done, and would do against the oppressors of his people, ver. 51—53.
3. In the third, she praises him for what he had done, and would do for his church, ver. 53—56.

56. And Mary abode with her about three months According to some, the departure of Mary from Hebron must have been but a few days before the birth of John; as nine months had now elapsed since Elizabeth's conception: see ver. 36. Hence it immediately follows:

57. Now Elizabeth's full time came, &c. But according to others, we are to understand the three months of Mary's visit as preceding the birth of John, which would complete the time of Elizabeth's pregnancy, according to ver. 36. and the only difficulty is to ascertain whether Mary went immediately to Hebron after her salutation; or whether she tarried nearly three months before she took the journey.

58. And her neighbours and her cousins—rejoiced with her. Because sterility was a reproach, and they now rejoiced with their relative, from whom that reproach was now rolled away. To rejoice with those whom God has favoured, and to congratulate them on the advantages which he has granted to them, is a duty which humanity, charity, and religion, call upon us to fulfil.

1. It is a duty of humanity which should be punctually performed. We are all members of each other, and should rejoice in the welfare of the whole. He who rejoices in his neighbour's prosperity, increases his neighbour's happiness, and gets an addition to his own.

2. It is a duty which charity or brotherly love requires us to perform with sincerity. In the polite world, there is no duty better fulfilled in word, than this is: but sincerity is utterly banished: and the giver and receiver are both convinced that compliments and good wishes mean—nothing. He who does 64 And his mouth was opened immediately, and his tongue loosed, and he spake, and praised God.

65 And fear came on all that dwelt round about them: and all these sayings were noised abroad throughout all the hill country of Judea.

66 And all they that heard them laid them up in their hearts, saying, What manner of child shall this be! And the hand of the Lord was with him.

67 And his father Zacharias was filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophesied, saying,

68 Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath visited and redeemed his people, k Jos. 2. 25.—l Kings 1. 42. Ps. 41. 12. & 72. 15. & 105. 42.—m Exod. 3. 14 & 4. 3. Psa. 111.5. Ch. 7. 15.

not endeavour to take a sincere part in his neighbour's prosperity, will soon feel ample punishment in the spirit of jealousy and envy.

3. It is a duty of religion which should be fulfilled with piety. These neighbours and relatives saw that God had magnified his mercy towards Elizabeth, and they acknowledged his hand in the work. God is the dispenser of all good—he distributes his favours in mercy, judgment, and justice. Let us honour him in his gifts: and honour those for his sake, who are objects of his favour. The society of believers are but one body; the talents, &c. of every individual are profitable to the whole community; at least none are deprived of a share in the general welfare, but those who through jealousy or envy refuse to rejoice with him towards whom God hath magnified his mercy.

59. On the eighth day they came to circumcise See an account of this institution in the note on Gen. xvii. 10—14. Had circumcision been essential to an infant's salvation, God would not have ordered it to be delayed to the eighth day, because in all countries, multitudes die before they arrive at that age. Baptism, which is generally allowed to have been substituted for circumcision, is no more necessary to the salvation of an infant, than circumcision was. Both are signs of the covenant—circumcision, of the putting away the impurity of the flesh; and baptism, of the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost, producing the answer of a good conscience towards God. Confer 1 Pet. ii. 21. with Tit. iii. 5. This should never be neglected: it is a sign and token of the spiritual grace.

They called him Zacharias Among the Jews, the child was named when it was circumcised, and ordinarily the name of the father was given to the first-born son.

60. Not so; but he shall be called John This is the name which the angel desired should be given him, ver. 13. and of which Zacharias by writing had informed his wife. There is something very remarkable in the names of this family. Zacharias, זכריה the memory, or memorial of Jehovah; יהוה, yehoh, at the end of the word, being contracted for יהוה Yehovah, as in many other names. Elizabeth, עליזבת the Sabbath, or rest of my strong God: names probably given them by their parents to point out some remarkable circumstances in their conception or birth. And John, which should always be written Jehochanan, or Yehochanan, יוחנן the grace or mercy of Jehovah; so named, because he was to go before and proclaim the God of all grace, and the mercy granted through him to a lost world. See John i. 29. see also chap. iii. 16. and Mark i. 4.

61. None of his kindred As the Jewish tribes and families were kept secretly distinct, it appears the very names of the ancestors were continued among their descendants, partly through reverence for them, and partly to avoid confusion in the genealogical tables, which, for the sake of distinguishing the inheritances, were carefully preserved in each of the families. It seems to be on this account that the neighbours and relatives objected to a name, which had not before existed in any branch of the family.

62. They made signs to his father Who, it appears from this, was deaf as well as dumb; otherwise they might have asked him, and obtained his answer in this way.

63. A writing table Πλακιδιον, a tablet, a diminutive of πλακα, a table. "The boys in Barbery are taught to write upon a smooth thin board, slightly daubed over with whitening, which may be rubbed off or renewed at pleasure. Such probably (for the Jewish children used the same) was the little board or writing table, as we render it, Luke i. 63. that was called for by Zacharias." Shaw's travels, p. 194. My old MS. considers the word as meaning the instrument of writing rather than the tablet on which he wrote: and he strikes a pommel, most springs, soon is his name.

A thin board, made out of the pine tree, smeared over with wax, was used among the ancients; and to this the Anglo-Saxon version seems to refer, as it translates πλακιδιον, perþebe, a wax board or cloth.

64. The latter clause of the preceding verse should be joined with the beginning of this, as follows: And they marvelled all, for his mouth was opened, &c. Every person must see the propriety of putting this clause, And they marvelled all, to the beginning of the 64th verse, instead of leaving it at the end of the 63d, as in the common version. The people did not wonder because Zacharias said, He shall be called John; but because he himself was that instant restored to the use of his speech.

And he spake and praised God. In his nine months' so-

69 And hath raised up a horn of salvation for us, in the house of his servant David;
 70 As he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began:
 71 That we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us;
 72 To perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant;

* Pa. 12. 17.—J. Jer. 23. 6. & 30. 10. Dan. 9. 24. Acts 3. 21. Rom. 1. 2.—L. Lev. 26. 43. & 45. 9. & 46. 25. & 48. 4. & 49. 1. & 50. 15. & 51. 10. & 52. 15. & 53. 12.

ence, he had learnt the proper use of his tongue; and God, whose power was discredited by it, is now magnified. Happy they, who, in religious matters, only break silence in order to speak of the loving kindness of the Lord!

65. And fear came] Seeing what they might have thought a paralytic affection, so suddenly and effectually healed. Φοβος—This word certainly means in several places, religious fear; or reverence; and in this sense it is used Acts ix. 31. Rom. ii. 18. xlii. 7. 1 Pet. i. 17. ii. 18. iii. 2. The meaning of it here is plainly this: The inhabitants of Hebron and its environs, who were well acquainted with the circumstances of Zacharias and Elizabeth, perceived that God had in a remarkable manner visited them; and this begot in their minds a more than ordinary reverence for the Supreme Being. Thus the salvation of one often becomes an instrument of good to the souls of many. The inhabitants of this hill country, seem to have been an open, honest hearted, generous people; who were easily led to acknowledge the interposition of God, and to rejoice in the comfort and welfare of each other. The people of the country are more remarkable for these qualities, than those in towns and cities.—The latter, through that evil communication, which corrupts good manners, are generally prodigious, selfish, regardless of God, and inattentive to the operation of his hands.

66. What manner of child shall this be!] As there have been so many extraordinary things in his conception and birth, surely God has designed him for some extraordinary purpose.—These things they laid up in their heart, patiently waiting to see what God would work.

The hand of the Lord was with him] God defended and prospered him in all things, and the prophetic spirit began to rest upon him.

67. Zacharias—prophesied] The word prophecy is to be taken here in its proper acceptation, for the predicting or foretelling future events. Zacharias speaks, not only of what God had already done, but also of what he was about to do, in order to save a lost world.

68. Blessed be the Lord God of Israel: for, etc.] Zacharias praises God for two grand benefits, which he had granted to his people.—1. He has visited them. 2. He has redeemed them. 1. He speaks by the spirit of prophecy, which calls things that are not, as though they were; because they are absolutely determined by the Most High, and shall be all fulfilled in their season. God visits his people in the incarnation of Jesus Christ; therefore this Christ is called by him, Κεκοι, ο Θεος, Ιεχωαχ ο Θεος του Ισραηλ.—Here the highest and most glorious character of the Supreme Being is given to Christ. 2. This God redeems his people: it is for this end that he visits them. His soul is about to be made a sacrifice for us: he becomes flesh, that he may suffer and die for the sin of the world. God, by taking upon him the nature of man, has redeemed that nature from eternal ruin.

He hath—redeemed] Ερωτων λυτρωσει, he hath made a ransom—hid down the ransom price.—Αντροπον signifies particularly to ransom a captive from the enemy, by paying a price. The following remarkable passage from Josephus, Ant. d. b. c. 14. sect. 1. fully illustrates this meaning of the original. "Barad not knowing what had happened to his brother, λυτρωσασθαι, to ransom him from the enemy: and was willing to pay λυτρωστρον αυτου, a ransom for him, to the amount of three hundred talents." Sinners are fallen into the hands of their enemies, and are captives to sin and death. Jesus ransoms them by his own blood, and restores them to life, liberty, and happiness. This truth the whole Bible teaches: this truth God has shown in certain measures, even to those nations who have not been favoured with the light of his written word: for Christ is that true light, which enlightens every man that cometh into the world.

How astonishing is the following invocation of the Supreme Being, transmitted from the original Sansacret by Dr. C. Wilson, still existing on a stone, in a cave near the ancient city of Opa, in the East Indies.

"The Deity, who is the Lord, the possessor of all, appeared in this ocean of natural beings, at the beginning of the Kales Yag, (the age of contention and baseness.) He who is omnipotent, and everlastingly to be contemplated, the Supreme Being, the Eternal One, the Divinity worthy to be adored—APPEARS here with a PORTION OF HIS DIVINE NATURE. Reverence be unto thee in the form of * BÜÖd-dhÄ! Reverence be unto the Lord of the earth! Reverence be unto thee, an INCARNATION of the Deity, and the Eternal One! Reverence be unto thee, O God, in the form of the God of Mercy; the dispenser of pain and trouble, the Lord of all things, the Deity who overcometh the sins of the KÄSÄ Yöog; the guardian of the universe, the emblem of mercy towards those who serve thee—OMV! the possessor of all things in VITAL

73 And the oath which he sware to our father Abraham,
 74 That he would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies, might serve him without fear,
 75 In holiness and righteousness before him, all the days of our life.
 76 And thou, child, shalt be called the prophet of the Highest: for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways;

* Rom. 6. 18. 22. Heb. 6. 14.—J. Jer. 23. 20. 45. Eph. 4. 24. 2 Thess. 2. 13. 2 Tim. i. 8. Tit. 2. 12. 1 Pet. i. 15. 2 Pet. i. 4.—J. Gen. 22. 1. & 4. 5. Matt. 11. 10. Ver. 12.

FORM! Thou art * BrähmÄ, Veesnoo, and Mähäs! Thou art Lord of the universe! Thou art under the form of all things, moveable and immovable, the possessor of the whole! and thus I adore thee. Reverence be unto the BESTOWER OF SALVATION, and the Ruler of the faculties! Reverence be unto thee, the DESTROYER of the EVIL SPIRIT! († Dämördärk, * show me favour! I adore thee, who art celebrated by a thousand names, and under various forms, in the shape of Bööd-dhÄ, the God of MERCY! Be propitious, O Most High God! ASIATIC SANSCRET, vol. i. p. 294, 296.

69. And hath raised up a horn of salvation] That is, a mighty and glorious Saviour; a quotation from Psal. xviii. 2. Horns are the well known emblems of strength, glory, and power, both in the sacred and profane writers, because the strength and beauty of horned animals consist in their horns. Horns have also been considered as emblems of light; therefore the heathen god Apollo, is represented with horns, to point out the power, glory, and excellence of the solar light. The Chaldee paraphrast sometimes translates רן ארען, horn, by רן מלכות, or שררה, malkuth, 1 Sam. ii. 10. Jerem. xlviii. 25. which signify a kingdom; but it is likely, that the allusion is here made to the horns of the altar; and as the altar was a place of refuge and safety, and those who laid hold on its horns were considered to be under the protection of the Lord; so, according to the expression of Zacharias, Jesus Christ is a new altar, to which, whosoever sees, shall find refuge.

Some imagine that this form of speech is taken from the custom of ancient warriors, who had a horn of steel on the top of their helmets, which ordinarily lay flat, till the person came victorious from battle, and then it was erected, as emblematical of the victory gained. Such a horn as this is represented on the helmet of the Abyssinian kings and warriors: see the plates in Bruce's Travels. To this custom of wearing or lifting up the horn, the following Scriptures are thought to allude; 1 Sam. ii. 10. Psal. cxli. 9. cxlviii. 4. Lam. ii. 17. In ancient gems and coins, this form of the horn on helmets, is easily discernible, sometimes flat, sometimes erected. A horn filled with various fruits, was also the emblem of abundance among the ancients: hence their cornu copia, or horn of plenty. From all this we may learn, that the Lord Jesus gives a luminous, powerful, prevalent, glorious, and abundant SALVATION OF REFUGE to mankind.

In the house of his servant David] Or, in the family: so the word oikos, house, is often used in the Sacred writings. In ver. 32 the angel states that Mary was of the family of David; and Zacharias, who, from the nature of his office, must have been well acquainted with the public genealogical tables, attests the same thing. This is a matter of considerable importance; because it shows forth the truth of all the prophetic declarations, which uniformly state that the Messiah should come from the family, and sit on the throne of David.

71. That we should be saved (literally, a salvation) from our enemies] As Zacharias spoke by the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, the salvation which he mentions here, must necessarily be understood in a spiritual sense. Salut, death, and sin, are the enemies from which Jesus came to deliver us. Sin is the most dangerous of all, and is properly the only enemy we have to fear. Salut is without us, and can have no power over us, but what he gets through sin. Death is only in our flesh, and shall be finally destroyed (as it affects us) on the morning of the resurrection.—Jesus redeems from sin; this is the grand, the glorious, the important victory. Let us get sin cast out, and then we need fear neither death nor the devil.

72. His holy covenant] See the note on ver. 54.
 73, 75. Being delivered, &c.] The salvation brought by Jesus Christ, consists in the following things: 1. We are to be delivered out of the hands of our enemies, and from all that hate us: so that sin shall neither have dominion over us, nor * Bood-dha. The name of the Deity, as author of happiness.

† OM. A mystic emblem of the Deity, forbidden to be pronounced but in silence. It is a syllable formed of the Sansacret letters K, Ü, Ä, which in composition coalesce, and make Ü and the nasal consonant m. The first letter stands for the Creator. The second for the Preserver, and the third for the Destroyer. It is the same among the Hindooes, as Om Yehovah is among the Hebreues.

* Brahma, the Deity in Ä's creative quality. Veesnoo, he who filleth all space, the Deity in his preserving quality. Mahesa, the Deity in his destroying quality. This is properly the Hindoo Trinity: for these three names belong to the same Being. See the notes to the Bhagvat Greta.

† Damerdars or DarmodrÄ, the Indian god of virtue.

77 To give knowledge of salvation unto his people... 78 Through the tender mercy of our God; whereby the day-spring from on high hath visited us.

existence in us. 2. We are to worship God, λατρεύειν, to render him that service and adoration which the letter and spirit of his religion require. 3. We are to live in holiness, a strict inward conformity to the mind of Christ—and righteousness, a full outward conformity to the precepts of the Gospel.

The Song, in the last clause, is omitted by many MSS, Versions and Fathers. Griesbach has left it out of the text: however, it is but of small importance whether we read all our days, or, all the days of our life.

76. And thou, child, &c.] Zacharias proclaims the dignity, employment, doctrine, and success of his son; and the ruin and recovery of the Jews and the Gentiles.

1. His dignity. Thou shalt be called (constituted) a prophet of the Most High. Prophet has two acceptations: 1st. a person who foretells future events; and, 2dly. A teacher of men in the things of God, 1 Cor. xiv. 3. John was a prophet in both senses: he proclaimed the mercy which should be communicated; announced the baptism of the Holy Spirit; and taught men how to leave their sins, and how to find the salvation of God. See chap. iii. 5-14. His very name, Jehochanan, the grace or mercy of Jehovah, (see ver. 60.) was a constant prediction of the salvation of God. Our Lord terms him the greatest prophet which had ever appeared in the world. He had the honour of being the last and clearest prophet of the Old Covenant, and the first of the New.

2. His employment. Thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways. He should be the immediate forerunner of Jesus Christ, none being capable of succeeding him in his ministry but Christ himself. It was to prepare his ways, to be the honoured instrument in the hands of God, of disposing the hearts of multitudes of the lazarites to believe in and follow the Lord Jesus.

3. Zacharias points out the doctrine or teaching of John. It should be ymōtes σαρωπιου, the science of salvation. Men are ignorant, and they must be instructed. Human sciences may be profitable in earthly matters, but cannot profit the soul. The science that teaches God, must come from God. No science is of any avail to the soul, that does not bring salvation with it: this is the excellence of heavenly wisdom; and an excellence that is peculiar to itself. No science but that which comes from God can ever save a soul from the power, the guilt, and the pollution of sin.

4. Zacharias predicts the success of his son's ministry. Under his preaching, the people should be directed to that tender mercy of God, through which they might obtain the remission of their sins, ver. 77, 78. Those who are sent by God, and preach his truth, and his only, shall always be success-

79 To give light to them that sit in darkness, and in the shadow of death; to guide our feet into the way of peace. 80 And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, and was in the deserts till the day of his showing unto Israel.

ful in their work: for it is for this very purpose that God has sent them; and it would be a marvellous thing indeed, should they labour in vain. But there never was such a case since God made man, in which a preacher was divinely commissioned to preach Jesus, and his salvation, and yet had no fruit of his labour.

5. Zacharias points out the wretched state in which the inhabitants of Judea and the Gentile world were then found. 1. Their feet had wandered out of the way of peace (ver. 79.) of temporal and spiritual prosperity. 2. They had got into a state of darkness—they were blind concerning the things of God, and the things which belonged to their salvation. 3. They had become contented inhabitants of this land of intellectual darkness—they had sat down in it, and were not concerned to get out of it. 4. They were about to perish in it—death had his dominion there; and his swift approaches to them were now manifested to the prophet by seeing his shadow cast upon them. Ignorance of God and salvation is the shadow of death; and the substance, eternal ruin, is essentially connected with the projected shadow. See these phrases explained at large, on Matt. iv. 16.

6. Zacharias proclaims the recovery of a lost world. As the removal of this darkness, and redemption from this death, were now at hand, John is represented as being a day-spring from on high, a morning-star, that foretold the speedy approach of the day, and the rising of the Sun of righteousness. That these words should be applied to John, and not to Christ, I am fully satisfied; and cannot give my reasons better for the arrangement I have made in the preceding notes, than in the words of an eminent critic, who, I find, has adopted nearly the same plan with myself. The passage as I read it, is as follows: Through the tender mercy of our God, by which he hath visited us: a day-spring from on high, to give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, &c. "Let the reader judge, whether my arrangement of this passage, which much better suits the original, be not far more elegant, and in all respects superior to the old translation? Thou child! wilt be a teacher—Thou wilt be a day-spring from the sky. And with what beauty and propriety is John, the forerunner of our Lord, styled the dawn of day, that ushers in the rising of the Sun of righteousness! And the concluding words—to guide our feet into the way of peace—is a comprehensive clause, after the manner of Hebrew poetry, belonging equally to the former sentence, beginning at—And thou, child! and the latter, beginning at—A day spring from the sky: for the people spoken of in the former, are the Jews; and in the latter, the Gentiles."—WAXHAM.

80. The child grew] Increased in stature and bodily vigour. And waxed strong in spirit—had his understanding divinely illuminated, and confirmed in the truths of God. And was in the deserts—the city of Hebron, the circumjacent hill country, and in or near Nazareth. Till the time of his showing or manifestation—till he was thirty years of age, before which time the law did not permit a man to enter into the public ministry, Num. iv. 3. See also chap. iii. 23.

So much has already been said by way of practical improvement of the different subjects in this important chapter, as to preclude the necessity of any addition here.

CHAPTER II.

The decree of Augustus to enrol all the Roman empire, 1. 2. Joseph and Mary go to their own city to be enrolled, 3-5. Christ is born, 6, 7. His birth is announced to the shepherds, 8-14. They go to Bethlehem, and find Joseph, Mary, and Christ, 15-20. Christ is circumcised, 21. His parents go to present him in the temple, 22-24. Simeon receives him: his song, 25-36. Anna the prophetess, 36-38. The holy family return to Nazareth, 39, 40. They go to Jerusalem at the feast of the pass-over, and leave Jesus behind in Jerusalem, 41-44. They return seeking him, and find him, in the midst of the doctors, 45-47. His mother chides him, 48. His defence of his conduct, 49, 50. They all return to Nazareth, 51, 52. [A. M. 4000. B. U. 5. An. Olymp CXCVIII. 4.]

AND it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Cesar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed. 2. And this taxing was first made when Cyrenius was governor of Syria.)

3 And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city. 4 And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem; (because he was of the house and lineage of David:)

NOTES.—Verse 1. [Cesar Augustus] This was Caius Cesar Octavianus Augustus, who was proclaimed emperor of Rome in the 27th year before our Lord, and died A. D. 14.

That all the world should be taxed] Ταρουν σαρωπιου, the whole of that empire. It is agreed on all hands, that this cannot mean the whole world, as in the common translation; for this very sufficient reason, that the Romans had not the dominion of the whole earth, and therefore could have no right to raise levies or taxes in those places to which their dominion did not extend. Οσαυτων signifies properly the inhabited part of the earth, from οσως, to dwell or inhabit. Polybius makes use of the very words in this text, to point out the extent of the Roman government, lib. vi. c. 43. and Plutarch uses the word in exactly the same sense, Pomp. p. 635. See the passages in Wetstein. Therefore the whole that could be meant here, can be no more than that a general census of the inhabitants and their effects had been made in the reign of Augustus, through all the Roman dominions.

But as there is no general census mentioned in any historian as having taken place at this time, the meaning of οσαυτων must be further restrained, and applied solely to the land of Judea. This signification it certainly has in this same evangelist, chap. xxi. ver. 26. Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after these things which are coming on the earth, in οσωνων, the land. The whole discourse relates to the calamities that were coming, not upon the whole world, nor the whole of the Roman empire, but on the land of Judea, see ver. 21. Then let them that are in Judea, see to the mainstays. Out of Judea, therefore, there would be safety; and only those who should be with child, or giving suck, in those

5 To be taxed with * Mary his espoused wife, being great with child.
 6 ¶ And so it was, that while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered.
 7 ¶ And she brought forth her first-born son, and wrapped a. Matt. i. 18. Ch. i. 27.—b. Matt. i. 25.

days, are considered as peculiarly unhappy, because they could not flee away from that land on which the scourge was to fall: for the wrath, or punishment, shall be, says our Lord, et non deservit, on this very people, viz. the Jews, ver. 23. It appears that Saint Luke used this word in this sense in conformity to the Septuagint, who have applied it in precisely the same way, Isa. xlii. 11. xiv. 26. xxiv. 1. And from this we may learn, that the word δικαίωσις had been long used as a term by which the land of Judea was commonly expressed. It is, which signifies the earth, or world in general, is frequently restrained to this sense, being often used by the evangelists and others for all the country of Judea. See Luke iv. 26. Josh. ii. 3.

It is probable, that the reason why this enrolment or census is said to have been throughout the whole Jewish nation, was to distinguish it from that partial one, made ten years after, mentioned Acts v. 37. which does not appear to have extended beyond the estates of Archelaus, and which gave birth to the insurrection excited by Judas of Galilee. See Josephus, Ant. book xx. c. 2.

2. This taxing was first made when Cyrenius, &c.] The next difficulty in this text is found in this verse, which may be translated, Now this first enrolment was made when Quirinus was governor of Syria.

It is easily proved, and has been proved often, that Caius Sulpicius Quirinus, the person mentioned in the text, was not governor of Syria, till ten or twelve years after the birth of our Lord.

Saint Matthew says, that our Lord was born in the reign of Herod, chap. ii. 1. at which time Quintilius Varus was president of Syria, (Joseph. Ant. book xvii. c. 5. sect. 2.) who was preceded in that office by Sentilius Saturninus. Cyrenius or Quirinus, was not sent into Syria till Archelaus was removed from the government of Judea; and Archelaus had reigned there between nine and ten years after the death of Herod; so that it is impossible that the census mentioned by the evangelist could have been made in the presidency of Quirinus.

Several learned men have produced solutions of this difficulty: and, indeed, there are various ways of solving it, which may be seen at length in Lardner, vol. i. p. 248—326. One or other of the two following, appears to me to be the true meaning of the text.

1. When Augustus published this decree, it is supposed that Quirinus, who was a very active man, and a person in whom the emperor confided, was sent into Syria and Judea with extraordinary powers, to make the census here mentioned: though, at that time, he was not governor of Syria, for Quintilius Varus was then president; and that when he came, ten or twelve years after, into the presidency of Syria, there was another census made, to both of which St. Luke alludes, when he says, This was the first assessment of Cyrenius governor of Syria; for so Dr. Lardner translates the words. The passage thus translated, does not say that this assessment was made when Cyrenius was governor of Syria, which would not have been the truth; but that this was the first assessment which Cyrenius, who was (i. e. afterwards) governor of Syria, made; for after he became governor, he made a second. Lardner defends this opinion in a very satisfactory and masterly manner. See vol. i. p. 317, &c.

2. The second way of solving this difficulty is by translating the words thus: This enrolment was made before Cyrenius was governor of Syria; or before that of Cyrenius. This sense the word πρωτος appears to have, John i. 30. οτι πρωτος ην ην, for he was before me, xv. 18. The world hated me because (πρωτος) it hated you, xv. 18. The world hated me because (πρωτος) it hated you, xv. 18. Instead of πρωτος, some critics read πρηνος. This enrolment was made before the birth of Cyrenius, Michaelis, and some other eminent and learned men, have been of this opinion: but their conjecture is not supported by any MS. yet discovered; nor, indeed, is there any occasion for it. As the words in the evangelist are very ambiguous, the second solution appears to me to be the best.

3. And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city.] The Roman census was an institution of Servius Tullius, sixth king of Rome. From the account which Dionysius of Halicarnassus gives of it, we may at once see its nature. "He ordered all the citizens of Rome to register their estates according to their value in money, taking an oath, in a form he prescribed, to deliver a faithful account according to the best of their knowledge, specifying the names of their parents, their own age, the names of their wives and children, adding also what quarter of the city, or what town in the country, they lived in." Ant. Rom. i. iv. c. 15 p. 212. Edit. Hæde.

A Roman census appears to have consisted of these two parts: 1. The account which the people were obliged to give in of their names, quality, employments, wives, children, services, and estates; and, 2. The value set upon the estates by the census, and the proportion in which they adjudged them him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn.

8 ¶ And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping * watch over their flock by night.

9 And lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the

* Or, the night-watches.

to contribute to the defence and support of the state, either in men or money, or both: and this seems to have been the design of the census or enrolment in the text. This census was probably similar to that made in England in the reign of William the Conqueror, which is contained in what is termed Domesday Book, now in the Chapter House, Westminster, and dated 1086.

5. With Mary his espoused wife] There was no necessity for Mary to have gone to Bethlehem, as Joseph's presence could have answered the end proposed in the census as well without Mary as with her; but God so ordered it that the prophecy of Micah should be thus fulfilled, and that Jesus should be born in the city of David, Mic. v. 2.

7. Laid him in a manger] Westeln has shown from a multitude of instances, that manger means not merely the manger but the whole stable, and this I think is its proper meaning in this place. The Latins use praesepe a manger, in the same sense. So Virgil, Æn. vii. p. 276. "Stabant ter centum nitidi in praesepe aliti." "Three hundred sleek horses stood in lofty stables."

Many have thought that this was a full proof of the meanness and poverty of the holy family; that they were obliged to take up their lodging in a stable: but such people overlook the reason given by the inspired penman, because there was no room for them in the inn. As multitudes were going now to be enrolled, all the lodgings in the inn had been occupied before Joseph and Mary arrived. An honest man who had worked diligently at his business, under the peculiar blessing of God, as Joseph undoubtedly had, could not have been so destitute of money, as not to be able to procure himself and wife a comfortable lodging for a night; and had he been so ill fitted for the journey as some unwarrantably imagine, we may take it for granted he would not have brought his wife with him, who was in such a state, as not to be exposed to any inconveniences of this kind without imminent danger.

There was no room for them in the inn] In ancient times, inns were as respectable as they were useful: being fitted up for the reception of travellers alone;—now, they are frequently haunts for the idle and the profligate, the drunkard and the infidel; in short, for any kind of guests except Jesus and his genuine followers. To this day there is little room (or such in most inns; nor indeed have they, in general, any business in such places.

8. There were—shepherds abiding in the field] There is no intimation here that these shepherds were exposed to the open air. They dwelt in the fields where they had their sheep penned up; but they undoubtedly had tents or booths under which they dwelt.

Keeping watch—by night.] Or, as in the margin, keeping the watches of the night, i. e. each one keeping a watch (which ordinarily consisted of three hours) in his turn. The reason why they watched them in the fields, appears to have been either to preserve the sheep from beasts of prey, such as wolves, foxes, &c. or from freebooting banditti, with which all the land of Judea was at that time much infested. It was a custom among the Jews, to send out their sheep to the deserts, about the pass-over, and bring them home at the commencement of the first rain: during the time they were out, the shepherds watched them night and day. As the pass-over occurred in the spring, and the first rain began early in the month of Marchesvan, which answers to part of our October and November, we find that the sheep were kept out in the open country during the whole of the summer. And as these shepherds had not yet brought home their flocks, it is a presumptive argument that October had not yet commenced, and that consequently, our Lord was not born on the 25th December, when no flocks were out in the fields, nor could he have been born later than September, as the flocks were still in the fields by night. On this very ground the nativity in December should be given up. The feeding of the flocks by night in the fields is a chronological fact, which casts considerable light upon this disputed point. See the quotations from the Talmudists in Lightfoot.

The time in which Christ was born has been considered as a subject of great importance among Christians. However, the matter has been considered of no moment by Him who inspired the evangelists; as not one hint is dropped on the subject by which it might be possible even to guess nearly to the time, except the chronological fact, mentioned above. A late writer makes the following remarks: "The first Christians placed the baptism of Christ about the beginning of the fifteenth year of Thiberius; and thence reckoned back thirty years, they place his birth in the forty-third year of the Julian period, the forty-second of Augustus, and the twenty-eighth after the victory at Actium. This opinion obtained till A. D. 527, when Dionysius Exiguus invented the vulgar account. Learned and pious men have trifled egregiously on this subject, making that of importance which the Holy Spirit by his silence has plainly informed them is of none." Fabricius gives a catalogue of no less than 136 different opinions glory of the Lord shone round about them: * and they were sore afraid.

10 And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

11 * For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, * which is Christ the Lord.

12 And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

Ch. 1. 12.—Gen. 12. 3. Matt. 23. 19. Mark 1. 15. Ver. 31, 32. Ca. 91. 47. Gal. 1. 23.—Isa. 9. 6.—Matt. 1. 21.—Matt. 1. 16 & 18. 15. Ch. 43. Act. 13. 28. & 10. 36. Phil. 2. 11.—(Gen. 22. 12 & 20. 1, 2. Gen. 100. 20, 21 & 148. 2. Dan. 7. 10.

concerning the YEAR of Christ's birth: and as to his birth-DAY, that has been placed by Christian sects and learned men, in every month in the year. The Egyptians placed it in January—Wagenseil, in February—Bochart, in March—some mentioned by Cleinens Alexandrinus, in April—others in May—Epiphanius speaks of some who placed it in June—and of others who supposed it to have been in July—Wagenseil, who was not sure of February, fixed it probably in August—Lightfoot, on the 15th September—Scaliger, Causaubon, and Calvisius, in October—others, in November—but the Latin church, supreme in power, and infallible in judgment, placed it on the 25th of December, the very day on which the ancient Romans celebrated the feast of their goddess Bruma." See more in Robinson's Notes on Claude's Essay, vol. 1. p. 275, &c. Pope Julius I. was the person who made this alteration, and it appears to have been done for this reason: the sun now began his return towards the northern tropic, ending the winter, lengthening the short days, and introducing the spring. All this was probably deemed emblematical of the rising of the Sun of Righteousness on the darkness of this world, and causing the day-spring from on high to visit mankind.

9. The angel of the Lord came upon them | Or stood over them, scapto. It is likely that the angel appeared in the air at some little distance above them, and that from him the rays of the glory of the Lord shone round about them, as the rays of light are projected from the sun.

They were sore afraid | Terrified with the appearance of so glorious a being, and probably fearing that he was a messenger of justice coming to denounce divine judgments, or punish them immediately, for sins with which their consciences would not fail on such an occasion to reproach them.

10. Behold, I bring you good tidings | I am not come to declare the judgments of the Lord, but his merciful loving-kindness, the subject being a matter of great joy. He then declares his message. Unto you—to the Jews first, and then to the human race. Some modern MSS. with the utmost impropriety read quibus, us, as if angels were included in this glorious work of redemption; but St. Paul says, he took not upon him the nature of angels but the seed of Abraham, i. e. the nature of Abraham and his posterity, the human nature; therefore the good news is to you, and not to yourselves exclusively, for it is to all people, to all the inhabitants of this land, and to the inhabitants of the whole earth.

11. A Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. | A Saviour, σωτηρ, the same as Jesus, from σωτηρις, to make safe, to deliver, preserve, to make alive, thus used by the Septuagint for יהוה יחיה hecheiah, to cause to escape, used by the same for עלפי to confide in, to hope. See the extensive acceptations of the verb in Miniert, who adds under σωτηρ: "The word properly denotes such a Saviour as perfectly frees us from all evil and danger, and is the author of perpetual salvation." On the word Jesus, see John 1. 29.

Which is Christ | Χριστος, the anointed, from χρισω, to anoint, the same as משח Messiah, from משח mashach. This name points out the Saviour of the world in his prophetic, regal, and sacerdotal offices: as in ancient times prophets, kings, and priests, were anointed with oil, when installed into their respective offices. Anointing was the same with them as consecration is with us. Oil is still used in the consecration of kings.

It appears from Isa. lxi. 1. that anointing with oil, in consecrating a person to any important office, whether civil or religious, was considered as an emblem of the communication of the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit. This ceremony was used on three occasions, viz. the installation of prophets, priests, and kings, into their respective offices. But why should such an anointing be deemed necessary? Because the common sense of men taught them, that all good, whether spiritual or secular, must come from God, its origin and cause. Hence it was taken for granted, 1. That no man could foretell events, unless inspired by the spirit of God. And therefore the prophet was anointed to signify the communication of the Spirit of wisdom and knowledge. 2. That no person could offer an acceptable sacrifice to God for the sins of men, or profitably minister in holy things, unless enlightened, influenced, and directed by the spirit of grace and holiness. Hence the priest was anointed, to signify his being divinely qualified for the due performance of his sacred functions. 3. That no man could enact just and equitable laws, which should have the prosperity of the community and the welfare of the individual continually in view, or could use the power confided to him only for the suppression of vice, and the encouragement of virtue, but that man who was ever under the inspiration of the Almighty. Hence kings were inaugurated by anointing with oil. Two of these offices only exist in all civilized nations, the sacerdotal and regal; and in some countries

13 And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying,

14 * Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

15 * And it came to pass as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, the Lord hath made known unto us.

Heb. 1. 14. Rev. 5. 11.—Ch. 19. 38. Eph. 1. 6 & 3. 11. Rev. 5. 13.—1. Tim. 5. 15. Ch. 1. 7. Rom. 8. 1. Eph. 2. 17. Gal. 1. 20.—1. John 3. 16. Eph. 2. 4, 7. 1. Thess. 2. 15. 1. John 4. 9, 10.—Gr. the usque, the shepherds.

the priest and king are still consecrated by anointing. In the Hebrew language, משח mashach, signifies to anoint, and משח mashiach, the anointed person. But as no man was ever dignified by holding the three offices, so no person ever had the title mashiach, the anointed one, but Jesus the Christ. He alone is King of kings, and Lord of lords: the king who governs the universe, and rules in the hearts of his followers; the prophet to instruct men in the way wherein they should go; and the great high-priest to make atonement for their sins. Hence he is called the Messias, a corruption of the word משח ha-mashiach, the anointed one, in Hebrew; which gave birth to Ἰησοῦς, ho Christos, which has precisely the same signification in Greek; of him, Melchisedech, Abraham, Aaron, David, and others, were illustrious types. But none of these had the title of THE MESSIAH, or the ANOINTED OF GOD. This does, and ever will, belong exclusively to JESUS THE CHRIST.

The Lord. | Κυριος, the supreme, eternal Being, the ruler of the heavens and the earth. The Septuagint generally translate יהוה Yehovah by Κυριος. This Hebrew word, from קנא hayah, he was, properly points out the eternity and self-existence of the Supreme Being; and if we may rely on the authority of Heesychius, which no scholar will call in question, Κυριος is a proper translation of יהוה Yehovah, as it comes from κυριος, κυριανος, I am, I exist. Others derive it from κυρος, authority, legislative power. It is certain that the lordship of Christ must be considered in a mere spiritual sense, as he never set up any secular government upon earth, nor commanded any to be established in his name; and there is certainly no spiritual government but that of God: and indeed the word Lord, in the text, appears to be properly understood, when applied to the deity of Christ. Jesus is a Prophet to reveal the will of God and instruct men in it. He is a Priest to offer up sacrifice, and make atonement for the sin of the world. He is Lord to rule over, and rule in the souls of the children of men: in a word, he is Jesus the Saviour to deliver from the power, guilt, and pollution of sin; to enlarge and vivify, by the influence of his Spirit to preserve in the possession of the salvation which he has communicated, to seal those who believe, heirs of glory, and at last to receive them into the fullness of beatitude in his eternal joy.

12. This shall be a sign (or token) unto you | You shall find this glorious person, however strange it may appear, wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a stable! It is by humility that Christ comes to reign, and this is the only way into his kingdom! Pride is the character of all the children of Adam; humility the mark of the Son of God, and of all his followers. Christ came in the way of humility to destroy that pride which is the root of evil in the souls of men. And thus, according to the old medical aphorism, "Opposites are destroyed by their opposites."

13. Suddenly there was with the angel, &c. | This multitude of the heavenly host had just now descended from on high, to honour the new born Prince of Peace, to give his parents the fullest conviction of his glory and excellence, and to teach the shepherds who were about to be the first proclaimers of the Gospel, what to think, and what to speak of him, who, while he appeared as a helpless infant, was the object of worship to the angels of God.

14. Glory to God in the highest | The design of God in the incarnation, was to manifest the hidden glories of his nature, and to reconcile men to each other and to himself. The angels therefore declare that this incarnation shall manifest and promote the glory of God, οὐρανιος, not only in the highest heavens, among the highest orders of beings, but in the highest and most exalted degree. For in this astonishing display of God's mercy, attributes of the divine nature which had not been, and could not be known in any other way, should be now exhibited in the fulness of their glory, that even the angels should have fresh objects to contemplate, and new glories to exult in. These things the angels desire to look into, 1. Pet. i. 12, and they desire it because they feel they are thus interested in it. The incarnation of Jesus Christ is an infinite and eternal benefit. Heaven and earth both partake of the fruits of it, and through it angels and men become one family, Ephes. lii. 15.

Peace, good will towards men | Men are in a state of hostility with heaven and with each other. The carnal mind is enmity against God. He who sins wars against his Maker, and a Foe to God, was never true friend to man." When men become reconciled to God through the death of his Son, they love one another. They have peace with God; peace in their own consciences; and peace with their neighbours: good will dwells among them, speaks in them, and works by them. Well might this state of salvation be represented under the notion of the kingdom of God, a counterpart of eternal felicity. See on Matt. lii. 2.

16 And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger.

17 And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child.

18 And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds.

19 * But Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart.

20 And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them.

21 * And when eight days were accomplished for the circumcising of the child, his name was called * JESUS, which was so named of the angel, before he was called in the womb.

1. Gen. 27. 11. Ch. 1. 66. Ver. 24.—Gen. 17. 12. Lev. 12. 3. Ch. 1. 69.—Matt. 1. 21. 25. Ch. 1. 31.—1. Lev. 12. 2, 3, 4, 5.

15. Let us now go even unto Bethlehem [Διελθούμεν, let us go across the country at the nearest, that we may lose no time, that we may speedily see this glorious reconciler of God and man. All delays are dangerous: but he who delays to seek Jesus, when the angels, the messengers of God, bring him the glad tidings of salvation, risks his present safety and his eternal happiness. O! what would the damned in hell give for those moments in which the living hear of salvation, had they the same possibility of receiving it! Reader, be wise. Acquaint thyself now with God, and be at peace; and thereby good will come unto thee. Amen.

17. They made known abroad the saying [These shepherds were the first preachers of the Gospel of Christ: and what was their text? Why, glory to God in the highest heavens, and on earth, peace, and good will among men. This is the elegant and energetic saying, which comprises the sum and substance of the Gospel of God. This, and this only, is the message which all Christ's true pastors or shepherds bring to men. He who while he professes the religion of Christ, disturbs society by his preachings or writings, who excludes from the salvation of God all who hold not his religious or political creed, never knew the nature of the Gospel, and never felt its power or influence. How can religious contentions, civil broils, or open wars, look that Gospel in the face, which publishes nothing but glory to God, and peace and good will among men? Crusades for the recovery of a holy land, so called, (by the way, latterly, the most unholy in the map of the world,) and wars for the support of religion, are an insult to the Gospel, and blasphemy against God!

19. And pondered them in her heart [Ευθαλλούσα, weighing them in her heart. Weighing is an English translation of our word pondering, from the Latin ponderare. Every circumstance relative to her Son's birth Mary treasured up in her memory: and every new circumstance she weighed or compared, with those which had already taken place, in order to acquire the fullest information concerning the nature and mission of her Son.

20. The shepherds returned, glorifying and praising—These simple men, having satisfactory evidence of the truth of the good tidings, and feeling a divine influence upon their own minds, returned to the care of their flocks, glorifying God for what he had shown them, and for the blessedness which they felt. "Jesus Christ, born of a woman, laid in a stable, proclaimed and ministered to by the heavenly host, should be a subject of frequent contemplation to the pastors of his church. After having compared the predictions of the prophets with the facts stated in the evangelic history, their own souls being hereby confirmed in these sacred truths, they will return to their flocks glorifying and praising God for what they had seen and heard in the Gospel history, just as it had been told them in the writings of the prophets; and preaching these mysteries with the fullest conviction of their truth, they become instruments in the hands of God, of begetting the same faith in their hearers, and thus the glory of God, and the happiness of His people, are both promoted." What subjects for contemplation! what matter for praise.

21. When eight days were accomplished [The law had appointed, that every male should be circumcised at eight days old, or on the eighth day after its birth, Gen. xvii. 12. and our blessed Lord received circumcision in token of his subjection to the law, Gal. iv. 4. v. 3.

His name was called JESUS [See on Matt. i. 21. and John i. 29.

22. Days of her purification [That is, thirty-three days after what was termed the seven days of her uncleanness—forty days in all: for that was the time appointed by the law, after the birth of a male child. See Lev. xii. 2, 6.

The MSS. and Versions differ much in the pronoun in this place: some reading αυτης, her purification; others αυτου, his purification: others αυτων αυτων their purification; and others αυτου, the purification of THEM BOTH. Two Versions and two of the Fathers omit the article. Αυτου, their, and αυτου, his, have the greatest authorities in their support, and the former is received into most of the modern editions. A needless scrupulosity was, in my opinion, the origin of these various readings. Some would not allow that both needed purification, and referred the matter to Mary alone. Others thought neither could be supposed to be legally impure, and therefore omitted the article entirely, leaving the meaning indeterminate. As there could be no moral defilement in the case, and what was done, being for the performance of a legal cere-

22 * And when * the days of her purification according to the law of Moses were accomplished, they brought him to Jerusalem, to present him to the Lord.

23 (As it is written in the law of the Lord, * Every male that openeth the womb shall be called holy to the Lord:)

24 And to offer a sacrifice, according to (that which is said in the law of the Lord, A pair of turtle doves, or two young pigeons.

25 * And behold, there was a man in Jerusalem, whose name was Simeon: and the same man was just and devout, * waiting for the consolation of Israel: and the Holy Ghost was upon him.

26 And it was revealed unto him by the Holy Ghost, that he should not see death, before he had seen the Lord's Christ.

27 And he came by the Spirit into the temple: and when

1. Gen. 22. 2. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100.

ny, it is of little consequence which of the readings is received into the text. The purification of every mother and child, which the law enjoined, is a powerful argument in proof of that original corruption and depravity, which every human being brings into the world. The woman to be purified, was placed in the east gate of the court, called Nicanor's gate, and was there sprinkled with blood; thus she received the atonement. See Light-foot.

24. And to offer a sacrifice [Neither mother nor child was considered as in the Lord's covenant, or under the divine protection, till these ceremonies prescribed by the law, had been performed.

A pair of turtle doves, &c. One was for a burnt offering, and the other for a sin-offering; see Lev. xii. 8. The rich were required to bring a lamb: but the poor and middling classes were required to bring either two turtle doves, or two pigeons. This is a proof that the holy family were not in affluence. Jesus sanctified the state of poverty, which is the general state of man, by passing through it. Therefore the poor have the Gospel preached unto them; and the poor are they who principally receive it.

Though neither Mary nor her Son needed any of these purifications, for she was immaculate, and He was the Holy One; yet had she not gone through the days of purification according to the law, she could not have appeared in the public worship of the Most High, and would have been considered as an apostate from the faith of the Israel of God: and had not He been circumcised and publicly presented in the temple, he could not have been permitted to enter either synagogue or temple: and no Jew would have heard him preach, or had any intercourse or connexion with him. These reasons are sufficient to account for the purification of the holy Virgin; and for the circumcision of the most holy Jesus.

25. And behold, there was a man in Jerusalem [This man is distinguished because of his singular piety. There can be no doubt, that there were many persons in Jerusalem named Simeon, besides this man; but there was none of the name who merited the attention of God so much as he in the text. Such persevering exemplary piety was very rare, and therefore the inspired penman utters in the account with behold! Several learned men are of the opinion, that he was son to the famous Hillel, one of the most celebrated doctors and philosophers which had ever appeared in the Jewish nation since the time of Moses. Simeon is supposed also to have been the An or president of the grand sanhedrim.

The same man was just [He steadily regulated all his conduct by the law of his God; and devout—he had fully consecrated himself to God, so that he added a pious heart to a righteous conduct. The original word ευλαβης, signifies also a person of good report—one well received among the people, or one cautious and circumspect in matters of religion: from eu, well, and βλαβω, I take; it properly denotes, one who takes any thing that is held out to him, well and carefully. He so professed and practised the religion of his fathers, that he gave no cause for a friend to mourn on his account or an enemy to triumph.

Several excellent MSS. read σεβης, pious or godly, from eu, well, and σεβομαι, I worship; one who worships God well, i. e. in spirit and in truth.

Waiting for the consolation of Israel [That is, the Messiah, who was known among the pious Jews by this character: he was to be the consolation of Israel, because he was to be its redemption. This consolation of Israel was so universally expected, that the Jews swore by it: So let me see the Consolation, if such a thing be not so, or so. See the forms in Light-foot.

The Holy Ghost was upon him [He was a man divinely inspired, overshadowed, and protected by the power and influence of the most High.

26. It was revealed unto him [He was divinely informed, κερηματισμενον—he had an express communication from God concerning the subject. The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him. The soul of a righteous and devout man is a proper habitation for the Holy Spirit.

He should not see death [They that seek shall find: it is impossible that a man who is earnestly seeking the salvation of God, should be permitted to die without finding it.

The Lord's Christ [Rather, the Lord's anointed:—that prophet, priest, and king, who was typified by so many anointed persons under the Old Covenant; and who was ap.

The parents brought in the child Jesus, to do for him after the custom of the law.

28 Then took he him up in his arms, and blessed God, and said, 29 Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word :

30 For mine eyes have seen thy salvation, 31 Which thou hast prepared before the face of all people ; 32 * A light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel.

33 And Joseph and his mother marvelled at those things which were spoken of him.

34 And Simeon blessed them, and said unto Mary his mother, Behold, this child is set for the fall and rising again pointed to come in the fulness of time, to accomplish all that was written in the Law, in the Prophets, and in the Psalms, concerning him. See the note on ver. 11.

27. He came by the Spirit into the temple] Probably he had in view the prophecy of Malschi, chap. li. 1. The Lord, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple. In this messenger of the covenant, the soul of Simeon delighted. Now the prophecy was just going to be fulfilled, and the Holy Spirit who dwelt in the soul of this righteous man, directed him to go and see its accomplishment. Those who come, under the influence of God's Spirit, to places of public worship, will undoubtedly meet with Him, who is the comfort and salvation of Israel.

After the custom of the law] To present him to the Lord, and then redeem him by paying five shekels, Numb. xviii. 15, 16. and to offer those sacrifices appointed by the law. See ver. 24.

28. Then took he him up in his arms] What must the holy soul of this man have felt in this moment! O Inestimable privilege! and yet ours need not be inferior: If a man love me, says Christ, he will keep my word; and I and the Father will come in unto him, and make our abode with him. And indeed even Christ in the arms could not avail a man, if he were not formed in his heart.

29. Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace] Now thou dost dismiss, ἀποτίθεις—loosest him from life: having lived long enough to have the grand end of life accomplished.

According to thy word] It was promised to him, that he should not die till he had seen the Lord's anointed, ver. 26. and now, having seen him, he expects to be immediately dismissed in peace into the eternal world; having a full assurance and enjoyment of the salvation of God. Though Simeon means his death, yet the thing itself is not mentioned: for death has not only lost its sting, but its name also, to those who have, even by faith, seen the Lord's anointed.

30. Thy salvation] That Saviour, which it became the goodness of God to bestow upon man; and which the necessities of the human race required. Christ is called our salvation, as he is called our life, our peace, our hope; i. e. he is the author of all these, to them who believe.

31. Which thou hast prepared] Ο προηρασα—which thou hast made ready before the face, in the presence of all people. Here salvation is represented under the notion of a feast; which God himself has provided for the whole world; and to partake of which he has invited all the nations of the earth. There seems a direct allusion here to Isa. xxv. 6, &c. "In this mountain shall the Lord of hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things," &c. Salvation is properly the food of the soul, by which it is nourished unto eternal life: he that receiveth not this, must perish for ever.

32. A light to lighten the Gentiles] Φως εἰς ἀποχρησθῆναι εὐαγγελίου—a light of the Gentiles for revelation. By Moses and the prophets, a light of revelation was given to the Jews, in the blessedness of which the Gentiles did not partake. By Christ and his apostles, a luminous revelation is about to be given unto the Gentiles, from the blessedness of which, the Jews in general, by their obstinacy and unbelief, shall be long excluded. But to all true Israelites it shall be a glory, an evident fulfilment of all the predictions of the prophets, relative to the salvation of a lost world: and the first offers of it shall be made to the Jewish people, who may see in it the truth of their own Scriptures indisputably evinced.

33. Joseph and his mother marvelled] For they did not as yet fully know the counsels of God, relative to the salvation which Christ was to procure: nor the way in which the purchase was to be made—but to this Simeon refers in the following verses.

34. This child is set for the fall] This seems an allusion to Isa. viii. 14, 15. Jehovah, God of hosts, shall be—for a stone of stumbling and rock of offence to both houses of Israel: and many among them shall stumble and fall, &c. As Christ did not come as a temporal deliverer, in which character alone the Jews expected him, the consequence should be, they would reject him, and so fall by the Romans: See Rom. xi. 11, 12, and Matt. xxiv. But in the fulness of time, there shall be a rising again of many in Israel. See Rom. xi. 26.

And for a sign] A mark or butt to shoot at—a metaphor taken from archers. Or perhaps Simeon refers to Isa. xi. 10—12. There shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek:—intimating that the Jews would reject it, while the Gentiles should flock to it as their ensign of honour, under which they were to enjoy a glorious rest.

of many in Israel; and for a sign which shall be spoken against;

35 (Yea, a sword shall pierce through thy own soul also) that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed.

36 * And there was one Anna, a prophetess, the daughter of Phanuel, of the tribe of Asher: she was of a great age, and had lived with a husband seven years from her virginity; 37 And she was a widow of about fourscore and four years, which departed not from the temple, but served God with fastings and prayers night and day.

33 And she coming in that instant, gave thanks likewise unto the Lord, and spake of him to all them that looked for redemption in Jerusalem.

1 Cor 1:23-24, 2 Cor 2:16, 1 Pet 2:7, 1-2, Acts 22:3-4, Psa 40:10, John 19:28-30, Acts 21:7, 1 Tim 5:5, h Mark 15:41, Ver 25, Ch. 21:1-4, Or, Israel

That the thoughts (or reasonings) of many hearts may be revealed.] I have transposed this clause, to the place to which I believe it belongs. The meaning appears to me to be this: The rejection of the Messiah by the Jewish rulers, will sufficiently prove, that they sought the honour which comes from the world, and not that honour which comes from God: because they rejected Jesus, merely for the reason that he did not bring them a temporal deliverance. So the very Pharisees, who were loud in their professions of sanctity and devotedness to God, rejected Jesus, and got him crucified, because his kingdom was not of this world. Thus the reasonings of many hearts were revealed.

35. Yea, a sword shall pierce through thy own soul also] Probably meaning, Thou also, as well as thy son, shalt die a martyr for the truth. But as this is a metaphor used by the most respectable Greek writers, to express the most pungent sorrows, it may here refer to the anguish Mary must have felt, when standing beside the cross of her tortured son: John xix. 25.

36. Anna, a prophetess] It does not appear that this person was a prophetess in the strict sense of the word, i. e. one who could foretell future events; but rather a holy woman, who, from her extensive knowledge and deep experience in divine things, was capable of instructing others; according to the use of the word προφητῶσα, 1 Cor. xiv. 3. He that prophesieth, speaketh unto men to edification, and to exhortation, and to comfort. So we find this holy widow proclaiming Jesus to all who looked for redemption in Jerusalem, ver. 38.

The tribe of Asher] This was one of the ten tribes of the kingdom of Israel, several families of which had returned from their idolatry unto God, in the time that Hezekiah proclaimed the pass-over in Jerusalem, which is mentioned 2 Chron. xxx. 1—11. Though her family might have been a distinguished one in Jerusalem, yet we find that it was her very exemplary piety that entitled her to be thus honourably mentioned in the sacred history. It is an honourable thing indeed to have one's name written in the sacred records; but to be written in the book of life, is of infinitely greater moment.

Seven years] She was a pure virgin when married, was favoured with her husband but seven years, and was now in all, taking in the time of her virginity, marriage, and widowhood, eighty-four years of age. At such an age, it might be supposed she was reasonably exempted from performing the severer duties of religion; but her spirit of piety continued still to burn, with a steady and undiminished flame.

37. Departed not from the temple] Attended constantly at the hours of prayer, which were nine in the morning and three in the afternoon. See Acta ii. 15. lit. l. It does not appear that women had any other functions to perform in that holy place.

With fastings] She accompanied her devotion with frequent fastings, probably not oftener than twice in the week: for this was the custom of the most rigid Pharisees: see chap. xviii. 12.

38. Coming in that instant] Ἀπὸν τὴν ὥραν, at that very time: while Simeon held the blessed Redeemer in his arms, and was singing his departing and triumphal song.

Gave thanks likewise] She, as well as Simeon, returned God public thanks, for having sent this Saviour to Israel.

Spoke of him] Of the nature and design of his mission; and the glory that should take place in the land.

To all them that looked for redemption] As Daniel's seventy weeks were known to be now completed, the more pious Jews were in constant expectation of the promised Messiah. They were expecting redemption, ἀποτίθεις: such a redemption as was to be brought about by an atonement, or expiatory victim, or ransom price. See on chap. i. 68.

In Jerusalem.] It is probable she went about from house to house, testifying the Gospel of the grace of God. In the margin of our common version, Israel is put instead of Jerusalem, which the translators thought was nearly as eligible as the word they received into the text. This marginal reading is supported by several MSS, all the Arabic and Persian versions, the Vulgate, and most copies of the Itala. Were this reading to be received, it would make a very essential alteration in the meaning of the text: as it would intimate that this excellent woman travelled over the land of Israel, proclaiming the advent of Christ. At all events, it appears that this widow was one of the first publishers of the Gospel of Christ, and it is likely that she travelled with it from house to house, through the city of Jerusalem, where she knew they dwelt who were expecting the salvation of God.

39 ¶ And when they had performed all things according to the law of the Lord, they returned into Galilee, to their own city Nazareth.

40 ¶ And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom: and the grace of God was upon him.

41 ¶ Now his parents went to Jerusalem every year at the feast of the pass-over.

42 And when he was twelve years old, they went up to Jerusalem after the custom of the feast.

43 And when they had fulfilled the days, as they returned, the child Jesus tarried behind in Jerusalem; and Joseph and his mother knew not of it.

44 But they, supposing him to have been in the company, went a day's journey; and they sought him among their kinsfolk and acquaintance.

45 And when they found him not, they turned back again to Jerusalem, seeking him.

46 ¶ Ver. 39. Ch. I. 10. — A. M. 4918. A. D. 8. An. Olymp. CXCVI. 1. — Ex. 23. 18. 17. & N. 21. Deut. 16. 1. 16. — c. Matt. 7. 28. Mark. 1. 22. Ch. 4. 24. 25. John. 7. 15. 46.

39. They returned into Galilee] But not immediately, for the coming of the wise men, and the retreat of Joseph with his family into Egypt, happened between this period of time, and his going to Nazareth in Galilee.—Bishop PEARCE. But it is very likely, that as soon as the presentation in the temple, and the ceremonies relative to it, had been accomplished, that the holy family did return to Galilee, as St. Luke here states; and that they continued there, till Herod's bloody purpose was discovered to them by the Lord; which probably took some time to bring it to its murderous crisis, after the departure of the Magi. After which, they fled into Egypt, where they continued till the death of Herod; and it is probable, that it is of a second return to Nazareth that St. Matthew speaks, chap. ii. 23.

41. The child grew] As to his body—being in perfect health. Waxed strong in spirit] His rational soul became strong and vigorous.

Filled with wisdom] The divinity continuing to communicate itself more and more, in proportion to the increase of the rational principle. The reader should never forget, that Jesus was perfect man, as well as God.

And the grace of God was upon him.] The word grace, not only means grace in the common acceptance of the word, (some blessing granted by God's mercy to those who are sinners, or have no merit) but it means also favour or approbation: and this sense I think the most proper for it here, when applied to the human nature of our blessed Lord; and thus our translators render the same word, ver. 52. Even Christ himself, who knew no sin, grew in the favour of God; and as to his human nature, increased in the graces of the Holy Spirit. From this we learn, that if a man were as pure and as perfect as the man Jesus Christ himself was, yet he might nevertheless, increase in the image, and consequently in the favour of God. God loves every thing and person, in proportion to the nearness of the approaches made to his own perfections.

41. His parents went—every year.] This was their constant custom, because positively enjoined by the law, Exod. xxiii. 17. But it does not appear, that infants were obliged to be present; and yet all the men-children are positively ordered to make their appearance at Jerusalem thrice in the year, Exod. xxxiv. 23. And our Lord being now twelve years old, ver. 42. accompanies his parents to the feast. Probably this was the very age at which the male-children were obliged to appear before the Lord at the three public festivals—the feast of unleavened bread, of weeks, and of tabernacles. According to the Jewish canons, it was the age at which they were obliged to begin to learn a trade.

43. Had fulfilled the days] Eight days in the whole: one was the pass-over, and the other seven, the days of unleavened bread. See on Matt. xxvi. 2.

44. Supposing him to have been in the company] Some have supposed that the men and women marched in separate companies on these occasions, which is very likely; and that sometimes the children kept company with the men; sometimes with the women. This might have led to what otherwise seems to have been inexcusable carelessness in Joseph and Mary. Joseph not seeing Jesus in the men's company, might suppose he was with his mother in the women's company; and Mary, not seeing him with her, might imagine he was with Joseph.

Went a day's journey] Knowing what a treasure they possessed, how could they be so long without looking on it? Where were the bowels and tender solicitude of the mother? Let them answer this question who can.

And they sought him] Av(σ)φροω, they earnestly sought him. They are now both duly assisted with a sense of their great loss and great negligence.

Kinsfolk and acquaintance.] Those of the same family and neighbourhood went up to Jerusalem together, on such occasions.

45. Seeking him] Ζηρούμεν αυτον—or rather seeking him diligently, αν(σ)φροωτε. This is the reading of BCDL six others, Vulgate, and nine copies of the Itala. If they sought earnestly when they first found him missing, there is little doubt that their solicitude and diligence must be greatly increased during his three days' absence: therefore the word which I have adopted on the above authority, is more likely to be the true reading, than the ζηρούμεν, of the common text.

46 And it came to pass, that after three days they found him in the temple, sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them, and asking them questions.

47 And all that heard him, were astonished at his understanding and answers.

48 And when they saw him, they were amazed: and his mother said unto him, Son, why hast thou thus dealt with us? behold, thy father and I have sought thee sorrowing.

49 And he said unto them, How is it that ye sought me? wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?

50 And they understood not the saying which he spake unto them.

51 ¶ And he went down with them, and came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them: but his mother kept all these sayings in her heart.

52 And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favour with God and man.

4 John P. 16. — c. Ch. 9. 6. & 18. 34. — (Ver. 13. Dan. 7. 25. — g. 1 Sam. 9. 25. Ver. 40. — h. Or. are which simply signifies seeking; whereas the other strongly marks their solicitude and diligence.

46. Sitting in the midst of the doctors] The rabbins; who were explaining the law and the ceremonies of the Jewish religion to their disciples.

Asking them questions.] Not as a scholar asks his teacher, to be informed; but as a teacher, who proposes questions to his scholars, in order to take an occasion to instruct them.

In the time of Josephus, the Jewish teachers were either very ignorant or very humble: for he tells us, that "when he was about fourteen years of age, the chief priests, and the principal men of the city, were constantly coming to him, to be more accurately instructed in matters relative to the law." See his life, sect. ii. If this were true, it is no wonder to find them now, listening, with the deepest attention, to such teaching as they never before heard.

47. Answers.] The word απαντας, here seems not to mean answers only, but what Jesus said by way of question to the doctors, ver. 46. So in Rev. vii. 13. one of the elders is said to have answered, saying—when he only asked a question. See PEARCE.

48. Why hast thou thus dealt with us?] It certainly was not his fault, but theirs. Men are very apt to lay on others the blame of their own misconduct.

49. How is it that ye sought me?] Is not this intended as a gentle reproof? Why had ye not sought? Ye should not have left my company, when ye knew I am constantly employed in performing the will of the Most High.

My Father's business?] Ερται του πατρος μου, my Father's concerns. Some think that these words should be translated, In my father's house; which was a reason that they should have sought him in the temple only. As if he had said, Where should a child be found, but in his father's house? This translation is defended by Grotius, Pearce, and others; and is the reading of the Syriac, latter Persian, and Armenian versions. Our Lord took this opportunity to instruct Joseph and Mary concerning his divine nature and mission. My Father's concerns. This saying, one would think, could not have been easily misunderstood. It shows at once that he came down from heaven. Joseph had no concerns in the temple; and yet we find they did not fully comprehend it. How slow of heart is man to credit any thing that comes from God!

51. Was subject unto them] Behaved towards them with all dutiful submission. Probably his working with his hands at his reputed father's business, is here also implied: see on ver. 41. No child among the Jews was ever brought up in idleness. Is not this the carpenter? was a saying of those Jews, who appear to have had a proper knowledge of his employment, while in Joseph's house. See note on Matt. xiii. 55.

52. Jesus increased in wisdom] See on ver. 40. The following remarks, taken chiefly from Mr. Claude, on the foregoing subject, are well worth the reader's attention.

1. The birth of Christ is announced to the shepherds. 1. God causes his grace to descend not only on the great and powerful of the world, but also upon the most simple and inconsiderable; just as the heavens diffuse their influence not only on great trees, but also on the smallest herbs. 2. God seems to take more delight in bestowing his favours on the most abject, than in distributing them among persons of elevated rank. Here is an example:—for while he sent the wise men of the east to Herod, he sent an angel of heaven to the shepherds, and conducted them to the cradle of the Saviour of the world. 3. In this meeting of the angels and shepherds, you see a perpetual characteristic of the economy of Jesus Christ; wherein the highest and most sublime things are jumbled with the meanest and lowest. In his person, the eternum is united to a creature, the divine nature to the human, infinity to infirmity, in a word, the Lord of glory to mortal flesh and blood. On his cross, though he appears naked, crowned with thorns, and exposed to sorrows, yet at the same time he shakes the earth, and eclipses the sun. Here, in like manner, are angels familiar with shepherds: angels to mark his majesty, shepherds his humility. 4. This mission of angels relates to the end for which the Son of God came into the world; for he came to establish a communion between God and men, and to make peace between men and angels: to this must be referred what St. Paul says, Col. i. 20. & pleased the Father, by him to reconcile all things to himself. 5. However simple and plain the employments of men may be, it is always very pleasing to God, when they discharge them with a good conscience. While these shepherds were busy in their calling, God sent his angels to them. 6. God does in regard to men, what these shepherds did in regard to their sheep. He is the great Shepherd of mankind, continually watching over them by his providence.

II. The glory of the Lord shone round the shepherds. 1. When angels borrow human forms, in order to appear to men, they have always some ensigns of grandeur and majesty to show that they are not men but angels. 2. The appearance of this light to the shepherds in the night may very well be taken for a mystical symbol. Night represents the corrupt state of mankind when Jesus came into the world; a state of ignorance and error. Light fitly represents the salutary grace of Christ, which dissipates obscurity, and gives us the true knowledge of God.

III. The shepherds were filled with great fear. 1. This was the effect of their great surprise. When grand objects suddenly present themselves to us, they must needs fill us with astonishment and fear; for the mind, on these occasions, is not at liberty to exert its force; on the contrary, its strength is dissipated, and during this dissipation it is impossible not to fear. 2. This fear may also arise from emotions of conscience. Man is by nature a sinner, and consequently an object of the justice of God. While God does not manifest himself to him, he remains insensible of his sin; but when God discovers himself to him, he awakes to feeling, and draws sigh to God as a trembling criminal approaches his Judge. See this exemplified in the case of Adam, and in that of the Israelites when God appeared on the mountain: hence that proverbial saying, We shall die, for we have seen God. 3. The shepherds had just reason to fear, when they saw before them an angel of heaven surrounded with the ensigns of majesty, for angels had been formerly the ministers of God's vengeance. On this occasion, the examples of divine vengeance, recorded in Scripture, and performed by the ministry of angels, might, in a moment rise to view, and incline them to think that this angel had received a like order to destroy them.

IV. Observe the angel's discourse to the shepherds. 1. The angel says to them, fear not. This preface was necessary to gain their attention, which fear, no doubt, had dissipated. The disposition which the angel wishes to awaken in them, compares with the news which he intended to announce: for what has fear to do with the birth of the Saviour of the world? 2. The angel describes, ist. The person of whom he speaks, a saviour, Christ the Lord; see before on ver. 11. See, 2dly. What he speaks of him; he is born unto you. 3dly. He marks the time; this day. 4thly. He describes the place; in the city of David. 5thly. He specifies the nature of this important news; a great joy which shall be unto all people. See Claude's Essay, by Robinson, vol. 1. p. 286, &c.

Concerning Simeon, three things deserve to be especially noted: 1. His faith. 2. His song. And, 3. His prophecy.

I. His faith. 1. He expected the promised Redeemer, in virtue of the promises which God had made; and to show that his faith was of the operation of God's Spirit, he lived a life of righteousness and devotedness to God. Many profess to expect the salvation which God has promised only to those who believe, while living in conformity to the world, under the influence of its spirit, and in the general breach of the righteous law of God. 2. The faith of Simeon led him only to wish for life that he might see him who was promised, and be properly prepared for an inheritance among the sanctified. They who make not this use of life are much to be lamented. It would have been better for them had they never been born. 3. The faith of Simeon was crowned with success. Jesus came; he saw, he felt, he adored him! and with a heart filled with the love of God, he breathed out his holy soul, and probably the last drops of his life, in praise to the fountain of all good.

II. Simeon's song. By it he shows forth, 1. The joy of his own heart. Lord, now thou dismissest thy servant; as if he had said, "Yes, O my God, I am going to quit this earth! I feel that thou callest me! and I quit it without regret. Thou hast fulfilled all my desires, and completed my wishes, and I desire to be detained no longer from the full enjoyment of thyself." O! how sweet is death after such an enjoyment and discovery of eternal life! 2. Simeon shows forth the glory of Christ. He is the Sun of righteousness, rising on a dark and ruined world with light and salvation. He is the light that shall manifest the infinite kindness of God to the Gentile people; proving, that God is good to all, and that his tender mercies are over all his works. He is the glory of Israel. It is by him that the Gentiles have been led to acknowledge the Jews as the peculiar people of God; their looks as the sword of God; and their teaching as the revelation of God. What an honour for this people, had they known how to profit by it! 3. He astonished Joseph and Mary with his sublime account of the Redeemer of the world. They hear him glorified, and their hearts exult in it. From this divine song they learn that this miraculous son of theirs is the son and sub- stance of all the promises made unto the fathers, and of all the predictions of the prophets.

III. Simeon's prophecy. 1. He addresses Christ, and foretells that he should be for the ruin and recovery of many in Israel. How astonishing is the folly and perverseness of man, to turn that into poison which God has made the choicest medicine; and thus to kill themselves with the cure he has appointed for them in the infinity of his love! Those who speak against Jesus, his ways, his doctrine, his cross, his sacrifice, are likely to stumble, and fall, and rise no more for ever! May the God of mercy save the reader from this condemnation! 2. He addresses Mary, and foretells the agonies she must go through. What must this holy woman have endured when she saw her son crowned with thorns, scourged, buffeted, spit upon—when she saw his hands and his feet nailed to the cross! and his side pierced with a spear! What a sword through her own soul, must each of these have been! But this is not all. These sufferings of Jesus are predicted thirty years before they were to take place! What a martyrdom was this! while he is nourished in her bosom, she cannot help considering him as a lamb who is growing up to be sacrificed. The older he grows, the nearer the bloody scene approaches! Thus her sufferings must increase with his years, and only end with his life. 3. He foretells the effects which should be produced by the persecutions raised against Christ and his followers. The sword of persecution shall lay open the hearts of many, and discover their secret motives and designs. When the doctrine of the cross is preached, and persecution raised because of it, then the precious are easily distinguished from the vile. Those whose hearts are not established by grace, nor right with God, will turn aside from the way of righteousness, and deny the Lord that brought them. On the other hand, those whose faith stands not in the wisdom of man but in the power of God, will continue faithful unto death, glorify God in the fire, and thus show forth the excellency of his salvation, and the sincerity of the profession which they had before made. Thus the thoughts of many hearts are still revealed.

The design of our blessed Lord in staying behind in the temple seems to have been twofold. 1st. To prepare the Jews to acknowledge in him a divine and supernatural wisdom: and, 2dly. To impress the minds of Joseph and Mary with a proper idea of his independence and divinity. Their conduct in this business may be a lasting lesson and profitable warning to all the disciples of Christ.

1st. It is possible (by not carefully watching the heart, and by not keeping secretly and constantly in view the spirituality of every duty) to lose the presence and power of Christ, even in religious ordinances. Joseph and Mary were at the Feast of the pass-over when they lost Jesus! 2dly. Many who have sustained loss in their souls, are kept from making speedy application to God for help and salvation, through the foolish supposition that their state is not so bad as it really is; and in the things of salvation, many content themselves with the persuasion that the religious people with whom they associate, are the peculiar favourites of heaven, and that they are in a state of complete safety while connected with them. They supposing him to be in the company, went a day's journey. 3dly. Deep sorrow and self-reproach must be the consequence of the discovery of so great a loss as that of the presence and power of Christ. Joseph and Mary sought him sorrowing. 4thly. When people are convinced by the light of the Lord, that their souls are not in a safe state, and that unless they find the Redeemer of the world they must perish; they are naturally led to inquire among their kinsfolk and acquaintance for him who saves sinners. But this often proves fruitless: they know not Jesus themselves, and they cannot tell others where to find him. They sought him among their kinsfolk and acquaintance, and found him not. 5thly. When people perceive that they have proceeded in a certain course of life for a considerable time, without that salvation which God promises in his word, they should first stop and inquire into their state, and when they find that they have been passing into eternity, not only without a preparation for glory, but with an immense load of guilt upon their souls; they should turn back, and as their time may be but short, they should seek diligently. They turned back to Jerusalem, earnestly seeking him. 6thly. The likeliest place to find Jesus and his salvation, is, the temple. The place where his pure unadulterated Gospel is preached, the sanctuary where the power and glory of God are seen in the conviction, conversion, and salvation of sinners. They found him in the temple, among the doctors. 7thly. Trials, persecutions, and afflictions are all nothing, when the presence and power of Christ are felt: but when a testimony of his approbation lives no longer in the heart, every thing is grievous and insupportable. The fatigue of the journey to Bethlehem, the flight from the cruelty of Herod, and the unavoidable trials in Egypt, were cheerfully supported by Joseph and Mary; because in all they had Jesus with them; but now they are in distress and misery, because he is behind in Jerusalem. Reader, if thou have lost Jesus, take no rest of body or soul till thou have found him! without him, all is confusion and ruin: with him, all is joy and peace.

CHAPTER III.

The time in which John the Baptist began to preach, 1-3. The prophecies which were fulfilled in him, 4-6. The matter and success of his preaching, 7-9, among the people, 10, 11. Among the publicans, 12, 13. Among the soldiers, 14. His testimony concerning Christ, 15-18. The reason why Herod put him afterwards in prison, 19, 20. He baptizes Christ, on whom the Spirit of God descends, 21, 22. Our Lord's genealogy, 23-28. [A. M. 4530. A. D. 28. An. Olymp. CCL 2.]

NOW in the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius Cæsar, Pontius Pilate being governor of Judea, and Herod being tetrarch of Galilee, and his brother Philip tetrarch of itura and of the region of Trachonitis, and Lysanias the tetrarch of Abilene, Annas and Caiaphas being the high priests, the word of God came unto John, the son of Zacharias, in the wilderness.

And he came into all the country about Jordan, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins :

As it is written in the book of the words of Esaias the prophet, saying, The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.

Every valley shall be filled, and every mountain and hill shall be brought low, and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough ways shall be made smooth :

And all flesh shall see the salvation of God.

Then said he to the multitude that came forth to be baptized of him, O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come ?

1. Men. 2. 11-4. Ven. 19. Ch. 23. 7. Matt. 2. 1. 22. - Matt. 23. 57. Mark 1. 1-19. John 1. 6. 19. 18. 13. Acts 4. 6. - d. Matt. 3. 1. Mark 1. 4. - Ch. 1. 77. - Gen. 1. 1. Matt. 3. 1. Mark 1. 2. John 1. 23. - g. Psa. 98. 2. Isa. 40. 10. Ch. 2. 10.

8 Bring forth therefore fruits worthy of repentance, and begin not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father : for I say unto you, That God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham.

9 And now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees : every tree therefore which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire.

10 And the people asked him, saying, What shall we do then ? He answered them and saith unto them, He that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none ; and he that hath meat, let him do likewise.

12 Then came also publicans to be baptized, and said unto him, Master, what shall we do ?

13 And he said unto them, Exact no more than that which is appointed you.

14 And the soldiers likewise demanded of him, saying, And what shall we do ? And he said unto them, Be content with your man, neither accuse any falsely ; and be violent with your wages.

8. Matt. 3. 7. - 1. Or, most fr. - k. Matt. 7. 19. - l. Acts 2. 27. - m. Ch. 11. 41. 2. Cor. 8. 14. James 2. 16. 16. 1. John 3. 17. & 4. 20. - n. Matt. 21. 32. Ch. 7. 9. - o. Ch. 18. 6. - p. Or, put no man in fear. - q. Exod. 23. 1. Lev. 19. 11. - r. Or, allowance.

NOTES.—Verse 1. Fifteenth year] This was the fifteenth of his principality and thirteenth of his monarchy : for he was two years joint emperor, previously to the death of Augustus. [See the end of this chapter.]

Tiberius Cæsar] This emperor succeeded Augustus, in whose reign Tiberius was born. He began his reign August 19, A. D. 14, reigned twenty-three years, and died March 16, A. D. 37, aged seventy-eight years. He was a most infamous character. During the latter part of his reign especially, he did all the mischief he possibly could : and that his tyranny might not end with his life, he chose Caligula for his successor, merely on account of his bad qualities ; and of whom he was accustomed to say, This young prince will be a snare to the Roman people, and a Phaeton to the rest of mankind.

Herod] This was Herod Antipas, the son of Herod the Great who murdered the innocents. It was the same Herod who beheaded John Baptist, and to whom our Lord was sent by Pilate. See the account of the Herod family in the notes on Matt. li. 1. [Bursa and Trachonitis] Two provinces of Syria, on the confines of Judea.

Abilene] Another province of Syria which had its name from Abila its chief city. These satrapies were left to Herod Antipas and his brother Philip, by the will of their father, Herod the Great ; and were confirmed to them by the decree of Augustus. That Philip was tetrarch of Trachonitis in the fifteenth year of Tiberius, we are assured by Josephus, who says that Philip the brother of Herod died in the twentieth year of Tiberius, after he had governed Trachonitis, Balanea and Gaulonitis, thirty-seven years. Antiq. B. xviii. c. 5. s. 6. And Herod continued tetrarch of Galilee, till he was removed by Caligula, the successor of Tiberius. Antiq. B. xviii. c. 5. s. 2. That Lysanias was tetrarch of Abilene, is also evident from Josephus. He continued in this government till the emperor Claudius took it from him, A. D. 42, and made a present of it to Agrippina. See Antiq. B. xix. c. 5. s. 1. Tetrarch signifies the ruler of the fourth part of a country. See on Matt. xiv. 1.

Annas and Caiaphas being the high-priests] Caiaphas was the son-in-law of Annas, or Ananias, and it is supposed that they exercised the high-priest's office by turns. It is likely that Annas only was considered as high-priest ; and that Caiaphas was what the Hebrews termed שׂרֵפֶת כֹּהֵן מִשְׁחֶה, or שׂרֵפֶת כֹּהֵן אֶזְרָאֵל, the high-priest's deputy, or ruler of the temple. See the note on Matt. li. 4, and on John xviii. 13.

The facts which St. Luke mentions here, tend much to confirm the truth of the evangelical history. Christianity differs widely from philosophic system ; it is founded in the goodness and authority of God ; and attested by historic facts. It differs also from popular tradition, which either has had no pure origin, or which is lost in unknown or fabulous antiquity. It differs also from pagan and Mahomedan revelations, which were fabricated in a corner, and had no witnesses, in the above verses, we find the persons, the places, and the times, marked with the utmost exactness. It was under the first Cæsars that the preaching of the Gospel took place ; and in their time, the facts on which the whole of Christianity is founded, made their appearance : an age the most enlightened, and best known from the multitude of its historic records. It was in Judea, where every thing that professed to come from God, was scrutinized with the most exact and unmerciful criticism. In writing the history of Christianity, the evangelists appeal to certain facts which were publicly transacted in such places, under the government and inspection of such and such persons, and in such particular times. A thousand persons could have confronted the falsehood, had it been one ! These appeals are made—a challenge is offered to the Roman government, and to the Jewish rulers and people—a new religion has been introduced in such a place, at such a time—this has been accompanied with such and such facts and miracles ! who can disprove this ? All are silent. None appears to offer even an objection. The cause of infidelity and irreligion is at stake ! If these facts cannot be disproved, the religion of Christ must triumph. None appears—because—none could appear. Now let it be observed, that the persons of that time only could confute these things, had they been false—they never attempted it : therefore these facts are absolute and incontrovertible truths : this conclusion is necessary. Shall a man then give up his faith in such attested facts as these, because more than a thousand years after, an infidel creeps out, and ventures publicly to sneer at what his iniquitous soul hopes is not true !

The word of God came unto John] That is, the Holy Spirit that revealed to him this doctrine of salvation. This came upon him in the desert, where he was living in such a state of austerity as gave him full right to preach all the rigours of penitence to others. Thus we find that the first preachers, historians, and followers of the doctrines of the Gospel, were men eminent for the austerity of their lives, the simplicity of their manners, and the sanctity of their conduct ; they were authorized by God, and filled with the most precious gifts of his Spirit. And what are the apostles which the new philosophy sends us ? Philosophers full of themselves, not guided by the love of truth or wisdom, but ever seeking their own glory, in constant hostility among themselves, because of their separate pretensions to particular discoveries, of the honour of which they would almost as soon lose life as be deprived ? Who are they ? Men of a mortified life and unblameable conversation ? No—they are poets and poetsasters, composers of romances, novels, intrigues, farces, comedies, &c. full of extravagance and impurity. They are pretended moralists, that preach up pleasure and sensual gratification, and dissolve, as far as they can, the sacred and civil ties that unite and support society. They are men whose gull is heightened by their assuming the sacred name of philosophers, and dignifying their impure system with a name at which philosophy herself blushes and bleeds.

3. The baptism of repentance] See on Matt. iii. 4-6. and Mark i. 1, &c. and xvi. at the end.

5. Every valley shall be filled] All hindrances shall be taken out of the way : a quotation from the Greek version of Isa. xl. 4, containing an allusion to the preparations made in rough countries to facilitate the march of mighty kings and conquerors. See the instance produced on Matt. fit. 3.

7-9. On this account of the Baptist's mode of preaching, see the notes on Matt. iii. 7-11.

10. What shall we do then ?] The preaching of the Baptist had been accompanied with an uncommon effusion of that Spirit which convinces of sin, righteousness, and judgment. The people who heard him now earnestly begin to inquire what they must do to be saved ? They are conscious that they are exposed to the judgments of the Lord, and they wish to escape from the coming wrath.

11. He that hath two coats, &c.] He first teaches the great mass of the people their duty to each other. They were uncharitable and oppressive, and he taught them not to expect any mercy from the hand of God, while they acted towards others in opposition to its dictates. If men be unkind and uncharitable towards each other, how can they expect the mercy of the Lord to be extended towards themselves ?

12. Then came also publicans] He next instructs the tax-gatherers in the proper discharge of their duty : though it was an office detested by the Jews at large, yet the Baptist does not condemn it. It is only the abuse of it that he speaks against. If taxes be necessary for the support of a state, there must be collectors of them ; and the collector, if he properly discharge his duty, is not only a useful, but also a respectable officer. But it seems the Jewish tax-gatherers

- 15<sup>a</sup> And as the people were <sup>a</sup> in expectation, and all men <sup>a</sup> moved in their hearts of John, whether he were the Christ, or not?
- 16 John answered, saying unto them all, <sup>a</sup> I indeed baptize you with water; but one mightier than I cometh, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose: he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire:
- 17 Whose fan is in his hand, and he will thoroughly purge his floor, and <sup>a</sup> will gather the wheat into his garner; but the chaff he will burn with fire unquenchable.
- 18 And many other things, in his exhortation, preached he unto the people.
- 19 <sup>a</sup> But Herod the tetrarch, being reproved by him for Herodias his brother Philip's wife, and for all the evils which Herod had done,
- 20 Added yet this above all, that he shut up John in prison.
- 21 <sup>a</sup> Now when all the people were baptized, <sup>a</sup> it came to pass, that Jesus also being baptized, and praying, the heaven was opened,
- 22 And the Holy Ghost descended in a bodily shape like a dove upon him, and a voice came from heaven, which said, Thou art my beloved Son; in thee I am well pleased.
- 23 <sup>a</sup> And Jesus himself began to be <sup>a</sup> about thirty years of age, being (as was supposed) <sup>a</sup> the son of Joseph, which was the son of Heli,
- 24 Which was the son of Matthai, which was the son of Levi, which was the son of Melchi, which was the son of Jaana, which was the son of Joseph,
- 25 Which was the son of Mattathias, which was the son of Amos, which was the son of Naun, which was the son of Esai, which was the son of Nagee,
- 26 Which was the son of Maath, which was the son of Mattathias, which was the son of Semei, which was the son of Joseph, which was the son of Juda,
- 27 Which was the son of Joanna, which was the son of Rhesa, extracted much more from the people than government authorized them to do, ver. 13. and the surplus they pocketed. This, I am inclined to think, is too common an evil; and the executive government is often the people's scape-goat, to bear the crimes of its officers—crimes in which it has no concern. For an account of the publicans, see the note on Matt. v. 46.

<sup>a</sup> Or, in reverence; Or, remembrance, or, beloved.— Matt. 2. 11.— Micah 4. 12. Matt. 13. 35.— Matt. 14. 3. Mark 6. 17.— Matt. 2. 13. John 1. 32.— See Numb. 4. 3, 20, 26, 47.

14. The soldiers likewise demanded of him] He thrice instructs those among the military. They were either Roman soldiers, or the soldiers of Herod or Philip. Use no violence to any, μηδὲν διακίστετε, do not extort money or goods by force or violence from any. This is the import of the words μηδὲν concutite, used here by the Vulgate, and points out a crime, of which the Roman soldiers were notoriously guilty, their own writers being witnesses. Concutio has the above meaning in the Roman law. See RARINUS in loco.

Nether accuse any falsely] Or, on a frivolous pretence—μηδὲν ἀσέβηνται, be not scyphants, like those who are base flatterers of their masters, who, to ingratiate themselves into their esteem, malign, accuse, and impeach the innocent. Bishop PARSON observes, that when the concusio above referred to, did not produce the effect they wished, they often falsely accused the persons, which is the reason why this advice is added. See the note on chap. x. 7.

Be content with your wages] ὀλιώμισυ. The word signifies not only the money which was allotted to a Roman soldier, which was two oboli, about three half-pence per day, but also the necessary supply of wheat, barley, &c. See RAPHELIUS.

15. Whether he uses the Christ] So general was the reformation which was produced by the Baptist's preaching, that the people were ready to consider him as the promised Messiah. Thus John came in the spirit and power of Elijah, and reformed all things; showed the people, the tax-gatherers, and the soldiers, their respective duties; and persuaded them to put away the evil of their doings. See on Matt. xvii. 11.

16, 17. On these verses see Matt. iii. 11, 12, and Mark i. 7, 8, and particularly the note on John iii. 5.

19. Herod the Tetrarch] See this subject explained at large, Matt. xiv. 1, &c. and Mark vi. 21, 23.

21. Jesus—being baptized] See on Matt. iii. 16, 17.

22. Thirty years of age] This was the age required by the law, to which the priests must arrive before they could be installed in their office. See Numb. iv. 3.

Being (as was supposed) the son of Joseph] This same phrase is used by Herodotus to signify one who was only reputed to be the son of a particular person: ροῦρου καὶ νομίζεταί, he was supposed to be this man's son.

Much learned labour has been used to reconcile this genealogy with that in St. Matthew, chap. i. and there are several ways of doing it: the following, which appears to me to be the best, is also the most simple and easy. For a more elaborate discussion of the subject, the reader is referred to the additional observations at the end of the chapter.

MATTHEW in descending from Abraham to Joseph, the spouse of the blessed Virgin, speaks of sons properly such, by way of natural generation: Abraham begat Isaac, and Isaac begat Jacob, &c. But LUKE, in ascending from the Saviour of the world, to God himself, speaks of sons either properly or improperly such: on this account he uses an indeterminate mode of expression, which may be applied to sons either patulatively, or really such. And Jesus himself began to be

- which was the son of Zorobabel, which was the son of Salathiel, which was the son of Neri,
- 28 Which was the son of Melchi, which was the son of Addi, which was the son of Cosam, which was the son of Elmodam, which was the son of Er,
- 29 Which was the son of Josee, which was the son of Ebenez, which was the son of Jorim, which was the son of Matthai, which was the son of Levi,
- 30 Which was the son of Simeon, which was the son of Juda, which was the son of Joseph, which was the son of Jonan, which was the son of Ellakim,
- 31 Which was the son of Meles, which was the son of Meana, which was the son of Mattathias, which was the son of Nathan, which was the son of David,
- 32 Which was the son of Jesse, which was the son of Obed, which was the son of Booz, which was the son of Salmon, which was the son of Naasson,
- 33 Which was the son of Aminadab, which was the son of Aram, which was the son of Esrom, which was the son of Phares, which was the son of Juda,
- 34 Which was the son of Jacob, which was the son of Isaac, which was the son of Abraham, which was the son of Thara, which was the son of Nachor,
- 35 Which was the son of Seruch, which was the son of Ragau, which was the son of Phalec, which was the son of Heber, which was the son of Sala,
- 36 Which was the son of Cainan, which was the son of Arphaxad, which was the son of Sem, which was the son of Noe, which was the son of Lamech,
- 37 Which was the son of Mathusalai, which was the son of Esau, which was the son of Jared, which was the son of Maleleel, which was the son of Enos, which was the son of Seth, which was the son of Adam, which was the son of God.

about thirty years of age, being, as was supposed, the son of Joseph.—of Heli—of Matthai, &c. This receives considerable support from RAPHELIUS's method of reading the original ωὗς ἐνομίζετο υἱὸς Ἰωσήφ ὡς ἦν ἡλίου, being (when reputed the son of Joseph) the son of Heli, &c. That St. Luke does not always speak of sons properly such, is evident from the first and last person which he names: Jesus Christ was only the supposed son of Joseph, because Joseph was the husband of his mother Mary; and Adam, who is said to be the son of God, was such only by creation. After this observation it is next necessary to consider, that in the genealogy described by St. Luke, there are two sons improperly such: i. e. two sons-in-law, instead of two sons.

As the Hebrews never permitted women to enter into their genealogical tables, whenever a family happened to end with a daughter, instead of naming her in the genealogy, they inserted her husband as the son of him, who was in reality but his father-in-law. This import, Bishop Pearce has fully shown υἱὸς (ἄδελφῆ) bears, in a variety of places—Jesus was considered according to law, or allowed custom, to be the son of Joseph, as he was of Heli.

The two sons-in-law who are to be noticed in this genealogy are Joseph the son-in-law of Heli; whose own father was Jacob, Matt. i. 16. and Salathiel, the son-in-law of Neri; whose own father was Jechonias, 1 Chron. iii. 17 and Matt. i. 12. This remark alone, is sufficient to remove every difficulty. Thus it appears that Joseph son of Jacob, according to St. Matthew, was son-in-law of Heli, according to St. Luke. And Salathiel, son of Jechonias, according to the former, was son-in-law of Neri, according to the latter.

Mary therefore appears to have been the daughter of Heli, so called by abbreviation for Heliachim, which is the same in Hebrew with Joachim.

Joseph son of Jacob, and Mary daughter of Heli, were of the same family; both came from Zerubbabel; Joseph from Abiud, his eldest son, Matt. i. 13. and Mary by Rhesa, the youngest. See ver. 27.

Salathiel and Zerobabel, from whom St. Matthew and St. Luke cause Christ to proceed, were themselves descended from Solomon in a direct line: and though St. Luke says that Salathiel was son of Neri, who was descended from Nathan, Solomon's eldest brother, 1 Chron. iii. 5. this is only to be understood of his having espoused Nathan's daughter, and that Neri dying, probably without male issue, the two branches of the family of David, that of Nathan, and that of Solomon, were both united in the person of Zerubbabel, by the marriage of Salathiel, chief of the regal family of Solomon, with the daughter of Neri, chief and heretrix of the family of Nathan. Thus it appears, that Jesus son of Mary reunited in himself all the blood, privileges, and rights of the whole family of David; in consequence of which he is emphatically called The Son of David. It is worthy of being remarked, that St. Matthew, who wrote principally for the Jews, extends his genealogy to Abraham, through whom the promise of the Messiah was given to the Jews: but St. Luke, who wrote his history for the instruction of the Gentiles, extends his genealogy to Adam, to whom the promise of the Redeemer was given in behalf of himself, and of all his posterity. See the notes on Matt. i. 1, &c.

36. Of Cainan] This Cainan, the son of Arphaxad, and father of Salā, is not found in any other Scripture genealogy. See Gen. x. 24. xi. 12. 1 Chron. i. 18, 24. where Arphaxad is made the father of Salā, and no mention at all made of Cainan. Some suppose that Cainan was a surname of Salā; and that the names should be read together thus, The son of Heber, the son of Salacainan, the son of Arphaxad, &c. If this does not untie the knot, it certainly cuts it; and the reader may pass on without any great scruple or embarrassment. There are many sensible observations on this genealogy, in the notes at the end of Bishop Newcome's Harmony.

ADDITIONAL OBSERVATIONS ON LUKE III.

Chronologers are generally agreed that our Lord was born four years before the commencement of what is termed the Vulgar Era of his Nativity; that is, in the 749th year from the building of Rome, according to Varro. Herod the Great died about the 751st year of Rome, two years before the vulgar era, according to the most accurate chronologers; therefore, our common computation must be four years too late. It is universally agreed that Augustus reigned till A. D. 14. according to the common reckoning; therefore, the 30th year of Christ's age must correspond to the 12th year after the death of Augustus; or, which is the same, to the 15th year of the sole reign of Tiberius Cæsar; and as, according to the general custom of the Jews, a person was not deemed qualified to enter on the public work of the ministry before he was 30 years of age, (though some did at 25,) it may be safely stated, that the 15th year of the reign of Tiberius coincided with the 30th year of the Baptist's age; and therefore it must have coincided also with the 30th year of our Lord's age, as the latter was born only six months after the former.

But here a question of great importance, and apparent difficulty, arises: if, as the greatest chronologers agree, Christ's 30th year was the same with the 12th year after the death of Augustus, how then can A. D. 26. which appears in these Notes in the margin of Luke, chap. iii. l. be called both the 12th and 15th year of the reign of Tiberius? There are several ways of solving this difficulty: but I need refer only to the following, which is sufficiently obvious: on August 23, A. D. 11. Augustus associated Tiberius with himself, in the full government of the empire; or, as Velleius Paterculus expresses it, ut æquum ei jus in omnibus provinciis exercitibusque esset, quam erat ipsi: "that he might have equal power with himself in all the provinces, and in all the armies of the empire." Now this accounts exactly for the three years of difference which appear to exist between the statement of St. Luke, and the computation of modern chronologers; the former reckoning from the time in which Tiberius was associated in the empire with Augustus; the latter from the death of Augustus, when Tiberius became sole emperor. For, as Tiberius was associated with Augustus on August 23, A. D. 11. and Augustus died August 19, A. D. 14. it appears that the time in which the two emperors reigned conjointly, was exactly two years and 356 days, or three years all but nine days.

That St. Luke reckoned the years of Tiberius from the above period, as many others certainly did, and not from the death of Augustus, is exceedingly probable; because, taken thus, all his dates agree; and a person who has been so careful as St. Luke evidently was, to fix the dates of the most important transactions by relates by several chronological data, (as I have had occasion, more than once, to remark on the Notes on his Gospel, and the Acts,) could not be guilty of such an oversight as this would be, had he dated from the death of Augustus, every candid reader must allow. Besides, he uses a term which may be fairly thus explained, Luke iii. l. Ἐξ ἑτὴς ἡ τετρακοστή τῆς ἡγεμονίας Τιβερίου: In the fifteenth year of the Government of Tiberius; a term which is applied not only by the Sacred Writers, but also by the best Greek authors, to signify government in general, whether administered by king, emperor, deputy, topharch, prætor, or any other; and that the word should be understood of government in this general way, and not of that which is restricted to basileus, imperator, or monarch, who reigns alone, not dividing the empire with any, and consequently being accountable to none, is rendered extremely probable by this use of the term in the very next word in this sentence; Penitus Pilate being οὐκ ἔχων, ἡγεμονίας, (executing the office of governor,) of Judea; who certainly was not monarch of Judea, but a deputy of the Roman emperor. As Pilate, therefore, governed by the authority of Augustus, so Tiberius reigned in conjoint power with Augustus himself; and therefore, the term ἡγεμονία, government; and ἡγεμονός, to exercise, or, execute the office of a governor, is with equal propriety attributed both to Tiberius, in his conjoint authority with Augustus; and to Pontius Pilate, or any other governor acting under the imperial authority. It would be easy to multiply examples here, to show that the word may be as well understood of a conjoint or deputy governor, as of an emperor or monarch. To all this might be added, the consideration that Tiberius must be reputed and called emperor by all the Roman people, as well during the time he was associated with Augustus, as after he became sole monarch. And would it not be natural for them, in speaking on the subject, to say, Tiberius is now in the first, second, or third year of his reign, even while Augustus was yet living? Nor could they speak any other language with propriety. It is true that, after the death of Augustus, the Roman historians generally attribute the whole forty-four years of the reign of Augustus, (the latter three of which he had reigned conjointly with Tiberius,) to Augustus himself; and date the reign of Tiberius from the death of his predecessor; and this they do merely for distinction's sake: but we may safely state, that no man, who lived in the time of the conjoint reign of these emperors, as Luke did, would write in any other way concerning the reign of the surviving emperor, than Luke has done.

The chronology of very few facts in the whole compass of ancient history, can be ascertained with greater accuracy than that of Herod's death. Josephus, in his Jewish Antiquities, lib. xiv. cap. 14. s. 5. has fixed the time when Herod was named king by the Romans, with so great precision, as to inform us who were the Roman consuls that were in office at the period of this monarch's accession to the throne. His words are: Ὁ μὲν πρῶς τὴν βασιλείαν παραλαμβάνει, πέντων ἔτους ἐπὶ τῆς αὐτοῦ καὶ οὐδομένης καὶ τεταρτῆς Ὀλυμπιάδος, ἑκατόντος: Γαῖος Δομῆτιος Καλπίνου τὸ δεύτερον, καὶ Γαῖος Ἀσίντιος Πωλλίου. "And thus he (Herod) received the kingdom, having obtained it in the one hundred and eighty-fourth Olympiad, when Caius Domitius Calvinius was consul the second time, and Caius Asinius Pollio the first time." Now it is certain, that these consuls were in office A. U. C. 714, according to the computation of Varro, which was that used by the Romans in the celebration of their secular games; and, consequently this year must have been the same with the thirty-ninth before the commencement of the vulgar era of Christ's nativity, according to the chronological table of Archbishop Ussher, unquestionably one of the most accurate chronologers of modern times. Therefore, as Josephus, Antiq. lib. xvii. cap. 8. s. 1. and Bell. lib. i. cap. 33. s. 8. as well as other historians, has assigned the length of the reign of Herod the Great to be 37 years, it is certain that the death of this king must have happened about the 751st year of Rome, that is to say, about two years after Christ's birth, and in the 28th year of the reign of Augustus Cæsar, if we reckon the years of his reign from the battle of Actium, at which time the government of the triumviri was abolished, and that of emperors properly commenced. It is also certain, from most indisputable evidence, collected from the whole body of the Roman and Greek historians, that Augustus Cæsar died 44 years after the battle of Actium, and, consequently, the 12th year of Tiberius's sole reign, must have been 28 years after the death of Herod; for 16, the years that Augustus reigned after Herod's death +12=28. It therefore follows, from the tables of Roman consuls, which have been carefully preserved in the Chronicon of Eusebius, that there was an interval of 68 years between the commencement of Herod's reign and that of Christ's public ministry; consequently, there is every evidence necessary to prove, that St. Luke did reckon the years of Tiberius's reign from the time that this monarch was associated with Augustus in the empire.

By all this it appears, that the time of which Luke speaks, was properly the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius, though only the twelfth after the death of Augustus. And that as Herod did not die, as chronologers generally agree, till the 751st year of Rome, which was the second year of our Lord; therefore, the whole account of the murder of the Innocents, as given by St. Matthew, chap. ii. is perfectly consistent. This being the real state of the case, it seems exceedingly strange that learned men should have made objections to the verity of St. Luke's history on this account; and that some, to the disgrace of criticism, should have had the weakness or bigotry to pronounce, on such untenable ground, the evangelical history of the genealogy of our Lord to be spurious! But wisdom is justified of her children.

Further considerations on the best method of reconciling and explaining the GENEALOGY OF OUR LORD, as given by St. Matthew and St. Luke, chiefly extracted from the prolegomena of the Rev. Dr. Barrell's fac-simile of a fragment of the Gospel of St. Matthew, from a MS. in Trinity College, Dublin.

Perhaps few questions have occasioned more trouble and perplexity to the learned, than that which concerns the genealogy of our blessed Lord, as it is given by the evangelists St. Matthew and St. Luke. The tables found in these writers are extremely different, or, as some think, contradictory. Allowing the Divine inspiration of the authors, we must grant that they could make no mistakes, in any point, and especially on a subject where the truth of the Gospel history, and the fulfillment of the ancient prophecies, are so nearly concerned. The expression of Le Clerc, however, Uniteris antiquitatem exercitiam habuere, is not strictly true. In later times, the difficulty has certainly excited much discussion; but it is worthy of remark, that while the archives of the Jews remained entire, the accuracy of the evangelists was never called in question. Hence it follows, either that some corruptions have since that time crept into the text, or that the true method of reconciling the seeming inconsistencies was then better understood. The silence of the enemies of the Gospel, both heathen and Jewish, during even the first century, is itself a sufficient proof that neither inconsistency nor corruption could be then alleged against this part of the evangelical history. If a charge of this nature could have been supported, it unquestionably would have been made. The Jews and heathens, who agreed in their hostility to the religion of Christ, were equally interested in this subject; and could they have proved that a single flaw existed in these genealogical tables, they might at once have set aside the pretensions of our Lord and his disciples: for if the lineal descent of Jesus from David were not indisputable, he could not possess the character essential to the Messiah, nor any right to the Jewish throne. If his title, in this respect, were even questionable, it is impossible to suppose that the Jews would have withheld an allegation which must fully vindicate them in denying his Messiahship, and in putting him to death as an impostor. We may confidently assert, therefore, that his regular lineal descent from David could not be disproved, since it was not even disputed, at a time when alone it could have been done successfully, and by those persons who were so deeply interested in the event. The sincere believer may consequently be assured that whatever difficulties appear at present, had formerly no existence, and are even now of such a nature as cannot be allowed to shake the faith of any reasonable man. I would not, however, be understood to intimate that those difficulties are now insuperable; on the contrary, I am satisfied that the real difficulties are few, and that these have, for the most part, been satisfactorily explained by most of the evangelical harmonists.

Among those who have written on this difficult question, few seem to have studied it so deeply as Dr. Barrett; who, in his edition of a Fragment of St. Matthew's Gospel, has brought an unusual measure of general knowledge, correct criticism, and sound learning, to bear upon this point; and though it should not be admitted, that he has entirely cleared away the obscurities of the subject, yet by his criticisms, and even his conjectures, he has cast much light upon it generally, and certainly has lessened the difficulties which some of his predecessors in the discussion, had either left as they found them, or endeavoured to account for in a manner that could yield little satisfaction to the intelligent inquirer. As the subject is important, and Dr. Barrett's work is not likely to come into the hands of many readers, and is written in a language which but few can understand, I shall lay before them the substance of his elaborate dissertation; abstract his principal arguments and illustrations; transcribe his various corrected tables; and freely intersperse such observations and explanations as the different branches of his reasoning may suggest.

The opinion of Africanus in his Epistle to Aristides (preserved by Eusebius, Hist. Eccl. l. i. c. 7.) which was received by the church for many centuries as the only legitimate mode of reconciling the evangelists St. Matthew and St. Luke, is the following:

"The names of kindred among the Jews, were reckoned in two ways. 1. According to nature, as in the case of natural generation. 2. According to law, as when a man died childless, his brother was obliged to take his wife, and the issue of that marriage was accounted to the deceased brother. In this genealogy, some succeeded their fathers as natural sons, but others succeeded who bore their names only. Thus, neither of the Gospels is false; the one reckoning the pedigree by the natural, the other by the legal line. The race both of Solomon and Nathan is so interwoven by those second marriages, which raised up issue in the name of a deceased brother, that some appear to have two fathers—him whose natural issue they were, though they did not bear his name; and him, to whom, having died childless, the children of his wife and brother were accounted for a seed, assuming his name. If we reckon the generations according to Matthew, from David by Solomon, Matthan will be found the third from the end, who begat Jacob, the father of Joseph; but if we reckon according to Luke, from Nathan the son of David, then the third person from the end will be Melchi, whose son was Heli, the father of Joseph; for Joseph was the son of Heli, the son of Melchi—Matthan and Melchi having each successively married the same wife, the latter begat children, who were brethren by the mother. Matthan descending from Solomon, begat Jacob of Estha.—After the death of Matthan, Melchi, who descended from Nathan, being of the same tribe, but of another race, took his widow to wife, and begat Heli; thus Jacob and Heli were brethren by the mother. Heli dying without issue, Jacob married his widow, and begat Joseph, who by the law was accounted the son of Heli, because the law required the seed to be raised up to the deceased brother. Matthew therefore properly says, Jacob begat Joseph, but Luke says, he was the son of Heli, and it is worthy of remark, that this evangelist never uses the term begot, or begetting, because he traces up this genealogy by putative, and not by natural sons."

This is the substance of Africanus's account, which he says he received from the relatives of our Lord, who because of their consanguinity to him, were called σπουδαῖοι. Dr. Barrett notices the difficulties of this hypothesis (pp. 18, 19.) and gives it up on the following principle, among others, which I think decisive:—that it refers wholly to the descent of Joseph from David, without attempting to prove that the son of Mary was the son of David.

Dr. B. then states his own hypothesis, viz. that Matthew relates the genealogy of Joseph, and Luke that of Mary. Hence appears a sufficient reason, that after Matthew had given his genealogical table, another should be added by Luke, fully to prove that Christ, according to the flesh, derived his descent from David, not only by his supposed father Joseph, but also by his real mother Mary. The writers who agree in this opinion, Dr. B. divides into two classes. 1. Those who affirm that the families of Solomon and Nathan coalesced in Salathiel and Zerubbabel, after which they became divaricated, till they were at last reunited in the marriage of Joseph and Mary. 2. Those who assert, that Salathiel and Zerubbabel were distinct individuals, and deny that any coalition took place between the families previously to the marriage of Joseph and Mary. Dr. B. rejects this latter opinion, because it appears to contradict the divine promise, 2 Sam. vii. 12—16. for according to this hypothesis it would be evident, that Mary, and consequently Christ, did not descend from David by Solomon; he therefore proposes to support the other hypothesis, and to clear away its difficulties.

As Iræneus, Africanus, and Ambrosius assert, that Luke has some names interpolated; to detect this error, Dr. B. divides the genealogy into four classes. 1. From Goo to Abraham. 2. From Abraham to David. 3. From David to Salathiel. 4. From Salathiel to Christ. From Abraham to Christ, Ambrosius reckons fifty generations, i. e. fifty-one names; Africanus reckons from Abraham to Joseph fifty persons, i. e. to Christ, fifty-one names; but the present text contains fifty-six names. Hence it is probable, five names are interpolated, unless we suppose the name of Abraham to be excluded, and then there are four names in the three succeeding classes to be expunged. In the first division therefore there is no interpolation. As to the second division, from Abraham to David, it is evident, from the consent of the Fathers, from the consent of MSS. and Versions, and from the books of the Old Testament, Ruth iv. 18. 1 Chron. ii. 9, 12, that neither of the evangelists had suffered any interpolation in this part of the genealogy; though in Luke lii. 33. some MSS. and Versions insert another name between Aram and Eoram. Thus the Coptic; φῶ Ἀραμδάβ, φῶ Ἀδμν, φῶ Ἀρρῖ, φῶ Ἐσραμ. Having accounted for this error, and finding no evidence, in the received text, of an interpolation in this second part of the genealogy, Dr. B. examines whether the four names be not found in the two parts of the genealogy between David and Christ, or which is more likely, in that which follows the Babylonian captivity; as previously the Jews were both punctual and correct, in keeping their genealogical records.

Recent interpreters have asserted, that two names, Matthai and Levi, had been interpolated, ver. 24. because Africanus, endeavouring to reconcile the evangelists, places Melchi the third from the end, and making him the father of Heli, leaves no room for Matthai and Levi. This method of reconciling the evangelists is followed by Ambrose, lib. 3. in Luc. Hieron. Com. In Matthew, Nazianzen in his genealogical verses, and Augustin, Retr. ii. 7. But on the other hand, it is objected, 1. That the testimony of these Fathers is worthy of little credit, because inconsistent with itself. Austin himself mentions forty-three generations from David to Christ, seventy-seven persons in the whole genealogy: he therefore could omit none. 2. Though Africanus does omit some, it is not certain which they are; it is possible he transposed Matthai and Levi; for it does not appear whom he makes the father of Melchi. Damascenus, who endeavours to reconcile Africanus, transposes these names, and makes Levi the father of Melchi, not his son; as does also Epiphanius in a hitherto inedited fragment, produced by Dr. B. in this publication, p. 46. In the Cod. A. of Matthai, instead of Matthai the son of Levi, the son of Melchi, the son of Janna; we read Melchi, the son of Matthai—of Janna—of Levi: it does not follow, therefore, that Africanus omitted Matthai and Levi. 3. These names are not omitted in any of the ancient Versions, nor in any MS. yet discovered.

In order to give a satisfactory view of this part of the subject, Dr. B. introduces a synopsis of the principal various readings of MSS. Versions, &c. on Luke lii. 29—31; from which I judge it necessary to make the following extract.

29. Μαλχι; is omitted by the Cod. Vaticanus.—Instead of Marbar, τῶν Ἀστῶν, τῶν Μαλχῶν, τῶν Ἰακωβ, one of the Bodleian MSS. reads Μαλχῶν, τῶν Μαρβάρ, τῶν Ἰακωβ, τῶν Ἀστῶν.

—Marbar, many MSS. read Marbar, and the Antehieronymian versions read, some Matthias—Mathel—Mathi—Matas—Matbas—and Matthastis.

—Instead of Ἰωσὴφ, Ἰωαννᾶς, is read in one of Matthai's MSS.

25. Marrathias, is omitted by several of the Antehieronymian versions, and by the Vulgate. —Ἀναὶς, omitted also by the same. —Ναυμ, is read Ναυμ by some, and Αναμ by others. —Ἐλῆ is read Ἐλῆ, Ἐρατ, and Ἐλα, in different MSS. and Sedi by four of the Antehieronymian. —Ναγγᾶς, in many MSS. Αγγᾶς, in the Vulgate Μαγᾶς, and in the Cod. Vercellensis, Nance; instead of Ναγγᾶς, one of Matthai's MSS. has Σαμῶν.

25. Maab, is omitted by the Vulgate, and some of the Antehieronymian versions. The Cod. Forojulienis has Manat. —Marbativ, the Cod. Leicester. reads Marbativ, and some of the Antehier. Matthiani, Matthia, and Matthai; and one adds Jae after Marrabiv. —Σεμῆ, in one of Matthai's MSS. Αρῶ. —Semeja and Semein in the Vercell. and Veronensis. —Ἰωσὴφ, the Cod. Vatic. and Cod. L. in Griesbach read Ἰωσὴφ; several others agree in the same reading, and with them the Coptic and Armenian versions, and Greg. Nazianzen. Some also read Oeseh, Oechs, Joeth, and Joseph Oese. —Ἰωδα, read Ἰωδα, in Cod. Vat. L. Cod. Leicester. and Ἰωδα and Ἰωδα by some Latin MSS.

27. Isaava read Isava, by the Cod. Alexandr. Vatic. and several others, Isava and Isava by some others.

30, 31. Ebricery, Melea, Maath, are omitted in some of the Latin MSS. Melea, only is omitted in one of the Antehieron. MSS., in the Cod. Alexandr. and two others.

From this collation of authorities, Dr. B. concludes, 1. That the omission of Melea, in the Codex Vaticanus is an error, as it contradicts Africanus, and all the Fathers, Versions, and MSS. 2. That three names have been omitted in the Antehieronymian version by Sabatier; and also in the Cod. Verceil, and Cod. Veron. viz. ver. 25. Mattathias and Amos; and in ver. 28. Maath.

Of these, two, viz. Mattathias, ver. 25. and Maath, ver. 26. are omitted in Dr. B.'s MS. Z. which contains a copy of the Antehieronymian version; and which also reads Mattathias for Matthai. Hence arises a suspicion that Maath is an interpolation, and should be omitted, and that Mattathias, ver. 25. although omitted in many MSS. is that which occurs ver. 25. As to the names Melea and Mainan, both appear to be interpolated. Excluding these four names, Mattathias, Maath, Melea, and Mainan, (unless for one of these, Amos should be rejected) the genealogy will consist of seventy-two generations.

These generations Dr. B., following Irenæus, thinks, should be laid down in the following order.

1. Jesus. 2. Joseph, (or Mary the daughter of Heli.) 3. Heli, the grandfather of Christ. 4. Mathat. 5. Levi. 6. Melchi. 7. Janna. 8. Joseph. 9. Mattathias. 10. Amos. 11. Naum. 12. Esai. 13. Nagga. 14. Semel. 15. Joseph. 16. Juda. 17. Joanna. 18. Rhesa. 19. Zerubbabel. 20. Salathiel. 21. Nert. 22. Melchi. 23. Adai. 24. Coanm. 25. Elmodam. 26. Er. 27. Jose. 28. Eliezor. 29. Jorim. 30. Matthat. 31. Levi. 32. Simeon. 33. Juda. 34. Joseph. 35. Joman. 36. Eliakim. 37. Mattatha. 38. Nathan. 39. David. 40. Jesse. 41. Obed. 42. Booz. 43. Salmon. 44. Naasson. 45. Amindab. 46. Aram. 47. Ezarom. 48. Pharez. 49. Judah. 50. Jacob. 51. Isaac. 52. Abraham. 53. Terah. 54. Nahor. 55. Serug. 56. Ragau. 57. Peleg. 58. Eber. 59. Sala. 60. Cainan. 61. Arphaxad. 62. Shem. 63. Noah. 64. Lamech. 65. Methusala. 66. Enoch. 67. Jona. 68. Mahalaicel. 69. Cainan. 70. Enos. 71. Seth. 72. Adam.

From the generations thus laid down, there will be found fifty-one names between Christ and Abraham, excluding the latter, which agrees both with Africanus and Ambrosius. Now let thirty years be reckoned to each generation between Christ and David; Salathiel will then appear to have been born anno 670 before Christ, which will be found near the truth; and David 1140. David, in fact, was born 1065, B. C. whence there appears an error of fifty-five years, or about the twentieth part of the whole time in so many generations. But according to the received text of Luke, Salathiel must be born B. C. 650, and David 1260; this would be an error of 175 years, or one sixth part of the whole interval.

Dr. B. endeavours to solve the principal difficulty by adopting the genealogy of David as delivered in 1 Chron. iii. In this chapter, and in the book of Kings, the whole is laid down in the most accurate manner, till the reign of Jechonias; after which, he supposes, some errors have been admitted into the text.

1st. Because what is recorded ver. 19. is repugnant to other parts of Scripture: viz. Pedaiah is said to be the father of Zerubbabel, whereas Salathiel is reckoned to be the father of Zerubbabel according to Ezra iii. 8. v. 2. Neh. xii. 1. Haggai i. 1. 12. ii. 2. 23. 1 Eadr. v. 6. see also Josephus, Ant. book xi. 4.

2dly. Although the obvious design of the writer is to bring down the regal family through Zerubbabel, yet the names which he mentions in the 22d, 23d; and 24th verses cannot be connected (by the assistance of the 21st verse) with Zerubbabel, mentioned in the 19th verse. The breach in the connection renders it impossible to construct the genealogical tree downward from Jechonias; for although some copies mention the sons of Rephaiah, yet it no where appears who was his father.

3dly. Many names occur in these verses, such as Delaiah, Pedaiah, Rephaiah, Pedaiah, or Pheraiah, which very nearly resemble each other, not only in the sound, but also in their constituent letters. This very similitude is a ground of suspicion, as in such names it was impossible to prevent confusion.

4thly. Nor is the opinion of the rabbins exempt from similar chronological difficulties: they assert that Salathiel, the son of Jechonias, was the father of Pedaiah, and grandfather of Zerubbabel. This will appear to be impossible, when it is considered that Jechonias and his queen were both led into captivity, B. C. 598. (Jer. xxix. 21.) and none of his children are recorded, whence it is inferred that them he had none; Salathiel, therefore, could not be born before the year 598. supposing him to have been born at this time, and at the age of twenty to have had a son born, Pedaiah, who also shall be supposed at the same age to have had a son born; even then Zerubbabel could not have been born before 569; and yet he was superintendent of the Israelites on their return from the Babylonian captivity in 536; i. e. when he would be only twenty-two years old. On the contrary, it is evident, from 1 Esdras, v. 5. that he had a son named Joschim, who was one of the chief men that conducted the returning Israelites; therefore he must be more than twenty-two years old. Besides, it will be manifest that only two generations had intervened, if we compare the sacerdotal with the regal line. Jechonias was contemporary with Seraiah; their sons were Salathiel and Josedek, therefore Salathiel and Josedek were contemporaries. Jeshua, the son of Josedek, was coeval with Zerubbabel; who was therefore the son, not the grandson, of Salathiel. St. Jerom himself, while he endeavours to prove that Salathiel and Pedaiah were the same person (Quæst. Heb. in Lib. Paral.) evidently grants that he considered Zerubbabel as the grandson of Jechonias, and that only two generations had intervened.

5thly. There are manifest errors in verses 18—22, for there are only five sons of Shemaliah numbered in ver. 22. and yet there are said to be six.

6thly. The enumeration of the children of Zerubbabel, 1 Chron. iii. 19, 20. is imperfect, as it is evident, from 1 Eadr. v. 6. that Zerubbabel had a son named Joschim, of whom no mention is made, 1 Chron. iii. 19, 20. but Jechamiah, a name very similar to this, is found in verse 18. Nor are Rhesa or Abud mentioned among his children, although Luke mentions the former, and Matthew the latter.

7thly. If we have recourse to the hypothesis of St. Jerom, which supposes that those who are mentioned, 1 Chron. iii. 18. are the children of Jechonias, and that Pedaiah, one of them, is the same with Salathiel; and that Zerubbabel was the grandson of Jechonias, and the son of Salathiel, alias Pedaiah—it may be objected, that it is not at all likely that he who is called Salathiel, ver. 17. should be called by a different name, ver. 18. nor will the difficulty be removed if it be granted that Salathiel and Pedaiah were brothers, and that Zerubbabel was the actual son of the one, and the legal son of the other, according to the law, (Deut. xxv. 6.) Let it be supposed that one of these, e. g. Pedaiah, died childless, and that his brother took his wife; for this marriage Zerubbabel and Shimei are mentioned as sons of Pedaiah; but according to the law, the first-born only succeeded in the name of the deceased, and was accounted the legal child. Let Zerubbabel be the first-born; as Shimei, therefore, was not the legal son of Pedaiah, he must have been his real son; therefore Pedaiah did not die childless,—which is contrary to the hypothesis.

8thly. The versions do not agree in the name of the father of Zerubbabel: instead of Pedaiah, the Arabic and Syriac bring in Nedabiah, and some MSS. of the LXX. read Salathiel, in the place of Pedaiah; and those which agree in making Pedaiah the father of Zerubbabel, express the name differently. For instance, Kennicott's MS. No. 1. both in ver. 18. and 19. reads Peraiah for Pedaiah, which is the reading of the Syriac and Arabic, in ver. 18. This is worthy of remark, because the name of Rephaiah occurs, ver. 21. which, by the transposition of the two first letters, might be easily converted into Peraiah, or Pedaiah פראיה or פראיה Rephaiah; and it is further necessary to remark, that the father of this Rephaiah is not mentioned. As the names of the posterity of Hananiah, the son of Zerubbabel, are mentioned in ver. 21. with the names of Rephaiah and his posterity, if, with Houbigant, we read פראיה his son, for פראיה son, it will not appear improbable, that this Rephaiah was the son of Zerubbabel. Among those who were employed in repairing Jerusalem, Rephaiah, the son of Hur, who is said to have been prince of the half part of the city, is mentioned, Nehem. iii. 9. "Hur," Dr. B. thinks, "was probably the same with Zerubbabel: the Septuagint call him Zeup, and one of the Kennicott MSS. פראיה." In this place it is difficult to comprehend Dr. B.'s meaning: פראיה viz. Zeup is certainly found in the Codex Vaticanus of the LXX. but in the Codex Alexandrinus Zeup is omitted. No MS. of Kennicott's has פראיה ben sar, for פראיה Zeup. Two MSS. omit the whole verse; and the word פראיה Hur; and one the following word פראיה: this last word cannot possibly be put in the place of פראיה Hur, for it is properly the first word of the following clause: פראיה chasi pelec yerusalem, prince of the half part (or, the region) of Jerusalem. Among those who were employed in repairing the city, in Neh. iii. 12. is Shallum, the son of Hallopeah, perhaps Meshallum, the son of the eloquent, 1 Chron. iii. 19. viz. Zerubbabel, whose eloquence and doctrine are celebrated, 1 Eadr. iii. 4. Jos. Ant. xi. 4. It must, however, be acknowledged, that the Syriac verse reads it differently, Neh. iii. 9. and Jeremiah the son of Hur, ver. 12. And Shallum the son of Hatusah.

From these considerations Dr. B. concludes, that those who are mentioned, ver. 18. were not the sons of Jechonias (Obs. 7.) nor the sons of Salathiel, (Obs. 4.) and that consequently they must be sons of Zerubbabel, as seems tolerably well ascertained by a collation of the 3d, 6th, and 8th observations—that Pedaiah or Peraiah is the same, who, in ver. 21. is called Rephaiah, and who is mentioned, Neh. iii. 9. and that Jechamiah is no other than Joschim, who according to Eadr. v. 6. was the son of Zerubbabel. Both these names, Pedaiah or Peraiah, and Jechamiah, occur, 1 Chron. iii. 18. consequently a verse is transposed, a thing not unfrequent in the Sacred Writings. The text, therefore, of 1 Chron. iii. 18—22. should be read, as Dr. B. contends, in the following order:

18. And the sons of Salathiel, Zerubbabel, and Shimei, and the sons of Zerubbabel, Mesuliam, Hananiah; and Shelomith their sister.
19. Hatusah, and Ohel, and Berechiah, and Hasadiah, Jushab-besed.
20. And Matthiram, and Rephaiah, and Shenasar, Jechamiah, Hachamiah, and Nadabiah; &c.
21. And the sons of Hananiah, Pedaiah, and Jesiah; the sons of Rephaiah; Arnan his son; Obadiah his son: Shechaniah his son: (reading according to Houbigant, בנ, beno, for בני בני.)

22. The sons of Shechaniah; Shemaiah—the sons of She-maiah; Mattath, and Igeah, and Bariah, and Neariah, and Shaphai; &c.

On the propriety of the substitution of בנ beno, his son, for בני בני, sons, in ver. 21. I cannot but agree with Dr. B. That the latter is a corruption, appears to me self-evident; the mistake might easily be made, from the great similarity between בנ and בני; and numerous mistakes of this kind in the Sacred Text, have long been the perplexity and the complaint of critics. Houbigant's note on this verse is worthy of serious regard: "Hud בנ quod hoc versus quater legitur, quater esse legendum בנ בני ejus, docet ipsa per se pagina sacra. Nec aliter legunt omnes Veteres, sed in fine post בני בני addendum בנ בני ejus, quod etiam legunt Veteres, et quod scriba omisit deceptus similitudine ejus בנ quod s'quitur initio versus 22." Houbigant in loco.

From these observations, Dr. B. concludes, that by an error of the transcriber, Pedaiah is put for Rephaiah, or Perialah in ver. 18. whilst in ver. 21. the proper name Rephaiah is retained: hence those whose names are mentioned in ver. 18. were supposed not to be the sons of Zerubbabel, and so the whole verse in which they were contained, was transposed, and put before the 19th verse, where the name of Zerubbabel occurs; and as the last word of this verse, viz. Nebudiah, or נבדיה Nebudiah, according to the Septuagint, (who omitted the word six in this place, and added it to ver. 22.) contains almost all the letters of the words בני בני בני Pedaiah; this word, by a mistake of the transcriber, was changed into בני בני Perialah, and thus it was supposed that a mistake in a name twice written was corrected; hence it was that Zerubbabel was called the son of Pedaiah, whose name occurred in the preceding verse. Many examples of similar permutations occur in the Sacred Writings, see Job xl. 1-14. which ought to be placed, as both Kennicott and Heath have observed, between what is related, chap. xl. 2, 6, and 7. see also Exod. xxx. 1, 10. also Job xxxi. 38, 39, 40. which should follow chap. xxxi. 25. A similar transposition may be seen 1 Chron. ix. 2, 17. where the whole clause appears to be taken from Neh. ii. 2, 19. Many other instances appear in Kennicott's Dissertations on the state of the printed Hebrew text.

Dr. Barrett having thus far made his way plain, proceeds to lay down a table of the regal line, taken from 1 Chron. iii. on each side of which he places the genealogy as given by the evangelists St. Matthew and St. Luke, that the general agreement may be the more easily discerned.

Matthew, chap. 1.	1 Chron. chap. iii.	Luke, chap. iii.
Salathiel	Salathiel	Salathiel
Zerubbabel	Zerubbabel	Zerubbabel
First generation omitted	Rephaiah	Rhesa
Another generation omitted	Arnan, or Onan	Joanna or Jonan
Abiad	Obadiah	Juda
Eliakim	Shechaniah	Joseph or Josedch
A third generation omitted	Shemiah	Seinel
	No corresponding generation	Mattathias
	No corresponding generation	Manth
Fourth generation omitted	Neariah	Nagge
Azor who is also from the above descends Joseph who espoused Mary	Azrikam who is Elioenni	Ezeli (from whom descended Mary)
	Joanan Joanam	Naum or Anunn.

Dr. Barrett then proceeds to lay down the two following propositions.

1. That Salathiel in Matthew is the same with Salathiel in 1 Chron. iii. This admits of no doubt, and therefore he despatches it in a single sentence; both were descended from David through the same ancestors; both lived at the same time, viz. of the captivity; and both were born of the same father.

2. That Salathiel in Luke is the same with Salathiel in 1 Chron. iii. 17. the same as in Matthew 1. and consequently that Mary the mother of Jesus, descending from Salathiel in Luke, descends lineally from David by Solomon, a matter of vast consequence according to the opinion of Catholics, who assert, "If Christ has not descended from Solomon, he cannot be the Messiah." Having taken for granted that Salathiel in Matthew is the same with Salathiel in 1 Chron. he proceeds to deduce the following consequences from his hypothesis 1. Zerubbabel in 1 Chron. is the same with Zerubbabel in Luke: they agree in name, the time also is the same, and they had the same father. 2. Rephaiah in 1 Chron. is the same with Rhesa in Luke, where a notable coincidence occurs in the name. 3. Arnan in 1 Chron. is the same with Joanna in Luke; and here it is worthy of notice, that in one of Kennicott's MSS. the name was originally written בנא אונא, a נאנ being used instead of א נאח. It is well known that the MSS. in Luke write the name in a great diversity of forms, viz. Iava, Iavar, Iovav, Iovva, Iova, and some Iovaa, between which and Onan there is but little difference. 4. Obadiah in 1 Chron. is the same as Judah in Luke. In this name may be found that of Abiad mentioned Matt. i. 13. who is the third from Zerubbabel; whence it is evident, that in St. Matthew two generations are omitted. The MSS. in St. Luke also vary considerably in the name: some write it Iovaa, which answers to the Hebrew Joida, or even יודיה Obadiah. Obadiah was one of the priests who signed and sealed the same covenant, Neh. x. 6. and seems to be the same with Idda, Neh. xii. 4. who returned with Zerubbabel. See Newton, Chronol. p. 361. 5. Shechaniah in 1 Chron. is the same with Joseph, or Josedch, between which names there is a considerable similitude. 6. Shemaiah in 1 Chron. is the same with Seinel in Luke. In this place the names perfectly agree. Thus, through six successive generations in the same line, the names either perfectly agree, or are manifestly similar; each preserving the same order. Hence it may be legitimately concluded, that the preceding hypothesis is perfectly correct; and that Salathiel in Luke is the same with Salathiel in 1 Chron. iii. especially, when we consider that the time which elapsed between David and Christ was nearly bisected by the captivity; so that the number of generations between them, was divided into two almost equal parts by Salathiel. The two generations which occur after Seinel in Luke, Mattathias and Maath, of which no trace is found in 1 Chron. iii. are already rejected from the text of Luke, as interpolations, according to the proofs advanced in Dr. Barrett's second section. Immediately after Shemaiah, the writer of 1 Chron. iii. subjoins Nariiah, in which Dr. B. supposes he has found the person called Nagge in Luke iii. 25. as he thinks the names do not differ widely, for the LXX. whom Luke generally follows, often express the Hebrew נאח, by the Greek Γαμμα; and even in this chapter, for the נאח of the Hebrew text, they write γαμα.

To this Neariah, says Dr. B. the book of Chronicles gives three children; in Azrikam, the first of these, we discover the Azor of St. Matthew, the son of Eliakim. But, according to the opinion of some critics, Azner should be inserted between Eliakim and Azor: (See Le Clerc in Hammond, vol. I. p. 6.) or according to others, between Abiad and Eliakim (Druisus. Crit. sac. in Matt.) However this may be, Dr. B. thinks he can discover Shechaniah in Eliakim, and either Shemah, or Neariah, in Azner. Another son of Neariah was Elioenni, the same probably which Luke calls Ezeli or Eolim; nor can they be considered as different persons, though their names in Greek and Hebrew do not perfectly correspond. He thinks also that Elioenni in 1 Chron. iii. and Eliothe-nan in the LXX. are different, although they certainly may be names of the same person differently written, and signify the same son of Neariah. As Elioenni and Azrikam are different, the same may be said of Ezeli and Azor; hence the family of Salathiel became branched out into two families, one of which is traced by Matthew, the other by Luke. It is not therefore surprising, if the subsequent names, as far as Joseph, should differ, as a different line of descent is described. Luke gives to his Ezeli a son called Naum, or Anum; and in 1 Chron. iii. among the sons of Elioenni, we meet with Joannas sometimes written Joanan—names which have a considerable similitude to that recorded by Luke.

Having thus fixed the genealogy, by proving that Salathiel in Matthew and Luke is the same with Salathiel in 1 Chron. iii. 17. Dr. Barrett proceeds to inquire whether chronology will support him in the times of those generations, the correlative succession of which he has endeavoured to ascertain. In the year 445 B. C. Nehemiah returned to Jerusalem, at which time both Shemiah, the son of Shechaniah, and Rephaiah, who preceded him four generations, were employed in building the walls of the city. At this time, therefore, Shemiah must have been very young, Dr. B. supposes about twenty years old; he also considers that each of the generations consists of the same number of years; that Rephaiah must consequently be about a hundred years old, to have been born in the year before Christ 545; his father Zerubbabel to have been born about the year 570, and Salathiel in 590 or 595; there is, consequently, no place for the supposititious Pedaiah, because Jechonias had not at that time begotten Salathiel, Matt. i. 12. as he was not led away captive till the year 590. Shemiah, above-mentioned, had a brother called Mattath, the son of Shechaniah, who is mentioned Ezra viii. 2, 3. and 1 Esdr. viii. 29. as returning to Jerusalem with Ezra; and as Shemiah had more sons, the last but one of whom was Neariah; this Neariah may be considered as having been born in 420, when Shemiah was about forty-five years old. We may also suppose, says Dr. B. that in the fortieth year of Neariah, or before Christ 380, Elioenni the youngest son was born. Now as Elioenni begot several sons, the youngest of whom was Joannas or Naum, it will not appear improbable, if we consider Naum to have been begotten in the year 360, or the fortieth year of Elioenni. The line of Naum is carried further in the book of Chronicles, whence we may suppose he had reared no children in the time of Simeon, named the Just, who was high-priest from 242 to 283, and is thought to have put the finishing hand to this book. It is reasonable, therefore, that Naum begot Anos in 260, when he himself was in the fiftieth year of his age. After Anos, let thirty years be computed for each generation, or a hundred years for three, and the dates of these generations will appear as under.

MATTHEW.	LUKE.	A. A. C.
Amor born before Christ 380	Elocael, or Eali, born	380
A generation omitted	Naum . . . . .	340
Another generation omitted	Amos . . . . .	290
Abdac . . . . .	Matathias . . . . .	260
Abhim . . . . .	Joseph . . . . .	230
Abnod . . . . .	Janna . . . . .	200
Eleazar . . . . .	Melchi . . . . .	166
Matthan . . . . .	Levi . . . . .	130
Jacob . . . . .	Matthai . . . . .	100
Joseph, the husband of Mary	Heli . . . . .	65

Dr. B. now proceeds to inquire, whether by the proposition it appears, that Salathiel in Luke, and Salathiel in 1 Chron. are the same person, provided the generations be traced up to David. This inquiry, he acknowledges, is pressed with many and great difficulties; and the utmost that can be expected from it, is, to show that the objections advanced against it are destitute of force.

Matthew states that Jechonias was the father of Salathiel; but Luke says that Neri was his father. These two accounts, however, may be reconciled by the hypothesis, that Neri was the maternal grandfather of Salathiel, and hence, according to the custom of the Hebrews, put down for his father; so we read, Ezra ii. 61. Who took a wife of the daughters of Barzilai, and was called after their name. The truth of this hypothesis is next examined.

It is a received opinion among the Jews that Susanna was wife of Jechonias, and mother of Salathiel, which is confirmed by Biblioth. Clement. Vatic. tom. i. page 490. where it is said, "that Joachim, the husband of Susanna, was supposed to have been the king whom Nebuchadnezzar shut up in prison, whence he was liberated, on the death of that monarch, by his son and successor, Evil-merodach. Of Susanna was born Salathiel; because he was of the regal line, the elders of the people sat in judgment in his house, as in the palace of the king." That Susanna was nearly allied to the throne, will be readily credited, if it is considered that when she came to the tribunal, she was accompanied by fifty servants: (see the Septuag. version of Daniel, fol. Romæ, 1772.) this was a proof of the regal state; for when Abshalom and Adonijah affected the throne, they prepared fifty men to run before them, (2 Sam. xv. 1. 1 Kings i. 6.) The Jews also affirm that she was of the tribe of Judah.

Dr. B. next inquires into the genealogy of Neri, whom he supposes to be the same with Neriah, mentioned so frequently by Jeremiah, ch. xxxii. 7, 16. xxxvi. 4, 8, 14, 32. xliii. 3, 6. xlv. 1, 41, 59. and who was the father of Baruch and Seraiah. Baruch was certainly of an illustrious family, as we learn from Josephus, (Ant. x. 11.) who calls him the son of Neri. This Dr. B. further establishes by the following considerations. 1. The title of prince is given to his brother Seraiah, Jer. xli. 69. 2. When the Jews were conquered by the Chaldeans, Johanan, the son of Kareah, took the remnant of Judah, and all the nobility and persons of distinction, and carried them down into Egypt; and among these were Jeremiah the prophet, and Baruch, the son of Neriah, Jer. xliii. 5-7. 3. The words of Jer. xiv. 4, 6. "The Lord saith, Behold, that which I have built I will break down, and that which I have planted will I pluck up; and seekest thou great things for thyself, seek them not, for I will bring evil upon all flesh," &c. Here it is evident the threatening is directed against the house of David; (2 Sam. vii. 16. 1 Chron. xvii. 25.) and the great things which Baruch sought for himself, were certainly a share in the government of the land, as being nearly allied to the throne, or even the throne itself. 4. Add to this, that the Jews alleged as a charge against Baruch, that by his instigation, Jeremiah exhorted them rather to continue under the power of the Chaldeans, than escape to Egypt, Jer. xliii. 3. which seems strongly to intimate that he expected to exercise the regal power over the remaining Jews, by the assistance of the Chaldeans, which he could not expect to maintain in Egypt. From all these considerations, Dr. B. infers, that Baruch, and consequently Neriah, sprang from Nathan, the son of David.

As nothing is related of the ancestors of Neriah, Dr. B. is obliged to recur to conjectures, the chief of which are the following. "Maaseiah or Melchi, the father of Neriah, was probably the same who, during the reign of Josiah, was governor of the city, 2 Chron. xxxiv. 8. whom the Syrian calls the scribe, and the Arabic the teacher of the city. Probably, also, Simeon the son of Juda, (Luke iii. 30.) is the same as is called Maaseiah, the son of Adaiah, 2 Chron. xxiii. 1. Simeon and Maaseiah, (Dr. B. observes,) are written in nearly the same letters, and differ scarcely, except in their situation. As to the names of Adaiah and Juda, the difference is nearly the same with that already observed between Obadiah and Judah, Luke iii. 25." That the names in the Old Testament have been extremely corrupted, not only in the different translations through which the Sacred writings have passed, but also in various copies of the original, is well known to every biblical critic, and has been continually deplored, from the days of St. Jerom to the present hour. The complaint of this father, in his comment on Ezekiel xi. 7. is as follows:—Proin minus est limen portæ quæd LXX. Græc nominant, præ quo in Hebræo scriptum est quod Seph; et diligentem et studiosum lectorem adruendum puto—ut scial omnia præ- pæ verba Hebraica et nomina quæ in Græca et Latina translatione sunt posita, nimia vetustate corrupta scriptorumque vitio depravata, et dum de inemendatis scribitur inemendatiora de verbis Hebraicis facta esse sarmatica imò nullius gentis, dum et Hebrææ esse dixerint, et aliæ esse non ceperint. Huzon. Opera, vol. iii. col. 961. edit. Martini.

Dr. B. thinks, that if the above hypothesis be allowed as probable, it will follow, that the family of Nathan was concealed in an humble and obscure situation, until almost the whole race of Solomon was destroyed by the treachery of Athaliah. Maaseiah or Simeon, the prince of this family, fearing a similar destruction, and being moved with pity towards his relative Joash, and having, by the assistance of Jehoiada the priest, removed Athaliah out of the way, set Joash at last on the throne, according to the particular account in 2 Chron. xxii. 23. From that time the wealth and dignity of this family increased, till the whole line of Solomon becoming extinct, Jechonias, his only remaining heir, took Susanna, the daughter of Neriah, to wife; to which circumstance, Dr. B. thinks, the author of Psalms cxxxi. 17. probably alludes: "There will I make the horn of David to bud; I have ordained a lamp, (that is, Neri) for mine anointed." Here Dr. B. plays a little on the original word ner, a lamp; and ner, Neri, signifies my lamp, and ner, Neriah, the lamp of the Lord, he seems to think this a prophetic declaration of the preservation of the seed royal in the person of Neriah, the direct ancestor of Christ. Supposing this hypothesis to be true, Dr. B. constructs his genealogical table in the following manner, beginning at the division of the line of Solomon, and omitting Melea and Maines, for reasons that have been already assigned.

1 SOLOMON.	1 NATHAN.
2 Rehobom.	2 Mattha.
3 Abiah.	3 Eliakim.
4 Am.	4 Jonan.
5 Jehoshaphat.	5 Joseph.
6 Jehoram.	6 Judah or Adalah.
7 Abasiah.	7 Simeon or Maaseiah.
8 Josah.	8 Levi.
9 Amaziah.	9 Matthai.
10 Uziah.	10 Jorim.
11 Jotham.	11 Eliezer.
12 Ahaz.	12 Jose.
13 Heseckiah.	13 Er.
14 Manases.	14 Elimodem.
15 Amon.	15 Cosam.
16 Josias.	16 Addi.
17 Jehoiakim.	17 Melchi or Maaseias.
18 Jechonias or Jechontas.	18 Neri.
	19 Susanna.

On the ancestors of Mary, and the consanguinity between her and Joseph, Dr. B. shows that the Virgin descended, not from the tribe of Levi, (an opinion which some of the ancients embraced,) but from the family of David; and brings several additional arguments, to prove that St. Luke's professed object was to trace out the genealogy of Mary, and St. Matthew's that of Joseph.

According to the universal voice of antiquity, the father and the mother of the Virgin were called Joachim and Anna. Dr. B. thinks it indisputable that Joachim is the same name with Eli, Luke iii. 23. or Eliakim, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 4. To give a greater probability to the opinion that Luke delivers the genealogy of Mary, Dr. B. refers to those Jewish writings quoted by Lightfoot, in which the mother of our Lord is called by Mary the daughter of Eli; and though the latter word is written by instead of for this does not, in his opinion, tend to invalidate the argument, as M and J are frequently interchanged. It may therefore be taken for granted, that Eli was the father of Mary, and maternal grandfather of Christ, and that he is considered by St. Luke as the real father of Christ, while Joseph was only the putative father; and thus Dr. B. thinks, his own exposition is not only confirmed, but Luke is represented to be consistent with himself through the whole of his account: for in the same way as Neri is said to be the father of Salathiel, though it is evident he was no more than his maternal grandfather, so Eli would appear to be the maternal grandfather of Christ, although he is called his father. On the contrary, if the hypothesis of Africanus be adopted, the genealogy by St. Luke is self-contradictory. Dr. B. next takes into consideration the family of Anna, the mother of Mary. It is generally agreed, that the father of Anna was named Matthan; who this person was, is not easy to be known. Some suppose him to have been a priest; and as it was lawful for the daughters of the priests to marry into any tribe, (Lev. xxii. 12.) we may perceive how Mary could be the cousin (cousine) of Elisabeth, (who was really of the tribe of Levi) though her father Joachim, or Eli, was a descendant of the tribe of Judah.

From considering the family of Anna, the Virgin's mother, Dr. B. proceeds to the family of Joachim; but in this examination, he finds very few documents to guide his inquiries. Ancient writers, in order to prove that Mary sprang from David, invented two names, Panther and Barpanther, as the grandfather and father of Joachim. Concerning this fabulous Panther, there are two hypotheses: one is, that Panther was the surname of Jacob, the father of Joseph; and this was the opinion of Epiphanius. Others have maintained that he was of the family of Nathan, and brother of Melchi: this hypothesis is delivered by Damascenus, who appears to have found it in Epiphanius. Leaving all these precarious and forged authorities, Dr. B. thinks that the family of Joachim is more likely to be ascertained, by inquiring among the brethren of our Lord, mentioned Matt. xiii. 56. and Mark vi. 3.—James, Joses, Simon, and Judas. Concerning these, there have been two opinions: 1. That they were the sons of Joseph by a former wife, which Origen, Epiphanius, and Theophylact, seem to have believed, and Jerom has opposed with considerable asperity. (See his books De viris illustribus et adversus Helvidium.) Jerom's hypothesis, on the contrary, is, that James, Joses, Simon, and Judas, were cousins of our Lord, being the sons of Mary, the wife of Alphaeus, and sister to the Virgin, who is called Μαρια ἡ ἑρα Κλωρα, John xix. 25. Dr. B. asserts, after Baronius and others, that James the Just, the first bishop of the church at Jerusalem, was the same who is called the brother of our Lord, and the son of Alphaeus.

Concerning Cleopas or Klopas, there are various opinions, both among ancient and modern writers. Hegesippus, as quoted by Eusebius, (Hist. Eccl. l. iii. c. 2.) calls him the brother of Joseph. Epiphanius, on the contrary, calls him the brother of Joachim: Chrysostom is of the same opinion. Others make Cleopas and Alphaeus the same person: and Grotius, following the Arabic version, understands by ἡ ἑρα Κλωρα, the daughter, not the wife of Cleopas. Calmet, in his comment on John xix. 25. gives it as the most plausible opinion, that Cleopas was husband of that Mary, who is sister to the blessed Virgin, and father of James the less. Dr. B. thinks that these apparently discordant systems may be harmonized by the following scheme:

By this hypothesis it would appear, that there were two persons of the name of Cleopas, one the brother of Joachim, the other the brother of Joseph; one the legal father, the other the husband of Mary. Hence James and the others are properly termed the brethren of our Lord, being connected with him by a twofold tie of consanguinity—on their mother's side, and on the side of their putative father. Secondly, by this hypothesis, the difficulty of regarding these four brothers, as the sons of Joseph, is quite removed: if this indeed were true, they would not be the sons of Mary ἡ ἑρα Κλωρα, for Joseph would then have been the husband of the two sisters, contrary to the law, Lev. xviii. 16. Cleopas or Alphaeus, according to Grotius and Lucas Brageonius, is the same with Κλωρα, (John xix. 25.) who was alive when Christ was crucified. Hence it is improbable that James, Joses, Simon, and Judas, could have been born of his wife, by any marriage of her with Joseph. We have already seen from Hegesippus, that the grandchildren of this very Jude who was called our Lord's brother, were alive in the time of Domitian: he expressly says, that "Simon, the son of Cleopas, who was uncle to our Lord, was crucified in the 120th year of his age, under the reign of Trajan, when Atticus, of the consular order, was president of Syria." See Euseb. Hist. Eccl. l. iii. c. 32. Simon must, therefore, have been born before Christ, for Trajan, in whose reign he suffered, died A. D. 117. If, therefore, Joseph had ever married Mary ἡ ἑρα Κλωρα, it must have been before he espoused the mother of our Lord, and then, as both these sisters were alive at the crucifixion, (John xix. 25.) he must have been illicitly the husband of both at the same time.

Dr. Barret having thus finished his laborious investigation of this difficult subject, concludes his work by observing, that his prime object was to prove, by the agreement of the evangelists, that Christ descended from David by the line of Solomon; that on this subject he has not assumed that the explanation given of one or other of these genealogies is the true one, and that the other should be corrected according to it; but that in the first place, he has considered the number of the generations, and then by assistance derived from the books of the Old Testament, the rules of sound and temperate criticism, and the collation of MSS., has constructed a genealogical table of the family of David; (see the preceding pages;) and having compared with this table the genealogies extant in the evangelists, he finds that they agree with it in the main, and consequently that they agree with each other. It cannot be objected against his argument, that he takes for granted what he should have proved, viz. that one or other of the genealogies is true; this he has not asserted, but he infers that both are authentic, from their agreement with that which he has constructed from the best existing authorities: and although he considers the hypothesis of the moderns, which states that Luke sets down the genealogy of Mary, to be the most probable, yet he has not assumed it as true; neither do his conclusions against the hypothesis of Africanus, in the second and third sections, rest on any such assumption, but solely on the authority of the Old Testament and a collation of MSS. unconnected with any hypothesis whatever.

All subjects of ...a kind, both in sacred and profane history, are entangled with difficulties peculiar to themselves, partly through the remoteness of the times to which they refer, and partly through the peculiar manners that prevailed in different nations, of reckoning and recording their genealogical successions. I may venture to affirm, that similar difficulties, and even greater, are to be found in profane histories of the first importance; the general accuracy and universal authenticity of which no man who regards his credit will ever call into question.

Dr. B. has certainly proved his main points without recurring to the discreditable shifts, which some will adopt who cut the knots they cannot wade; and because they find it impracticable to reconcile certain seeming difficulties in the sacred history, first affect to doubt the authenticity of those histories, and afterwards put forth their criminal hands, and lop off whole branches from the tree of life: a text is too small a portion; difficulties (to them) still remain, another text must follow, and another still, till at last whole chapters are tossed away into the limbo of vanity. Then, to be sure, all is fair and clear; for by this species of criticism any thing may be proved or denied: but God never appointed such a method to discover truth, and sound criticism should hold it disgraceful to resort to it.

I have said that the peculiar manner used by some of the eastern nations in recording their genealogies, is one cause of their present obscurity: on this subject the late ingenious Mr. Harmer refers to a case in point, which I shall give in his own words:

"Genealogical tables were kept among the Jews with great exactness. Every person of learning, however, knows, that the great difference in this point between St. Matthew and St. Luke, who have each of them given us a genealogy of our Lord, has greatly embarrassed the curious, and did so early; (see Aug. Retract. l. ii. c. 7.) but as in other cases, what was at first thought an objection against the sacred writer, has turned out in his favour; so doubtly will this, when it shall be thoroughly cleared up. Time may, perhaps, do it: all I would attempt to show here is, that there has been lately discovered an inscription at Palmyra, which has just the same difficulty. He that clears up the Syrian difficulty, will, I presume, clear up the Sacred. To which I would add, that it is to be remembered, that Palmyra was in the neighbourhood of Judea, and the inscriptions that are found there, are about the apostolic age. As to the inscription, I refer to Mr. Wood, the ingenious editor of those ruins, who has observed, that he will be more difficult to understand than translate it. This, says he, will appear by reading it literally, which is easiest done into Latin, thus: Senatus populusque Aitalamenum, Pami Aium, Mactani respublicam, Abranis precepit, Malaba abnepotem, et Eranem patrem ejus, viros pios et patriam amicos, et omni modo pietatis patrie patriusque diti, honoris gratia. Anno 450, Mense Aprilii. Our difficulty is, continues he, that Abranis is called the father of Aitalamenum, who is himself called the son of Panus, just in the same manner as St. Matthew tells us that Jacob begot Joseph; and St. Luke calls Joseph the son of Heli. There is something without doubt in these affairs peculiar to the east, which, however unknown to us, was common to the Jews and the people of Palmyra; and will, when properly explained, be a proof of the authenticity of these genealogies, instead of an objection." HANMER'S Observations.

To several of my readers it will probably appear that Dr. B. has carried his critical conjectures too far, particularly in respect of several names which occur in these genealogies. Those only will make this objection, who from a want of acquaintance with ancient MSS. suppose that those names, as they occur in our present copies, are to be considered as invariably genuine and original. But the specimen I have already given in the preceding pages, of the different reading of the same name in ancient MSS. will serve to remove this misapprehension. From a very particular acquaintance with this subject, I think I have sufficient ground to state, that through the ignorance and carelessness of transcribers, innumerable mistakes have been made in ancient names. These also have suffered very greatly in their transmission from one language to another, till at last the original name is almost totally lost. Examples might be multiplied without end: a very few will suffice: the proper Yehohesu (according to the Masoretic punctuation) of the Hebrew Bible, is changed into Joshua and Jesus; Yeshiyah into Isaiah and Isaias; Eliyah into Elijah and Elias; the Persian Dard into Darius; Artaxerxes into Ahasuerus; Artaxastata into Artaxerxes, and even Darius; and Yachanan into Joabab, Joananas, and John; Beside, neither the Greeks nor Romans could pronounce either the Hebrew or Persian names; and when engaged in the task of transcribing, they did it according to their own manner of pronunciation. It is notorious that all the Greek and Latin historians have committed innumerable blunders of this kind, in their accounts of foreign nations. St. Jerom loudly complains of the ridicule, which those Christians, who were accustomed only to a Greek or Latin mode of pronunciation, endured continually from the Jews, because they could not pronounce the Hebrew proper names, particularly the gutturals: "Solent, (says he) irridere nos imperitios maxime in asperationibus et quibusdam cum roscere gula literis profertendis;—si igitur a nostra tem nomina sunt lingua idiomata et videlicet barbara nomina sunt expressa et exprimitur ab Hebraeis, sicut coccinus in attollere, et jurare se penitus necire quod dicitur. Com. I. Epist. ad Tit. c. iii. v. 9. This learned father excuses himself and his brethren on the consideration, that the Hebrews had both sounds and letters, which were wholly unknown to the Greeks and Latins; and particularly instances ν chet, and γ ayin, the double aspiration of which (as he terms it) the Septuagint not being able to express, were obliged to represent by the use of additional letters, quia cum duplici aspiratione in Graecam linguam transferre non poterant, aliis litteris additis expresserunt: he adds, that, whereas the Greeks and Romans had only one s, the Hebrews had three, ס samed, ס sade, and ש sin, each of which had a different sound. (Ubi supra.) From these examples, the reader will see the indubitable evidence of corruption in many proper names, and the great probability of it in others.

On the whole of this genealogy a pious writer makes the following reflections:

Jesus, the author and principle of the new creation, and the repairer of the world, disdain not to be reckoned among ordinary creatures, and among the children of sinful Adam. He designed hereby to secure us from having the least doubt of his human nature; and to assure us, that we have a Victim, a Saviour, and a High-priest, capable of compassionating our infirmities and miseries, and making atonement for our sins; and thus reconciling us to God. Thanks be to God for his unspeakable gift!

CHAPTER IV.

Christ's temptation, 1-13. Traces in the synagogues of Galilee, 14, 15. He preaches in a synagogue at Nazareth, 16-23. They attempt to kill him, 29, 31. He preaches in Capernaum, 31, 32, and casts out a demon, 33-37. Heals Peter's mother-in-law, and various others, 37-41. He goes to the desert, and preaches afterward in the synagogues of Galilee, 42-44. [A. M. 4031. A. D. 27. An. Olymp. 641. 3.]

AND Jesus being full of the Holy Ghost returned from Jordan, and was led by the Spirit into the wilderness, 2 Being forty days tempted of the devil. And in those days he did eat nothing: and when they were ended, he afterward hungered.

3 And the devil said unto him, If thou be the Son of God, command this stone that it be made bread.

4 And Jesus answered him, saying, It is written, That man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word of God.

5 And the devil, taking him up into a high mountain, showed unto him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time.

6 And the devil said unto him, All this power will I give thee, and the glory of them: for that is delivered unto me; and to whomsoever I will I give it.

7 If thou therefore wilt worship me, all shall be thine.

8 And Jesus answered and said unto him, Get thee behind me, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.

9 And he brought him to Jerusalem, and set him on a pinnacle of the temple, and said unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down from hence:

a Matt. 4. 1. Mark 1. 12. b Ver. 14. Ch. 2. 27. c Exod. 24. 28. d Kings 19. 8. e Dan. 6. 2. f John 12. 21. & 14. 20. Rev. 13. 8. 7. g Or, fall down before me. h Dan. 6. 13. & 10. 12.

NOTES.—Verse 1. Was led by the Spirit Or, And was carried about, &c. Matthew says, ἀνεχθῆναι, he was brought up. Mark says, the Spirit driveth him, ἐμβαλλῆναι—pulleth him forth. But each of the evangelists attributes this to the Holy Ghost, not to Satan.

It may be useful to remark here, that during the forty days and forty nights in which he is said to have been tempted by the devil, he is carried about continually sustained and supported by the Holy Ghost. Let those who are tempted by the devil, lean for, and in virtue of the power and intercession of Christ, claim the same support; and it matters little how many days they may be assailed by the devil, while they are carried about by the Spirit of God.

7. If thou wilt worship me! This temptation is the last in order, as related by Matthew; and it is not reasonable to suppose that any other succeeded to it. Luke has here told the particulars, but not in the order in which they took place. See every circumstance of this temptation considered and explained in the notes on Mat. iv. 1-11.

14. Returned in the power of the Spirit or ἐν δυνάμει τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος, in the mighty power of the Spirit. Having now conquered the grand adversary, he comes in the miracle-working energy of the Spirit to show forth his power, God-head, and love to the people, that they might believe and be saved. He who, through the grace of God, resists and overcomes temptation, is always bettered by it. This is one of the wonders of God's grace, that those very things which are designed for our utter ruin, he makes the instruments of our greatest good. Thus Satan is ever duped by his own proceedings, and caught in his own craft.

15. And he taught in their synagogues We do not find that even the persecuting Jews ever hindered Christ or his disciples from preaching in their synagogues. Is it the same in every place where even the Christian religion is established by law? Would Jesus, or his apostles, or their most scriptural representatives, be permitted to preach in one out of a thousand churches, in certain countries, unless they were strictly conformed to their external ecclesiastical customs? Not even then, unless their doctrine were according to the taste of the managers and of the times.

Glorified of all. All felt the power of his preaching, and acknowledged the divinity of his mission. The scandal of the cross had not yet taken place.

16. To Nazareth, where he had been brought up It is likely that our Lord lived principally in this city, till the 30th year of his age; but after he entered on his public ministry, his usual place of residence was at the house of Peter, in Capernaum.

As his custom was Our Lord regularly attended the public worship of God in the synagogues; for there the Scriptures were read—other parts of the worship were very corrupt;

10 For it is written, He shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee:

11 And in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.

12 And Jesus answering said unto him, It is said, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.

13 And when the devil had ended all the temptation, he departed from him for a season.

14 And Jesus returned in the power of the Spirit into Galilee: and there went out a fame of him through all the region round about.

15 And he taught in their synagogues, being glorified of all.

16 And he came to Nazareth, where he had been brought up: and, as his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the sabbath-day, and stood up for to read.

17 And there was delivered unto him the book of the prophet Esaias. And when he had opened the book, he found the place where it was written,

18 The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the Gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, h Matt. 4. 8. i Ps. 91. 11. k Deut. 6. 16. l John 14. 20. Hebrews 4. 15. m Matt. 4. 22. John 4. 43. n Verse 1. o Acts 10. 37. p Matt. 9. 35. q 13. 51. r Acts 13. 14. & 17. 2. s Isa. 61. 1.

but it was the best at that time to be found in the land. To worship God publicly is the duty of every man; and no man can be guiltless who neglects it. If a person cannot get such public worship as he likes, let him frequent such as he can get. Better to attend the most indifferent, than to stay at home, especially on the Lord's day. The place and the time are set apart for the worship of the true God: if others do not conduct themselves well in it, that is not your fault, and need not be an hindrance to you. You come to worship God—don't forget your errand—and God will supply the lack in the service by the teachings of his Spirit. Hear the saying of old Mr. Herbert.

"The worst speak something good: should all want sense, God takes the text, and preacheth p-a-t-i-e-n-c-e."

A man may always profit where the word of God is read.

Stood up for to read The Jews, in general, sat while they taught or commented on the Sacred Writings, or the traditions of the elders; but when they read either the law or the prophets, they invariably stood up: it was not lawful for them even to lean against any thing while employed in reading.

17. And when he had opened the book Ἀναρτήσας, when he had unrolled it. The Sacred Writings used to this day, in all the Jewish synagogues, are written on skins of basil, parchment or vellum, pasted end to end, and rolled on two rollers, beginning at each end; so that in reading from right to left, they roll off with the left while they roll on with the right. Probably the place in the prophet Isaias here referred to, was the lesson for that day; and Jesus unrolled the manuscript till he came to the place; then, after having read, he rolled it up again, and returned it to the officer, ver. 20. The ruler of the synagogue, or his servant, whose business it was to take care of it. The place that he opened was probably the section for the day. See the Table at the end of Deuteronomy, and the note at the end of that table.

18. The Spirit of the Lord This is found in Isaias lxi. 1. but our Lord immediately adds to it ver. 7. of chap. xlii. The proclaiming of liberty to the captives, and the acceptable year (or year of acceptance) of the Lord, is a manifest allusion to the proclaiming of the year of Jubilee by sound of trumpet, see Lev. xxv. 9, &c. and the notes there. This was a year of general release of debts and obligations; of bondsmen and women; of lands and possessions, which had been sold from the families and tribes to which they belonged. Our Saviour, by applying this text to himself, a text so manifestly relating to the institution above-mentioned, plainly declares the typical design of that institution.—Iovvra.

He hath anointed me I have been designed and set apart for this very purpose: my sole business among men is, to proclaim glad tidings to the poor, &c. All the functions of this new prophet are exercised on the hearts of men; and the grace by which he works in the heart is a grace of healing, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, 19 To preach the acceptable year of the Lord.

20 And he closed the book, and he gave it again to the minister, and sat down. And the eyes of all them that were in the synagogue were fastened on him.

21 And he began to say unto them, This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears.

22 And all bear him witness, and wondered at the gracious words which proceeded out of his mouth. And they said, Is not this Joseph's son?

23 And he said unto them, Ye will surely say unto me this proverb, Physician, heal thyself; whatsoever we have heard done in Capernaum, do also here in thy country.

24 And he said, Verily I say unto you, No prophet is accepted in his own country.

25 But I tell you of a truth, many widows were in Israel in the days of Elias, when the heaven was shut up three years and six months, when Elias went, save unto Sarepta, a city of Sidon, unto a woman that was a widow.

26 And many lepers were in Israel in the time of Elisha the prophet; and none of them was cleansed, saving Naaman the Syrian.

27 And all they in the synagogue, when they heard these things, were filled with wrath.

28 And rose up, and thrust him out of the city, and led him unto the brow of the hill whereon their city was built, that they might cast him down headlong.

29 But he passing through the midst of them went his way.

30 And he came down to Capernaum, a city of Galilee, and taught them on the sabbath-days.

31 And they were astonished at his doctrine: for his word was with power.

32 And in the synagogue there was a man, which had a spirit of an unclean devil, and cried out with a loud voice,

33 And in the synagogue there was a man, which had a spirit of an unclean devil, and cried out with a loud voice, saying, What have I to do with thee, Jesus of Nazareth? thou dost vex us here, saying that thou art the Christ, the Son of God.

34 And he said unto him, Hold thy peace, and be silent, and be obedient to the Lord.

35 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

36 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

37 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

38 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

39 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

40 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

41 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

42 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

43 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

44 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

45 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

46 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

47 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

48 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

49 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

50 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

51 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

52 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

53 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

54 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

55 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

56 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

57 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

58 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

59 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

60 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

61 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

62 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

63 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

64 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

65 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

66 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

six months when great famine was throughout all the land;

26 But unto none of them was Elias sent, save unto Sarepta, a city of Sidon, unto a woman that was a widow.

27 And many lepers were in Israel in the time of Elisha the prophet; and none of them was cleansed, saving Naaman the Syrian.

28 And all they in the synagogue, when they heard these things, were filled with wrath.

29 And rose up, and thrust him out of the city, and led him unto the brow of the hill whereon their city was built, that they might cast him down headlong.

30 But he passing through the midst of them went his way.

31 And he came down to Capernaum, a city of Galilee, and taught them on the sabbath-days.

32 And they were astonished at his doctrine: for his word was with power.

33 And in the synagogue there was a man, which had a spirit of an unclean devil, and cried out with a loud voice,

34 And in the synagogue there was a man, which had a spirit of an unclean devil, and cried out with a loud voice, saying, What have I to do with thee, Jesus of Nazareth? thou dost vex us here, saying that thou art the Christ, the Son of God.

35 And he said unto him, Hold thy peace, and be silent, and be obedient to the Lord.

36 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

37 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

38 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

39 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

40 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

41 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

42 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

43 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

44 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

45 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

46 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

47 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

48 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

49 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

50 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

51 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

52 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

53 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

54 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

55 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

56 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

57 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

58 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

59 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

60 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

61 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

62 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

63 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

64 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

65 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

66 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

67 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

68 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

69 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

70 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

71 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

72 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

73 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

74 And he said unto him, Thou shalt be silent, and shalt be obedient to the Lord.

delicence and illumination; which, by an admirable virtue, causes them to pass from sickness to health, from slavery to liberty, from darkness to light, and from the lowest degrees of misery to supreme eternal happiness. See Queenel. To those who feel their spiritual poverty; whose hearts are broken through a sense of their sins; who see themselves tied and bound with the chains of many evil habits; who sit in the darkness of guilt and misery, without a friendly hand to lead them in the way in which they should go—to these, the Gospel of the grace of Christ is a pleasing sound, because a present and full salvation is proclaimed by it; and the present is shown to be the acceptable year of the Lord; the year, the time, in which he saves to the uttermost all who come unto him in the name of his son Jesus. Reader! what dost thou feel? Sin—wretchedness—misery of every description? Then come to Jesus—He will save thee—he came into the world for this very purpose. Cast thy soul upon him, and thou shalt not perish, but have everlasting life.

20. Were fastened on him) Were attentively fixed on him. The proper import of ἀνεψώθησεν αὐτόν.

22. At the gracious words) To the words of grace, εἰς τοὺς λόγους τῆς χάριτος, or the doctrines of grace, which he then preached. It is very strange, that none of the evangelists give us any account of this sermon! There was certainly more of it than is related in the 31st verse. To-day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears; which seems to have been no more than the first sentence he spoke on the occasion. Had it been necessary for our salvation, it would have been recorded. It was a demonstration to those Jews, that Jesus, who preached to them, was the person of whom the prophet there spoke: it was not designed for general edification. Let us make a good use of what we have got, and we shall not regret that this sermon is lost. The ear is never satisfied with hearing: we wish for another and another revelation, while sadly unacquainted with the nature and design of that which God's mercy has already given us.

23. Physician, heal thyself) That is, heal the broken hearted in thy own country, as the latter clause of the verse explains it: but they were far from being in a proper spirit to receive the salvation which he was ready to communicate; and therefore they were not healed.

24. No prophet is accepted) See on Matt. xiii. 56—57.

25. In the days of Elias) See this history, 1 Kings xvii. 1—9, compared with chap. xviii. 1—45. This was evidently a miraculous interference, as no rain fell for three years and six months, even in the rainy seasons. There were two of these in Judea, called the first and the latter rains: the first fell in October, the latter in April; the first prepared the ground for the seed; the latter ripened the harvest. As both these rains were withheld, consequently there was a great famine throughout all the land.

26. Unto none of them was Elias sent, save unto Sarepta) The sentence is elliptical, and means this: To none of them was Elias sent: he was not sent except to Sarepta: for the widow at Sarepta was a Sidonian, not a widow of Israel. ΣΑΡΕΠΤΑ.—Sarepta was a Pagan city in the country of Sidon, in the vicinity of Galilee.

27. None of them was cleansed) This verse is to be understood as the 26th; for Naaman being a Syrian, was no leper in Israel.

The meaning of the verses is, God dispenses his benefits when, where, and to whom he pleases. No person can complain of his conduct in these respects, because no person deserves any good from his hand. God never punishes any but those who deserve it; but he blesses incessantly those who deserve it not. The reason is evident: justice depends on certain rules; but beneficence is free. Beneficence can bless both the good and the evil; justice can punish the latter only. Those who do not make this distinction, must have a very confused notion of the conduct of Divine Providence among men.

28. Were filled with wrath) They seem to have drawn the following conclusion from what our Lord spoke: "The Gentiles are more precious in the sight of God than the Jews: and to them his miracles of mercy and kindness shall be principally confined." This was pretty near the truth, as the event proved. Those who profit not by the light of God, while it is among them, shall have their candle extinguished.

34 Saying, "Let us alone; what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art:" the Holy One of God.

35 And Jesus rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him. And when the devil had thrown him in the midst, he came out of him, and hurt him not.

36 And they were all amazed, and spake among themselves, saying, What a word is this! for with authority and power he commandeth the unclean spirits, and they come out.

37 And the fame of him went out into every place of the country round about.

38 ¶ And he arose out of the synagogue, and entered into Simon's house. And Simon's wife's mother was taken with a great fever; and they besought him for her.

o Or, Arise.—h Verse 41.—f Psal. 16. 10. Dan. 9. 24. Chap. 1. 33.—d Mark 8. 14. Mark 1. 31.—e Matt. 9. 16. Mark 1. 4.

39 And he stood over her, and rebuked the fever; and it left her; and immediately she arose and ministered unto them.

40 ¶ Now when the sun was setting, all they that had any sick with divers diseases brought them unto him; and he laid his hands on every one of them, and healed them.

41 ¶ And devils also came out of many, crying out, and saying, Thou art Christ the Son of God. And he rebuking them suffered them not to speak: for they knew that he was Christ.

42 ¶ And when it was day, he departed and went into a desert place; and the people sought him, and came unto him, and stayed him, that he should not depart from them.

43 And he said unto them, I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also; for therefore am I sent.

44 ¶ And he preached in the synagogues of Galilee.

f Mark 1. 34 & 3. 11.—g Mark 1. 25, 26. Verse 34, 35.—h Or, say that they know him to be Christ 1. 10.—i Mark 1. 31.

more than seventy others. Wolstein and Griesbach have both received it into the text. The people had tasted the good word of God, and now they cleave to Christ with their whole heart. Hearing the words of Christ, and feeling the influence of his Spirit upon the soul, will attract and influence the heart; and indeed nothing else can do it.

And stayed him] Strove to detain him; καταξενον αυτον, they caught hold of him. Thus showing their great earnestness to be further instructed.

43. I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities] To proclaim the kingdom of God was the Messiah's great work; healing the diseases of the people was only an emblematical and secondary work, a work that was to be the proof of his goodness, and the demonstration of his authority to preach the Gospel, and open the kingdom of heaven to all believers.

Some have found both a difficulty and a mystery in the shutting up of heaven in the time of the prophet Elijah. It was no doubt emblematical of the hardened and impenitent state of the Israelites, and of the judgments of God in withholding those divine influences which they had so often abused. As to the difficulty of the six months, which both our Lord here, and St. James, ch. v. 17. mention, and which are not mentioned in the book of Kings, whence the account is taken, it may be easily understood thus. The rains, we have already seen, fell in Judea, twice in the year, about April, and about October. At this latter period, when the rain was expected, the prophet prayed that it might not rain; the rain therefore of Marchevan, or October, &c. was then restrained: this restraint continued for three full years, but six months had elapsed from Nisan, April, &c. when they had their last rain; add these six months to the three full years that the rain was restrained at the prayer of Elijah, and then we have the period of three years and six months, according to our Lord and Saint James. By this the justice of God was shown: but behold his mercy in that rain of grace which fell so abundantly by the preaching of Christ during the three years and six months of his public ministry! Thus the difficulty is solved, and the mystery explained. Reader, the most awful famine is a famine of the word of God: thou art not yet tried in this way; behold the goodness and severity of God! While thou hast the light, walk as a child of the light; and let it not be thy curse and condemnation, that while others, by reading and bearing the word of God, are plentifully watered, thy fleece alone should be found dry. How unutterable must the woe of those be, who live and die idle under the preaching of the Gospel of Christ! Let him that readeth, understand.

44. I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities] To proclaim the kingdom of God was the Messiah's great work; healing the diseases of the people was only an emblematical and secondary work, a work that was to be the proof of his goodness, and the demonstration of his authority to preach the Gospel, and open the kingdom of heaven to all believers.

Some have found both a difficulty and a mystery in the shutting up of heaven in the time of the prophet Elijah. It was no doubt emblematical of the hardened and impenitent state of the Israelites, and of the judgments of God in withholding those divine influences which they had so often abused. As to the difficulty of the six months, which both our Lord here, and St. James, ch. v. 17. mention, and which are not mentioned in the book of Kings, whence the account is taken, it may be easily understood thus. The rains, we have already seen, fell in Judea, twice in the year, about April, and about October. At this latter period, when the rain was expected, the prophet prayed that it might not rain; the rain therefore of Marchevan, or October, &c. was then restrained: this restraint continued for three full years, but six months had elapsed from Nisan, April, &c. when they had their last rain; add these six months to the three full years that the rain was restrained at the prayer of Elijah, and then we have the period of three years and six months, according to our Lord and Saint James. By this the justice of God was shown: but behold his mercy in that rain of grace which fell so abundantly by the preaching of Christ during the three years and six months of his public ministry! Thus the difficulty is solved, and the mystery explained. Reader, the most awful famine is a famine of the word of God: thou art not yet tried in this way; behold the goodness and severity of God! While thou hast the light, walk as a child of the light; and let it not be thy curse and condemnation, that while others, by reading and bearing the word of God, are plentifully watered, thy fleece alone should be found dry. How unutterable must the woe of those be, who live and die idle under the preaching of the Gospel of Christ! Let him that readeth, understand.

45. When the sun was setting] And consequently the Sabbath ended, for before this it would have been unlawful to have brought their sick to be healed.

46. And the people sought him.] Rather, Sought him earnestly. Instead of εζηθουν, sought, I read εζηθουν, earnestly sought. This reading is supported by ABCDFLMS—V, and and prayed him that he would thrust out a little from the land. And he sat down, and taught the people out of the ship.

47 ¶ Now when he had left speaking, he said unto Simon, Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught.

48 And Simon answering, said unto him, Master, we have toiled all night, and have caught nothing: and yet will I leave my net behind me, and follow thee, whithersoever thou shalt go.

49 And he said unto him, Fear not, for henceforth thou shalt catch men. And when he had let down his nets, straightway he, and his brethren, and the disciples, entered into the ships, and sat down, and he sat down, and taught the people out of the ship.

50 ¶ And when he had finished speaking, he said unto Simon, Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught.

51 And Simon answering, said unto him, Master, we have toiled all night, and have caught nothing: and yet will I leave my net behind me, and follow thee, whithersoever thou shalt go.

52 And he said unto him, Fear not, for henceforth thou shalt catch men. And when he had let down his nets, straightway he, and his brethren, and the disciples, entered into the ships, and sat down, and he sat down, and taught the people out of the ship.

53 ¶ And when he had finished speaking, he said unto Simon, Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught.

54 And Simon answering, said unto him, Master, we have toiled all night, and have caught nothing: and yet will I leave my net behind me, and follow thee, whithersoever thou shalt go.

55 And he said unto him, Fear not, for henceforth thou shalt catch men. And when he had let down his nets, straightway he, and his brethren, and the disciples, entered into the ships, and sat down, and he sat down, and taught the people out of the ship.

56 ¶ And when he had finished speaking, he said unto Simon, Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught.

57 And Simon answering, said unto him, Master, we have toiled all night, and have caught nothing: and yet will I leave my net behind me, and follow thee, whithersoever thou shalt go.

CHAPTER V.

The miraculous draught of fishes at the lake of Genesareth, 1—11. Christ heals a leper, 12—14. His fame being published abroad, he withdraws to the desert, 15, 16. He heals a paralytic person, at which the scribes and Pharisees murmur, but the people glorify God, 17—26. He calls the publican Levi, who makes a feast for Christ, to which he invites a great number of publicans and others, at which the scribes and Pharisees murmur, and our Lord vindicates his conduct, 27—32. The question about fasting answered, 33—36. The parable of the new pieces of cloth put on the old garment, and the new wine put in old bottles, 36—39. [A. M. 4031. A. D. 27. An Olymp. CCL. 3.]

AND it came to pass, that, as the people pressed upon him to hear the word of God, he stood by the lake of Genesareth,

2 And saw two ships standing by the lake: but the fishermen were gone out of them, and were washing their nets.

3 And he entered into one of the ships, which was Simon's,

4 And said unto him, Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught.

5 And Simon answering, said unto him, Master, we have toiled all night, and have caught nothing: and yet will I leave my net behind me, and follow thee, whithersoever thou shalt go.

6 And he said unto him, Fear not, for henceforth thou shalt catch men. And when he had let down his nets, straightway he, and his brethren, and the disciples, entered into the ships, and sat down, and he sat down, and taught the people out of the ship.

7 ¶ And when he had finished speaking, he said unto Simon, Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught.

8 And Simon answering, said unto him, Master, we have toiled all night, and have caught nothing: and yet will I leave my net behind me, and follow thee, whithersoever thou shalt go.

9 And he said unto him, Fear not, for henceforth thou shalt catch men. And when he had let down his nets, straightway he, and his brethren, and the disciples, entered into the ships, and sat down, and he sat down, and taught the people out of the ship.

10 ¶ And when he had finished speaking, he said unto Simon, Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught.

11 And Simon answering, said unto him, Master, we have toiled all night, and have caught nothing: and yet will I leave my net behind me, and follow thee, whithersoever thou shalt go.

and prayed him that he would thrust out a little from the land. And he sat down, and taught the people out of the ship.

47 ¶ Now when he had left speaking, he said unto Simon, Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught.

48 And Simon answering, said unto him, Master, we have toiled all night, and have caught nothing: and yet will I leave my net behind me, and follow thee, whithersoever thou shalt go.

49 And he said unto him, Fear not, for henceforth thou shalt catch men. And when he had let down his nets, straightway he, and his brethren, and the disciples, entered into the ships, and sat down, and he sat down, and taught the people out of the ship.

50 ¶ And when he had finished speaking, he said unto Simon, Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught.

51 And Simon answering, said unto him, Master, we have toiled all night, and have caught nothing: and yet will I leave my net behind me, and follow thee, whithersoever thou shalt go.

52 And he said unto him, Fear not, for henceforth thou shalt catch men. And when he had let down his nets, straightway he, and his brethren, and the disciples, entered into the ships, and sat down, and he sat down, and taught the people out of the ship.

53 ¶ And when he had finished speaking, he said unto Simon, Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught.

54 And Simon answering, said unto him, Master, we have toiled all night, and have caught nothing: and yet will I leave my net behind me, and follow thee, whithersoever thou shalt go.

55 And he said unto him, Fear not, for henceforth thou shalt catch men. And when he had let down his nets, straightway he, and his brethren, and the disciples, entered into the ships, and sat down, and he sat down, and taught the people out of the ship.

56 ¶ And when he had finished speaking, he said unto Simon, Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught.

NOTE.—Verse 1. The people pressed upon him.] There was a glorious prospect of a plentiful harvest, but how few of these blades came to full corn in the ear! To hear with diligence and affection is well, but a preacher of the Gospel may expect that out of crowds of hearers, only a few, comparatively, will fully receive the truth, and hold out to the end.

To hear the word of God] Τοις λογους του Θεου, the doctrine of God, or, the heavenly doctrine.

The lake of Genesareth] Called also the sea of Galilee, Matt. iv. 18 and Mark 1. 16, and the sea of Tyberias, John vi. 1. It was, according to Josephus, forty furlongs in breadth, and one hundred and forty in length. No synagogue could have contained the multitudes who attended our Lord's ministry; and therefore he was obliged to preach in the open air, but this also some of the most eminent rabbins were in the habit of doing; though among some of their brethren it was not deemed reputable.

3. Two ships] Δυο πλοια, two vessels. It is highly improper to term these ships. They appear to have been only such small boats as are used to manage nets on flat smooth beaches: one end of the net is attached to the shore; the fishermen row out, and drop the net as they go, making a kind of semi-circle from the shore; they return and bring the rope attached to the other end with them, and then the net is hauled on shore; and as it was sunk with weights to the bottom, and floated with corks at the top, all the fish in that compass were included, and drawn to shore.

3. And taught—out of the ship] They pressed so much upon him on the land through their eagerness to hear the doctrine of life, that he could not conveniently speak to them, and so was obliged to get into one of the boats; and having pushed a little out from the land, he taught them. The smooth still water of the lake must have served excellently to convey the sounds to those who stood on the shore.

5. Simon—said—Master] Επιστατα. This is the first place where this word occurs; it is used by none of the inspired ed all the night, and have taken nothing: nevertheless at thy word I will let down the net.

6 And when they had this done, they enclosed a great multitude of fishes: and their net brake.

7 And they beckoned unto their partners, which were in the other ship, that they should come and help them. And they came, and filled both the ships, so that they began to sink.

8 When Simon Peter saw it, he fell down at Jesus' knees, saying, O Lord, depart from me; for I am a sinful man, O Lord.

9 For he was astonished, and all that were with him, at the draught of the fishes which they had taken:

10 And so was also James and John, the sons of Zebedee, which were partners with Simon. And Jesus said unto Simon, Fear not: for henceforth thou shalt catch men.

11 And when he had brought their ships to land, they forsook all, and followed him.

12 ¶ And it came to pass, when he was in a certain city, behold a man full of leprosy: who seeing Jesus fell on his face, and besought him, saying, Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.

13 And he put forth his hand, and touched him, saying, I will: Be thou clean. And immediately the leprosy departed from him.

14 And he charged him to tell no man: but go and show thyself to the priest, and offer for thy cleansing, according as Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them.

John 9: 6-11. John 21: 8, 11. 2 Sam. 6: 9. 1 Kings 17: 18. Matthew 4: 19. Mark 1: 27. Matt. 4: 20, 22. Mark 1: 18. Chapter 12: 22. Matthew 6: 2. Mark 1: 42.

penmen but Luke, and he applies it only to our blessed Lord. It properly signifies a praefect, or one who is set over certain affairs or persons: it is used also for an instructor, or teacher. Peter considered Christ, from what he had heard, as teacher of a divine doctrine, and as having authority to command, &c. he seems to comprise both ideas in this appellation; he listened attentively to his teaching, and readily obeyed his orders. To hear attentively, and obey cheerfully, are duties we owe not only to the sovereign Master of the world, but also to ourselves. No man ever took Jesus profitably for his teacher, who did not at the same time receive him as his Lord.

We have toiled all the night! They had cast the net several times in the course of the night, and drew it to shore without success, and were now greatly disheartened. I have seen several laborious draughts of this kind made without fruit. All labour must be fruitless where the blessing of God is not; but especially that of the ministry. It is the presence and influence of Christ, in a congregation, that cause souls to be gathered, unto himself: without these, whatever the preacher's eloquence or abilities may be, all will be night and fruitless labour.

At thy word I will let down the net! He who assumes the character of a fisher of men, under any authority that does not proceed from Christ, is sure to catch nothing: but he who labours by the order and under the direction of the great Bishop of souls, cannot labour in vain.

6. Their net brake! Or, began to break, διεσπυννυρο, or, was likely to be broken. Had it broke, as our version states, they could have caught no fish. Grammarians give the following rules concerning words of this kind. Verba completiva inchoative intelligenda. Verbs which signify the accomplishment of a thing, are often to be understood as only signifying the beginning of that accomplishment. Raphaelius gives some very pertinent examples of this out of Herodotus.

They beckoned unto their partners! Had not these been called in to assist, the net must have been broken, and all the fish lost. What a pity there should be such envious separation among the different sects that profess to believe in Christ Jesus! Did they help each other in the spirit of Christian fellowship, more souls would be brought to the knowledge of the truth. Some will rather leave souls to perish, than admit of partners in the sacred work. It is an intolerable pride to think nothing well done but what we do ourselves; and a diabolic envy to be afraid lest others should be more successful than we are.

They filled both the ships! Both the boats had as many as they could carry, and were so heavily laden that they were ready to sink. As one justly observes, "there are fish plenty to be taken, were there skillful hands to take, and vessels to contain them. Many are disputing about the size, capacity, and goodness of their nets and their vessels, while the fish are permitted to make their escape." Did the faithful fishers in both the vessels in these lands, (the established church, and the various branches of the dissenting interest) join heartily together, the nations might be converted to God: but while the ridiculous disputes for and against particular forms last, there can be no unity. Were men as zealous to catch souls, as they are to support their particular creeds and forms of worship, the state of Christianity would be more flourishing than it is at present. But the wall of separation is continually strengthened, each party fortifying it on his own side.

8 Depart from me; for I am a sinful man! Εξήλθε απ' εμου, go out from me, i. e. from my boat. Peter was fully convinced that this draught of fish was a miraculous one: and that God himself had particularly interfered in this matter, whose presence and power he revered in the person of Jesus. But as he felt himself a sinner, he was afraid the divine purity of Christ could not possibly endure him: therefore he wished for a separation from that power, which he was afraid might break forth and consume him. It seems to 15 But so much the more went there a fame abroad of him: and great multitudes came together to hear, and to be healed by him of their infirmities.

16 ¶ And he withdrew himself into the wilderness, and prayed. 17 ¶ And it came to pass on a certain day, as he was teaching, that there were Pharisees and doctors of the law sitting by, which were come out of every town of Galilee, and Judaea, and Jerusalem: and the power of the Lord was present to heal them.

18 ¶ And behold, men brought in a bed a man which was taken with a palsy: and they sought means to bring him in, and to lay him before him.

19 And when they could not find by what way they might bring him in because of the multitude, they went upon the housetop, and let him down through the tiling with his couch, into the midst before Jesus.

20 And when he saw their faith, he said unto him, Man, thy sins are forgiven thee.

21 ¶ And the scribes and the Pharisees began to reason, saying, Who is this which speaketh blasphemies! Who can forgive sins, but God alone?

22 But when Jesus perceived their thoughts, he answering, said unto them, What reason ye in your hearts?

23 Whether is easier, to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Rise up and walk?

24 But that ye may know, that the Son of man hath power have been a devised maxim among the Jews, that whoever had seen a particular manifestation of God, should speedily die. Hence Jacob seemed astonished that his life should have been preserved, when he had seen God face to face. Gen. xxxii. 30. So the nobles of Israel saw God, and yet did eat and drink, for on them he had laid not his hand, i. e. to destroy them, though it appears to have been expected by them, in consequence of this discovery which he made of himself. See Exod. xiv. 10, 11, and the notes there. This supposition of the Jews, seems to have been founded on the authority of God himself, Exod. xxxiii. 20. There shall no man see my face and live. So Moses, Deut. v. 26. Who is there of all flesh that hath heard the voice of the living God, speaking out of the midst of the fire as we have, and lived? So Gideon expected to be immediately slain, because he had seen an angel of the Lord, and a miracle performed by him. See Judges vi. 21-23. So likewise Manoah and his wife, Judges xiii. 22. We shall surely die, for we have seen God. These different passages sufficiently show in what sense these words of Peter are to be understood.

Matthew 6: 4. Lev. 16: 4, 10, 21, 22. Matt. 4: 25. Mark 3: 7. John 6: 2. k. Matt. 14: 23. Mark 6: 46. Matt. 9: 2. Mark 2: 3. Matt. 9: 2. Mark 2: 6, 7. n. Psal. 22: 5. Isa. 43: 25.

10. Thou shalt catch men. Ανθρωπους σον ζωων, thou shalt catch men alive; this is the proper signification of the word. Fear not, these discoveries of God tend to life, not to death; and ye shall become the instruments of life and salvation to a lost world. These fish are taken to be killed and fed on; but those who are converted under your ministry, shall be preserved unto eternal life. See on Matt. vi. 18, &c. where this subject is considered more at large.

11. They forsook all and followed him. God expects this from every person, and especially from those in whose hearts, or in whose behalf, he has wrought a miracle of grace or of providence. Jesus intended to call Peter, James, and John, to become his disciples; and that they might see the prosperity and importance of the call, he let them witness in their presence, that they may know his doctrine. 2dly. He works a miracle before their eyes, that they might see and be convinced of his power. 3dly. He calls them to go forth with this doctrine, and through this power, that they might teach the ignorant, and be successful in their work.

12. A certain city! This was some city of Galilee; probably Chorazin or Bethsaida.

A man full of leprosy! See this disease and the cure, largely explained on Matt. viii. 2-4, and see it particularly applied to the use of public preaching, Mark i. 40, &c. See also the notes on Lev. xiii. and xiv.

16. And he withdrew himself into the wilderness! Or rather, he frequently withdrew into the desert. This I believe to be the import of the original words, ην ερηωσεν. He made it a frequent custom to withdraw from the multitudes for a time, and pray, teaching hereby the ministers of the Gospel that they are to receive fresh supplies of light and power from God by prayer; that they may be the more successful in their work; and that they ought to seek frequent opportunities of being in private with God and their books. A man can give nothing unless he first receive it; and no man can be successful in the ministry, who does not constantly depend upon God, for the excellence of the power is all from him. Why is there so much preaching, and so little good done? Is it not because the preachers mix too much with the world, keep too long in the crowd, and are so seldom in private with God? Reader! Art thou a herald for the Lord of Hosts? Make full proof of thy ministry! Let it never be said of thee, He forsook all to follow Christ, and to preach his Gospel, but there was little or no fruit of his labour; for he ceased to be a man of prayer, and got into the spirit of the world. Alas! alas! is this luminous star, that was once held in the right hand of Jesus, fallen from the firmament of heaven, down to the earth!

17. On a certain day! This was when he was at Capernaum. See Mark ii. i.

upon earth to forgive sins, (he said unto the sick of the palsy) I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy couch, and go unto thine house.

25 And immediately he rose up before them, and took up that whereon he lay, and departed to his own house, glorifying God.

26 And they were all amazed, and they glorified God, and were filled with fear, saying, We have seen strange things to-day.

27 * And after these things he went forth, and saw a publican, named Levi, sitting at the receipt of custom: and he said unto him, Follow me.

28 And he left all, rose up, and followed him.

29 * And Levi made him a great feast in his own house: and there was a great company of publicans and of others that sat down with them.

30 But their scribes and Pharisees murmured against his disciples, saying, Why do ye eat and drink with publicans and sinners?

31 And Jesus answering, said unto them, They that are whole need not a physician; but they that are sick.

a Matt. 2:2. Mark 2:13, 14.—b Matt. 2:13.—c Ch. 15: 1.—d Matt. 9:13.

32 The power of the Lord Jesus Christus—the mighty or miraculous power of the Lord, i. e. of Jesus, was there to heal them; so many as were diseased either in body or soul. Where the teaching of Christ is, there also is the power of Christ to redeem and save.

33 A man—taken with a palsy See this case described on Matt. ix. 1, &c. and Mark ii. 1, &c.

34 Went upon the house-top See on Matt. xxiv. 17.

35 Who can forgive sins, but God alone? If Jesus were not God, he could not forgive sins; and his arrogating this authority, would have been blasphemy against God, in the most proper sense of the word. That these scribes and Pharisees might have the fullest proof of his Godhead, he works in their presence three miracles, which, from their nature, could only be effected by an omniscient and omnipotent Being. See on Matt. ix. 5, 6.

36 Strange things Παράδοξα, paradoxes. A paradox is something that appears false and absurd, but is not really so; or, something contrary to the commonly received opinion. We have seen wonders wrought which seem impossible; and we should conclude them to be tricks and illusions, were it not for the indisputable evidence we have of their reality.

37 Levi See on Matt. ix. 9. Mark ii. 14.

38 And he left all Karaliton—completely abandoning his office, and every thing connected with it. He who wishes to preach the Gospel like the disciples of Christ, must have no earthly entanglement. If he have, his whole labour will be marred by it. The concerns of his own soul, and those of the multitudes to whom he preaches, are sufficient to engross all his attention, and to employ all his powers.

39 A great feast Δοξα μεγάλη, a splendid entertainment. The word refers more properly to the number of the guests, and the manner in which they were received, than to the quality or quantity of the fare. A great number of his friends and acquaintance was collected on the occasion, that they might be convinced of the propriety of the change he had made, when they had the opportunity of seeing and hearing his heavenly Teacher.

32 * I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance. 33 * And they said unto him, * Why do the disciples of John fast often, and make prayers, and likewise the disciples of the Pharisees; but thine eat and drink?

34 And he said unto them, Can ye make the children of the bridechamber fast while the bridegroom is with them?

35 But the days will come, when the bridegroom shall be taken away from them, and then shall they fast in those days.

36 * And he spake also a parable unto them; No man putteth a piece of a new garment upon an old; if otherwise, then both the new maketh a rent, and the piece that was taken out of the new agreeth not with the old.

37 And no man putteth new wine into old bottles; else the new wine will burst the bottles, and be spilled, and the bottles shall perish.

38 But new wine must be put into new bottles; and both are preserved.

39 No man also having drunk old wine, straightway desireth new; for he saith, The old is better.

1 Tim. 1:15.—a Matt. 9:14. Mark 2:18.—b Matt. 9:16, 17. Mark 2:21, 22.

30. Why do ye eat and drink, &c.] See what passed at this entertainment, considered at large on Matt. ix. 10—17. Mark ii. 15—22.

37. The new wine will burst the bottles] These old bottles would not be able to stand the fermentation of the new wine, as the old sewing would be apt to give way. It is scarcely necessary to remark, that the Eastern bottles are made of skins; generally those of goats.

39. The old is better.] Ἡροδοτῆς—is more agreeable to the taste or palate. Herodotus, the scholiast on Aristophanes, and Homer, use the word in this sense. See Raphaelus. The old wine, among the rabbins, was the wine of three leaves, that is, wine three years old; because from the time that the vine had produced that wine, it had put forth its leaves three times. See Lightfoot.

1. The miraculous draught of fishes—the cleansing of the leper—the healing of the paralytic person—the calling of Levi—and the parable of the old and new bottles, and the old and new wine—all related in this chapter, make it not only very entertaining, but highly instructive. There are few chapters in the New Testament, from which a preacher of the Gospel can derive more lessons of instruction; and the reader would naturally expect a more particular explanation of its several parts, had not this been anticipated in the notes and observations on Matt. ix. to which chapter it will be well to refer.

2. The conduct as well as the preaching of our Lord is highly edifying. His manner of teaching made every thing he spoke interesting and impressive. He had many prejudices to remove, and he used admirable address in order to meet and take them out of the way. There is as much to be observed in the manner of speaking the truth, as in the truth itself, in order to make it effectual to the salvation of them who hear it. A harsh unfeeling method of preaching the promises of the Gospel, and a smiling manner of producing the terrors of the Lord, are equally reprehensible. Some preachers are always severe and ministerial; others are always mild and insinuating; neither of these can do God's work; and it would take too much to make one PREACHER.

CHAPTER VI.

The disciples pluck and eat the ears of corn on the Sabbath day, and the Pharisees find fault, 1, 2. Our Lord shows the true use of the Sabbath, 3—5. He heals the man with the withered hand, 6—11. He goes into a mountain to pray, and sends twelve disciples, 12—16. Multitudes are instructed and healed, 17—19. Pronounces four blessings, 20—23, and four woes, 24—26. Gives various instructions about loving our enemies, being patient, gentle, kind, grateful, and merciful, 27—30. Harsh judgments censured, and charity recommended, 31, 32. The parable of the blind leading the blind, 33. Of the mote in a brother's eye, 40—42. Of the good and corrupt tree, 43, 44. The good and evil treasure of the heart, 45. The parable of the two houses, one builded on the rock, and the other on the sand, 46—49. [A. M. 4031. A. D. 27. An. Olymp. CCL 3.]

AND * it came to pass on the second sabbath after the first, that he went through the corn fields; and his disciples plucked the ears of corn, and did eat, rubbing them in their hands.

a Matt. 12: 1. Mark 2:23.

b Lev. 23: 7. Deu. 23:25. John 13:31.

NOTES.—Verse 1. On the second Sabbath after the first Sabbath, δευτεροσάββατον, in the first Sabbath after the second. What does this mean? In answering this question commentators are greatly divided. Dr. Whitby speaks thus: "After the first day of the pass-over, (which was a Sabbath, Exod. xii. 16.) ye shall count unto you seven Sabbaths complete, Lev. xxiii. 15. reckoning that day for the first of the first week, which was therefore called δευτεροσάββατον, the first Sabbath from the second day of unleavened bread, (the 16th of the month;) the second was called δευτεροδευτερον, the second Sabbath from that day; and the third δευτεροτριτον, the third Sabbath from the second day; and so on, till they came to the seventh Sabbath from that day, i. e. to the 49th day, which was the day of Pentecost. The mention of the seven Sabbaths, to be numbered with relation to this second day, answers all that Grotius objects against this exposition." Warrar's Notes.

cles. According to which opinion, this second first Sabbath must have been the first Sabbath after the pentecost. So we have the first Sunday after Epiphany; the first after Easter; the first after Trinity; and the first in Lent. Bp. PARSONS.

This was the next day after the pass-over, the day in which they were forbidden to labour, Lev. xxiii. 6. and for this reason was termed Sabbath, Lev. xxiii. 15. but here it is marked by the name, second first Sabbath, because being the day after the pass-over, it was in this respect the second: and it was also the first, because it was the first day of unleavened bread, Exod. xii. 15, 16. MARTIN.

I think, with many commentators, that this transaction happened on the first Sabbath of the month Nisan; that is, after the second day of the feast of unleavened bread. We may well suppose that our Lord and his disciples were on their way from Jerusalem to Galilee, after having kept the pass-over. Bp. NEWCOMB.

The Vulgar Latin renders δευτεροσάββατον, secundo-primum, which is literal and right. We translate it, the second Sabbath after the first, which is directly wrong; for it should have been after the first Sabbath after the second day of the pass-over. On the 14th of Nisan, the pass-over was killed; the next day (the 15th) was the first day of the feast of unleavened bread; the day following (the 16th) the wave-sheaf was offered, pursuant

2 And certain of the Pharisees said unto them, Why do ye that which is not lawful to do on the sabbath days ?
 3 And Jesus answering them said, Have ye not read so much as this, what David did, when himself was an hungered, and they which were with him ;
 4 How he went into the house of God, and did take and eat the show-bread, and gave also to them that were with him ; which it is not lawful to eat, but for the priests alone ?
 5 And he said unto them, That the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath.
 6 ¶ And it came to pass also on another sabbath, that he entered into the synagogue and taught : and there was a man whose right hand was withered.
 7 And the scribes and Pharisees watched him, whether he would heal on the sabbath day ; that they might find an accusation against him.
 8 But he knew their thoughts, and said to the man which had the withered hand, Rise up, and stand forth in the midst. And he arose, and stood forth.
 9 Then said Jesus unto them, I will ask you one thing : Is it to the law, on the morrow after the Sabbath : Lev. xxiii. 11. The Sabbath here, is not the seventh day of the week, but the first day of the feast of unleavened bread, let it fall on what day of the week it would. That and the seventh day of that feast were holy convocations, and therefore are here called Sabbaths. The morrow therefore after the Sabbath, i. e. after the 16th day of Nisan, was the day in which the wave-sheaf was offered ; and after that seven Sabbaths were counted, and fifty days completed, and the fiftieth day inclusively was the day of pentecost. Now these Sabbaths, between the pass-over and pentecost, were called the first, second, &c. Sabbaths after the second day of the feast of unleavened bread. This Sabbath then, on which the disciples plucked the ears of corn, was the first Sabbath after that second day. Dr. Lightfoot has demonstrably proved this to be the meaning of this αὐθιγάρων δευτεροπρωτον, (Hor. Hebraic. in locum) and from him, F. Lamy and Dr. Whitby have so explained it. This Sabbath could not fall before the pass-over, because till the second day of that feast, no Jew might eat either bread or parched corn, or green ears. (Levit. xxiii. 14.) Had the disciples then gathered these ears of corn on any Sabbath before the pass-over, they would have broken two laws instead of one : and for the breach of these two laws, they would infallibly have been accused : whereas now they broke only one (plucking the ears of standing corn with one's hand, being expressly allowed in the law, Deut. xxiii. 25.) which was that of the Sabbath. They took a liberty, which the law gave them upon any other day ; and our Lord vindicated them in what they did now, in the manner we see. Nor can this fact be laid after pentecost : because then the harvest was fully in. Within that interval, therefore, this Sabbath happened : and this is a plain determination of the time, according to the Jewish ways of reckoning, founded upon the text of Moses's law itself. Dr. Wotton's Miscellaneous Discourses, &c. vol. i. p. 269.

Exod. 16. 10.—1 Sam. 21. 6.—Lev. 24. 9.—4 Matt. 12. 9. Mark 3. 1. See Ch. 12. 14. & 14. 3. John 9. 16.

The word δευτεροπρωτον, the second first, is omitted by BL. four others, Syriac, latter Arabic, all the Perait, Coptic, Ethiopic, and three of the Itala. A note in the margin of the latter Syriac, says, This is not in all copies. The above MSS. read the verse thus : It came to pass, that he walked through the corn fields on a Sabbath day. I suppose they omitted the above word, because they found it difficult to fix the meaning, which has been too much the case in other instances.

2 Which is not lawful? See on Matt. xii. 2—3.

3 What David did? See on Mark ii. 26, 27.

4. After this verse, the Codex Bezae and two ancient MSS. quoted by Wechel, have the following extraordinary addition : Τη αυτη νηρα θεσμενος τινα εργαζομενον τω σαββατω, ιτεν ερω, Ανθρωπε, τι ην οιδας τι τοις μακαρις ει : τι δε ην οιδας επικαταρασαι, και παραβαρην εστιν τοιουτοιου. On the same day, seeing one working on the Sabbath, he said unto him, Man, if indeed thou knowest what thou dost, blessed art thou : but if thou knowest not, thou art cursed, and art a transgressor of the law. Whence this strange addition proceeded, it is hard to tell. The meaning seems to be this : If thou now workest on the Jewish Sabbath, from a conviction that that Sabbath is abolished, and a new one instituted in its place : then happy art thou, for thou hast got divine instruction in the nature of the Messiah's kingdom : but if thou doest this through a contempt for the law of God, then thou art accursed, forasmuch as thou art a transgressor of the law. The Itala version of the Codex Bezae, for παραβαρην, transgressor, has this semi-barbaric word, transgressor.

6. Whose right hand was withered. See on Matt. xii. 10, &c. The critic who says that ἡ δεξιὰ αὐτοῦ signifies a lused arm, and that the stretching it out restored the bone to its proper place, without the intervention of a miracle, deserves no serious refutation. See on ver. 10.

7. Watched him Παρατηροῦν αὐτον, they maliciously watched him. This is the import of the word, chap. xiv. i. xx. 20. and in the parallel place, Mark iii. 1. See Raphelitus on the last quoted text, who has proved by several quotations, that this is the proper meaning of the term.

An accusation against him. Instead of κατηγορίας αὐτου, eis accusationem, several eminent MSS. and Versions add αἰσα, against, which I find our translators have adopted.

lawful on the sabbath days to do good, or to do evil? to save life, or to destroy it?

10 And looking round about upon them all, he said unto the man, Stretch forth thy hand. And he did so : and his hand was restored whole as the other.

11 And they were filled with madness ; and communed one with another, what they might do to Jesus.

12 ¶ And it came to pass in those days, that he went into a mountain to pray ; and continued all night in prayer to God.
 13 And when it was day, he called unto him his disciples ; and of them he chose twelve, whom also he named apostles ;

14 Simon (¶ whom he also named Peter) and Andrew his brother, James and John, Philip and Bartholomew, 15 Matthew and Thomas, James the son of Alphaeus, and Simon called Zelotes, 16 And Judas the brother of James, and Judas Iscariot, which also was the traitor.

17 ¶ And he came down with them, and stood in the plain, and the company of his disciples, and a great multitude of people out of all Judea and Jerusalem, and from the sea coast of Tyre & Sidon : and he began to say unto them, ¶

9. I will ask you one thing? I will put a question to you. See on Mark iii. 4, 5.

10. Whole as the other. Many MSS. both here and in the parallel place, Mark iii. 5. omit the word ἡνιωθ, whole. Griesbach leaves it out of the text. The hand was restored as the other : —But had it only been a luxated joint, even allowing with a German critic, that the bone regained its place, by the effort made to stretch out the arm, without the intervention of a miracle, it would have required several weeks to restore the muscles and ligaments to their wonted tone and strength. Why all this learned labour to leave God out of the question?

11. They were filled with madness Pride, obstinacy, and interest, combined together, are capable of any thing. When men have once framed their conscience according to their passions, madness passes for zeal, the blackest conspiracies for pious designs, and the most horrid attempts for heroic actions. Quærens.

12. In prayer to God. Or, in the prayer of God : or, in the oratory of God, εἰς τὴν προσευχὴν τοῦ Θεοῦ. So this passage is translated by many critics ; for which Dr. Whitby gives the following reasons : As the mountains of God, Exod. iii. 1. iv. 27. the bread of God, Lev. xxi. 17. the lamp of God, 1 Sam. iii. 3. the vessels of God, 1 Chron. xxii. 19. the altar of God, Psal. xliii. 4. the sacrifices of God, Psal. li. 17. the gifts of God, Luke xxi. 4. the ministers of God, 2 Cor. vi. 4. the tabernacle of God, 2 Chron. i. 3. the temple of God, Matt. xii. 12. the synagogues of God, Psal. lxxv. 8. are all things consecrated or appropriated to God's service ; so προσευχὴ τοῦ Θεοῦ must, in all reason, be a house of prayer to God : whence it is called οἶκος προσευχῆς, a place of prayer, 1 Mac. iii. 48. and so the word is certainly used Acts xvi. 13. and by Philo, in his oration against Flaccus, where he complains that αἱ προσευχῆς, their houses for prayer were pulled down, and there was no place left in which they might worship God, or pray for Cæsar : and by Josephus, who says the multitude was gathered εἰς τὴν προσευχὴν, into the house of prayer : and so Juvenal, Sat. iii. v. 208. speaks to the mendicant Jew, Ede ubi consistas ; in qua te quæro proœucha? In what house of prayer may I find thee begging? See on Acts xv. 13. But on this it may be observed, that as the mountains of God, the wind of God, the hail of God, the trees of God, &c. mean very high mountains, a very strong wind, great and terrible hail, very tall trees, &c. so προσευχὴ τοῦ Θεοῦ, here, may be very properly translated the prayer of God ; i. e. very fervent and earnest prayer : and though διαυκτισμενον may signify, to lodge in a place for a night, yet there are various places in the best Greek writers, in which it is used, not to signify a place, but to pass the night in a particular state. So Appian, Bell. Pun. Εἰς τὰς οὐλῆτας διαυκτισμενος μὲν ἀναρῶν—He passed the night under arms with them all. Mem. Bell. Civ. lib. v. διαυκτισμενοι—they passed the night without food, without any regard to the body, and in the want of all things. See more examples in Kypke, who concludes by translating the passage thus : He passed the night without sleep in prayers to God. Some of the Jews imagine that God himself prays ; and this is one of his petitions : Let it be my good pleasure, that my mercy overcome my wrath. See more in Lightfoot.

13. He chose twelve ἠλεκτισμενος ἄρ' αὐτον, he chose twelve out of them. Our Lord at this time had several disciples, persons who were converted to God under his ministry : and out of these converts, he chose twelve, whom he appointed to the work of the ministry ; and called them apostles, i. e. persons sent or commissioned by himself, to preach that Gospel to others, by which they had themselves been saved. These were favoured with extraordinary success : 1. Because they were brought in the knowledge of God themselves. 2. Because they received their commission from the great Head of the church. And 3. Because as he had sent them, he continued to accompany their preaching with the power of his Spirit. These three things always unite in the character of a genuine apostle. See on Matt. x. 1—4.

15. Called Zelotes Some Jews gave this name to them selves, according to Josephus, (War. b. iv. c. iii. s. 9. and vil. c. viii. s. 1.) "because they pretended to be more than ordinarily zealous for religion, and yet practised the very worst o and Biron, which came to hear him, and to be healed of their diseases;

18 And they that were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were healed.

19 And the whole multitude sought to touch him; for there went virtue out of him, and healed them all.

20 And he lifted up his eyes on his disciples, and said, Blessed be ye poor: for yours is the kingdom of God.

21 Blessed are ye that hunger now: for ye shall be filled. Blessed are ye that weep now: for ye shall laugh.

22 Blessed are ye when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil for the Son of man's sake.

23 Rejoice ye in that day, and leap for joy: for behold, your reward is great in heaven: for in the like manner did their fathers unto the prophets.

24 But wo unto you that are rich! for ye have received your consolation.

25 Wo unto you that are full! for ye shall hunger. Wo unto you that laugh now! for ye shall mourn and weep.

26 Wo unto you, when all men shall speak well of you! for so did their fathers to the false prophets.

27 But I say unto you which hear, Love your enemies, do good to them which hate you.

28 Bless them that curse you, and pray for them which despitefully use you.

29 And unto him that smiteth thee on the one cheek, offer also the other; and him that taketh away thy cloak, forbid not to take thy coat also.

30 Give to every man that asketh of thee; and of him that taketh away thy goods ask them not again.

31 And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise.

32 For if ye love them which love you, what thank have ye? for sinners also love those that love them.

33 And if ye do good to them which do good to you, what thank have ye? for sinners also do even the same.

34 And if ye lend to them of whom ye hope to receive, what thank have ye? for sinners also lend to sinners to receive as much again.

35 But love ye your enemies, and do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again; and your reward shall be great, and ye shall be the children of the Highest: for he is kind unto the unthankful and to the evil.

a Matt. 14. 33.—b Mark 8. 30. Ch. 2. 46.—c Matt. 5. 9 & 11. 5. James 2. 5.—d Luc. 9. 1. 1 Pet. 2. 19 & 2. 24 & 4. 14.—e John 16. 2.—f Matt. 5. 12. Acts 4. 1. Col. 1. 24. James 1. 2.—g Acts 7. 51.—h Acts 1. 1. Acts 2. 1. Ch. 12. 21.—i Matt. 4. 2, 5, 16. Ch. 16. 25.

a Luc. 6. 13.—b Prov. 11. 17.—c John 16. 19. 1 John 4. 5.—d Eccl. 23. 4. Prov. 25. 2. Matt. 5. 2.—e Jerom. den. Ch. 23. 2.—f Matt. 5. 42.—g 1 Cor. 13. 7.—h Luc. 16. 7, 8, 10. Prov. 91. 95. Matt. 5. 42.—i 1 Th. 4. 15. Matt. 7. 12.—j Matt. 5. 46.—k Matt. 5. 42.—l Ver. 37.—m Ps. 37. 25. Ver. 23.—n Matt. 5. 45.

actions." "But this, (says the judicious Bp. Pearce) Josephus says of the zealots, at the time when Vespasian was marching towards Jerusalem. They probably were men of a different character about forty years before; which was the time when Jesus chose his twelve apostles, one of whom had the surname of the Zealot." It is very probable, that this name was first given to certain persons who were more zealous for the cause of pure and undefiled religion than the rest of their neighbours: but like many other sects and parties who have begun well, they transferred their zeal for the essentials of religion, to nonessential things, and from these to inquisitorial cruelty and murder. See on Matt. x. 4.

17. And stood in the plain In Matt. v. 1. which is supposed to be the parallel place, our Lord is represented as delivering this sermon on the mountain; and this has induced some to think that the sermon mentioned here by Luke, though the same in substance with that in Matthew, was delivered in a different place, and at another time; but as Dr. Priestley justly observes, Matthew's saying that Jesus was sat down after he had gone up to the mountain, and Luke's saying that he stood on the plain when he healed the sick, before the discourse, are no inconsistencies. The whole picture is striking. Jesus ascends a mountain, employs the night in prayer; and having thus solemnly invoked the divine blessing, authoritatively separates the twelve apostles from the mass of his disciples. He then descends, and heals in the plain, all the diseased among a great multitude, collected from various parts by the fame of his miraculous power. Having thus created attention, he likewise satisfies the desire of the people to hear his doctrine; and retiring first to the mountain whence he came, that his attentive hearers might follow him, and might better arrange themselves before him—Sacro digna silentio mirantur omnes dicere. HORACE. All admire his excellent sayings with sacred silence. See Bishop Newcome's notes on his Harmony of the Gospels, p. 19.

20. Blessed be ye poor) See the sermon on the mount paraphrased and explained, Matt. v. vi. vil.

22. They shall separate you) Meaning they will excommunicate you, apostrophis vobis, or separate you from their communion; Luke, having spoken of their separating or excommunicating them, continues the same idea, in saying that they would cast out their name likewise, as a thing evil in itself. By your name is meant their name as his disciples. As such they were sometimes called Nazarenes, and sometimes Christians: and both these names were matter of reproach in the mouths of their enemies. So James (II. 7.) says to the converts, Do they not blaspheme that worthy name by which ye are called? So when St. Paul (in Acts xxiv. 5.) is called a ringleader of the sect of the Nazarenes, the character of a pestilent fellow, and that of a mover of sedition is joined to it; and in Acts xxviii. 22. the Jews say to Paul, as concerning this sect, we know that every where it is spoken against: and this is implied in 1 Pet. v. 14. when he says, if ye be reproached for the name of Christ, i. e. as Christians; agreeably to what follows there in ver. 16. if any man suffer as a Christian, etc. In after times we find Pliny, Epist. x. 97. consulting the Emperor Trajan, whether or no he should punish the NAME TRISTIS (of Christian) though no evil should be found in it. NOMES TRISTIS, etiam si flagitium carcat, PUNIANTUR. See PEARCE.

22. Did—unto the prophets.) See 1 Kings xviii. 4. xix. 20. 2 Chron. xxiv. 21. xxxvi. 16. Neh. ix. 26.

24, 25, 26. But wo unto you that are rich) The Pharisees who were laden with the spoils of the people which they received in gifts, &c. These three verses are not found in the sermons, as recorded by Matthew. They seem to be spoken chiefly to the scribes and Pharisees, who, in order to be pleasing to all, spoke to every one what he liked best; and by flattery,attery, and lies, found out the method of gaining and keeping the good opinion of the multitude.

26. Thy cloak—thy coat) In Matt. v. 40. I have said that COAT, χιτων, signifies under garment, or strait coat; and CLOAK, ιματιον, means upper garment, or great coat. This interpretation is confirmed by the following observations of Bishop Pearce. The χιτων was a tunic, or vestcoat, over which the Jews and other nations threw an outer coat, or gown, called a cloak, Matt. v. 40. (which is meant by ιματιον) when they went abroad, or were not at work. Hence the common people at Rome, who did not usually wear, or had no right to wear the  toga, are called by Horace tunicatus popellus, Epist. l. 7. 65. This account of the difference between the χιτων and the ιματιον appears plainly from what Maximus Tyrtus says, the inner garment which is over the body they call χιτωνιον, and the outer one the ιματιον. And so Plutarch, (in Nox. p. 139. ed. Fran. 1620.) speaking of a man who felt the heat of the sun too much for his skin, says that he put off, res χιτωνον, το ιματιον, his vestcoat also with his cloak.

23. And that ye hope to receive) Or, do not beg them off. This probably refers to the way in which the city-gatherers and Roman soldiers used to spoil the people. "When such harpies as these come upon your goods, suffer the injury quietly, leaving yourselves in the hand of God rather than attempt even to beg off what belongs to you, lest on their part they be provoked to seize or spoil more, and lest you be irritated to use them at law, which is totally opposite to the spirit and letter of the Gospel; or to speak bad words, or indulge wrong tempers, which would wound the spirit of love and mercy." Of such as these, and of all merciless creditors, who even sell the tools and bed of a poor man, it may be ever truly said,

Tristius haud illis monstrum, nec scior ulla Peitae et iræ deum Stygiis esse ustulic undis.—Diripiunt dapes, contactus omnia sedant Immundo.—VINE. ÆN. III. ver. 214.

"Monsters more fierce offended heaven ne'er sent From hell's abyss, for human punishment.—They snatch the meat, defiling all they find."—DRYDEN.

However, it is probable that what is here spoken relates to requiring a thing speedily that had been lent, while the reason for borrowing it still continues. In Ecclesi. xx. 15. it is a part of the character of a very bad man, that to-day he lendeth, and to-morrow will he ask it again. From the 27th to the 30th verse, our blessed Lord gives us directions how to treat our enemies. 1. Wish them well. 2. Do them good. 3. Speak as well of them as possible. 4. Be an instrument of procuring them good from others: use your influence in their behalf. 5. Suffer patiently from them contempt and ill treatment. 6. Give up your goods rather than lose your meekness and charity towards them. The retaliation of those who hearken not to their own passion but to Christ, consists in doing more good than they receive evil. Ever since our blessed Saviour suffered the Jews to take away his life, it is by his patience that we must regulate our own. Quæret.

32. For sinners also love those that love them.) I believe the word αγαπωμαι is used by St. Luke in the same sense in which τρωμαι, tas-gatherers, is used by St. Matthew, chap. v. 46, 47, and signifies heathens; not only men who have no religion, but men who acknowledge none. The religion of Christ not only corrects the errors, and reforms the disorders of the fallen nature of man; but raises it even above itself—it brings it near to God; and, by universal love, leads it to frame its conduct according to that of the sovereign Being. "A man should tremble, who finds nothing in his life besides the external part of religion, but what may be found in the life of a Yiwee or a heathen." The Gospel of the grace of God purifies and renews the heart, causing it to resemble that Christ through whom the grace came. See the note on chap. vii. 37.

34. Of whom ye hope to receive) Or, whom ye expect to return it. "To make our neighbour purchase, in any way, the assistance which we give him, is to profit by his misery; and by laying him under obligations which we expect him in some way or other to discharge, we increase his wretchedness under the pretence of relieving it."

36 * Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father also is merciful.

37 b Judge not, and ye shall not be judged; condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned: forgive, and ye shall be forgiven: 38 * Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For * with the same measure that ye mete withal, it shall be measured to you again.

39 And he spake a parable unto them, Can the blind lead the blind? shall they not both fall into the ditch?

40 * The disciple is not above his master; but every one that is perfect shall be as his master.

41 I And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but perceivest not the beam that is in thine own eye?

42 Either how canst thou say to thy brother, Brother, let me pull out the mote that is in thine eye, when thou thyself beholdest not the beam that is in thine own eye? Thou hypocrite, cast out first the beam out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to pull out the mote that is in thy brother's eye.

a Matt. 6. 45.—b Matt. 7. 1.—c Prov. 19. 17.—d Psa. 79. 12.—e Matt. 7. 2. Mark 4. 24. James 2. 13.—f Matt. 18. 14.—g Matt. 10. 26. John 13. 16. & 15. 20.—h Or, shall be perfected as his master.—i Matt. 7. 3.

36. Love ye your enemies] This is the most sublime precept ever delivered to man: a false religion durst not give a precept of this nature, because, without supernatural influence, it must be for ever impracticable. In these words of our blessed Lord, we see the tenderness, sincerity, extent, disinterestedness, pattern, and issue, of the love of God dwelling in man: a religion, which has for its foundation the union of God and man in the same person, and the death of this august being for his enemies: which consists on earth in a reconciliation of the Creator with his creatures, and which is to subsist in heaven only in the union of the members with the head: could such a religion as this ever tolerate hatred in the soul of man, even to his most inveterate foe?

Lend, hoping for nothing again] Μηδεν επιζητωντες. The rabbins say, he who lends without usury, God shall consider him as having observed every precept. Bishop Pearce thinks, that instead of μηδεν, we should read μεδοντα by the Syriac, latter Arabic, and latter Perseic; and as επιζητων signifies to despair, or cease to despair, the meaning is, not cutting off the hope (of longer life) of any man, neminis speram amputantes; by denying him those things which he requests now, to preserve him from perishing.

36. Be ye therefore merciful] Or, compassionate; επισημοις, from εις, commiseration, which etymologists derive from εικοι, to give place, yield, because we readily concede those things which are necessary to them whom we commiserate. As God is ever disposed to give all necessary help and support to those who are miserable; so his followers, being influenced by the same spirit, are easy to be entreated, and are at all times ready to contribute to the uttermost of their power to relieve or remove the miseries of the distressed. A merciful or compassionate man easily forgets injuries; pardons them without being solicited, and does not permit repeated returns of ingratitude to deter him from doing good, even to the unthankful and the unholly. See on Matt. v. 7.

37. Judge not] See on Matt. vii. 1. "How great is the goodness of God in being so willing to put our own judgment into our hands, as to engage himself not to enter into judgment with us; provided we do not usurp the right which belongs solely to him in reference to others."

Condemn not] "Mercy will ever incline us not to condemn those unmercifully whose faults are certain and visible; to lessen, conceal, and excuse them as much as we can without prejudice to truth and justice; and to be far from aggravating, divulging, or even desiring them to be punished."

Forgive] The mercy and compassion which God recommends, extend to the forgiving of all the injuries we have received, or can receive. To imitate in this the mercy of God, is not a mere counsel; since it is proposed as a necessary mean, in order to receive mercy. What man has to forgive in man is almost nothing: man's debt to God is infinite. And who acts in this matter as if he wished to receive mercy at the hand of God! The spirit of revenge is equally destitute of faith and reason.

38. Give, and it shall be given] "Christian charity will make no difficulty in giving that which eternal truth promises to restore. Let us give, neither out of mere human generosity, nor out of vanity, nor from interest, but for the sake of God, if we would have him place it to account. There is no such thing as true unmixed generosity but in God only: because there is none but him who receives no advantage from his gifts, and because he engages himself to pay these debts of his creatures with an excessive interest. So great is the goodness of God, that when he might have absolutely commanded us to give to our neighbour, he vouchsafes to invite us to this duty by the prospect of a reward, and to impute that to us as a desert, which he has a right to exact of us by the title of his sovereignty over our persons and estates."

Men live in such a state of social union as renders mutually necessary; and as self-interest, pride, and other corrupt passions, mingle themselves ordinarily in their commerce, they cannot fail of offending one another. In civil society men must, in order to taste a little tranquillity, resolve to bear something from their neighbours; they must suffer, pardon, 43! For a good tree bringeth not forth corrupt fruit; neither doth a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.

44 * For every tree is known by his own fruit. For of thorns men do not gather figs, nor of a bramble-bush gather they grapes.

45 * A good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is good; and an evil man out of the evil treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is evil: for * of the abundance of the heart his mouth speaketh.

46 * And why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?

47 * Whosoever cometh to me, and heareth my sayings, and doeth them, I will show you to whom he is like:

48 He is like a man which built a house, and digged deep, and laid the foundation on a rock: and when the flood arose, the stream beat vehemently upon that house, and could not shake it: for it was founded upon a rock.

49 But he that heareth, and doeth not, is like a man, that without a foundation, built a house upon the earth; against which the stream did beat vehemently, and immediately it fell: and the ruin of that house was great.

a See Prov. 18. 17.—i Matt. 7. 16, 17.—m Matt. 12. 33.—n Or, a grape.—o Matt. 12. 33.—p Matt. 12. 34.—q Matt. 1. 4. Matt. 7. 51. & 23. 11. Chap. 12. 2.—r Matt. 7. 24. Job 27. 8. Eccles. 40. 15. Heb. 10. 25. James 1. 23.

and give up many things; without doing which, they must live in such a state of continual agitation as will render life itself insupportable. Without this giving and forgiving spirit there will be nothing in civil society, and even in Christian congregations, but divisions, evil surmises, injurious discourses, outrages, anger, vengeance, and in a word, a total dissolution of the mystical body of Christ. Thus our interest in both worlds calls loudly upon us to give and to receive.

Bosom] Κοιλιον, or lap. Almost all ancient nations wore long, wide, and loose garments: and when about to carry any thing which their hands could not contain, they used a fold of their robe in nearly the same way as women here use their aprons. The phrase is continually occurring in the best and purest Greek writers. The following example from Herodotus, b. vi. may suffice to show the propriety of the interpretation given above, and to expose the ridiculous nature of covetousness. "When Cressus had promised to Atreus as much gold as he could carry about his body at once; in order to improve the king's liberality to the best advantage, he put on a very wide tunic (χιθωνα μεγαλην) leaving a great space in the bosom, κοιλιον βαθυ, and drew on the largest buskins he could find. Being conducted to the treasury, he sat down on a great heap of gold, and first filled the buskins about his legs with as much gold as they could contain, and having filled his whole bosom, κοιλιον, loaded his hair with ingots, and put several pieces in his mouth, he walked out of the treasury;" &c.

What a ridiculous figure must this poor sinner have cut, thus heavy laden with gold, and the love of money! See many other examples in Kypke and Raphaelius. See also Paul. cxxix. 7. Prov. vi. 27. xvii. 23.

The same measure that ye mete withal, it shall be measured to you again.] The same words we find in the Jerusalem Targum on Gen. xxxviii. 25. Our Lord therefore lays down a maxim which themselves allowed.

39. Can the blind lead the blind?] This appears to have been a general proverb, and to signify that a man cannot teach what he does not understand. This is strictly true in spiritual matters. A man who is not illuminated from above, is utterly incapable of judging concerning spiritual things; and wholly unfit to be a guide to others. Is it possible that a person who is enveloped with the thickest darkness, should dare either to judge of the state of others, or attempt to lead them in that path of which he is totally ignorant! If he do, must not his judgment be rashness, and his teaching folly? and does he not endanger his own soul, and run the risk of falling into the ditch of perdition himself, together with the unhappy objects of his religious instruction?

40. Every one that is perfect] Or, thoroughly instructed, καταρτισμενος:—from καταρτιζω, to adjust, adapt, knit together, restore, or put in joint. The noun is used by the Greek medical writers, to signify the reducing a luxated or disjunct limb. It sometimes signifies to repair, or mend, and in this sense it is applied to broken nets, Matt. lv. 21. Mark i. 19. but in this place, and in Heb. xiii. 21. 2 Tim. iii. 17. it means complete instruction and information. Every one who is thoroughly instructed in divine things, who has his heart united to God; whose disordered tempers and passions are purified, and restored to harmony and order; every one who has in him the mind that was in Christ, though he cannot be above, yet will be as his teacher; holy, harmless, undefiled, and separate from sinners.

"The disciple who perfectly understands the rules, and sees the example of his master, will think it his business to tread exactly in his steps, to do and suffer upon like occasions as his master did: and so he will be like his master." WARRY.

41. And why beholdest thou the mote] See this explained on Matt. vii. 3—5.

43. Corrupt fruit] Καρπον σαρπη, literally, rotten fruit: but here it means, such fruit as is unfit for use. See on Matt. vii. 17—20.

45. A good man] See on Matt. xii. 35.

46. Lord, Lord] God judges of the heart, not by words, but by works. A good servant never disputes, speaks little, and always follows his work. Such a servant a real Christian is:

such is a faithful minister, always intent either on the work of his own salvation, or that of his neighbour; speaking more to God than to men; and to these as in the presence of God. The tongue is fitly compared by one to a pump, which empties the heart, but neither fills nor cleanses it. The love of God is a hidden spring, which supplies the heart continually, and never permits it to be dry or unfruitful. Queenel.

47. I will show you! Υπαδείξω, I will show you plainly. I will enable you fully to comprehend my meaning on this subject by the following parable. See this word explained Matt. iii. 7.

48. He is like a man, &c. See on Matt. vii. 24—27.

49. The ruin of that house was great! On this passage, Barther Queenel, who was a most rigid predestinarian, makes the following judicious remark. "It is neither by the speculations of astrologers, nor by the Calvinian assurance of predestination, that we can discover what will be our portion for ever: but it is by the examination of our heart, and the consideration of our life, that we may in some measure prognosticate our eternal state. Without a holy heart and a holy life, all is ruinous in the hour of temptation, and in the day of wrath." To this may be added, He that believeth on the Son of God, hath the witness in himself: 1 John v. 10.

The subjects of this chapter have been so amply explained and enforced in the parallel places in Matthew, to which the reader has been already referred, that there appears to be no necessity to make any additional observations.

CHAPTER VII.

Christ heals the servant of a centurion, who is commended for his faith, 1—10. Raises a widow's son to life at Nain, 11—17. John Baptist hears of his fame, and sends two of his disciples to inquire whether he was the Christ, 18—23. Christ's character of John, 24—30. The obstinate blindness and capriciousness of the Jews, 31—35. A Pharisee invites him into his house, where a woman anoints his head with oil, and washes his feet with her tears, 36—38. The Pharisee is offended, 39. Our Lord reproves him by a parable, and vindicates the woman, 40—46; and pronounces her sins forgiven, 47—50. [A. M. 4081. A. D. 27. An. Olymp. CCL. 3.]

NOW when he had ended all his sayings in the audience of the people, he entered into Capernaum.

2 And a certain centurion's servant, who was dear unto him, was sick, and ready to die.

3 And when he heard of Jesus, he sent unto him the elders of the Jews, beseeching him that he would come and heal his servant.

4 And when they came to Jesus, they besought him instantly, saying, That he was worthy for whom he should do this:

5 For he loveth our nation, and he hath built us a synagogue.

6 Then Jesus went with them. And when he was now not far from the house, the centurion sent friends to him, saying unto him, Lord, trouble not thyself: for I am not worthy that thou shouldst enter under my roof:

7 Wherefore neither thought I myself worthy to come unto thee: but say in a word, and my servant shall be healed.

8 For I also am a man set under authority, having under me soldiers, and I say unto one, Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, do this, and he doeth it.

9 When Jesus heard these things, he marvelled at him, and turned him about, and said unto the people that followed him, I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel.

10 And they that were sent, returning to the house, found the servant whole that had been sick.

11 And he came to pass the day after, that he went into a city called Nain; and many of his disciples went with him, and much people.

12 Now when he came nigh to the gate of the city, behold, there was a dead man carried out, the only son of his mother, and she was a widow: and much people of the city was with her.

13 And when the Lord saw her, he had compassion on her, and said unto her, Weep not.

14 And he came and touched the bier: and they that bare him, stood still. And he said, Young man, I say unto thee, Arise.

15 And he that was dead sat up, and began to speak. And he delivered him to his mother.

16 And there came a fear on all: and they glorified God, saying, That a great prophet is risen up among us; and that God hath visited his people.

17 And this rumour of him went forth throughout all Judea, and throughout all the region round about.

18 And the disciples of John showed him of all these things.

19 And John calling unto him two of his disciples, sent them to Jesus, saying, Art thou he that should come? or look we for another?

20 When the men were come unto him, they said, John Baptist hath sent us unto thee, saying, Art thou he that should come? or look we for another?

21 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

22 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

23 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

24 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

25 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

26 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

27 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

28 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

29 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

30 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

31 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

city called Nain; and many of his disciples went with him, and much people.

12 Now when he came nigh to the gate of the city, behold, there was a dead man carried out, the only son of his mother, and she was a widow: and much people of the city was with her.

13 And when the Lord saw her, he had compassion on her, and said unto her, Weep not.

14 And he came and touched the bier: and they that bare him, stood still. And he said, Young man, I say unto thee, Arise.

15 And he that was dead sat up, and began to speak. And he delivered him to his mother.

16 And there came a fear on all: and they glorified God, saying, That a great prophet is risen up among us; and that God hath visited his people.

17 And this rumour of him went forth throughout all Judea, and throughout all the region round about.

18 And the disciples of John showed him of all these things.

19 And John calling unto him two of his disciples, sent them to Jesus, saying, Art thou he that should come? or look we for another?

20 When the men were come unto him, they said, John Baptist hath sent us unto thee, saying, Art thou he that should come? or look we for another?

21 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

22 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

23 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

24 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

25 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

26 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

27 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

28 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

29 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

30 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

31 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

32 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

33 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

34 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

35 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

36 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

and plagues.

37 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities

NOTES.—Verse 2. A certain centurion's servant! See this miracle explained on Matt. viii. 5—13.

3. Elders of the Jews! These were either magistrates in the place, or the elders of the synagogue, which the centurion had built, ver. 8. He sent these, probably because he was afraid to come to Christ himself, not being a Jew, either by nation or religion. In the parallel place in Matthew, he is represented as coming to Christ himself, but it is a usual form of speech in all nations, to attribute the act to a person, which is done, not by himself, but by his authority.

5. He loveth our nation! He is a warm friend to the Jews; and has given a full proof of his affection to them, in building them a synagogue. This he had done at his own proper charges; having no doubt employed his own men in the work.

10. Found the servant whole! This cure was the effect of the faith, prayer, and humility of the centurion; through which the almighty energy of Jesus Christ was conveyed to the sick man. But these very graces in the centurion were the products of grace. It is God himself, who by the gifts of his mercy disposes the soul to receive its cure; and nothing can contribute to the reception of his grace, but what is the fruit of grace itself. The apostle says, The graces of God that bring forth salvation hath appeared unto all men, Tit. ii. 11.

11. It should therefore be our concern not to resist the operations of this grace: for though we cannot endure ourselves with any gracious disposition, yet we can quench the Spirit, by whose agency these are produced in the soul. The centurion had not received the grace of God in vain.

11. Nain! A small city of Galilee, in the tribe of Issachar. According to Eusebius, it was two miles from Mount Tabor, southward; and near to Endor.

12. Carried out! The Jews always buried their dead without the city, except those of the family of David. No burying-places should be tolerated within cities or towns; much less in or about churches and chapels. This custom is excessively injurious to the inhabitants; and especially to those who frequent public worship in such chapels and churches. God, decency, and health, forbid this shocking abomination.

On the impropriety of burying in towns, churches, and chapels, take the following testimonies: Extra urbem soliti sunt alii vertisse sepelire: Nos Christiani, eos non in urbes soliti, sed et in templis recipimus, quo fit ut multi fatore nimis feri esanimentur.—SERAPION. "Others were accustomed to bury their dead without the city: We Christians, not only bury them within our cities, but receive them even into our churches! hence many nearly lose their lives through the noxious effluvia." Both the Jews and other people had their burying places without the city:—Et certe illa postulavit ratio publica sanitatis, quæ multum laedi solet aera sepulchrorum:—and this the health of the public requires, which is greatly injured by the effluvia from the graves."—Rosenmüller. From long observation I can attest, that churches and chapels situated in grave-yards, and those especially, within whose walls the dead are interred, are perfectly unwholesome: and many, by attending such places, are shortening their passage to the house appointed for the living.

What increases the iniquity of this abominable and deadly work, is, that the burying grounds attached to many churches and chapels, are made a source of private gain. The whole of this preposterous conduct is as indecorous and unhealthy, as it is profane. Every man should know, that the gas which is disengaged from putrid flesh, and particularly from a human body, is not only unfriendly to, but destructive of animal life. Superstition first introduced a practice, which self-interest and covetousness continue to maintain.

For a general improvement of all the circumstances of this miracle, see the end of the chapter.

16. God hath visited his people! Several MSS. and Versions add et ayabon, for good.—Sometimes God visited his people in the way of judgment, to consume them in their transgressions: but it was now plain, that he had visited them in the most tender compassion and mercy. This seems to have been added by some ancient copyist, by way of explanation.

18. The disciples of John showed him, &c. It is very likely, that John's disciples attended the ministry of our Lord at particular times: and this, we may suppose, was a common case among the disciples of different Jewish teachers. Though bigotry existed in its most formidable shape between the Jews and Samaritans, yet we do not find that it had any place between Jews and Jews, though they were of different sects, and attached to different teachers.

19. Art thou he that should come? That is, to save. Art thou the promised Messiah? See on Matt. xi. 3.

Some have thought that this character of our Lord, a corceps, he who cometh, refers to the prophecy of Jacob, Gen. xlix. 10. where he is called שׂלֵחַ Shalok, which Grotius and others derive from שׂלח shalach, he sent: hence, as the time of the fulfillment of the prophecy drew nigh, he was termed he who cometh, i. e. he who is just now ready to make his appearance in Judea. In Zach. ix. 9. a similar phrase is used, Behold, thy king cometh unto thee—having salvation. This is meant of the Messiah only; therefore I think the words, to save, are necessarily implied.

21. Infirmities and plagues! The following judicious note from Ep. FRANCIS, is worthy of deep attention: "I take mention here νοσθη, pestis, leprosis, and πνευματα κακα, i. e.

and plagues, and of evil spirits; and unto many that were blind he gave sight.

22 Then Jesus answering said unto them, Go your way, and tell John what things ye have seen and heard; how that the blind see, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the deaf hear, the dead are raised, &c. to the poor the Gospel is preached.

23 And blessed is he, whoseever shall not be offended in me. 24 And when the messengers of John were departed, he began to speak unto the people concerning John, What went ye out into the wilderness for to see? A reed shaken with the wind?

25 But what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft raiment? Behold, they which are gorgeously apparelled, and five delicately, are in king's courts.

26 But what went ye out for to see? A prophet? Yes, I say unto you, and much more than a prophet.

27 This is he, of whom it is written, Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

28 For I say unto you, Among those that are born of women, there is not a greater prophet than John the Baptist: but he that is least in the kingdom of God is greater than he.

29 And all the people that heard him, and the publicans, justified God, being baptized with the baptism of John.

30 But the Pharisees and lawyers rejected the counsel of God against themselves, being not baptized of him.

31 And the Lord said, Whereunto then shall I liken the men of this generation? and to what are they like?

32 They are like unto children sitting in the market-place, and calling one to another, and saying, We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced; we have mourned to you, and ye have not wept.

33 For I John the Baptist came neither eating bread nor drinking wine, and ye say, He hath a devil.

34 The Son of man is come eating and drinking; and ye say, Behold, a gluttonous man, and a winebibber, a friend of publicans and sinners!

35 But wisdom is justified of all her children.

36 And one of the Pharisees desired him that he would eat with him. And he went into the Pharisee's house, and sat down to meat.

37 And behold, a woman in the city, which was a sinner, when she knew that Jesus sat at meat in the Pharisee's house, brought an alabaster box of ointment, 38 And stood at his feet behind him weeping, and began to wash his feet with tears, and did wipe them with the hairs of her head, and kissed his feet, and anointed them with the ointment.

39 Now when the Pharisee which had bidden him, saw it, he spake within himself, saying, This man, if he were a prophet, would have known who and what manner of woman this is that toucheth him: for she is a sinner.

40 And Jesus answering said unto him, Simon, I have somewhat to say unto thee. And he saith, Master, say on.

41 There was a certain creditor which had two debtors: the one owed five hundred pence, and the other fifty.

42 And when he had received that which was due, he sat down to eat with him before this converted to God, and came now to give this public testimony of her gratitude to her gracious deliverer from the darkness and guilt of sin. I am inclined to think that the original word, ἀπαρωλοσ, is used for heathen or Gentile in several places of the Sacred Writings. I am fully persuaded that this is its meaning in Matt. ix. 10, 11, 13, xi. 19, and xxvi. 45. The son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners, i. e. is delivered into the hands of the heathens, viz. the Romans, who alone could put him to death. See Mark ii. 15, 16, and 17. xvi. 41. I think also it has this meaning in Luke vi. 32, 33, 34. xv. 1, 2, 7, 10. xix. 7. John ix. 31. I think no other sense can be justly assigned to it in Gal. ii. 15. We who are Jews by nature, and not sinners of the Gentiles. We Jews who have had the benefit of a divine revelation, know that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Christ, (ver. 16.) which other nations, who were heathens, not having a divine revelation, could not know. It is, I think, likely that the grand subject of the self-righteous Pharisee's complaint was her being a heathen. As those who were touched by such contracted a legal defilement, he could not believe that Christ was a conscientious observer of the law, seeing he permitted her to touch him, knowing who she was; or if he did not know that she was a heathen, it was a proof that he was no prophet, ver. 39, and consequently had not the discernment of spirits which prophets were supposed to possess. As the Jews had a law which forbade all iniquity, and they who embraced it being, according to its requisitions and their professions, saints; and as the Gentiles had no law to restrain evil, nor made any profession of holiness, the term ἀπαρωλοσ, or sinners, was first with peculiar propriety applied to them, and afterward to all others who, though they professed to be under the law, yet lived as Gentiles without the law. My supposition this person to be the same as Mary Magdalene, but of this there is no solid proof.

Brought an alabaster box] In Mark xiv. 3.

38. Stood at his feet behind him] In taking their meals, the Eastern people reclined on one side, the loins and knees being bent to make the more room; the feet of each person were turned outwards behind him. This is the meaning of standing behind at his seat.

Began to wash his feet with tears] ἤρταρο δακρυμασιν—ros; δακρυμασιν, she began to water his feet—to let a shower of tears fall on them. As the Jews wore nothing like our shoes, (their being a mere sole, bound about the foot and ankle with thongs) their feet being so much exposed had frequent need of washing, and this they ordinarily did before taking their meals.

Kissed his feet] With affectionate tenderness, καρτεροί, or kissed them again and again. See on Matt. xxvi. 49.

The kiss was used in ancient times as the emblem of love, religious reverence, subjection and supplication. It has the meaning of supplication, in the way of adoration, accompanied with subjection, in 1 Kings xix. 18. whose mouth he kissed Baal, and in Job xxxi. 27. my mouth hath not kissed my hand; I have paid no sort of adoration to false gods; and in Psal. li. 12. Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, —close in with, embrace affectionately the offers of mercy made unto you through Christ Jesus, lest he (the Lord) be angry with you, and ye perish; which commandment this woman seems to have obeyed, both in the literal and spiritual sense. Kissing the feet was practised also among the heathens, to express subjection of spirit, and earnest supplication. See a long example in Raphael's, produced from Polybius, concerning the Carthaginian ambassador, when supplicating the Romans for peace. With an humble and object mind, κτωστικ εν τω γυν, they fell down on the earth, rose, washed and anointed her feet, and kissed the feet of the council. See also several examples in Kypke. Kissing the feet is a further proof that this person had been educated a heathen.

39. Now when the Pharisee which had bidden him, saw it, he spake within himself, saying, This man, if he were a prophet, would have known who and what manner of woman this is that toucheth him: for she is a sinner.

40. And Jesus answering said unto him, Simon, I have somewhat to say unto thee. And he saith, Master, say on.

41. There was a certain creditor which had two debtors: the one owed five hundred pence, and the other fifty.

42. And when he had received that which was due, he sat down to eat with him before this converted to God, and came now to give this public testimony of her gratitude to her gracious deliverer from the darkness and guilt of sin. I am inclined to think that the original word, ἀπαρωλοσ, is used for heathen or Gentile in several places of the Sacred Writings. I am fully persuaded that this is its meaning in Matt. ix. 10, 11, 13, xi. 19, and xxvi. 45. The son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners, i. e. is delivered into the hands of the heathens, viz. the Romans, who alone could put him to death. See Mark ii. 15, 16, and 17. xvi. 41. I think also it has this meaning in Luke vi. 32, 33, 34. xv. 1, 2, 7, 10. xix. 7. John ix. 31. I think no other sense can be justly assigned to it in Gal. ii. 15. We who are Jews by nature, and not sinners of the Gentiles. We Jews who have had the benefit of a divine revelation, know that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Christ, (ver. 16.) which other nations, who were heathens, not having a divine revelation, could not know. It is, I think, likely that the grand subject of the self-righteous Pharisee's complaint was her being a heathen. As those who were touched by such contracted a legal defilement, he could not believe that Christ was a conscientious observer of the law, seeing he permitted her to touch him, knowing who she was; or if he did not know that she was a heathen, it was a proof that he was no prophet, ver. 39, and consequently had not the discernment of spirits which prophets were supposed to possess. As the Jews had a law which forbade all iniquity, and they who embraced it being, according to its requisitions and their professions, saints; and as the Gentiles had no law to restrain evil, nor made any profession of holiness, the term ἀπαρωλοσ, or sinners, was first with peculiar propriety applied to them, and afterward to all others who, though they professed to be under the law, yet lived as Gentiles without the law. My supposition this person to be the same as Mary Magdalene, but of this there is no solid proof.

Brought an alabaster box] In Mark xiv. 3.

38. Stood at his feet behind him] In taking their meals, the Eastern people reclined on one side, the loins and knees being bent to make the more room; the feet of each person were turned outwards behind him. This is the meaning of standing behind at his seat.

Began to wash his feet with tears] ἤρταρο δακρυμασιν—ros; δακρυμασιν, she began to water his feet—to let a shower of tears fall on them. As the Jews wore nothing like our shoes, (their being a mere sole, bound about the foot and ankle with thongs) their feet being so much exposed had frequent need of washing, and this they ordinarily did before taking their meals.

Kissed his feet] With affectionate tenderness, καρτεροί, or kissed them again and again. See on Matt. xxvi. 49.

The kiss was used in ancient times as the emblem of love, religious reverence, subjection and supplication. It has the meaning of supplication, in the way of adoration, accompanied with subjection, in 1 Kings xix. 18. whose mouth he did not kiss Baal, and in Job xxxi. 27. my mouth hath not kissed my hand; I have paid no sort of adoration to false gods; and in Psal. li. 12. Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, —close in with, embrace affectionately the offers of mercy made unto you through Christ Jesus, lest he (the Lord) be angry with you, and ye perish; which commandment this woman seems to have obeyed, both in the literal and spiritual sense. Kissing the feet was practised also among the heathens, to express subjection of spirit, and earnest supplication. See a long example in Raphael's, produced from Polybius, concerning the Carthaginian ambassador, when supplicating the Romans for peace. With an humble and object mind, κτωστικ εν τω γυν, they fell down on the earth, rose, washed and anointed her feet, and kissed the feet of the council. See also several examples in Kypke. Kissing the feet is a further proof that this person had been educated a heathen.

39. Now when the Pharisee which had bidden him, saw it, he spake within himself, saying, This man, if he were a prophet, would have known who and what manner of woman this is that toucheth him: for she is a sinner.

40. And Jesus answering said unto him, Simon, I have somewhat to say unto thee. And he saith, Master, say on.

41. There was a certain creditor which had two debtors: the one owed five hundred pence, and the other fifty.

42. And when he had received that which was due, he sat down to eat with him before this converted to God, and came now to give this public testimony of her gratitude to her gracious deliverer from the darkness and guilt of sin. I am inclined to think that the original word, ἀπαρωλοσ, is used for heathen or Gentile in several places of the Sacred Writings. I am fully persuaded that this is its meaning in Matt. ix. 10, 11, 13, xi. 19, and xxvi. 45. The son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners, i. e. is delivered into the hands of the heathens, viz. the Romans, who alone could put him to death. See Mark ii. 15, 16, and 17. xvi. 41. I think also it has this meaning in Luke vi. 32, 33, 34. xv. 1, 2, 7, 10. xix. 7. John ix. 31. I think no other sense can be justly assigned to it in Gal. ii. 15. We who are Jews by nature, and not sinners of the Gentiles. We Jews who have had the benefit of a divine revelation, know that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Christ, (ver. 16.) which other nations, who were heathens, not having a divine revelation, could not know. It is, I think, likely that the grand subject of the self-righteous Pharisee's complaint was her being a heathen. As those who were touched by such contracted a legal defilement, he could not believe that Christ was a conscientious observer of the law, seeing he permitted her to touch him, knowing who she was; or if he did not know that she was a heathen, it was a proof that he was no prophet, ver. 39, and consequently had not the discernment of spirits which prophets were supposed to possess. As the Jews had a law which forbade all iniquity, and they who embraced it being, according to its requisitions and their professions, saints; and as the Gentiles had no law to restrain evil, nor made any profession of holiness, the term ἀπαρωλοσ, or sinners, was first with peculiar propriety applied to them, and afterward to all others who, though they professed to be under the law, yet lived as Gentiles without the law. My supposition this person to be the same as Mary Magdalene, but of this there is no solid proof.

Brought an alabaster box] In Mark xiv. 3.

38. Stood at his feet behind him] In taking their meals, the Eastern people reclined on one side, the loins and knees being bent to make the more room; the feet of each person were turned outwards behind him. This is the meaning of standing behind at his seat.

Began to wash his feet with tears] ἤρταρο δακρυμασιν—ros; δακρυμασιν, she began to water his feet—to let a shower of tears fall on them. As the Jews wore nothing like our shoes, (their being a mere sole, bound about the foot and ankle with thongs) their feet being so much exposed had frequent need of washing, and this they ordinarily did before taking their meals.

Kissed his feet] With affectionate tenderness, καρτεροί, or kissed them again and again. See on Matt. xxvi. 49.

The kiss was used in ancient times as the emblem of love, religious reverence, subjection and supplication. It has the meaning of supplication, in the way of adoration, accompanied with subjection, in 1 Kings xix. 18. whose mouth he did not kiss Baal, and in Job xxxi. 27. my mouth hath not kissed my hand; I have paid no sort of adoration to false gods; and in Psal. li. 12. Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, —close in with, embrace affectionately the offers of mercy made unto you through Christ Jesus, lest he (the Lord) be angry with you, and ye perish; which commandment this woman seems to have obeyed, both in the literal and spiritual sense. Kissing the feet was practised also among the heathens, to express subjection of spirit, and earnest supplication. See a long example in Raphael's, produced from Polybius, concerning the Carthaginian ambassador, when supplicating the Romans for peace. With an humble and object mind, κτωστικ εν τω γυν, they fell down on the earth, rose, washed and anointed her feet, and kissed the feet of the council. See also several examples in Kypke. Kissing the feet is a further proof that this person had been educated a heathen.

43 And when they had nothing to pay, he frankly forgave them both. Tell me therefore, which of them will love him most?

43 Simon answered and said, I suppose that he to whom he forgave most. And he said unto him, Thou hast rightly judged.

44 And he turned to the woman, and said unto Simon, Seest thou this woman? I entered into this house, thou gavest me no water for my feet: but she hath washed my feet with tears, and wiped them with the hairs of her head.

45 Thou gavest me no kiss: but this woman, since the time I came in, hath not ceased to kiss my feet.

a Pa 23.5-1 Tim. 1. 14-c Mat. 9.2. Mark 2.5-4 Mat. 9.2. Mark 2.7.

41. A certain creditor, &c.] It is plain that in this parable our Lord means by the creditor God, and by the two debtors, Simon, and the woman who was present. Simon, who had the light of the law, and who, in consequence of his profession as a Pharisee, was obliged to abstain from outward iniquity, might be considered as the debtor who owed only fifty pence, or denarii. The woman, whom I have supposed to be a heathen, not having these advantages, having no rule to regulate her actions, and no curb on her evil propensities, may be considered as the debtor who owed five hundred pence, or denarii. And when both were compared, Simon's debt to God might be considered, in reference to hers, as fifty to five hundred. However, we find, notwithstanding this great disparity, death were inevitable. Simon, the religious Pharisee, could no more pay his debt to God, than this poor heathen her five hundred; and if both be not freely forgiven by the divine mercy, both must finally perish. Having nothing to pay, he kindly forgave them both. Some think that this very Simon was no inconsiderable debtor to our Lord, as having been mercifully cleansed from a leprosy; for he is supposed to be the same as Simon the leper. See the note on Matt. xxvi. 7.

42. Which of them will love him most?] Which is under the greater obligation, and should love him most?

43. He to whom he forgave most.] By this acknowledgment he was, unknowingly to himself, prepared to receive our Lord's reproof.

44. Thou gavest me no water.] In this respect Simon was sadly deficient in civil respect, whether this proceeded from forgetfulness or contempt. The custom of giving water to wash the guest's feet was very ancient. See instances in Gen. xviii. 4. xiv. 32. Judges xix. 21. 1 Sam. xv. 41. In Hindoostan it is the custom, that when a superior enters the house of an inferior, the latter washes his feet, and gives him water to rinse his mouth before he eats. See AYRAN AKREAY, vol. iii. p. 228.

45. Since the time I came in.] Rather, since the time she came in, οὐκ ἦν ἐσηλάθη, not ἐσηλάθη, I came in, for it is clear from ver. 37. that the woman came in after Christ, having heard that he was sitting at meat in the Pharisee's house. The reading which I have adopted is supported by several MSS. and Versions.

46. My head with oil thou didst not anoint.] Anointing the head with oil was as common among the Jews, as washing the face with water is among us. See Ruth iii. 3. 2 Sam. xii. 20. xiv. 2. 2 Kings iv. 2. and Psal. xxiii. 6. where the author alludes to the Jewish manner of receiving and entertaining a guest. Thy preparation a table for me; anointed my head with oil; givest me an overflowing cup. See Matt. v. 17.

47. For she loved much.] Or, τὴν ἀγάπην ἠγάπησεν she loved much. It appears to have been a consciousness of God's forgiving love that brought her at this time to the Pharisee's house. In the common translation her forgiveness is represented to be the consequence of her loving much, which is causing the tree to produce the fruit, and not the root the tree. I have considered she here as having the sense of diuturn, therefore; because to make this sentence suit with the foregoing parable, ver. 42, 43, and with what immediately follows here, but he to whom little is forgiven, loveth little, we must suppose her love was the effect of her being pardoned, not the cause of it. Or seems to have the sense of therefore in Matt. xiii. 13. John viii. 44. 1 Cor. x. 17. and in the Septuagint, in Deut. xxxiii. 62. Isa. xlix. 19. Hos. ix. 15. and Eccles. v. 6. Both these particles are often interchanged in the New Testament.

Loved much—loveth little.] That is, a man's love to God will be in proportion to the obligations he feels himself under to the bounty of his Maker.

48. Thy sins are forgiven.] He gave her the fullest assurance of what he had said before to Simon, (ver. 47.) thy sins are forgiven. While the Pharisee murmured, the poor penitent rejoiced.

49. Thy faith hath saved thee.] Thy faith hath been the instrument of receiving the salvation which is promised to those who repent. Go in peace. Though peace of conscience be the inseparable consequence of the pardon of sin, yet here it seems to be used as a valediction or farewell: as if he had said, May goodness and mercy continue to follow thee! In this sense it is certainly used Judg. xvii. 6. 1 Sam. i. 17. xx. 42. xxix. 7. 2 Sam. xv. 9. James i. 16.

The adjoining account of raising the widow's son to life, ver. 11—17, is capable of further improvement.

In this resurrection of the widow's son four things are highly worthy of notice: 1. The meeting. 2. What Christ did to raise the dead man. 3. What the man did when raised to life: and, 4. The effect produced on the minds of the people.

I. The meeting. 1. It was unseasonable: it was a meeting of life and death, of consolation and distress. On the one part 46 My head with oil thou didst not anoint: but this woman hath anointed my feet with ointment.

47 Wherefore, I say unto thee, Her sins, which are many, are forgiven; for she loved much: but to whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little.

48 And he said unto her, Thy sins are forgiven.

49 And they that sat at meat with him began to say within themselves, Who is this that forgiveth sins also?

50 And he said to the woman, Thy faith hath saved thee: go in peace.

e Mat. 9.22. Mark 5.34 & 10.52. Ch. 8. 48 & 13. 42.

Jesus, accompanied by his disciples, and an innumerable crowd of people, advance towards the gate of the city of Nain on the other part a funeral solemnity proceeds out of the gate,—a person of distinction as we may imagine, from the number of the people who accompanied the corpse, is carried out to be buried. Wherever Jesus goes, he arrests death or misery; and wherever he comes, he dispenses life and salvation. 2. It was instructive. A young man was carried to the grave—an only son—cut off in the flower of his age from the pleasures, honours, profits, and expectations of life; a multitude of relatives, friends, and neighbours, in tears, affliction, and distress, accompanied the corpse. Behold the present life in its true point of light. How deceitful is the world! to hide its vanity and wretchedness, funeral pomp takes the place of the decorations of life and health; and pride, which carries the person through life, cleaves to the putrid carcass in the ridiculous adornments of palls, scarfs, cloaks, and feathers! Sin has a complete triumph, when pride is one of the principal bearers to the tomb. And shall not the living lay these things to heart? Remember ye that are young, the young die oftener than the old: and it is because so many of the former die, that there are so few of the latter to die. 3. It was an affecting meeting. The mother of this young man followed the corpse of her son; her distress was extreme. She had already lost her husband, and in losing her only son she loses all that could be reckoned dear to her in the world. She lost her support, her glory, and the name of her family from among the tribes of her people. Jesus sees her in this state of affliction, and was moved with compassion towards her. This God of goodness cannot see the wretched without commiserating their state, and providing for their salvation. 4. It was a happy meeting. Jesus approaches this distressed widow, and says, weep not. But who, with propriety, can give such advice in a case like this? Only that God who can dry up the fountain of grief, and remove the cause of distress. Weep for thy sin, weep for thy relatives, weep after Christ, and God will infallibly comfort thee.

II. What Christ did to raise this dead man. 1. He came up ver. 14. When the blessed God is about to save a soul from spiritual death, he comes up to the heart by the light of his Spirit, by the preaching of his word, and by a thousand other methods, which all prove that his name is mercy, and his nature love. 2. He touched the bier. God often stretches out his hand against the matter or occasion of sin, renders that public that was before hidden, lays afflictions upon the body, by some evil disease effaces that beauty, or impairs the strength, which were the occasions of sin; disconcerts the schemes, and blasts the property of the worldly man. These were carrying him down to the chambers of death, and the merciful God is thus delivering him out of the hands of his murderers. 3. He commanded—Young man! I say unto thee arise. Sinners! you have been dead in trespasses and sins too long; now hear the voice of the Son of God. Young people! to you in particular is this commandment addressed. Delay not a moment: it will be more easy for you to return to God now than at any future time. And perhaps the present call may never be repeated. The sooner you hear the voice of God, the sooner you shall be happy.

III. What the man did when raised to life. 1. He sat up, ver. 15. When the quickening voice of God reaches the heart of a sinner, his first business is to lift up his head to contemplate the awful state in which he is found, and the horrible pit over which he hangs, and look about for a deliverer from the hell that is moved from beneath to meet him at his coming. 2. He began to speak. Prayer to God for the salvation he needs is indispensably requisite to every awakened sinner. Let him speak in prayer and praise—prayer for present salvation, and praise because he is still out of hell. Let him also declare the power and goodness of God which have thus rescued him from the bitter pangs of an eternal death. 3. He walked. He (Christ) presented him to his mother. Those who were carrying the corpse having heard the voice of the young man, immediately laid down the bier, and the young man stepping directly on the ground, Jesus took him by the hand, and conducted him to his mother. What a change from the deepest affliction to the highest ecstasy of joy must have now taken place in this widow's heart! Happy moment! When the quickening power of Christ restores a prodigal son to a disconsolate parent, and a member to Christ's mystical body, the church militant.

IV. The effect produced on the mind of the people. 1. Fear seized them, ver. 16. A religious reverence penetrated their hearts, while witnessing the effects of the sovereign power of Christ. Thus should we contemplate the wonders of God's grace in the conviction and conversion of sinners. 2. They glorified God. They plainly saw that he had now visited his people: the miracle proclaimed his presence, and that a great prophet was risen among them, and they expect to be speedily instructed in all righteousness. The conversion of a sinner to God should be a matter of public joy to all that fear his name: and should be considered as a full proof that the God of our fathers is still among their children. See ver. 16. 3 They published abroad the account. The work of the grace of God should be made known to all: the Gospel should be preached in every place: and the miracle-working power of Christ every where recommended to notice. If those who are raised from the death of sin were more zealous in discovering of, and walking in, and recommending the Gospel of the grace of God, the kingdom of Christ would soon have a more extensive spread; and the souls thus employed would be incessantly watered from on high.

CHAPTER VIII.

Jesus preaches through every city and village, 1. Women minister to him, 2, 3. Instructs the multitudes by the parable of the sower, 4-8. Explains it at large to his disciples, 9-16. Directions how to improve by hearing the Gospel, 16-18. His mother and brethren seek him, 19-21. He and his disciples go upon the lake, and are taken in a storm, 22-26. They arrive among the Gadarenes, 26, where he cures a demoniac, 27-39. He returns from the Gadarenes, and is requested by Jairus to heal his daughter, 40-42. On the way he cures a diseased woman, 43-48. Receives information that the daughter of Jairus is dead, 49. Exhorts the father to believe; arrives at the house, and raises the dead child to life, 50-56. [A. M. 4031. A. D. 27. An. Olymp. CCL 3.]

AND it came to pass afterward, that he went throughout every city and village, preaching and showing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God: and the twelve sower with him, and certain women which had been healed of evil spirits and infirmities, Mary called Magdalene, out of whom went seven devils, Joanna the wife of Chuza, Herod's steward, and Susanna, and many others, which ministered unto him of their substance. And when much people were gathered together, and were come to him out of every city, he spake by a parable: A sower went out to sow his seed; and as he sowed, some fell by the way-side; and it was trodden down, and the fowls of the air devoured it. And some fell upon a rock; and as soon as it was sprung up, it withered away, because it lacked moisture. And some fell among thorns; and the thorns sprang up with it, and choked it. And other fell on good ground, and bare fruit an hundred fold. And when he had said these things, he cried, He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

a. Num. 27. 25. Deut. 10. 9. — Matt. 13. 2. Mk. 4. 1. — 4. Num. 13. 10. Mt. 4. 10

NOTES.—Verse 1. Throughout every city and village] That is, of Galilee.

2. Out of whom went seven devils] Who had been possessed in a most extraordinary manner, probably a case of inveterate lunacy, brought on by the influence of evil spirits. The number seven may here express the superlative degree.

Mary Magdalene is commonly thought to have been a prostitute before she came to the knowledge of Christ, and then to have been a remarkable penitent. So historians and painters represent her: but neither from this passage, nor from any other of the New Testament, can such a supposition be legitimately drawn. She is here represented as one who had been possessed with seven devils: and as one among other women who had been healed by Christ of evil (or wicked) spirits and infirmities. As well might Joanna and Susanna, mentioned ver. 3. come in for a share of the censure as this Mary Magdalene; for they seem to have been dispossessed likewise by Jesus; according to St. Luke's account of them. They had all had infirmities, of what sort it is not said, and those infirmities were occasioned by evil spirits within them: and Jesus had healed them all: but Mary Magdalene, by her behaviour, and constant attendance on Jesus in his life-time, at his crucifixion and at his grave, seems to have exceeded all the other women in duty and respect to his person. Bishop PARSON.

There is a marvellous propensity in commentators to make some of the women mentioned in the Sacred Writings appear as women of ill-fame; therefore Rahab must be a harlot: and Mary Magdalene a prostitute: and yet nothing of the kind can be proved either in the former or in the latter case; nor in that mentioned in chap. vii. 26, &c. where see the notes. Poor Mary Magdalene is made the patroness of penitent prostitutes, both by Papists and Protestants; and to the scandal of her name, and the reproach of the Gospel, houses stiled up for the reception of such are termed Magdalene hospitals; and the persons themselves Magdalenes! There is not only no proof that this person was such as commentators represent her, but there is the strongest presumptive proof against it: for if she had ever been such, it would have been contrary to every rule of prudence, and every dictate of wisdom, for Christ and his apostles to have permitted such a person to associate with them, however fully she might have been converted to God, and however exemplary her life at that time might have been. As the world who had seen her conduct, and knew her character, (had she been such as is insinuated,) could not see the inward change, and as they sought to overwhelm Christ and his disciples with obloquy and reproach on every occasion, they would certainly have availed themselves of so favourable an opportunity to subject the character and ministry of Christ to the blackest censure, had he permitted even a converted prostitute to minister to him and his disciples. They were ready enough to say that he was the friend of publicans and sinners, because he conversed with them in order to instruct and save their souls; but they could never say he was a friend of prostitutes, because it does not appear that such persons ever came to Christ;

9 & 4 And his disciples asked him, saying, What might this parable be?

10 And he said, Unto you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of God: but to others in parables; that seeing they might not see, and hearing they might not understand.

11 ¶ Now the parable is this: The seed is the word of God. 12 Those by the way-side are they that hear; then cometh the devil, and taketh away the word out of their hearts, lest they should believe and be saved.

13 They on the rock are they, which, when they hear, receive the word with joy; and these have no root, which for a while believe, and in time of temptation fall away.

14 And that which fell among thorns are they which, when they have heard, go forth, and are choked with cares and riches and pleasures of this life, and bring no fruit to perfection.

15 But that on the good ground are they, which in an honest and good heart, having heard the word, keep it, and bring forth fruit with patience.

16 ¶ No man, when he hath lighted a candle, covereth it with a vessel, or putteth it under a bed; but setteth it on a candlestick, that they which enter in may see the light.

o. Isa. 6. 2. Mk. 4. 12. — Matt. 13. 12. Mk. 4. 11. — g. Matt. 5. 15. Mk. 4. 21. Ch. 11. 32.

or, that he in the way of his ministry, ever went to them. I conclude, therefore, that the common opinion is a vile slander on the character of one of the best women mentioned in the Gospel of God; and a reproach cast on the character and conduct of Christ and his disciples. From the whole account of Mary Magdalene, it is highly probable that she was a person of great respectability in that place, such a person as the wife of Chuza, Herod's steward, could associate with: and a person on whose conduct or character, the calumniating Jews could cast no aspersions.

3. Herod's steward] Though the original word επιτροπος signifies sometimes the inspector or overseer of a province, and sometimes a tutor of children, yet here it seems to signify the overseer of Herod's domestic affairs: the steward of his household. Steward of the household was an office in the king's palace by s. 24. of Hen. VIII. The person is now entitled lord steward of the king's household, and the office is, I believe, more honourable and of more importance than when it was first created. Junius derives the word from the Icelandic stivardur, which is compounded of stilla, work, and vardur, a keeper or overseer: hence our words, warden, warden, ward, guard, guardian, &c. The Greek word in Hebrew letters is frequent in the rabbinical writings, בשרב, and signifies among them the deputy ruler of a province. See on chap. xvi. 1. In the Icelandic version it is forstjornarmanninn.

Unto him] Instead of ερωσ, to him, meaning Christ, many of the best MSS. and Versions have αρωσ, to them, meaning both our Lord and the twelve apostles, see ver. 1. This is unquestionably the true reading. Christ receives those assistance and ministrations, says pious Quesnel. 1. To honour poverty by subjecting himself to it. 2. To humble himself in receiving from his creatures. 3. That he may teach the ministers of the Gospel to depend on the providence of their heavenly Father. 4. To make way for the gratitude of those he had healed. And, 5. That he might not be burthensome to the poor to whom he went to preach.

5. A sower went out to sow] See all this parable largely explained on Matt. xiii. 1-23.

12. Those by the way-side] Bishop PARSON thinks that Luke, by οι ορει, means ερωσ, the seeds, though he acknowledges that he has never found such a word as ερωσ in the plural number signifying seeds.

15. With patience] Rather, with perseverance. The Greek word ερωσ, which our translators render patience, properly signifies here, and in Rom. ii. 7. perseverance. The good ground, because it is good, strong, and vigorous, continues to bear: bad or poor ground cannot produce a good crop, and besides, it is very soon exhausted. The persons called the good ground in the text, are filled with the power and influence of God, and therefore continue to bring forth fruit; i. e. they persevere in righteousness. From this we may learn, that the perseverance of the saints, as it is termed, necessarily implies that they continue to bring forth fruit to the glory of God. Those who are not fruitful are not in a state of perseverance.

16. Lighted a candle] This is a repetition of a part of our 17 For nothing is secret, that shall not be made manifest; neither any thing hid, that shall not be known and come abroad.

18 Take heed therefore how ye hear; for whosoever hath, to him shall be given; and whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he seemeth to have.

19 ¶ Then came to him his mother and brethren, and could not come to him for the press.

20 And it was told him by certain which said, Thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to see thee.

21 And he answered and said unto them, My mother and my brethren are these which hear the word of God, and do it.

22 ¶ Now it came to pass on a certain day, that he went into a ship with his disciples; and he said unto them, Let us go over unto the other side of the lake. And they launched forth.

23 But as they sailed he fell asleep; and there came down a storm of wind on the lake; and they were filled with water, and were in jeopardy.

24 And they came to him, and awoke him, saying, Master, assist, we perish. Then he arose, and rebuked the wind and the raging of the water; and they ceased, and there was a calm.

25 And he said unto them, Where is your faith? And they being afraid wondered, saying one to another, What manner of man is this! for he commandeth even the winds and water, and they obey him.

26 ¶ And they arrived at the country of the Gadarenes, which is over against Galilee.

27 And when he went forth to land, there met him out of the city, a certain man, which had devils long time, and wore no clothes, neither abode in any house, but in the tombs.

28 When he saw Jesus, he cried out, and fell down before him, and with a loud voice said, What have I to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of God most high? I beseech thee, torment me not.

29 (For he had commanded the unclean spirit to come out of the man. For oftentimes it had caught him: and he was kept bound with chains and in fetters; and he brake the bands, and was driven of the devil into the wilderness.)

30 ¶ And Jesus said unto him, What is thy name? He saith, Legion: because many devils were entered into him.

31 And they besought him that he would not command them to go out into the deep.

32 And there was there a herd of many swine feeding on the mountain: and they besought him that he would suffer them to enter into them. And he suffered them.

33 Then went the devils out of the man, and entered into the swine: and the herd ran violently down a steep place into the lake, and were choked.

34 When they that fed them saw what was done, they fled, and went and told it in the city and in the country.

35 Then they went out to see what was done; and came to Jesus, and found the man, out of whom the devils were departed, sitting at the feet of Jesus, clothed, and in his right mind: and they were afraid.

36 They also which saw it, told them by what means he that was possessed of the devils was healed.

37 ¶ Then the whole multitude of the country of the Gadarenes round about, besought him to depart from them; for they were taken with great fear: and he went up into the ship, and returned back again.

38 Now the man out of whom the devils were departed, besought him that he might be with him: but Jesus sent him away, saying,

39 Return to thine own house, and show how great things God hath done unto thee. And he went his way, and published throughout the whole city, how great things Jesus had done unto him.

40 And it came to pass, that, when Jesus was returned, the people gladly received him: for they were all waiting for him.

41 ¶ And behold, there came a man named Jairus, and he was a ruler of the synagogue: and he fell down at Jesus' feet, and besought him that he would come into his house:

42 For he had one only daughter, about twelve years of age, and she lay a dying. But as he went, the people thronged him.

43 ¶ And as he went, certain say, that he was dead: and he said unto them, Weep not, for the child is not dead, but asleep.

44 And they laughed at him, saying, Thou art overmuch, and art blind.

45 ¶ And he took the hand of the girl, and said unto her, Talitha cumi, which is set forth, Damsel, arise.

46 And she arose. And the father of the child was amazed, saying, How came this to me? But they that were there, all marvelled and wondered.

47 ¶ And Jesus departed thence, and came into the city of Nain, and his disciples and a great multitude.

48 ¶ And there was there a dead man, whose only son was a little child, and he was dead about three days.

49 ¶ And when Jesus saw her, he said unto her, Weep not.

50 ¶ And she said, Lord, thou hast said, but now I am dead, and he is dead three days.

51 ¶ And he said unto her, Daughter, arise. And she arose.

52 ¶ And he said unto her, Touch not the child, for she is dead.

30 And Jesus asked him, saying, What is thy name? And he said, Legion: because many devils were entered into him.

31 And they besought him that he would not command them to go out into the deep.

32 And there was there a herd of many swine feeding on the mountain: and they besought him that he would suffer them to enter into them. And he suffered them.

33 Then went the devils out of the man, and entered into the swine: and the herd ran violently down a steep place into the lake, and were choked.

34 When they that fed them saw what was done, they fled, and went and told it in the city and in the country.

35 Then they went out to see what was done; and came to Jesus, and found the man, out of whom the devils were departed, sitting at the feet of Jesus, clothed, and in his right mind: and they were afraid.

36 They also which saw it, told them by what means he that was possessed of the devils was healed.

37 ¶ Then the whole multitude of the country of the Gadarenes round about, besought him to depart from them; for they were taken with great fear: and he went up into the ship, and returned back again.

38 Now the man out of whom the devils were departed, besought him that he might be with him: but Jesus sent him away, saying,

39 Return to thine own house, and show how great things God hath done unto thee. And he went his way, and published throughout the whole city, how great things Jesus had done unto him.

40 And it came to pass, that, when Jesus was returned, the people gladly received him: for they were all waiting for him.

41 ¶ And behold, there came a man named Jairus, and he was a ruler of the synagogue: and he fell down at Jesus' feet, and besought him that he would come into his house:

42 For he had one only daughter, about twelve years of age, and she lay a dying. But as he went, the people thronged him.

43 ¶ And as he went, certain say, that he was dead: and he said unto them, Weep not, for the child is not dead, but asleep.

44 And they laughed at him, saying, Thou art overmuch, and art blind.

45 ¶ And he took the hand of the girl, and said unto her, Talitha cumi, which is set forth, Damsel, arise.

46 And she arose. And the father of the child was amazed, saying, How came this to me? But they that were there, all marvelled and wondered.

47 ¶ And Jesus departed thence, and came into the city of Nain, and his disciples and a great multitude.

48 ¶ And there was there a dead man, whose only son was a little child, and he was dead about three days.

49 ¶ And when Jesus saw her, he said unto her, Weep not.

50 ¶ And she said, Lord, thou hast said, but now I am dead, and he is dead three days.

51 ¶ And he said unto her, Daughter, arise. And she arose.

52 ¶ And he said unto her, Touch not the child, for she is dead.

53 ¶ And she said, Lord, thou hast said, but now I am dead, and he is dead three days.

54 ¶ And he said unto her, Daughter, arise. And she arose.

55 ¶ And he said unto her, Touch not the child, for she is dead.

56 ¶ And she said, Lord, thou hast said, but now I am dead, and he is dead three days.

57 ¶ And he said unto her, Daughter, arise. And she arose.

58 ¶ And he said unto her, Touch not the child, for she is dead.

59 ¶ And she said, Lord, thou hast said, but now I am dead, and he is dead three days.

60 ¶ And he said unto her, Daughter, arise. And she arose.

61 ¶ And he said unto her, Touch not the child, for she is dead.

62 ¶ And she said, Lord, thou hast said, but now I am dead, and he is dead three days.

63 ¶ And he said unto her, Daughter, arise. And she arose.

64 ¶ And he said unto her, Touch not the child, for she is dead.

65 ¶ And she said, Lord, thou hast said, but now I am dead, and he is dead three days.

1. Matt. 13. 35. Ch. 12. 2-11. Mark 13. 1. Luke 11. 17. John 15. 22. Or, blasphemy that he hath. — Matt. 12. 26. Mark 3. 31. — Matt. 3. 23. Mark 4. 35.

Lord's sermon on the mount. See the notes on Matt. v. 15. x. 26. and on Mark iv. 21, 22.

17. For nothing is secret, &c.] Whatever I teach you in private, ye shall teach publicly: and ye shall illustrate and explain every parable now delivered to the people.

[3. Even that which he seemeth to have.] Or, rather, even what he hath. Ο δὲ αὐτὸς ἔχειν, rendered by our common version, what he seemeth to have; seems to me to contradict itself. Let us examine this subject a little.

1. To seem to have a thing, is only to have it in appearance, and not in reality; but what is possessed in appearance only, can only be taken away in appearance; therefore on the one side there is no gain, and on the other side no loss. On this ground, the text speaks just nothing.

2. It is evident that ο δὲ αὐτὸς ἔχειν, what he seemeth to have, here, is equivalent to ο ἔχει, what he hath, in the parallel places, Mark iv. 25. Matt. xiii. 12. xxv. 29. and in Luke xix. 26.

3. It is evident also, that these persons had something which might be taken away from them. For, 1. The word of God, the divine seed, was planted in their hearts. 2. It had already produced some good effects; but they permitted the devil, the carter of the world, the desire of riches, and the love of pleasure, to destroy its produce.

4. The word δοκῆν is often an expletive: so Xenophon in Hellen. vi. οὐκ δοκῆν παρρησίαν, φίλους, αὐτοῖς, because he seemed to be (i. e. was) their father's friend. So in his Econ. among the cities that seemed to be (δοκῆσαι, actually were) at war. So Athenæus, lib. vi. χηρὰ. 4. They who seemed to be (δοκῆσαι, who really were) the most opulent, drank out of brazen cups.

5. It often strengthens the sense, and is thus used by the very best Greek writers. Ulpian, in one of his notes on Demosthenes' Orat. Olinth. 1. quoted by Bishop Pearce, says expressly, το δοκῆν οὐ παρρησίαν ἀμφιλόου παρρησίαν οὐ καλοῦσι, ἀλλὰ το λαλοῦσι, καὶ τοι το ἀλοῦσιν. The word δοκῆν is used by the ancients to express, not always what is doubtful, but oftentimes what is true and certain. And this is manifestly (in meaning in Matt. iii. 9. Luke xxii. 24. John v. 39. 1 Cor. vii. 40. x. 12. 16. Gal. ii. 9. Phil. iii. 4. and in the text. See these meanings of the word established beyond the possibility of successful contradiction, in Bishop Pearson's notes on Mark x. 42. and in Kræus in loc. See also the notes on Matt. xiii. 12. 19. His mother and his brethren) See the notes on Matt. xiii. 12. 46. &c. and on Mark iii. 31. &c.

22. Let us go over, &c.] See on Matt. viii. 24, &c. and Mark iv. 36-41.

23. There came down a storm of wind—and they—were in jeopardy.] This is a parallel passage to that in Jonah i. 4. There was a mighty tempest in the sea, so that the ship was like to be broken: the latter clause of which is thus translated by the Septuagint: καὶ το νεώτος ἐκινδύνου τοσ ὀνερῆσθνας, and the ship was in the utmost danger of being dashed to pieces. This is exactly the state of the disciples here: and it is remarkable that the very same word ἐκινδύνου, which we translate were in jeopardy, is used by the evangelist, which is founded in the Greek Version above quoted. The word jeopardy, an inexpressive French term, and utterly unfit for the place which it now occupies, is properly the exclamation of a disappointed gamester, jeu perdu! The game is lost! or, jeu perdu! I have lost! i. e. the game.

25. Where is your faith?] Ye have a power to believe, and yet do not exercise it! Depend on God. Ye have little faith, (Matt. viii. 26.) because you do not use the grace which I have already given you. Many are looking for more faith without using that which they have. It is as possible to hide this talent as any other.

26. The country of the Gadarenes] Or, according to several MSS. Gerasenes or Gergasenes. See on Matt. viii. 28. and Mark v. 1.

27. A certain man] See the case of this demoniac considered at large, on the parallel places. Matt. viii. 28-34. Mark v. 1-20.

28. Jesus, thou Son of God most high] The words Jesus and God are both omitted here by several MSS. I think it is very likely that the demons mentioned neither. They were constrained in a summary way to acknowledge his power, but it is probable they did not pronounce names which were of such dreadful import to themselves. The words which they spoke on the occasion seem to have been these: What is into thee and me, O Son of the Most High? See the note on Matt. viii. 29.

31. And they besought him that he would not command them to go out into the deep.] In the Chaldaic Philosophy, mention is made of certain material demons, who are permitted to wander about on the earth, and are horribly afraid of being sent into abysses and subterraneous places. Pœllius says, De Dæmonibus: "These material demons, fearing to be sent into abysses, and standing in awe of the angels, who send them thither, if even a man threaten to send them thither, and pronounce the names of those angels whose office that is, it is inexpressible how much they will be afflicted and troubled. So great will their astonishment be, that they cannot discern the person that threatens them. And though it be some old woman or little old man that menaces them, yet so great is their fear that they depart, as if the person who menaces had a power to kill them." See Stanley's Chaldaic Philosophy.

33. They sent the devils out of the man, and entered into the swine] Some critics and commentators would have us to understand all this of the man himself, who, they say, was a most outrageous maniac; and that, being permitted by our Lord, he ran after the swine, and drove them all down a precipice into the sea! This is solemn trifling indeed; or at least trifling with solemn things. It is impossible to read over the account as given here by Luke, and admit this mode of explanation. The devils went out of the man, and entered into the swine, i. e. the madman ran after the swine! On this plan of interpretation there is nothing certain in the word of God; and every man may give it what meaning he pleases. Such comments are intolerable.

34. They fled and went and told it] Αὐτῶσσι, they went, is omitted by almost every MS. of repute, and by the best of the ancient Versions. Griesbach leaves it out, and with propriety too, as it is not likely that so correct a writer as Luke would say, They fled, and went and told it.

40. Gladly received him] This is the proper import of the word ἀρέσαστο, therefore our translators needed not to have put gladly in Italics, as though it were not expressed in the text. Rapphæus gives several proofs of this in loc.

43 <sup>1</sup> And a woman, having an issue of blood twelve years, which had spent all her living upon physicians, neither could be healed of any,
 44 Came behind him, and touched the border of his garment: and immediately her issue of blood stancheth.
 45 And Jesus said, Who touched me? When all denied, Peter and they that were with him said, Master, the multitude throng thee and press thee, and sayest thou, Who touched me?
 46 And Jesus said, Somebody hath touched me: for I perceive that a virtue is gone out of me.
 47 And when the woman saw that she was not hid, she came trembling, and falling down before him, she declared unto him before all the people, for what cause she had touched him, and how she was healed immediately.
 48 And he said unto her, Daughter, be of good comfort: thy faith hath made thee whole; go in peace.
 49 <sup>1</sup> While he yet spake, there cometh one from the ruler of the synagogue's house, saying to him, Thy daughter is dead; trouble not the Master.

 50 <sup>1</sup> But when Jesus heard it, he answered him, saying, Fear not: believe only, and she shall be made whole.
 51 And when he came into the house, he suffered no man to go in, save Peter, and James, and John, and the father and the mother of the maiden.
 52 And all wept, and bewailed her: but he said, Weep not; she is not dead, <sup>2</sup> but asleep.
 53 And they laughed him to scorn, knowing that she was dead.
 54 And he put them all out, and took her by the hand, and called, saying, Maid, arise.
 55 And her spirit came again, and she arose straightway and he commanded to give her meat.
 56 And her parents were astonished: but <sup>2</sup> he charged them that they should tell no man what was done.

1. Mat. 9. 22.—Mark 5. 23. Ch. 6. 13.—Mark 5. 25.—John 11. 11, 13. 2. Chap. 7. 14. John 11. 43.—Matt. 9. 4. & 9. 30. Mark 5. 43.

41. A man named Jairus] See these two miracles—the raising of Jairus's daughter, and the cure of the afflicted woman—considered and explained at large, on Mat. ix. 18—24. and Mark v. 22—43.
 42. The people thronged him.] Συμμιγνυσθε εμε—almost suffocated him—so great was the throng about him.
 43. Spent all her living upon physicians] See on Mark v. 26.
 46. I perceive that virtue] Δυναμις, divine or miraculous power. This divine emanation did not proceed always from Christ, as necessarily an odour do from plants, for then all who touched him must have been equally partakers of it. Of the many that touched him, this woman, and none else, received this divine virtue; and why? Because she came in faith. Faith alone, attracts and receives the energetic influence of God at all times. There would be more miracles at least of spiritual healing, were there more faith among those who are called believers.
 54. He put them all out] That is, the pipers, and those who made a noise, weeping and lamenting. See Matt. ix. 23. Mark v. 38. Pompous funeral ceremonies are ridiculous in themselves and entirely opposed to the spirit and simplicity of the religion of Christ. Every where they meet with his disapprobation.

 55. And he commanded to give her meat.] Though she was raised to life by a miracle, she was not to be preserved by a miracle. Nature is God's great instrument, and he delights to work by it: nor will he do any thing by his sovereign power in the way of miracle, that can be effected by his ordinary providence. Again, God will have us be workers together with him. He provides food for us, but he does not eat for us: we eat for ourselves, and are thus nourished on the bounty that God has provided. Without the food, man cannot be nourished; and unless he eat the food it can be of no use to him. So, God provides salvation for a lost world, and bestows it on every penitent believing soul; but he neither repents nor believes for any man. A man repents and believes for himself, under the succours of God's grace.

CHAPTER IX.

Christ sends his apostles to preach and work miracles, 1—6. Herod hearing of the fame of Jesus, is perplexed: some suppose that John Baptist is risen from the dead; others, that Elijah or one of the old prophets was come to life, 7—9. The apostles return and relate the success of their mission. He goes to a retired place, and the people follow him, 10, 11. He feeds five thousand men with five loaves and two fishes, 12—17. He asks his disciples what the public think of him, 18—21. Foretells his passion, 22. Shows the necessity of self-denial, and the importance of salvation, 22—25. Threatens those who deny him before men, 26. The transfiguration, 27—36. Curses a demoniac, 37—43. Again foretells his passion, 44, 45. The disciples contend who shall be greatest, 46—48. Of the person who cast out devils in Christ's name, but did not associate with the disciples, 49, 50. Of the Samaritans who would not receive him, 51—56. Of the man who wished to follow Jesus, 57, 58. He calls another disciple, who asks permission first to bury his father, 59. Our Lord's answer, 60—62. [A. M. 4031. A. D. 27. An. Olymp. CCL 3.]

THEN <sup>a</sup> he called his twelve disciples together, and gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases.
 2 And <sup>b</sup> he sent them to preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick.
 3 <sup>c</sup> And he said unto them, Take nothing for your journey, neither staves, nor scrip, neither bread, neither money; neither have two coats apiece.
 4 <sup>d</sup> And whatsoever house ye enter into, there abide, and thence depart.
 5 <sup>e</sup> And whosoever will not receive you, when ye go out of that city, I shake off the very dust from your feet for a testimony against them.
 6 <sup>f</sup> And they departed, and went through the towns, preaching the Gospel, and healing every where.
 7 <sup>g</sup> <sup>h</sup> Now Herod the tetrarch heard of all that was done by him: and he was perplexed, because that it was said of some, that John was risen from the dead;

8 And of some, that Elias had appeared; and of others, that one of the old prophets was risen again.
 9 And Herod said, John have I beheaded: but who is this, of whom I hear such things? <sup>i</sup> And he desired to see him.
 10 <sup>j</sup> <sup>k</sup> And the apostles, when they were returned, told him all that they had done. <sup>l</sup> And he took them, and went aside privately into a desert place belonging to the city called Bethsaida;
 11 And the people, when they knew it, followed him: and he received them, and spake unto them of the kingdom of God, and healed them that had need of healing.
 12 <sup>m</sup> <sup>n</sup> And when the day began to wear away, then came the twelve, and said unto him, Send the multitude away, that they may go into the towns and country round about, and lodge, and get victuals: for we are here in a desert place.
 13 But he said unto them, Give ye them to eat. And they said, We have no more but five loaves and two fishes: except we should go and buy meat for all this people.
 14 For they were about five thousand men. And he said to

1. Mat. 10. 1. Mk. 7. 13. & 7. 7.—b. Mat. 10. 7. Mk. 6. 12. Ch. 10. 1. 9.—c. Mat. 10. 9. Mk. 6. 8. Ch. 10. 1. & 22. 28.—d. Mat. 10. 11. Mk. 6. 10.—e. Mat. 10. 14.—f. Act. 13. 51.—g. Mk.

from six, emphat, and anopen, I am in perplexity. It is a metaphor taken from a traveller, who, in his journey, meets with several paths, one only of which leads to the place whither he would go; and not knowing which to take, he is distressed with perplexity and doubt. The verb comes from ε, negative, and πωπι, a way or passage. A guilty conscience is a continual pest.—Herod had murdered John, and he is terribly afraid, lest he should arise from the dead, and bring his deeds to light, and expose him to that punishment which he deserved. See Mark vi. 16.
 10. Told them all] Related distinctly—ἀνεπαρτα, from ετα, through, and νεπαρτα, I declare: hence the whole of this gospel, because of its relating every thing so particularly, is termed ἀνεπαρτα, chap. i. 1. a particular and circumstantially detailed narration. See on Mark vi. 30.
 11. The people—followed him] Observe here five grand effects of Divine grace. 1. The people are drawn to follow him. 2. He kindly receives them. 3. He instructs them in the things of God. 4. He heals all their diseases. 5. He feeds their bodies and their souls. See Queenel. Reader! Jesus is the same to the present moment. Follow him, and he will receive, instruct, heal, feed, and save thy soul unto eternal life.
 12. Send the multitude away] See this miracle explained at large, on the parallel place, Mat. xiv. 15—21. Mark vi. 36—44.
 13. Then he took the five loaves] A minister of the Gospel, who is employed to feed souls, should imitate this conduct of Christ.

NOTES.—Verse 1. Power and authority] Δυναμις και εξουσια. The words properly mean here, the power to work miracles; and that authority by which the whole demoniac system was to be subjected to them. The reader will please to observe, 1. That Luke mentions both demons and diseases; therefore he was either mistaken, or demons and diseases are not the same. 2. The treatment of these two was not the same—the demons were to be cast out, the diseases to be healed. See Matt. x. 1.
 2. To preach the kingdom of God] For an explication of this phrase, see on Matt. iii. 1.
 3. Take nothing] See on Mark vii. 7, 8.
 Neither money] See on Matt. x. 9.
 Neither have two coats] Show that in all things ye are ambassadors for God, and go on his charges.
 4. There abide and thence depart.] That is, remain in that lodging till ye depart from that city. Some MSS. and Versions add ye, which makes the following sense: There remain, and depart not thence. See the note on Matt. x. 11.
 7. Herod the tetrarch] See on Matt. li. xiv. 1.
 By him] This is omitted by BCDL. two others, the Coptic, Sahidic, Armenian, and four of the Itala. It is probable that Luke might have written, Herod, hearing of all the things that were done, &c. but Matthew says particularly, that it was the fame of Jesus of which he heard. chap. xiv. 1.
 He was perplexed] He was greatly perplexed—διηρηται.

his disciples, Make them sit down by fifties in a company.

15 And they did so, and made them all sit down.
16 Then he took the five loaves and the two fishes, and looking up to heaven, he blessed them, and brake, and gave to the disciples to set before the multitude.

17 And they did eat, and were all filled: and there was taken up of fragments that remained to them, twelve baskets.

18 * And it came to pass, as he was alone praying, his disciples were with him: and he asked them, saying, Whom say the people that I am?

19 They answering said, * John the Baptist; but some say, Elias; and others say, that one of the old prophets is risen again.

20 He said unto them, But whom say ye that I am? * Peter answering said, The Christ of God.

21 * And he straightly charged them, and commanded them to tell no man that thing.

22 Saying, * The Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders, and chief priests, and scribes, and be slain, and be raised the third day.

23 * And he said to them all, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me, for whosoever will save his life shall lose it: but whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it.

24 * For what is a man advantaged, if he gain the whole world, and lose himself, or be cast away?

25 * For whosoever shall be ashamed of me, and of my words, of him shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he shall come in his own glory, and in his Father's, and of the holy angels.

26 * But I tell you of a truth, there be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the kingdom of God.

27 * And it came to pass about an eight days after these sayings, he took Peter, and John, and James, and went up into a mountain to pray.

28 And as he prayed, the fashion of his countenance was altered, and his raiment was white and glistering.

29 And, behold, there talked with him two men, which were Moses and Elias:

30 Who appeared in glory, and spake of his decease which he should accomplish at Jerusalem.

31 But Peter and they that were with him were heavy with sleep: and he awoke them, saying, Rise up, lest thou be found asleep.

32 And when he was awake, they saw his glory, and he awoke them, saying, Rise up, lest thou be found asleep.

33 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

34 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

35 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

36 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

37 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

38 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

39 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

40 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

41 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

42 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

43 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

44 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

45 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

46 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

47 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

48 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

49 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

50 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

51 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

52 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

53 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

54 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

55 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

56 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

57 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

58 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

59 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

60 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

61 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

62 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

63 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

64 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

65 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

66 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

67 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

68 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

69 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

70 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

71 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

72 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

73 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

74 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

75 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

76 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

77 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

78 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

79 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

80 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

81 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

82 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

83 And he said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and we have dreamed a dream.

sleep: and when they were awake, they saw his glory, and the two men that stood with him.

33 And it came to pass, as they departed from him, Peter said unto Jesus, Master, it is good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias: not knowing what he said.

34 While he thus spake, there came a cloud, and overshadowed them: and they feared as they entered into the cloud:

35 And there came a voice out of the cloud, saying, * This is my beloved Son: * hear him.

36 And when the voice was past, Jesus was found alone. And they kept it close, and told no man in those days any of those things which they had seen.

37 * And it came to pass, that on the next day, when they were come down from the hill, much people met him.

38 And, behold, a man of the company cried out, saying, Master, I beseech thee, look upon my son: for he is mine only child.

39 And, lo, a spirit taketh him, and he suddenly crieth out; and it teareth him that he foameth again, and bruising him, hardly departeth from him.

40 And I besought thy disciples to cast him out: and they could not.

41 And Jesus answering said, O faithless and perverse generation, how long shall I be with you, and suffer you? Bring thy son hither.

42 And as he was yet a coming, the devil threw him down, and tare him. And Jesus rebuked the unclean spirit, and healed the child, and delivered him again to his father.

43 * And they were all amazed at the mighty power of God. But while they wondered every one at all things which Jesus did, he said unto his disciples, 44 * Let these sayings sink down into your ears: for the Son of man shall be delivered into the hands of men.

45 * But they understood not this saying, and it was hid from them, that they perceived it not: and they feared to ask him of that saying.

46 * Then there arose a reasoning among them, which of them should be greatest.

47 And Jesus, perceiving the thought of their heart, took a child, and set him by him, 48 * And he said, Whosoever shall receive this child in my name, he receiveth me, and I him: for whosoever shall receive one of these little ones which are here, he receiveth me, and I him.

49 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

50 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

51 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

52 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

53 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

54 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

55 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

56 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

57 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

58 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

59 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

60 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

61 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

62 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

63 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

64 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

65 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

66 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

67 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

68 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

69 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

70 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

71 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

72 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

73 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

74 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

75 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

76 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

77 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

78 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

79 * And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him: for whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which are here, he offendeth me, and I him.

48 And said unto them, ' Whosoever shall receive this child in my name receiveth me; and whosoever shall receive me receiveth him that sent me: for he that is least among you all, the same shall be great.

49 ¶ And John answered and said, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name; and we forbade him, because he followeth not with us.

50 And Jesus said unto him, Forbid him not: for he that is not against us is for us.

51 ¶ And it came to pass, when the time was come that he should be received up, he steadfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem, 52 And sent messengers before his face; and they went, and entered into a village of the Samaritans, to make ready for him.

53 And they did not receive him, because his face was as though he would go to Jerusalem.

54 And when his disciples James and John saw this, they said, Lord, wilt thou that we command fire to come down from heaven, and consume them, even as Elias did?

g. Matt. 10. 40. & 18. 5. Mark 9. 37. John 12. 44. & 13. 20.—h. Matt. 23. 11, 12.—i. Mark 9. 38. See Num. 11. 24.—k. See Matt. 12. 30. Chap. 11. 52.

death, you must ever listen. Let them constantly occupy a place in your most serious meditations and reflections.

45. But they understood not.] See the note on Mark ix. 22.

46. There arose a reasoning.] Ενελεξε δε διαλογισμος, a dialogue took place—one inquired, and another answered, and so on. See this subject explained on Matt. xviii. 1, &c.

49. We forbade him.] See this subject considered on Mark ix. 38, &c.

51. That he should be received up.] Bishop PEARCE says, "I think the word αναληψιος must signify, of Jesus's retiring or withdrawing himself, and not of his being received up; because the word αναληψουσα: here used before it, denotes a time completed, which that of his ascension was not then. The sense is, that the time was come, when Jesus was no longer to retire from Judea and the parts about Jerusalem as he had hitherto done; for he had lived altogether in Galilee, lest the Jews should have laid hold on him, before the work of his ministry was ended, and full proofs of his divine mission given, and some of the prophecies concerning him accomplished. John says, chap. vii. 1. Jesus walked in Galilee; for he would not walk in Jewry, because the Jews sought to kill him. Let it be observed, that all which follows here in Luke to chap. xix. 45. is represented by him, as done by Jesus in his last journey from Galilee to Jerusalem."

He steadfastly set his face.] That is, after proper and mature deliberation, he chose now to go up to Jerusalem, and firmly determined to accomplish his design.

52. Sent messengers.] Αγγελους, angels literally: but this proves that the word angel signifies a messenger of any kind, whether divine or human. The messengers in this case were probably James and John.

53. His face was.] They saw he was going up to Jerusalem to keep the feast, (it was the feast of tabernacles, John vii. 2.) and knowing him thereby to be a Jew, they would afford nothing for his entertainment: for, in religious matters, the Samaritans and Jews had no dealings, see John iv. 9. The Samaritans were a kind of mongrel heathens: they feared Jehovah, and served other gods, 1 Kings xvii. 24. They apostatized from the true religion, and persecuted those who were attached to it. See an account of them, Matt. chap. xvi. 1. Those only who have deserted the truth of God, or who are uninfused by it, hate them who embrace and act by it. When a man had once decidedly taken the road to heaven, he can have but little credit any longer in the world, 1 John iii. 1.

54. That we command fire.] Vengeance belongs to the Lord. What we suffer for his sake, should be left to himself to reprove or punish. The insult is offered to him, not to us. See the note on Mark iii. 17.

55. Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of.] Ye do not consider, that the present is a dispensation of infinite mercy and love; and that the design of God is not to destroy sinners, but to give them space to repent, that he may save them unto eternal life. And ye do not consider, that the zeal which you feel, springs from an evil principle, being more concerned for your own honour than for the honour of God. The disciples of that Christ who died for his enemies, should never think of avenging themselves on their persecutors.

56. And they went to another village.] Which probably did entertain them; being, perhaps, without the Samaritan borders. The words, Ye know not of what spirit ye are: for the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them, 55 But he turned, and rebuked them, and said, Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of.

56 For the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them. And they went to another village.

57 ¶ And it came to pass, that, as they went in the way, a certain man said unto him, Lord, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest.

58 And Jesus said unto him, Foxes have holes, and birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head.

59 ¶ And he said unto another, Follow me. But he said, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father.

60 Jesus said unto him, Let the dead bury their dead: but go thou and preach the kingdom of God.

61 And another also said, Lord, I will follow thee; but let me first go bid them farewell which are at home at my house.

62 And Jesus said unto him, No man, having put his hand to the plough, and not looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God.

1 Mark 16. 19. Acts 1. 2.—m. John 4. 2.—n. Kings 1. 10, 12.—o. Matt. 3. 17. & 19. 47.—p. Matt. 8. 19.—q. Matt. 8. 21.—r. See 1 K. 19. 20, 21.—s. Ge. 19. 17, 21. s. Pa. 2. 21.

are wanting in ABCFGHLSV, and in many others. Griesbach leaves the latter clause out of the text. It is probable, that the most ancient MSS. read the passage thus: But he turned, and rebuked them, and said, Ye know not of what spirit ye are. And they went to another village. See the authorities in GUNNING.

57. A certain man.] He was a scribe. See on Matt. viii. 19—22. It is probable that this took place when Christ was at Capernaum, as Matthew represents it, and not on the way to Jerusalem through Samaria.

61. Another also said.] This circumstance is not mentioned by any of the other evangelists; and Matthew alone mentions the former case, ver. 67, 68.

Let me first go bid them farewell which are at home.] Εμπεριποιω τον αωραταταοις τοις τει τον οσων ημε.—Permit me to set in order my affairs at home. Those who understand the Greek text, will see at once that it will bear this translation well; and that this is the most natural. This person seems to have had in view the case of Elijah, who made a similar request to the prophet Elisha, 1 Kings xix. 19, 20, which request was granted by the prophet; but our Lord, seeing that this person had too much attachment to the earth, and that his return to worldly employments, though for a short time, was likely to become the means of stifling the good desires which he now felt, refused to grant him that permission. That which we object to the execution of God's designs, is sometimes the very thing from which we should immediately disengage ourselves.

62. Put his hand to the plough.] Can any person properly discharge the work of the ministry, who is engaged in secular employments. A farmer and a minister of the Gospel are incompatible characters. As a person who holds the plough cannot keep on a straight furrow if he look behind him; so he who is employed in the work of the ministry cannot do the work of an evangelist, if he turn his desires to worldly profits. A good man has said, "He who thinks it necessary to cultivate the favour of the world, is not far from betraying the interests of God and his church." Such a person is not fit, either, properly disposed, has not his mind properly directed towards the heavenly inheritance, and is not fit to show the way to others. In both these verses there is a plain reference to the call of Elijah. See 1 Kings xix. 19, &c.

1. Considering the life of mortification and self-denial which Christ and his disciples led, it is surprising to find that any one should voluntarily offer to be his disciple. But there is such an attractive influence in truth, and such a persuasive eloquence in the consistent steady conduct of a righteous man, that the first must have admirers, and the latter imitators. Christianity, as it is generally exhibited, has little attractive in it; and it is no wonder that the cross of Christ is not prized, as the blessings of it are not known; and they can be known and exhibited by him only who follows Christ fully.

2. It is natural for man to wish to do the work of God in his own spirit: hence he is ready to call down fire and brimstone from heaven against those who do not conform to his own views of things. A spirit of persecution is abominable. Had man the government of the world, in a short time, not only sects and parties, but even true religion itself, would be banished from the face of the earth. Meekness, long-suffering, and benevolence, become the followers of Christ; and his followers should ever consider, that his work can never be done but in his own Spirit.

CHAPTER X.

Christ appoints seventy disciples to go before him, two by two, to preach, heal, &c. 1—12. Pronounces woes on Chorazin and Capernaum, 13—16. The seventy return, and give account of their mission, 17—20. Christ rejoices that the things which were hidden from the wise and prudent, had been revealed unto babes, and shows the great privileges of the Gospel, 21—34. A lawyer inquires how he shall inherit eternal life, and is answered, 25—29. The story of the good Samaritan, 30—37. The account of Martha and Mary, 38—42. [A. M. 4032. A. D. 28. An. Olymp. CCL. 4.]

AFTER these things, the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them two and two before his face, into every city and place, whithersoever he himself would come.

h. Matt. 10. 11. Mark 6. 7.

NOTES.—Verse 1. The Lord appointed other seventy.] Rather, seventy others, not other seventy, as our translation has it, which seems to intimate that he had appointed seventy before this time, though probably, the word other, has a reference to the twelve chosen first: he not only chose twelve disciples to be constantly with him: but he chose seventy others

3 Go your ways : 4 behold, I send you forth as lambs among wolves.

5 Carry neither purse, nor scrip, nor shoes : and salute no man by the way.

6 And into whatsoever house ye enter, first say, Peace be to this house.

7 And if the son of peace be there, your peace shall rest upon it : if not, it shall turn to you again.

8 And in the same house remain, eating and drinking such things as they give : for the labourer is worthy of his hire. Go out from house to house.

9 And into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you, eat such things as are set before you :

10 And heal the sick that are therein, and say unto them, The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.

11 But into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you not, go your ways out into the streets of the same, and say, 12 Even the very dust of your city, which cleaveth on us, we do wipe off against you : notwithstanding be ye sure of this, that the kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.

13 But I say unto you, that it shall be more tolerable in that day for Sodom, than for that city.

14 Wo unto thee, Chorazin ! wo unto thee, Bethsaida ! for if the mighty works had been done in Tyre and Sidon, which have been done in you, they had a great while ago repented, sitting in sackcloth and ashes.

15 But it shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the judgment than for you.

16 And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted to heaven, shalt be thrust down to hell.

17 He that heareth you, heareth me ; and he that despiseth you, despiseth me.

18 Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall do these things that I command you, I will give unto him the keys of the kingdom of heaven : and whatsoever he shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven : and whatsoever he shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.

to go before him. Our blessed Lord formed every thing in his church on the model of the Jewish church ; and why ? Because it was the pattern shown by God himself, the divine form which pointed out the heavenly substance, which now began to be established in its place. As he before had chosen twelve apostles in reference to the twelve patriarchs, who were the chiefs of the twelve tribes and the heads of the Jewish church, he now publicly appointed (for so the word avdfoz means) seventy others, as Moses did the seventy elders whom he associated with himself, to assist him in the government of the people. Exod. xviii. 19. xiv. 1-9. These Christ sent by two and two ; 1. To teach them the necessity of concord among the ministers of righteousness. 2. That in the mouths of two witnesses every thing might be established. And 3. That they might comfort and support each other in their difficult labour. See on Mark vi. 7. Several MSS. and Versions have seventy-two. Sometimes the Jews chose six out of each tribe ; this was the number of the great sanhedrim. The names of these seventy disciples are found in the margin of some ancient MSS. But this authority is questionable.

2. That he would send forth) Εβδ'αη. There seems to be an allusion here to the case of reapers, who, though the harvest was perfectly ripe, yet were in no hurry to cut it down. News of this is brought to the lord of the harvest, the farmer, and he is entreated to exert his authority, and hurry them out ; and this he does because the harvest is spoiling, for want of being reaped and gathered in. See the notes on Matt. ix. 37, 38.

3. Lambs among wolves) See on Matt. x. 16.

4. Carry neither purse, nor scrip) See on Matt. x. 9, &c. and Mark vi. 8, &c.

Salute no man by the way) According to a canon of the Jews, a man who was about any sacred work, was exempted from all civil obligations for the time ; forasmuch as obedience to God was of infinitely greater consequence than the cultivation of private friendships, or the returning of civil compliments.

5. Peace be to this house) See on Matt. x. 12.

6. The son of peace) In the Jewish style, a man who has any good or bad quality is called the son of it. Thus wise men are called the children of wisdom. Matt. xi. 19. Luke vii. 35. So likewise, what a man is deemed to, he is called the son of, as an Eph. ii. 3. wicked man are styled the children of wrath ; so Judas is called the son of perdition. John xvii. 12. and a man who deserves to die, is called, 2 Sam. xii. 5. a son of death. Son of peace in the text, not only means a peaceable, quiet man, but one also of good report for his uprightness and benevolence. It would have been a dishonour to this mission, had the missionaries taken up their lodgings with those who had not a good report among them who were without.

7. The labourer is worthy) See on Matt. x. 8, and 12.

Go out from house to house) See on Matt. x. 11.

9. The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.) Εδ' υμας, is just upon you. This was the general text on which they were to preach all their sermons. See it explained, Matt. iii. 2.

11. Even the very dust of your city) See on Matt. x. 14, 15.

13. Wo unto thee, Chorazin !) See on Matt. xi. 21-24.

15. To hell) To hades. See this explained, Matt. xi. 23.

17. He that despiseth you, despiseth me) "The holy blessed God said : "Mencure my statutes, for they are my ambassadors ; and a man's ambassador is like to himself. If thou honour my precepts, it is the same as if thou didst honour me ; and if thou despise them, thou despisest me." R. Tancum. "He that murmurs against his teacher, is the same as if he had murmured against the divine Shekinah." Sanhedrim, fol. 110.

17 And the seventy returned again with joy, saying, Lord, even the devils are subject unto us through thy name.

18 And he said unto them, The kingdom of God as lightning fall from heaven.

19 Behold, I give unto you power to tread on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy : and nothing shall by any means hurt you.

20 Notwithstanding, in this rejoice not, that the spirits are subject unto you ; but rather rejoice, because your names are written in heaven.

21 In that hour Jesus rejoiced in spirit, and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes : even so, Father ; for so it seemed good in thy sight.

22 All things are delivered to me of my Father : and no man knoweth who the Son is, but the Father ; and who the Father is, but the Son, and he to whom the Son will reveal him.

23 And he turned him unto his disciples, and said privately, Blessed are the eyes which see the things that ye see :

24 For I tell you, that many prophets and kings have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them ; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them.

25 And, behold, a certain lawyer stood up, and tempted him, saying, Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life ?

26 He said unto him, What is written in the law ? how readest thou ?

27 And he answering, said, I Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, with all thy strength, and with all thy mind ; and thy neighbour as thyself. And he said unto him, Thou hast answered right : this do, and thou shalt live.

28 And he said unto him, What shall I do to inherit eternal life ?

29 He said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, with all thy strength, and with all thy mind ; and thy neighbour as thyself.

30 And he said unto him, What shall I do to inherit eternal life ?

31 He said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, with all thy strength, and with all thy mind ; and thy neighbour as thyself.

32 And he said unto him, What shall I do to inherit eternal life ?

33 He said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, with all thy strength, and with all thy mind ; and thy neighbour as thyself.

34 And he said unto him, What shall I do to inherit eternal life ?

35 He said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, with all thy strength, and with all thy mind ; and thy neighbour as thyself.

36 And he said unto him, What shall I do to inherit eternal life ?

37 He said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, with all thy strength, and with all thy mind ; and thy neighbour as thyself.

38 And he said unto him, What shall I do to inherit eternal life ?

39 He said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, with all thy strength, and with all thy mind ; and thy neighbour as thyself.

40 And he said unto him, What shall I do to inherit eternal life ?

41 He said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, with all thy strength, and with all thy mind ; and thy neighbour as thyself.

42 And he said unto him, What shall I do to inherit eternal life ?

43 He said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, with all thy strength, and with all thy mind ; and thy neighbour as thyself.

44 And he said unto him, What shall I do to inherit eternal life ?

God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbour as thyself.

28 And he said unto him, Thou hast answered right: this do, and thou shalt live.

29 But he, willing to justify himself, said unto Jesus, And who is my neighbour?

30 And Jesus answering said, A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves, which stripped him of his raiment, and wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead.

31 An I by chance there came down a certain priest that way: and when he saw him, he passed by on the other side.

32 And likewise a Levite, when he was at the place, came and looked on him, and passed by on the other side.

33 But a certain Samaritan, as he journeyed, came where he was: and when he saw him, he had compassion on him.

34 And went to him, and bound up his wounds, pouring in oil, and wine, and set him on his own beast, and brought him to an inn, and took care of him.

oil and wine, and set him on his own beast, and brought him to an inn, and took care of him.

35 And on the morrow when he departed, he took out two pence, and gave them to the host, and said unto him, Take care of him; and whatsoever thou spendest more, when I come again, I will repay thee.

36 Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbour unto him that fell among the thieves?

37 And he said, He that showed mercy on him. Then said Jesus unto him, Go, and do thou likewise.

38 Now it came to pass, as they went, that he entered into a certain village: and a certain woman named Martha received him into her house.

39 And she had a sister, called Mary, which also sat at Jesus' feet, and heard his word.

40 But Martha was cumbered about much serving, and came to him, and said, Lord, dost thou not care that my sister hath left me to serve alone? bid her therefore that she help me.

41 And Jesus answering saith unto her, Martha, Martha, thou art cumbered about many things, but one thing is needful.

scribes and Pharisees, who idolized their own wisdom; but thou hast revealed them to the simple and humble of heart.

22. The Codex Alexandrinus, several other very ancient MSS., and some ancient Versions, as well as the margin of our copy, begin this verse with, And turning to his disciples, he said. But as this clause varies ver. 22. it is not likely that it was originally in both. Griesbach has left these words out of the text, and Professor Winer says, certainisime delenda, "these words should most assuredly be erased."

22. All things are delivered to me See on Matt. xi. 27.

23. Blessed are the eyes which see the things that ye see There is a similar saying to this among the rabbins, in Sohar Genes. where it is said, "Blessed is that generation which the earth shall bear, when the King Messiah cometh."

24. Many prophets See on Matt. xiii. 11, and 17.

25. A certain lawyer See on Matt. xxiv. 35.

27. Thou shalt love the Lord See this important subject explained at large, on Matt. xxii. 37-40.

Thy neighbour as thyself. See the nature of self-love explained on Matt. xix. 19.

29. Willing to justify himself Wishing to make it appear that he was a righteous man; and that consequently he was in the straight road to the kingdom of God, said, who is my neighbour; supposing our Lord would have at once answered, "every Jew is to be considered as such, and the Jews only." Now as he imagined he had never been deficient in his conduct to any person of his own nation, he thought he had amply fulfilled the law. This is the sense in which the Jews understood the word neighbour, as may be seen from Lev. xxix. 15, 16, 17, and 18. But our Lord shows here, that the acts of kindness which man is bound to perform to his neighbour when in distress, he should perform to any person, of whatever nation, religion, or kindred, whom he finds in necessity. As the word ἀνεπίστος signifies one who is near, Angl. Sax. nehysta, he that is next; this very circumstance makes any person our neighbour, whom we know; and if in distress, an object of our most compassionate regards. If a man came from the most distant part of the earth, the moment he is near you, he has a claim upon your mercy and kindness, as you would have on his, were your dwelling-place transferred to his native country. It is evident, that our Lord uses the word ἀνεπίστος (very properly translated neighbour, from nas or naer, near, and duer, to dwell) in its plain literal sense. Any person whom you know, who dwells hard by, or who passes near you, is your neighbour while within your reach.

30. And Jesus answering Rather, then Jesus took him up. This I believe to be the meaning of the word εωλαβεν; he threw out a challenge, and our Lord took him up on his own ground. See WALSHLEIGH'S Testament.

A certain man went down from Jerusalem. Or, A certain man of Jerusalem going down to Jericho. This was the most public road in all Judea, as it was the grand thoroughfare between these two cities for the courses of priests, twelve thousand of whom are said to have resided at Jericho. See Lightfoot.

Fell among thieves. At this time the whole land of Judea was much infested with hordes of banditti: and it is not unlikely that many robberies might have been committed on that very road to which our Lord refers.

31. And by chance Κατα εὐτυχίαν properly means the coincidence of time and circumstance. At the time in which the poor Jew was half dead, through the wounds which he had received, a priest came where he was. So the priest's coming while the man was in that state, is the coincidence marked out by the original words.

31 and 32. Priest and Levite are mentioned here, partly because they were the most frequent travellers on this road, and partly to show that these were the persons who, from the nature of their office, were most obliged to perform works of mercy; and from whom a person in distress had a right to expect immediate succour and comfort; and their inhuman conduct here was a flat breach of the law, Deut. xxii. 1-4.

33. Samaritan is mentioned merely to show that he was a person, from whom a Jew had no right to expect any help or relief: because of the enmity which subsisted between the two nations.

34. Pouring in oil and wine These, beaten together, appear to have been used formerly, as a common medicine for fresh wounds.

An Inn Ἰαβροδοχιον, from ναβ, all, and δοχηαι, I receive. because it receives all comers.

35. Two pence ἑξάδην, about fifteen pence, English; and which, probably, were at that time of ten times more value than so much is worth us now.

36. Which was neighbour Which fulfilled the duty which one neighbour owes to another?

37. He that showed mercy Or, so much mercy. His prejudice would not permit him to name the Samaritan, yet his conscience obliged him to acknowledge that he was the only righteous person of the three.

Go, and do thou likewise. Be even to thy enemy in distress as kind, humane, and merciful, as this Samaritan was. As the distress was on the part of a Jew, and the relief was afforded by a Samaritan, the lawyer, to be consistent with the decision he had already given, must feel the force of our Lord's inference, that it was his duty to act to any person, of whatever nation or religion he might be, as this Samaritan had acted towards his countryman. It is very likely that what our Lord relates here was a real matter of fact, and not a parable; otherwise the captious lawyer might have objected that no such case had ever existed; and that any inference drawn from it was only begging the question; but as he was, in all probability, in possession of the fact himself, he was forced to acknowledge the propriety of our Lord's inference and advice.

Those who are determined to find something allegorical even in the plainest portions of Scripture, affirm that the whole of this relation is to be allegorically considered; and, according to them, the following is the true exposition of the text. The certain man means Adam—went down, his fall—from Jerusalem, εἰς τὴν γῆν ἁβυθῶν, he shall see peace, perfection, &c. meaning his state of primitive innocence and excellence—to Jericho (ἵνα γὰρ εἰσελάσῃ, his moon) the transitory and changeable state of existence in this world—Thieves, sin and Satan—stripped, took away his righteousness, which was the clothing of the soul—wounded, infected his heart with all evil and hurtful desires, which are the wounds of the spirit—half dead, possessing a living body, carrying about a soul dead in sin.

The priest, the moral law—the Levite, the ceremonial law—passed by, either could not or would not afford any relief; because by the law is the knowledge of sin, not the cure of it. A certain Samaritan, Christ; for so he was called by the Jews, John vii. 48.—as he journeyed, meaning his coming from heaven to earth; his being incarnated—came where he was, put himself in man's place, and bore the punishment due to his sin—had compassion, it is through the love and compassion of Christ that the work of redemption was accomplished—went to him, Christ first seeks the sinner, who through his miserable estate, is incapable of seeking or going to Christ—bound up his wounds, gives him comfortable promises, and draws him by his love—pouring in oil, pardoning mercy—wine, the consolations of the Holy Ghost—set him on his own beast, supported him entirely by his grace and goodness, so that he no longer lives, but Christ lives in him—took him to an inn, his church, uniting him with his people—took care of him, placed him under the continual notice of his providence and love—when he departed, when he left the world and ascended to the Father—took out two pence, or denarii, the law and the Gospel; the one to convince of sin, the other to show how it is to be removed—gave them to the host, the ministers of the Gospel for the edification of the church of Christ—take care of him, as they are God's watchmen and God's stewards, they are to watch over the flock of Christ, and give to each his portion of meat in due season. What thou spendest mere, if thou shouldst lose thy health and life in this work—when I come again, to judge the world, I will repay thee, I will reward thee with an eternity of glory.

Several primitive and modern Fathers treat the text in this way. What I have given before, is, I believe, the meaning of our blessed Lord. What I have given here is generally true in itself, but certainly does not follow from the text. Mr. Baxter's note here is good: "They who make the wounded 41 And Jesus answered and said unto her, Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things.

(Matt. 23. 1. Par. 17. 4.)

42 But <sup>one</sup> thing is needful: and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her.

(Matt. 6. 19, 21. & 16. 19. 2 Cor. 5. 14.)

man Adam, and the good Samaritan Christ, abuse the passage." A practice of this kind cannot be too strongly reprobated.

38. A certain village) If this village was Bethany, where Martha and Mary lived, at less than two miles' distance from Jerusalem, see John xi. 1, 18. xii. 2 then this must have happened later than Luke places it: because in chap. xix. 29. he represents Jesus as having arrived before this at Bethany; and what is said in chap. xiii. 22. and xvii. 11. seems to confirm that this visit of Jesus to Martha and Mary ought to be placed later. Bishop FRANCES.

Received him) Kindly received, vaschéfaro, she received him in a friendly manner under her roof; and entertained him hospitably. So the word is used in the best Greek writers. Martha is supposed by some to have been a widow, with whom her brother Lazarus and sister Mary lodged.

39. Sat at Jesus' feet) This was the posture of the Jewish scholars, while listening to the instructions of the rabbins. It is in this sense that St. Paul says he was brought up at the feet of Gamaliel, Acts xxii. 3.

40. Martha was cumbered) Ilpucanaro, perplexed, from wep, about, and eraw, I draw. She was harassed with different cares and employments at the same time; one drawing one way, and another, another. A proper description of a worldly mind: but in Martha's favour it may be justly said, that all her anxiety was to provide suitable and timely entertainment for our Lord and his disciples; for this is the sense in which the word deasoviar, servings, should be taken. And we should not, on the merest supposition, attribute earth-mindedness to a woman whose character stands unimpeachable in the Gospel; and who, by entertaining Christ and his disciples, and providing liberally for them, gave the highest proof that she was influenced by liberality and benevolence, and not by parsimony or covetousness.

Doest thou not care) Doest thou not think it wrong, that my sister thus leaves me to provide and prepare this supper alone? (Help me.) Zwaporilaβnpari, from wep, together, and avri-ayβnparoi, to support. The idea is taken from two pillars meeting together at the top, exactly over the centre of the distance between their bases, and thus mutually supporting each other. Order her to write her skill and strength with mine, that the present business may be done with that speed and in that order which the necessity and importance of the case demand.

41. Thou art careful and troubled) Thou art distracted, πνευμάς, thy mind is divided, (see on Matt. xiii. 22.) in consequence of which, ρυσθής, thou art disturbed, thy spirit is thrown into a tumult.

About many things.] Getting a variety of things ready for this entertainment, much more than are necessary on such an occasion.

42. One thing is needful) This is the end of the sentence, according to Bengel. "Now Mary hath chosen," &c. begins a new one. One single dish, the simplest and plainest possible, is such as best suits me and my disciples, whose meat and drink it is to do the will of our heavenly Father.

Mary hath chosen that good part) That is, of hearing my word, of which she shall not be deprived; it being at present of infinitely greater importance to attend to my teaching, than to attend to any domestic concerns. While thou art busily employed in providing that portion of perishing food for perishing bodies, Mary has chosen that spiritual portion, which endures for ever, and which shall not be taken away from her; therefore I cannot command her to leave her present employment, and go and help thee to bring forward a variety of matters, which are by no means necessary at this time. Our Lord both preached and practised the doctrine of self-denial; he and his disciples were contented with a little, and sumptuous entertainments are condemned by the spirit and design of his Gospel. Multos morbos, multa feracula fecerunt. SENECA. "Many dishes, many diseases."

Bishop FRANCES remarks, that the word spes, needful, is used after the same manner for want of food, in Mark xi. 26. where of David it is said, spesavi coris, he had need, when it means he was hungry. I believe the above to be the true meaning of these verses, but others have taken a somewhat different sense from them: especially when they suppose that by one thing needful, our Lord means the salvation of the soul. To attend to this, is undoubtedly the most necessary of all things, and should be the first, the grand concern of every human spirit; but in my opinion it is not the meaning of the words in the text. It is only prejudice from the common use of the words in this way that could make such an interpretation tolerable. KYPKE in loc. has several methods of interpreting this passage. Many eminent commentators, both ancient and modern, consider the text in the same way I have done. But this is termed by some "a frigid method of explaining the passage;" well, so let it be, but he that fears God will sacrifice every thing at the shrine of truth. I believe this alone to be the true meaning of the place, and I dare not give it any other. Bengelius points the whole passage thus: Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things: but one thing is needful.—Now, Mary hath chosen that good portion, which shall not be taken away from her.

That the salvation of the soul is the first and greatest of all human concerns, every man must acknowledge who feels that he has a soul: and in humility of mind to hear Jesus, is the only way of getting that acquaintance with the doctrine of salvation without which how can he be saved? While we fancy we are in no spiritual necessity, the things which concern salvation will not appear needful to us! A conviction that we are spiritually poor, must precede our application for the true riches. The whole, says Christ, need not the physician, but those who are sick.—Martha has been blamed by incautious people as possessing a carnal, worldly spirit; and as Mary Magdalene has been made the chief of all prostitutes, so has Martha of all the worldly-minded. Through her affectionate respect for our Lord and his disciples, and through that alone, she erred. There is not the slightest intimation that she was either worldly-minded, or careless about her soul: nor was she at this time improperly employed, only so far as the abundance of her affection led her to make a greater provision than was necessary on the occasion. Nor are our Lord's words to be understood as a reproof; they are a kind and tender expostulation, tending to vindicate the conduct of Mary. The utmost that can be said on the subject, is; Martha was well employed, but Mary, on this occasion, better.

CHAPTER XI.

Christ teaches his disciples to pray, 1—4. Shows the necessity of importunity in prayer, 5—13. Casts out a dumb demon, 14. The Jews ascribe this to the power of Beelzebub; our Lord vindicates his conduct, 15—23. Miserable state of the Jews, 24—26. Who they are that are truly blessed, 27, 28. He preaches to the people, 29—36. A Pharisee invites him to dine with him, who takes offence because he washed not his hands, 37, 38. Our Lord exposes their hypocrisy, 39—44. He denounces woes against the lawyers, 45—52. The scribes and Pharisees are greatly offended, and strive to entangle him in his words, 53, 54 [A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCII. 1.]

AND it came to pass, that as he was praying in a certain place, when he ceased, one of his disciples said unto him, Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples.

2 And he said unto them, When ye pray, say, "Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name, " Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, as in heaven, so in earth.

3 Give us <sup>thy</sup> day by day our daily bread.

4 And forgive us our sins; for we also forgive every one a Matt. 6. 1—b Or, for the day.

that is indebted to us. And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil.

5 And he said unto them, Which of you shall have a friend, and shall go unto him at midnight, and say unto him, Friend, lend me three loaves:

6 For a friend of mine <sup>is</sup> in his journey is come to me, and I have nothing to set before him?

7 And he from within shall answer and say, Trouble me

c Or out of his way.

NOTES.—Verse 1—5. Teach us to pray) See the nature of prayer, with an ample explanation of the different parts of the Lord's Prayer, treated of in Matt. vi. 5—15. The prayer related here by Luke is not precisely the same as that mentioned by Matthew; and indeed it is not likely that it was given at the same time. That in Matthew seems to have been given after the second pass-over, and this in Luke was given probably after the third pass-over, between the feast of Tabernacles, and the Dedication. It is thus that Bishop Newcome places them in his Greek Harmony of the Gospels.

There are many variations in the MSS. in this prayer; but they seem to have proceeded principally from the desire of rendering this similar to that in Matthew. Attempts of this nature have given birth to multitudes of the various readings in MSS. of the New Testament. It should be remarked also, that there is no vestige of the doxology found in Matthew, in any copy of St. Luke's Gospel.

4. Lead us not into temptation, &c.] Dr. Lightfoot believes that this petition is intended against the visible apparitions of the devil, and his actual obsessions: he thinks that the meaning is too much softened by our translation. Deliver us from evil, is certainly a very inadequate rendering of poiaí nhas ano tou ponrois; literally, Deliver us from the wicked one.

6. In his journey is come) Or, perhaps more literally, A friend of mine is come to me out of his way, ei odo, which renders the case more urgent—a friend of mine benighted, belated, and who has lost his way, is come unto me. This was a strong reason why he should have prompt relief.

7. My children are with me in bed) Or, I and my children are in bed: this is Bishop FRANCES's translation, and seems to be more preferable to the common one. See a like form of speech in 1 Cor. xvi. 11. and in Eph. iii. 18.—However, we may conceive that he had his little children, ra paidia, in bed not: the door is now shut, and my children are with me in bed; I cannot rise and give thee.

8 I say unto you, <sup>d</sup> Though he will not rise and give him because he is his friend, yet because of his impotency he will rise and give him as many as he needeth.

9 <sup>e</sup> And I say unto you, Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you.

10 For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened.

11 <sup>f</sup> If a son shall ask bread of any of you that is a father, will he give him a stone? or if he ask a fish, will he give him a serpent?

12 Or if he shall ask an egg, will he <sup>g</sup> offer him a scorpion?

13 If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children: how much more shall <sup>h</sup> your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?

14 <sup>i</sup> And he was casting out a devil, and it was dumb. And it came to pass, when the devil was gone out, the dumb spake; and the people wondered.

15 But some of them said, <sup>j</sup> He casteth out devils through <sup>k</sup> Beelzebub the chief of the devils.

16 And others, tempting him, <sup>l</sup> sought of him a sign from heaven.

17 <sup>m</sup> But <sup>n</sup> he, knowing their thoughts, said unto them, Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and a house divided against a house falleth.

18 If Satan also be divided against himself, how shall his kingdom stand? because ye say that I cast out devils through Beelzebub.

19 And if I by Beelzebub cast out devils, by whom do your sons cast them out? therefore shall they be your judges.

20 But if I <sup>o</sup> with the finger of God cast out devils, no doubt the kingdom of God is come upon you.

21 <sup>p</sup> When a strong man armed keepeth his palace, his goods are in peace:

22 But <sup>q</sup> when a stronger than he shall come upon him, and overcome him, he taketh from him all his armour wherein he trusted, and divideth his spoils.

23 <sup>r</sup> He that is not with me is against me: and he that gathereth not with me scattereth.

24 <sup>s</sup> When the unclean spirit is gone out of a man, he walk-eth through dry places, seeking rest; and finding none, he saith, I will return unto my house whence I came out.

25 And when he cometh, he findeth it swept and garnished.

26 Then goeth he, and taketh <sup>t</sup> to him seven other spirits more wicked than himself; and they enter in, and dwell there: and <sup>u</sup> the last state of that man is worse than the first.

27 <sup>v</sup> And it came to pass, as he spake these things, a certain woman of the company lifted up her voice, and said unto him, <sup>w</sup> Blessed is the womb that bare thee, and the paps which thou hast sucked.

28 But he said, Yea, <sup>x</sup> rather blessed are they that hear the word of God, and keep it.

29 <sup>y</sup> And when the people were gathered thick together, he began to say, This is an evil generation: they seek a sign; and there shall no sign be given it, but the sign of Jonas the prophet.

30 For as <sup>z</sup> Jonas was a sign unto the Ninevites, so shall also the Son of man be to this generation.

31 <sup>aa</sup> The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with the men of this generation, and condemn them: for she came from the utmost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and, behold, a greater than Solomon is here.

32 The men of Nineveh shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for <sup>ab</sup> they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and, behold, a greater than Jonas is here.

33 <sup>ac</sup> No man, when he hath lighted a candle, putteth it in a secret place, neither under a <sup>ad</sup> bushel, but on a candlestick, that they which come in may see the light.

34 <sup>ae</sup> The light of the body is the eye: therefore when thine eye is single, thy whole body also is full of light: but when <sup>af</sup> thine eye is evil, thy body also is full of darkness.

35 Take heed therefore that the light which is in thee be not darkness.

36 If thy whole body therefore be full of light, having no part dark, the whole shall be full of light, as when <sup>ag</sup> the bright shining of a candle doth give thee light.

37 <sup>ah</sup> And as he spake, a certain Pharisee besought him to dine with him: and he went in, and sat down to meat.

38 And <sup>ai</sup> when the Pharisee saw it, he marvelled that he had not first washed before dinner.

<sup>a</sup> Chap. 19. 1. &c.—<sup>b</sup> Matt. 7. 7. & 21. 22. Matt. 11. 24. John 15. 7. James 1. 6. [John 1. 9.—<sup>c</sup> Matt. 7. 9.—<sup>d</sup> Gr. give.—<sup>e</sup> Matt. 9. 32. & 12. 22.—<sup>f</sup> Matt. 9. 34. & 12. 24.—<sup>g</sup> Or Beelzebub, and so Verse 15, 19.—<sup>h</sup> Matt. 12. 28 & 16. 1.—<sup>i</sup> Matt. 12. 25. Mark 3. 24.—<sup>j</sup> John 7. 22.—<sup>k</sup> Exodus 8. 19.—<sup>l</sup> Matt. 12. 29. Mark 3. 27.—<sup>m</sup> Isaiah 63. 12. Colossians 2. 15.

<sup>n</sup> Matt. 12. 30.—<sup>o</sup> Matt. 12. 43.—<sup>p</sup> John 5. 14. Heb. 4. & 10. 35. <sup>q</sup> Psalm 27.—<sup>r</sup> Chap. 1. 22. & 7. 21. <sup>s</sup> Chap. 8. 21. James 1. 25.—<sup>t</sup> Matt. 12. 26. & 3. 17. & 2. 10.—<sup>u</sup> 1 Kings 10. 1.—<sup>v</sup> Jonah 3. 5.—<sup>w</sup> Matt. 5. 15. Mark 4. 21. Ch. 9. 16.—<sup>x</sup> See Matt. 5. 15.—<sup>y</sup> Matt. 6. 23.—<sup>z</sup> Or, a candle by its bright shining.—<sup>aa</sup> Matt. 7. 8.

with him; and this heightened the difficulty of yielding to his neighbour's request.

But if he persevere knocking; At si ille perseveraverit pulsans. This sentence is added to the beginning of ver. 8 by the Armenians, Vulgate, four copies of the Itala, Ambroses, Augustin, and Bede. On these authorities, (as I find it in no Greek MS.) I cannot insert it as a part of the original text; but it is necessarily implied; for as Bishop Pearce justly observes, unless the man in the parable be represented as continuing to solicit his friend, he could not possibly be said to use importunity: once only to ask, is not to be importunate.

9. And (or, therefore) I say unto you, Ask] Be importunate with God, not so much to prevail on him to save you, as to get yourselves brought into a proper disposition to receive that mercy which he is ever disposed to give. He who is not importunate for the salvation of his soul, does not feel the need of being saved: and were God to communicate his mercy to such, they could not be expected to be grateful for it: as favours are only prized and esteemed in proportion to the sense men have of their necessity and importance. See this subject explained Matt. vii. 7, 8.

12. Offer him a scorpion?] Scorpionis, the Greek etymologists derive the name from σκορπιον rov iov, scattering the poison. But is there any similitude between a scorpion and an egg; that the one might be given and taken in the place of the other? We know there is the utmost similitude between some fish, especially those of the eel kind, and serpents; and that there are stones exactly similar to bread, in their appearance; from which we may conjecture that our Lord intended to convey the same idea of similitude between an egg and a scorpion. Perhaps the word scorpion here may be used for any kind of serpent that proceeds from an egg, or the word egg may be understood: the common snake is oviparous; it brings forth a number of eggs, out of which the young ones are hatched. If he ask an egg, will he for one that might nourish him, give him that of a serpent. But Bechart states that the body of a scorpion is like to an egg, especially if it be a white scorpion, which sort Nicander, Ælian, Avicenna, and others, maintain to be the first species. Nor do scorpions differ much in size from an egg in Judea, if we may credit what the monks of Messua say, that there are about Jerusalem, and through all Syria, great scorpions, &c. Hieron. l. iv. cap. xxix. col. 641. edit. 1692. To this it may be said, there may be such a similitude between a white scorpion and an egg, if the legs and tail of the former be taken away; but how there can be a resemblance any other way, I know not.

13. The Holy Spirit] Or, as several MSS. have it, spiritus yador, the good spirit. See on Matt. vii. 11.

14. Casting out a devil] See on Matt. xii. 22.

19. Beelzebub] See on Matt. x. 25.

20. Finger of God] See on Exod. viii. 19.

24. When the unclean spirit] See on Matt. xii. 43.

27. A certain woman lifted up her voice and said] It was very natural for a woman, who was probably a mother, to exclaim thus. She thought that the happiness of the woman who was mother to such a son, was great indeed; but our blessed Lord shows her that even the holy Virgin could not be benefitted by her being the mother of his human nature; and that they only were happy who carried Christ in their hearts. true happiness is found in adoring the glad tidings of salvation by Christ Jesus, and keeping them in a holy heart, and practising them in an unblameable life.

29. This is an evil generation] Or, This is a wicked race of men. See on Matt. xii. 38—42.

31. The queen of the south, &c.] Perhaps it would be better to translate, A queen of the south, and the men of this race shall rise up in judgment, &c. See the note on ver. 7. The 32d verse may be read in the same way.

33. No man, when he hath lighted, &c.] See on Matt. v. 15. Our Lord intimates that if he worked a miracle among such an obstinate people, who were determined to disbelieve every evidence of his Messiahship; he should act as a man who lighted a candle and then covered it with a bushel, which must prevent the accomplishment of the end for which it was lighted. See also on Mark iv. 21, &c.

34. The light of the body is the eye] Or, the eye is the lamp of the body. See on Matt. vi. 22, &c.

The 35th and 36th verses are wanting in some MSS., and are variously read in others.

36. The whole shall be full of light] Or, altogether enlightened; i. e. when the eye is perfect, it enlightens the whole body. Every object, within the reach of the eye, is as completely seen as if there was an eye in every part. So the eye is to every part of the body, what the lamp is to every part of the house.

When the light of Christ dwells fully in the heart, it extends its influence to every thought, word, and action; and directs its possessor how he is to act, in all places and circumstances. It is of the utmost importance to have the soul properly influenced by the wisdom that comes from above. The doctrine that is contrary to the Gospel may say, ignorance is the mother of devotion; but Christ shows that there can be no devotion without heavenly light. Ignorance is the mother of superstition; but with this the heavenly light has nothing to do.

37. To dine] Oron apison. The word apison signifies the first eating of the day. The Jews made but two meals in the day: their apison, may be called their breakfast or their dinner, because it was both, and was but a slight meal. Their chief meal was their dinner or supper, after the heat of the day was over; and the same was the principal meal among the Greeks and Romans. Josephus, in his life, says, sect. 54

39 * And the Lord said unto him, Now do ye Pharisees make clean the outside of the cup and the platter; but your inward part is full of ravening and wickedness.

40 Ye fools, did not he that made that which is without make that which is within also?

41 * But rather give alms of such things as ye have; and, behold, all things are clean unto you.

42 * But ye unto you, Pharisees! for ye tithe mint and rue and all manner of herbe, and pass over judgment and the love of God: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone.

43 * Wo unto you, Pharisees! for ye love the uppermost seats in the synagogues, and greetings in the markets.

44 * Wo unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are as graves which appear not, and the men that walk over them are not aware of them.

45 Then answered one of the lawyers, and said unto him, Master, thus saying thou reproachest us also.

46 And he said, Wo unto you also, ye lawyers! for ye lade men with burdens grievous to be borne, and ye yourselves touch not the burdens with one of your fingers.

a Mat. 23. 17. — 1 Tim. 2. 16. — Dan. 4. 27. Ch. 12. 32. — Or, as ye are said. — Mat. 23. 23. — 1 Mat. 23. 4. — Mark 12. 33. — 1 Mat. 23. 27. — 1 Mat. 23. 29.

That the legal hour of the aparos on the Sabbath was the sixth hour, or at twelve o'clock at noon, as we call it. What the hour was on the other days of the week, he does not say; but probably it was much the same. Bishop Pearce.

47 * First washed! See on Mark vii. 2—4.

48. Ye—make clean the outside! See on Matt. xxiii. 25.

49. Did not he that made that which is without! Did not the maker of the dish form it so both outwardly and inwardly, as to answer the purpose for which it was made? And can it answer this purpose, without being clean in the inside as well as on the outside? God has made you such, both as to your bodies and souls, as he intended should show forth his praise; but can you think that the purpose of God can be accomplished by you, while you only attend to external legal sacrifices, your hearts being full of rapine and wickedness! How unthinking are you to imagine, that God can be pleased with this outward purification, when all within is unholly!

41. Give alms of such things as ye have! Meaning, either what was within the dishes spoken of before; or what was within their houses, or power; or what they had at hand, for so ra sewers is used by the purest Greek writers. Cease from rapine: far from spoiling the poor by wicked exactions, rather give them alms of every thing you possess; and when a part of every thing you have is sincerely consecrated to God, for the use of the poor, then all that remains will be clean unto you; you will have the blessing of God in your basket and store, and every thing will be sanctified to you. These verses are very difficult, and are variously translated and interpreted by critics and divines. I have given what I believe to be our Lord's meaning, in the preceding paraphrase. For a description of the rapine, &c. of the Pharisees, see on Matt. xiii. 25.

42. Ye tithe mint and rue! See on Matt. xxiii. 23.

43. Ye love the uppermost seats! Every one of them affected to be a ruler in the synagogues. See on Matt. xxiii. 5.

44. Ye are as graves which appear not! In Matt. xxiii. 27. our Lord tells them that they exactly resembled white-washed tombs, they had no fairness but on the outside: (see the note there; but here he says they are like hidden tombs, graves which were not distinguished by any outward decorations, and were not elevated above the ground, so that those who walked over them, did not consider what corruption was within: so they, under the veil of hypocrisy, covered their iniquities, so that those who had any intercourse or connexion with them, did not perceive what accomplished knaves they had to do with.

45. Thou reproachest us! He alone who searches the heart, could unmask these hypocrites; and he did it so effectually that their own consciences acknowledged their guilt, and reproached their own reproach.

46. Ye lade men with burthens! By insisting on the observance of the traditions of the elders, to which it appears, by the way, they paid no great attention themselves. See on Matt. xxiii. 4.

47. Ye build the sepulchres! That is, ye rebuild and beautify them. See on Matt. xxiii. 29.

48. Truly ye bear witness! Ye acknowledged that those of old who killed the prophets, were your fathers, and ye are about to show by your conduct towards me and my apostles, that ye are not degenerated, that ye are as capable of murdering a prophet now, as they were of old.

47 * Wo unto you! for ye build the sepulchres of the prophets, and your fathers killed them.

48 Truly ye bear witness that ye allow the deeds of your fathers: for they indeed killed them, and ye build their sepulchres.

49 Therefore also said the wisdom of God, I will send them prophets and apostles, and some of them they shall slay and persecute:

50 That the blood of all the prophets which was shed from the foundation of the world, may be required of this generation;

51 * From the blood of Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, which perished between the altar and the temple: verily I say unto you, it shall be required of this generation.

52 * Wo unto you, lawyers! for ye have taken away the key of knowledge: ye enter not in yourselves, and them that were entering in ye hindered.

53 And as he said these things unto them, the scribes and the Pharisees began to urge him vehemently, and to provoke him to speak of many things:

54 Laying wait for him, and seeking to catch something out of his mouth, that they might accuse him.

a Mat. 23. 4. — Matt. 23. 29. — Matt. 23. 34. — Gen. 4. 8. — 1 Chron. 24. 20, 21. — 1 Mat. 23. 34. — Or, forbade. — Mark 12. 13.

49. The wisdom of God! These seem to be Luke's words, and to mean, that Jesus, the wisdom of God, (as he is called, 1 Cor. i. 24.) added the words which follow here, on that occasion; and this interpretation of the words is agreeable to that of Matthew, who makes Jesus speak in his own person: wherefore behold, I send you prophets, &c. Matt. xxiii. 34. See the note there, and see Bishop Pearce.

50. That the blood! That the particle wa, may be translated so that, pointing out the event only, not the design or intention, Bishop Pearce has well shown in his note on this place, where he refers to a like use of the word in chap. ix. 45. xiv. 10. John x. 17. Rom. v. 20. xi. 11. 1 Cor. i. 15. 31, &c.

51. From the blood of Abel! See on Matt. xxiii. 34.

Required! ἐκζητήσασθαι, may be translated either by the word visited or revenged, and the latter word evidently conveys the meaning of our Lord. They are here represented as having this blood among them; and, it is intimated, that God will come by and to require it, and to inquire how it was shed, and to punish those who shed it.

52. Ye have taken away the key of knowledge! By your traditions ye have taken away the true method of interpreting the prophecies; ye have given a wrong meaning to those scriptures which speak of the kingdom of the Messiah, and the people are thereby hindered from entering into it. See on Matt. xxiii. 13.

53. Began to urge him vehemently! ἀναρτίως ἐπιτίθει, they began to be furious. They sent themselves completely unmasked in the presence of a vast concourse of people. See chap. xii. 1. (for we cannot suppose that all this conversation passed while Christ was at meat in the Pharisee's house, as Matthew, chap. xxiii. 25. shows that these words were spoken on another occasion.) They therefore question him on a variety of points, and hope by the multitude and impertinence of their questions, to puzzle or irritate him, so as to induce him to speak rashly (for this is the import of the word ἀνεπαυμαρτίως) that they might find some subject of accusation against him. See Wetstein and Kypke.

A minister of the Gospel of God should, above all men, be continent of his tongue; his enemies, in certain cases, will crowd question upon question, in order so to puzzle and confound him, that he may speak unadvisedly with his lips, and thus prejudice the truth he was labouring to promote and defend. The following is a good prayer, which all who are called to defend or proclaim the truths of the Gospel, may confidently offer to their God. "Let thy wisdom and light, O Lord, dispense their artifice and my darkness! Cast the bright beams of thy light upon those who have to defend themselves against subtle and deceitful men! Raise and animate their hearts that they may not be wanting to the cause of truth. Guide their tongue that they may not be deficient in prudence, nor expose thy truth by any indiscretions or unseasonable transports of zeal. Let meekness, gentleness, and long-suffering, influence and direct their hearts, and may they ever feel the full weight of God's truth, the weight of man's unbelief not the righteousness of God!" The following advice of one of the ancients is good: Ἐπιπέδη ἄσπετος ἡ ἀναρτίωτος, ἀναρτίωτος ἡ ἀσπετος ἐπιπέδη ἡ ἀναρτίωτος. "Stand thou firm as a beaten anvil: for it is the part of a good soldier to be slayed alive, and yet conquer."

CHAPTER XII.

Christ preaches against fidelity in publishing the Gospel, 1—5. Escites them to have confidence in Divine Providence, 6, 7. Warns them against denying him, 8, 9. Of the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, 10.—Promises direction and support in persecution, 11, 12. Warns the people against covetousness, 13—15. Parable of the rich man, 16—21. Cautions against caring cares, 22—32. The necessity of living in reference to eternity, 33—40. Effects produced by the preaching of the Gospel, 41—53. Signs of the times, 54—57. Necessity of being prepared to appear before the judgment-seat of God, 58, 59. [A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCII. 1.]

IN the mean time, when there were gathered together an innumerable multitude of people, inasmuch that they trode

one upon another, he began to say unto his disciples first of all Beware ye of the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy

NOTES.—Verse 1. An innumerable multitude of people! ἄναριθμους ἄνθρωποις, myriads of people. A myriad is ten thousand, and myriads must, at the very lowest, mean twenty thousand. But the word is often used to signify a crowd or 2<sup>d</sup> For there is nothing covered that shall not be revealed; neither hid that shall not be known.

 3 Therefore whatsoever ye have spoken in darkness, shall be heard in the light; and that which ye have spoken in the ear in closets, shall be proclaimed upon the house-tops.
 4 And I say unto you, * my friends, Be not afraid of them that kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do:
 5 But I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear: Fear him, which after he hath killed hath power to cast into hell; yea, I say unto you, Fear him.
 6 Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God?
 7 But even the very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear not, therefore; ye are of more value than many sparrows.
 8 Also I say unto you, Whosoever shall confess me before men, him shall the Son of man also confess before the angels of God:
 9 But he that denieth me before men, shall be denied before the angels of God.
 10 And whosoever shall speak a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him; but unto him that blasphemeth against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven.
 11 And when they bring you unto the synagogues, and unto magistrates and powers, take ye no thought how or what thing ye shall answer, or what ye shall say:
 12 For the Holy Ghost shall teach you in the same hour what ye ought to say.
 13 And one of the company said unto him, Master, speak to my brother, that he divide the inheritance with me.
 14 And he said unto him, Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you?

* Matt. 10. 26. Mark 4. 22. Ch. 8. 17.—d. Matt. 16. 26. In 51. 7, 8, 12, 13. Jer. 1. 8.—John 15. 14, 15.—See Matthew 10. 29.—Matt. 10. 32. Mark 8. 38. 2 Tim. 2. 12. John 2. 23.—h. Matt. 18. 31, 32. Mark 2. 26. 1 John 5. 16.—i. Matt. 10. 19. Mark 12. 11. Ch. 8. 14.

multitude which cannot be readily numbered. There was, doubtless, a vast crowd assembled on this occasion, and many of them were deeply instructed by the very important discourses which our Lord delivered.

Leaven of the Pharisees] See Matt. xvi. 1—12. Which is hypocrisy.] These words are supported by some to be an addition to the text, because it does not appear that it is their hypocrisy which Christ alludes to, but their false doctrines. They had, however, a large portion of both.

2. There is nothing covered] See the notes on Matt. v. 15. x. 26. 27. Mark iv. 22.

4. Kill the body] See on Matt. x. 28.

5. Fear him! Even the friends of God are commanded to fear God, as a being who has authority to send both body and soul into hell. Therefore it is proper even for the most holy persons to maintain a fear of God, as the punisher of all unrighteousness. A man has but one life to lose, and one soul to save; and it is madness to sacrifice the salvation of the soul to the preservation of the life.

6. Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings?] See this explained on Matt. x. 29. from which place we learn that two sparrows were sold for one farthing, and here that five were sold for two farthings: thus we find a certain proportion: for one farthing you could get but two, while for two farthings you could get five.

7. Fear not, therefore] Want of faith in the providence and goodness of God, is the source of all human inquietudes and fears. He has undertaken to save and defend those to the uttermost who trust in him. His wisdom cannot be surprised, his power cannot be forced, his love cannot forget itself. Man distrusts God, and fears that he is forgotten by him, because he judges of God by himself; and he knows that he is apt to forget his Maker, and be unfaithful to him. See on Matt. x. 29—31.

8. Shall confess] See on Matt. x. 22, 33.

10. Him that blasphemeth] See the sin against the Holy Ghost explained, Matt. xii. 32.

11. Unto magistrates and powers] See Matt. x. 17—20. Take ye no thought] See Matt. vi. 25. x. 19.

12. Speak to my brother, that he divide] Among the Jews, the children had the inheritance of their fathers divided among them; the eldest had a double portion, but all the rest had equal parts. It is likely the person complained of in the text, was the elder brother; and he wished to keep the whole to himself, a case which is far from being uncommon. The spirit of covetousness cancels all bonds and obligations; makes wrong right, and cares nothing for father or brother.

14. A judge] Without some judgment given in the case, no division could be made, therefore Jesus added the word judge. Pharisee. A minister of Christ ought not to concern himself with secular affairs, any farther than charity and the order of discipline require it. Our Lord could have decided this difference in a moment; but the example of a perfect disengagement from worldly things was more necessary for the ministers of his church, than that of a clarity applying itself to temporal concerns. He who preaches salvation to all should never make himself a party man; otherwise he loses the confidence, and consequently the opportunity of doing good to the party against whom he decides. Better to leave all these things to the civil magistrate, unless where a lawsuit may be prevented, and the matter decided to the satisfaction or acquiescence of both parties.

18. Beware of covetousness] Or rather, beware of all in-

15 And he said unto them, Take heed, and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth.

16 And he spake a parable unto them, saying, the ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully:

17 And he thought within himself, saying, What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits?

18 And he said, This will I do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods.

19 And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry.

20 But God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee; then whose shall those things be which thou hast provided?

21 So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God.

22 And he said unto his disciples, Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat; neither for the body, what ye shall put on.

23 The life is more than meat, and the body is more than raiment.

24 Consider the ravens, for they neither sow nor reap; which neither have storehouse nor barn; and God feedeth them: how much more are ye better than the fowls?

25 And which of you with taking thought can add to his stature one cubit?

26 If ye then be not able to do that thing which is least, why take ye thought for the rest?

27 Consider the lilies how they grow: they toil not, they spin

John 18. 26—11 Tim. 6. 7. See—n. Eccles. 11. 19. For 1. 11. 12. 1 Cor. 15. 32. James 5. 3. n. Or, in they require thy soul. Job 31. 22 & 27 B. Psa. 52. 7. James 4. 14.—p. Ps. 39. 6. Jer. 17. 11.—q. Matt. 6. 20. Verse 33. 1 Tim. 6. 18, 19. James 5. 3.—r. Matt. 6. 25.—s. Job 35. 41. Psa. 147. 9.

ordinate desires.] All things, all, on the authority of ABD-KLM—Q, twenty-three others, both the Syrian, all the Persian, all the Arabic, Coptic, Ethiopic, Armenian, Vulgate, all the Italian, and several of the primitive Fathers.

Inordinate desires.] Ἰλαστικῶς, from ἵλαστος, more, and εἶναι, to have, the desire to have more and more, let a person possess whatever he may. Such a disposition of mind is never satisfied; for as soon as one object is gained, the heart goes out after another.

Consisteth not in the abundance] That is, dependeth not on the abundance. It is not superfluities that support man's life, but necessities. What is necessary, God gives liberally: what is superfluous, he has not promised. Nor can a man's life be preserved by the abundance of his possessions: to prove this he spoke the following parable.

16. The ground of a certain rich man, &c.] He had generally what is called good luck in his farm, and this was a remarkably plentiful year.

17. He thought within himself] Began to be puzzled in consequence of the increase of his goods. Riches, though ever so well acquired, produce nothing but vexation and embarrassment.

18. I will pull down, &c.] The rich are full of designs, concerning this life; but in general take no thought about eternity till the time that their goods and their lives are both taken away.

19. Soul, thou hast much goods] Great possessions are generally accompanied with pride, idleness, and luxury; and these are the greatest enemies to salvation. Moderate poverty, as one justly observes, is a great talent in order to salvation; but it is one which nobody desires.

Take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry.] This was exactly the creed of the ancient sissets and epicureans. Ede, bibi, laude; post mortem nulla voluptas. What a wretched portion for an immortal spirit! and yet those who know not God have no other, and many of them not even this.

20. Thou fool!] To imagine that a man's comfort and peace can depend upon temporal things! or to suppose that these can satisfy the wishes of an immortal spirit.

This night] How awful was this saying! He had just made the necessary arrangements for the gratification of his sensual appetites; and in the very night in which he had finally settled all his plans, his soul was called into the eternal world! What a dreadful awakening of a soul, long asleep in sin! He is now hurried into the presence of his Maker, none of his worldly goods can accompany him, and he has not a particle of heavenly treasure! There is a passage much like this in the book of Ecclesiasticus, chap. xi. 18, 19. "There is that waxeth rich by his wisdom and pinching, and this is the portion of his reward: Whereas he saith, I have found rest, and now will eat continually of my goods; and yet he knoweth not what time shall come upon him; and that he must leave these things to others and die." We may easily see whence the above is borrowed.

21. So is he] That is, thus will it be. This is not an individual case; all who make this life their portion, and who are destitute of the peace and salvation of God, shall, sooner or later, be surprised in the same way.

Layeth up treasure for himself] This is the essential characteristic of a covetous man; he desires riches; he gets them; he lays them up, not for the necessary uses to which they might be devoted, but for himself; to please himself, and to not; and yet I say unto you, that Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these.

25 If then God so clothe the grass, which is to-day in the field, and to-morrow is cast into the oven; how much more will he clothe you, O ye of little faith!

26 And seek not ye what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, neither be ye of doubtful mind.

27 For all these things do the nations of the world seek after: and your Father knoweth that ye have need of these things.

28 But rather seek ye the kingdom of God; and all these things shall be added unto you.

29 Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom.

30 I tell that ye have, and give alms; provide yourselves bags which wax not old, a treasure in the heavens that faileth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth.

31 For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

32 Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning;

33 And ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their lord, when he will return from the wedding; that when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately.

34 Blessed are those servants, whom the lord when he cometh shall find watching: verily I say unto you, that he shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them.

35 And if he shall come in the second watch, or come in the third watch, and find them so, blessed are those servants.

36 And this know, that if the good man of the house had known what hour the thief would come, he would have watched, and not have suffered his house to be broken through.

40 Be ye therefore ready also: for the Son of man cometh at an hour when ye think not.

41 Then Peter said unto him, Lord, speak thou this parable unto us, or even to all?

42 And the Lord said, Who then is that faithful and wise steward, whom his lord shall make ruler over his household, to give them their portion of meat in due season?

43 Blessed is that servant, whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing.

44 Of a truth I say unto you, that he will make him ruler over all that he hath.

45 But and if that servant say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to beat the men-servants and maidens, and to eat and drink, and to be drunken;

46 The lord of that servant will come in a day when he looketh not for him, and at an hour when he is not aware, and will cut him in sunder, and will appoint him his portion with the unbelievers.

47 And that servant, which knew his lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes.

48 But he that knew not, and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes. For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required: and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more.

37 Blessed are those servants, whom the lord when he cometh shall find watching: verily I say unto you, that he shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them.

38 And if he shall come in the second watch, or come in the third watch, and find them so, blessed are those servants.

39 And this know, that if the good man of the house had known what hour the thief would come, he would have watched, and not have suffered his house to be broken through.

40 Be ye therefore ready also: for the Son of man cometh at an hour when ye think not.

41 Then Peter said unto him, Lord, speak thou this parable unto us, or even to all?

42 And the Lord said, Who then is that faithful and wise steward, whom his lord shall make ruler over his household, to give them their portion of meat in due season?

43 Blessed is that servant, whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing.

44 Of a truth I say unto you, that he will make him ruler over all that he hath.

45 But and if that servant say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to beat the men-servants and maidens, and to eat and drink, and to be drunken;

46 The lord of that servant will come in a day when he looketh not for him, and at an hour when he is not aware, and will cut him in sunder, and will appoint him his portion with the unbelievers.

47 And that servant, which knew his lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes.

48 But he that knew not, and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes. For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required: and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more.

35. Be active, diligent, determined, ready; let all hindrances be removed out of the way; and let the candle of the Lord be always found burning brightly in your hand. See on ver. 37.

36. That wait for their lord] See the notes on Matt. xxv. 1, &c.

The wedding] How the Jewish weddings were celebrated, see in the notes on Matt. viii. 12. xxii. 13.

37. He shall gird himself] Alluding to the long garments which were worn in the eastern countries; and which, in travelling and serving, were tucked up in their belts. That those among the Romans who waited on the company at table were girded, and had their clothes tucked up, appears from what Horace says, Sat. b. vi. l. 107. veluti stucocrotos curasit hospes, he runs about like a girded waiter; the host himself often performed this office. And Ivid. viii. 10. puer alii cinctus: and that the same custom prevailed among the Jews, appears from John xii. 4, 5, and Luke xvii. 8. From this verse we may gather likewise that it was the custom of those days, as it was, not long since, among us, for the bridegroom, at the wedding supper, to wait as a servant upon the company. See Bishop Pearce.

38. If he shall come in the second watch] See the note on Matt. xiv. 25.

40. Be ye therefore ready also] It is pretty evident that what is related here from verse 35 to 43, was spoken by our Lord at another time. See Matt. xxiv. 42, &c. and the notes there.

42. Faithful and wise steward] See on Matt. xxiv. 45, where the several parts of the steward's office are mentioned and explained.—Those appear to have been stewards among the Jews, whose business it was to provide all the members of a family, not only with food, but with raiment.

45. Begin to beat, &c.] See the different parts of this bad minister's conduct pointed out on Matt. xxiv. 48, 49.

46. With the unbelievers.] Or rather, the unfaithful: rov ariswv. Persons who had the light and knowledge of God's word; but made an improper use of the privileges they received. The persons mentioned here, differ widely from unbelievers or infidels, viz. those who were in a state of heathenism, because they had not the revelation of the Most High the latter knew not the will of God, ver. 43, and though they acted against it, did not do it in obstinacy: the former knew that will, and daringly opposed it. They were unfaithful, and therefore heavily punished.

47. Shall be beaten with many stripes.] Criminals among the Jews could not be beaten with more than forty stripes; and as this was the sum of the severity to which a whipping could extend, it may be all that our Lord here means.—But in some cases a man was adjudged to receive fourscore stripes! How could this be, when the law had decreed only forty? Answer. By doubling the crime. He received forty for each crime; if he were guilty of two offences, he might receive fourscore. See Lightfoot.

48. Shall be beaten with few] For petty offences the Jews in many cases inflicted no less than four, five, and six stripes. See examples in Lightfoot.

From this and the preceding verse we find, that it is a crime to be ignorant of God's will; because to every one God has given less or more of the means of instruction. Those who have had much light, or the opportunity of receiving much, and have not improved it to their own salvation, and the good of others, shall have punishment proportioned to the light they have abused. On the other hand, those who have had little light, and few means of improvement, shall have gratify his various soul. Such a person is commonly called a miser, i. e. literally, a wretched, miserable man.

22. Take no thought] Be not anxiously careful. See on Matt. vi. 25.

25. To his stature one cubit?] See on Matt. vi. 27.

29. Into the oven] See the note on Matt. vi. 30.

29. Neither be ye of doubtful mind.] Or, in anxious suspense, an ariswv. Raphaelus gives several examples to prove that the meaning of the word is, to have the mind agitated with useless thoughts and vain imaginations concerning food, raiment, and riches, accompanied with perpetual uncertainty.

36. The nations of the world seek after] Or, earnestly seek, arizwv, from arw, above, over, and izwv, I seek: to seek one thing after another, to be continually and eagerly coveting. This is the employment of the nations of this world, utterly regardless of God and eternity! It is the essence of heathenism to live only for this life; and it is the property of Christianity to lead men to live here in reference to another and better world. Reader! how art thou living?

Dr. Lightfoot observes on this place, that kosmos, the world, and aiwv, world or age, have a meaning in the Sacred Writings which they have not in profane authors. Aiwv, has relation to the Jewish ages, and kosmos to the ages that are not Jewish: hence by avvaxia rov aiwvov, Matt. xxiv. 3, is meant the end of the Jewish age or world; and ro xporov aiwviov, Tit. i. 2 means before the Jewish world began; and hence it is that the term world is very often, in the New Testament, to be understood only of the Gentiles.

32. Fear not, little flock] Or, very little flock, ro steyvov swviov. This is what some term a double diminutive, and literally translated, is, little little flock. Though this refers solely to the apostles and first believers, of whom it was literally true, yet we may say that the number of genuine believers has been, and is still, small in comparison of heathens and false Christians.

It is your Father's good pleasure] Evdoxovv, it hath pleased, &c. though this tense joined with an infinitive, has often the force of the present. Our Lord intimates, God has already given you that kingdom which consists in righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost, and has undertaken to protect and save you to the uttermost: therefore fear not, the smallness of your number cannot hurt you, for omnipotence itself has undertaken your cause.

33. Beh that ye have] Dispose of your goods. Be not like the foolish man already mentioned, who laid up the produce of his fields, without permitting the poor to partake of God's bounty: turn the fruits of your fields (which are beyond what you need for your own support) into money, and give it in alms, and the treasure thus laid out, shall be as laid up for yourselves and families in heaven. This treasure shall not grow old, and this treasure shall not decay. Ye shall, by and by, find both the place where you laid up the treasure, and the treasure itself in the place; for he who hath pity on the poor, lovedeth unto the Lord: and he may rest assured, that whatever, for Christ's sake, he thus lays out, it will be paid him again.

34. Where your treasure is] Men fix their hearts on their treasures, and often resort to the place where they have deposited them, to see that all is safe and secure. Let God be the treasure of your soul, and let your heart go frequently to the place where his honour dwelleth. There is a curious parable placed to this in Plautus, quoted by Bishop Pearce, on Matt. vi. 21. Nam ego sum hic; animus domi est, sc. cum argenteo meo. "I am here; but my heart is at home, i. e. with my money."

49 ¶ I am come to send fire on the earth; and what will I, if it be already kindled?
 50 But I have a baptism to be baptized with; and how am I straitened till it be accomplished?
 51 ¶ Suppose ye that I am come to give peace on earth? I tell you, Nay; but rather division:
 52 ¶ For from henceforth there shall be five in one house divided, three against two, and two against three.
 53 The father shall be divided against the son, and the son against the father; the mother against the daughter, and the daughter against the mother; the mother-in-law against her daughter-in-law, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law.
 54 ¶ And he said also to the people, ¶ When ye see a cloud rise out of the west, straightway ye say, There cometh a shower; and so it is.

 55 And when ye see the south wind blow, ye say, There will be heat; and it cometh to pass.
 56 Ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky and of the earth; but how is it that ye do not discern this time?
 57 ¶ Yes, and why even of yourselves judge ye not what is right?
 58 ¶ When thou goest with thine adversary to the magistrate, as a thou art in the way, give diligence that thou mayest be delivered from him; lest he hale thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and the officer cast thee into prison.
 59 I tell thee, thou shalt not depart thence, till thou hast paid the very last mite.

few stripes, shall be punished only for the abuse of the knowledge they possessed.—See at the end of the chapter.

thing in thy power to get free before a suit commences. The officer] ἑσπέρω properly signifies such an officer as was appointed to levy the ἀξες imposed by the law for a violation of any of its precepts. See Κρυπ.

49. I am come to send fire] See this subject largely explained on Matt. x. 34, &c. From the connexion in which these words stand, both in this place and in Matthew, it appears as if our Lord intended by the word fire, not only the consuming influence of the Roman sword, but also the influence of his own Spirit in the destruction of sin. In both these senses this fire was already kindled: as yet, however, it appeared but as a spark, but was soon to break out into an all-consuming flame.

56. Till thou hast paid the very last mite.] And when can this be, if we understand the text spiritually? Can weeping, writhing, and gnashing of teeth, pay to divine justice the debt a sinner has contracted? This is impossible: let him who readeth understand.

60. But I have a baptism] The fire, though already kindled, cannot burn up till after the Jews have put me to death: then the Roman sword shall come, and the spirit of judgment, burning, and purification, shall be poured out.

The subject of the 47th and 48th verses has been greatly misunderstood, and has been used in a very dangerous manner. Many have thought that their ignorance of divine things would be a sufficient excuse for their crimes; and that they might have but few stripes, they voluntarily continued in ignorance. But such persons should know that God will judge them for the knowledge they might have received, but refused to acquire. No criminal is excused, because he has been ignorant of the laws of his country, and so transgressed them, when it can be proved that those very laws have been published throughout the land. Much knowledge is a dangerous thing, if it be not improved; as this will greatly aggravate the condemnation of its possessor. Nor will it avail a person, in the land of light and information, to be ignorant, as he shall be judged for what he might have known, and, perhaps in this case, the punishment of this voluntarily ignorant man will be even greater than that of the more enlightened; because his crimes are aggravated by this consideration, that he refused to have the light, that he might neither be obliged to walk in the light, nor account for the possession of it. So we find that the plea of ignorance is a mere refuge of lies, and none can plead it who has the book of God within his reach; and lives in a country blessed with the preaching of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

51. To give peace] See Matt. x. 34.

59. I tell thee, thou shalt not depart thence, till thou hast paid the very last mite.]

52. Five in one house divided] See on Matt. x. 25, 26.

60. But I have a baptism] See on Matt. x. 25, 26.

54. A cloud rise] See on Matt. xvi. 2, 3.

61. To give peace] See Matt. x. 34.

56. This time? Can ye not discover from the writings of the prophets, and from the events which now take place: that this is the time of the Messiah, and that I am the very person foretold by them?

62. For from henceforth there shall be five in one house divided, three against two, and two against three.]

57. And why—judge ye] Even without the express declarations of the prophets, ye might, from what ye see and hear yourselves, discern that God has now visited his people in such a manner as he never did before.

63. The father shall be divided against the son, and the son against the father; the mother against the daughter, and the daughter against the mother; the mother-in-law against her daughter-in-law, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law.]

58. When thou goest with thine adversary] This and the next verse are a part of our Lord's sermon upon the mount. See them explained Matt. v. 25, 26. St. Luke is very particular in collecting and relating every word and action of our blessed Lord, but seldom gives them in the order of time in which they were spoken or done. See the Preface to this Gospel.

64. And he said also to the people, ¶ When ye see a cloud rise]

Give diligence] δοῦς ἐπιγνῶν, give labour, do every thing in thy power to get free before a suit commences.]

CHAPTER XIII.

Christ preaches the necessity of repentance, from the punishment of the Galileans massacred by Pilate, 1—3. And by the death of those on whom the tower in Siloam fell, 4, 5. The parable of the barren fig-tree, 6—9. Christ cures a woman who had been afflicted eighteen years, 10—13. The ruler of the synagogue is healed, and is reproved by our Lord, 14—17. The parable of the mustard seed, 18, 19; of the leaven, 20, 21. His journey towards Jerusalem, and preaches, 22. The question, Are there few saved? and our Lord's answer, with the discourse thereon, 23—30. He is informed that Herod purposes to kill him, 31, 32. Predicts his own death at Jerusalem, and denounces judgments on that impudent city, 33—35. [A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCII. 1.]

THERE were present at that season some that told him of the Galileans, whose blood Pilate had mingled with their sacrifices.

4 Or those eighteen, upon whom the tower in Siloam fell, and slew them, think ye that they were sinners above all men that dwell in Jerusalem?

2 And Jesus answering said unto them, Suppose ye that these Galileans were sinners above all the Galileans, because they suffered such things?

5 I tell you, Nay; but, except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish.

3 I tell you, Nay; but except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish.

6 ¶ He spake also this parable; ¶ A certain man had a fig-tree planted in his vineyard; and he came and sought fruit thereon, and found none.

NOTES.—Verse 1. At that season] At what time this happened is not easy to determine; but it appears that it was now a piece of news which was told to Christ and his disciples for the first time.

6 ¶ He spake also this parable; ¶ A certain man had a fig-tree planted in his vineyard; and he came and sought fruit thereon, and found none.

Whose blood Pilate had mingled] This piece of history is not recorded (as far as I find) by Josephus; however, he states that the Galileans were the most seditious people in the land: they belonged properly to Herod's jurisdiction, but as they kept the great feasts at Jerusalem, they probably, by their tumultuous behaviour at some one of them, gave Pilate, who was a mortal enemy to Herod, a pretext to fall upon and slay many of them; and thus perhaps sacrifice the people to the resentment he had against the prince. Archelaus is represented by Josephus as sending his soldiers into the temple, and slaying 3000 men while they were employed in offering sacrifices. Josephus, War, b. ii. c. 1. a. 3. and li. c. 5. Some suppose that this refers to the followers of Judas Gaulonites, (see Acts v. 37.) who would not acknowledge the Roman government, a number of whom Pilate surrounded, and slew while they were sacrificing in the temple. See Josephus, Antiq. lib. 13. but this is not very certain.

6 ¶ He spake also this parable; ¶ A certain man had a fig-tree planted in his vineyard; and he came and sought fruit thereon, and found none.

4. The tower in Siloam] This tower was probably built over one of the porticoes near the pool, which is mentioned John ix. 7. See also Neh. iii. 13.

6 ¶ He spake also this parable; ¶ A certain man had a fig-tree planted in his vineyard; and he came and sought fruit thereon, and found none.

Debtors, οφειληται, a Jewish phrase for sinners. Persons professing to be under the law, are bound by the law to be obedient to all its precepts; those who obey not are reckoned

6 ¶ He spake also this parable; ¶ A certain man had a fig-tree planted in his vineyard; and he came and sought fruit thereon, and found none.

7 Then said he unto the dresser of his vineyard, Behold, these three years I come seeking fruit on this fig-tree, and find none: cut it down; why cumberest thou the ground?

8 And he answering said unto him, Lord, let it alone this year also, till I shall dig about it, and dung it.

9 And if it bear fruit, well: and if not, then after that thou shalt cut it down.

10 And he was teaching in one of the synagogues on the sabbath.

11 And behold, there was a woman which had a spirit of infirmity eighteen years, and was bowed together, and could in no wise lift up herself.

12 And when Jesus saw her, he called her to him, and said unto her, Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity.

13 And he laid his hands on her: and immediately she was made straight, and glorified God.

14 And the ruler of the synagogue answered with indignation, because that Jesus had healed on the sabbath day; and said unto the people, There are six days in which men ought to work: in them therefore come and be healed, and not on the sabbath day.

15 The Lord then answered him and said, Thou hypocrite, doth not each one of you on the sabbath loose his ox or his ass from the stall, and lead him away to watering?

16 And ought not this woman, being a daughter of Abraham, whom Satan hath bound, lo, these eighteen years, be loosed from this bond on the sabbath day?

1. Mark 14. 12. Acts 9. 17. — Ex. 20. 9. — Matt. 12. 10. Mark 9. 2. Ch. 6. 7. & 14. 3. Ch. 14. 2. — Ch. 19. 5. — 1. Matt. 13. 20. Mark 4. 30. — See Matt. 43. 33. — Matt. 13. Mark 6. 6. — 2. Ed. 2. 1. 3. — Matt. 7. 12.

particular instances, a general specimen of the punishment that awaits all the persevering impenitent.

6. A certain man] Many meanings are given to this parable, and divines may abound in them; the sense which our Lord designed to convey by it, appears to be the following.

1. A person, viz, God Almighty. 2. Had a fig-tree, the Jewish church. 3. Planted in his vineyard, established in the land of Judea. 4. He came seeking fruit, he required that the Jewish people should walk in righteousness, in proportion to the spiritual culture he bestowed on them. 5. The vine-dresser, the Lord Jesus, for God hath committed all judgment to the Son, John v. 22. 6. Cut it down, let the Roman sword be unsheathed against it. 7. Let it alone, Christ is represented as intercessor for sinners, for whose sake the day of their probation is often lengthened; during which time he is constantly employed in doing every thing that has a tendency to promote their salvation. 8. Thou shalt cut it down: a time will come, that those who have not turned at God's invitations and reproofs, shall be cut off and numbered with the transgressors.

7. Behold, these three years] From this circumstance in the parable, it may be reasonably concluded that Jesus had been, at the time of saying this, exercising his ministry for three years past, and, from what is said in verse 8, of letting it alone this year also, it may be concluded likewise that this parable was spoken about a year before Christ's crucifixion; and if both these conclusions are reasonable, we may thence infer that this parable was not spoken at the time which appears to be assigned to it: and that the whole time of Christ's public ministry was about four years. See Bishop Pearce. But it has already been remarked that St. Luke never studies chronological arrangement. See the Preface to this Gospel.

Why cumberest thou the ground?] Or, in other words, why should the ground be also useless. The tree itself brings forth no fruit; let it be cut down that a more profitable one may be planted in its place. Cut it down. The Codex Bezae has added here, per te ipsum, bring the axe and cut it down. If this reading be genuine, it is doubtless an allusion to Matt. 11. 10. Now the axe lieth at the root of the trees; if the writer has added it on his own authority, he probably referred to the place above-mentioned. See the note on the above text.

11. A woman which had a spirit of infirmity] Relative to this subject three things may be considered. I. The woman's infirmity. II. Her cure. And, III. The conduct of the ruler of the synagogue on the occasion.

I. The woman's infirmity. 1. What was its origin? Six. Had this never entered into the world, there had not been either pain, distortion, or death. 2. Who was the agent in it? Satan; ver. 16. God has often permitted demons to act on and in the bodies of men and women; and it is not improbable that the principal part of unaccountable and inexplicable disorders, still come from the same source. 3. What was the nature of this infirmity? She was bowed together, bent down to the earth, a situation equally painful and humiliating: the violence of which she could not support, and the shame of which she could not conceal. 4. What was the duration of this infirmity? Eighteen years. A long time to be under the constant and peculiar influence of the devil. 6. What was the effect of this infirmity? The woman was so bowed together, that she could in no case stand straight, or look toward heaven.

II. The woman's cure. 1. Jesus saw her, ver. 12. Notwithstanding her infirmity was great, painful, and shameful, she took care to attend the synagogue. While she hoped for help from God, she saw it was her duty to wait in the appointed way, in order to receive it. Jesus saw her distress, and the desire she had both to worship her Maker, and to get 17 And when he had said these things, all his adversaries were ashamed: and all the people rejoiced for all the glorious things that were done by him.

18 Then said he, Unto what is the kingdom of God like? and whereunto shall I resemble it?

19 It is like a grain of mustard-seed, which a man took, and cast into his garden; and it grew, and waxed a great tree; and the fowls of the air lodged in the branches of it.

20 And again he said, Whereunto shall I liken the kingdom of God?

21 It is like leaven, which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened.

22 And he went through the cities and villages teaching, and journeying towards Jerusalem.

23 Then said one unto him, Lord, are there few that be saved? And he said unto them, 24 Strive to enter in at the strait gate: for a few, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able.

25 When once the master of the house is risen up, and hath shut to the door, and ye begin to stand without, and to knock at the door, saying, Lord, Lord, open unto us; and he shall answer and say unto you, I know you not whence ye are:

26 Then shall ye begin to say, We have eaten and drunk in thy presence, and thou hast taught in our streets.

27 But he shall say, I tell you, I know you not whence ye are: depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity.

28 There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye her health restored, and his eye affected his heart. 2. He called her to him. Her heart and her distress spoke loudly, though her lips were silent; and as she was thus calling for help, Jesus calls her to himself that she may receive help. 3. Jesus laid his hands on her. The hand of his holiness typifies, and the hand of his power expels the demon. Ordinances, however excellent, will be of no avail to a sinner, unless he apprehend Christ in them. 4. Immediately she was made straight, ver. 13. This cure was, 1. A speedy one—it was done in an instant. 2. It was a perfect one—she was made completely whole. 3. It was a public one—there were many to attest and render it credible. 4. It was a stable and permanent one—she was loosed, for ever loosed from her infirmity. 5. Her soul partook of the good done to her body—she glorified God. As she knew before that it was Satan who had bowed her, she knew also that it was God only that could loose her; and now, feeling that she is loosed, she gives God that honour which is due to his name.

1. See John 7. 34. & 8. 21. & 13. 33. Rom. 9. 31. — 1. Pa. 26. 6. Isa. 65. 5. — Matt. 23. 10. — Ch. 6. 45. — Matt. 7. 23. & 12. 12. — Matt. 7. 23. & 23. 41. Ver. 23. — Pa. 6. 6. Matt. 25. 41. — Matt. 5. 12. & 13. 42. & 24. 51. — Matt. 5. 11.

III. The conduct of the ruler of the synagogue on the occasion. 1. He answered with indignation, ver. 14. It would seem as if the demon who had left the woman's body, had got into his heart. It is not an infrequent case to find a person filled with rage and madness, while beholding the effects of Christ's power upon others. Perhaps, like this ruler, he pretends zeal and concerns for the honour of religion: "These preachings, prayer-meetings, convulsions, conversions, &c. are not carried on in his way, and therefore they cannot be of God." Let such take care, lest while denying the operation of God's hand, they be given up to demonic influence. 2. He endeavoured to prevent others from receiving the kind help of the blessed Jesus—He said unto the people, &c. ver. 14. Men of this character, who have extensive influence over the poor, &c. do immense harm: they often hinder them from hearing that word which is able to save their souls. But for this also, they must stand before the judgment-seat of Christ. Reader, hast thou ever acted in this way? 3. Jesus retorts his condemnation with peculiar force: ver. 15, 16. Thou hypocrite—to pretend zeal for God's glory, when it is only the workings of the malicious, unfeeling, and uncharitable heart. Wouldst thou not even take thy ass to water upon the Sabbath day? and wouldst thou deprive a daughter of Abraham, (one of thy own nation and religion,) of the mercy and goodness of God upon the Sabbath? Was not the Sabbath instituted for the benefit of man? 4. His adversaries were ashamed, ver. 17. The mask of their hypocrisy, the only covering they had, is taken away; and now they are exposed to the just censure of that multitude whom they deceived, and from whom they expected continual applause. 5. His indignation and uncharitable censure, not only turn to his own confusion, but are made the instruments of the edification of the multitude—they rejoiced at all the glorious things which he did. Thus, O Lord! the wrath of man shall praise thee, and the remainder thereof thou shalt restrain. A preacher will know how to apply this subject to general edification.

18, 19. The kingdom is like a grain of mustard-seed] See on Matt. xiii. 31.

21. Like leaven] See this explained, Matt. xiii. 33.

22. Journeying towards Jerusalem.] Luke represents all that is said, from chap. ix. 51. as having been done, and spoken while Christ was on his last journey to Jerusalem. See the note on chap. ix. 51. and xii. 51. and see the Preface.

23. Are there few that be saved?] A question either of impatience or curiosity, the answer to which can profit no man. The grand question is, Can I be saved? Yes. How? strive earnestly to enter in through the strait gate—aye-wake, agonize—exert every power of body and soul—let your salvation be the grand business of your whole life.

shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust out.

29 And they shall come from the east, and from the west, and from the north, and from the south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God.

30 And behold, there are last which shall be first, and there are first which shall be last.

31 The same day there came certain of the Pharisees, saying unto him, Get thee out, and depart hence; for Herod will kill thee.

32 And he said unto them, Go ye and tell that fox, Behold, I do so. Mat. 10. 33. & 23. 16. Mark 10. 34. — Heb. 2. 10. — Matt. 23. 37. — Lev. 25. 31, 32. Ps. 90. 15. Isa. 1. 7. Dan. 9. 27. Micah 3. 12.

33 Many—will seek] They seek—wish and desire; but they do not strive: therefore, because they will not agonize—will not be in earnest, they shall not get in. See this subject more particularly explained on Matt. vii. 13, 14.

34 And hath shut to the door] See the notes on Matt. vii. 22, 23, and xxv. 10, 11—41.

35 Abraham, and Isaac, &c.] See on Matt. viii. 12, where the figures and allusions made use of here are particularly explained.

36 They shall come] That is, the Gentiles in every part of the world, shall receive the Gospel of the grace of God, when the Jews shall have rejected it.

37 There are last which shall be first] See on Matt. xix. 30. 31. Depart hence, &c.] It is probable that the place from which Christ was desired to depart was Galilee or Perea; for beyond this, Herod had no jurisdiction. It can scarcely mean Jerusalem, though it appears from chap. xxiii. 7, that Herod Antipas was there, at the time of our Lord's crucifixion.

38 Herod will kill thee.] Lactantius says, that this Herod was the person who chiefly instigated the Jewish rulers to put our Lord to death: Tum Pontius, et illorum clamoribus, et Herodis tetraarche instigatione, metuentis ne regno pelleretur, victus est.—fearing lest himself should be expelled from the kingdom, if Christ should be permitted to set up his. See Lact. Inst. Div. lib. 4. c. xviii. and Bishop Pearce on Luke xxiii. 7.

39 Tell that fox] Herod was a very vicious prince, and lived in public incest with his sister-in-law, Mark vi. 17. If our Lord meant him here, it is hard to say why the character of fox, which implies cunning, design, and artifice, to hide evil intentions, should be attributed to him, who never seemed studious to conceal his vices. But we may suppose that Christ, who knew his heart, saw that he covered his desire for the destruction of our Lord, under the pretence of zeal for the law, and welfare of the Jewish people. A fox, among the Jews, appears to have been the emblem of a wicked ruler, who united cunning with cruelty; and was always plotting how he might aggrandize himself; by spoliing the people. See a quotation in Schoettgen.

The following observation from the judicious Bishop Pearce, deserves attention. "It is not certain," says he, "that Jesus meant Herod here: he might only have intended to call that man so, from whom the advice of departing came; (whether from the speaker himself, or the person who sent him;) for it is probable, that the advice was given craftily, and with design to frighten Jesus, and make him go from that place."

To-day and to-morrow] I am to work miracles for two days more, and on the third day I shall be put to death. But it is probable that this phrase only means, that he had but a short time to live, without specifying its duration.

Perfected.] Or, finished, τελειωται. I shall then have accomplished the purpose for which I came into the world, leaving nothing undone, which the council of God designed me cast out devils, and I do cures to-day and to-morrow, and the third day I shall be perfected.

33 Nevertheless I must walk to-day, and to-morrow, and the day following: for it cannot be that a prophet perish out of Jerusalem.

34 O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee; how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings, and ye would not!

36 Behold, your house is left unto you desolate: and verily I say unto you, Ye shall not see me, until the time come when ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

4 Psalm 69. 5. & 119. 84. Isa. 1. 7. Matt. 21. 2. Mark 11. 10. Chapter 19. 2. John 12. 12.

to complete. Hence, in reference to our Lord, the word implies his dying: as the plan of human redemption was not finished till he bowed his head and gave up the ghost on the cross, see John xix. 30. where the same word is used. It is used also in reference to Christ's death, Heb. ii. 10. v. 2. see also Acts xx. 24. and Heb. xii. 23. The word finish, &c. is used in the same sense both by the Greeks and Latins. See Kypke.

33 I must walk, &c.] I must continue to work miracles, and teach for a short time yet, and then I shall die in Jerusalem: therefore I cannot depart according to the advice given me, (ver. 31.) nor can a hair of my head fall to the ground till my work be all done.

To-day and to-morrow, &c.] Kypke contends, that the proper translation of the original is, I must walk to-day and to-morrow in the neighbouring coasts: and that τριήμερον is often understood in this way: see Mark i. 28. and his notes there. That Christ was now in the jurisdiction of Herod, as he supposes, is evident from ver. 31. that he was on his last journey to Jerusalem, ch. ix. 51. that he had just passed through Samaria, ch. ix. 52, 56. that as Samaria and Judea were under the Roman procurator, and Perea was subject to Herod Antipas, therefore he concludes that Christ was at this time in Perea; which agrees with Matt. xix. 1. and Mark x. 1. and Luke xvii. 11. He thinks if the words be not understood in this way, they are contrary to ver. 32. which says, that on Christ is to die, while this says he is to live and act.

Perish out of Jerusalem] A man who professes to be a prophet, can be tried, on that ground, only by the grand sanhedrim, which always resides at Jerusalem: and as the Jews are about to put me to death, under the pretence of my being a false prophet, therefore my sentence must come from this city, and my death take place in it.

34 O Jerusalem, Jerusalem] See the notes on Matt. xxiii. 37—39. where the metaphor of the hen is illustrated from the Greek Anthology.

35 Your houses] O houses, the temple—called here your houses, not my houses—I acknowledge it no longer, I have abandoned it, and will dwell in it no more for ever. So he said, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 17. when he delivered the temple into the hands of the Chaldeans—the house of your sanctuary. A similar form of speech is found Exod. xxiii. 7. where the Lord said to Moses, thy people, &c. to intimate that he acknowledged them no longer for his followers. See the notes on Matt. xxiii. 21, 38. But some think that our Lord means not the temple, but the whole commonwealth of the Jews.

The principal subjects in this chapter, may be found considered at large, on the parallel places in Matthew and Mark, to which the reader is referred. As to the account of the woman with the spirit of infirmity, which is not mentioned by any other of the evangelists, see it largely illustrated in the notes on ver. 10, &c.

CHAPTER XIV.

Christ heals a man ill of the dropsy, on a Sabbath day, 1—6. He inculcates humility by a parable, 7—11. The poor to be fed, and not the rich, 12—14. The parable of the great supper, 15—24. How men must become disciples of Christ, 25—27. The parable of the prudent builder, who estimates the cost before he commences his work, 28—30. And of the prudent king, 31, 32. The use of these parables, 33. The utility of salt, while in its strength and perfection; and its total uselessness when it has lost its savour, 34, 35. [A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCII. 1.]

AND it came to pass, as he went into the house of one of the chief Pharisees to eat bread on the sabbath day, that they watched him.

2 And behold, there was a certain man before him which had the dropsy.

a Job 6. 13, 15. Ps. 37. 38. & 140. 6. Jer. 40. 10. Mark 3. 7. & Luke 6. 7. & 11. 37.

NOTES.—Verse 1. Chief Pharisees] Or, one of the rulers of the Pharisees. A man who was of the sect of the Pharisees, and one of the rulers of the people.

To eat bread on the Sabbath day] But why is it that there should be an invitation or dinner given on the Sabbath day? Answer. The Jews purchased and prepared the best viands they could procure for the Sabbath day, in order to do it honour. See several proofs in Lightfoot. As the Sabbath is intended for the benefit both of the body and soul of man, it should not be a day of austerity or fasting, especially among the labouring poor. The most wholesome and nutritive food should be then procured if possible; that both body and soul may feel the influence of this divine appointment, and give God the glory of his grace. On this blessed day, let every man eat his bread with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God. In doing this, surely there is no reason that a man should feed himself without fear. If the Sabbath be a festival, let it be observed unto the Lord, and let no unnecessary acts be done; and avoid that bare of religious solemnity, giving and receiving visits on the Lord's day.

3 And Jesus answering spake unto the Lawyers and Pharisees, saying, Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath day?

4 And they held their peace. And he took him, and healed him, and let him go;

5 And answered them, saying, Which of you shall have an

b Mat. 12. 10. — c Exod. 33. 5. Deut. 22. 4. Ch. 13. 13.

festival, let it be observed unto the Lord, and let no unnecessary acts be done; and avoid that bare of religious solemnity, giving and receiving visits on the Lord's day.

They watched him] Or, were maliciously watching, παραρηνομενον—from παρα, intense, or denoting ill, and ρηνομεν, to observe, watch. Ruphelinus, on Mark iii. 2. has proved from a variety of authorities that this is a frequent meaning of the word i—claim, et insidiosè observare quid alter, agat—to observe privately and insidiously what another does. The context plainly proves that this is the sense in which it is to be taken here. The conduct of this Pharisee was most execrable. Professing friendship and affection, he invited our blessed Lord to his table, merely that he might have a more favourable opportunity of watching his conduct, that he might accuse him, and take away his life. In eating and drinking, people feel generally less restraint than at other times, and are apt to converse more freely. The man who can take such an ad-ten or an ox fallen into a pit, and will not straightway pull him out on the sabbath day?

6 And they could not answer him again to these things.

7 And he put forth a parable to those which were bidden, when he marked how they chose out the chief rooms; saying unto them,

8 When thou art bidden of any man to a wedding, sit not down in the highest room, lest a more honourable man than thou be bidden of him;

9 And he that bade thee and him, come and say to thee, Give this man place; and thou begin with shame to take the lowest room.

10 But when thou art bidden, go and sit down in the lowest room; that when he that bade thee cometh, he may say unto thee, Friend, go up higher: then shalt thou have worship in the presence of them that sit at meat with thee.

11 For whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

12 When thou makest a dinner or a supper, call not thy friends, nor thy brethren, neither thy kinsmen, nor thy rich neighbours; lest they also bid thee again, and a recompense be made thee.

13 But when thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind:

14 And thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee: for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just.

15 And when one of them that sat at meat with him heard these things, he said unto him, Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God.

16 Then said he unto him, A certain man made a great supper, and bade many:

17 And sent his servant at supper time to say to them that were bidden, Come; for all things are now ready.

18 And they all went with one consent to make excuse.

19 The first said unto him, I have bought a field, and must go and see it: I pray thee, excuse me.

20 And he said, I pray thee, excuse me also: I have five yoke of oxen, and I go to plow them: I pray thee, excuse me.

21 And he said, I pray thee, excuse me: I have a wife that is newly born, and I must go and see her.

22 And he said, I pray thee, excuse me: I have bought a field, and must go and see it: I pray thee, excuse me.

23 And he said, I pray thee, excuse me: I have five yoke of oxen, and I go to plow them: I pray thee, excuse me.

24 And he said, I pray thee, excuse me: I have a wife that is newly born, and I must go and see her.

25 And he said, I pray thee, excuse me: I have bought a field, and must go and see it: I pray thee, excuse me.

26 And he said, I pray thee, excuse me: I have five yoke of oxen, and I go to plow them: I pray thee, excuse me.

27 And he said, I pray thee, excuse me: I have a wife that is newly born, and I must go and see her.

28 And he said, I pray thee, excuse me: I have bought a field, and must go and see it: I pray thee, excuse me.

29 And he said, I pray thee, excuse me: I have five yoke of oxen, and I go to plow them: I pray thee, excuse me.

30 And he said, I pray thee, excuse me: I have a wife that is newly born, and I must go and see her.

31 And he said, I pray thee, excuse me: I have bought a field, and must go and see it: I pray thee, excuse me.

32 And he said, I pray thee, excuse me: I have five yoke of oxen, and I go to plow them: I pray thee, excuse me.

33 And he said, I pray thee, excuse me: I have a wife that is newly born, and I must go and see her.

The first said unto him, I have bought a piece of ground, and I must needs go and see it: I pray thee, excuse me.

19 And another said, I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to plow them: I pray thee, excuse me.

20 And another said, I have married a wife, and therefore I cannot come.

21 So that servant came, and showed his lord these things. Then the master of the house being angry, said to his servant, Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither the poor, and the maimed, and the halt, and the blind.

22 And the servant said, Lord, it is done as thou hast commanded, and yet there is room.

23 And the lord said unto the servant, Go out into the high ways and hedges, and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled.

24 For I say unto you, that the nose of these men which were bidden, shall taste of my supper.

25 And there went great multitudes with him: and he turned, and said unto them, 26 If any man come to me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple.

27 And whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple.

28 For which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first, and counteth the cost, whether he have sufficient to finish it?

29 Lest haply, after he hath laid the foundation, and is not able to finish it, all that behold it begin to mock him, and saying, This man began to build, and was not able to finish.

30 Or what king going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand?

31 Or what king going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand?

32 Or what king going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand?

33 Or what king going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand?

34 Or what king going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand?

35 Or what king going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand?

36 Or what king going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand?

37 Or what king going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand?

38 Or what king going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand?

39 Or what king going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand?

40 Or what king going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand?

41 Or what king going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand?

42 Or what king going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand?

43 Or what king going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand?

44 Or what king going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand?

45 Or what king going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand?

46 Or what king going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand?

vantage over one of his own guests, must have a baseness of soul and felfness of malice, of which, we would have thought, for the boomer of human nature, that devils alone were capable. Among the Turks, if a man only taste salt with another, he holds himself bound in the most solemn manner never to do that person any injury. I shall make no apology for inserting the following anecdote.

A public robber in Persia, known by the name of Yacoub des Laitis Saffar, broke open the treasury of Dirhem, the governor of Sidon. Notwithstanding the obscurity of the place, he observed, in walking forward, something that sparkled a little: supposing it to be some precious stone, he put his hand on the place, and taking up something, touched it with his tongue, and found it to be salt. He immediately left the treasury, without taking the smallest article with him! The governor, finding in the morning that the treasury had been broken open, and that nothing had been carried off, ordered it to be published, that "Whoever the robber was, who had broken open the treasury, if he declared himself, he should be freely pardoned, and that he should not only receive no injury, but should be received into the good graces of the governor." Considering in the promise of Dirhem, Yacoub appeared. The governor asked him, How it came to pass, that after having broken open the treasury, he took nothing away? Yacoub related the affair as it happened, and added: I believed that I was become your friend in eating of your salt, and that the laws of that friendship would not permit me to touch any thing that appertained to you." D'Herbelot, Bib. Orient. p. 415. How base must that man be who professes Christianity, and yet makes his own table a snare for his friend.

2. The dropsy; ὕδρωσις, dropsical; from ὕδωρ, water, and ἔω, the countenance, because in this disorder the face of the patient is often very much bloated. Probably the insidious Pharisee had brought this dropsical man to the place, not doubting that our Lord's eye would affect his heart, and that he would instantly cure him: and then he could most plausibly accuse him for a breach of the Sabbath. If this were the case, and it is likely, how deep must have been the perty and malice of the Pharisee!

4. They held their peace] They could not answer the question but in the affirmative; and as they were determined to accuse him, if he did heal the man, they could not give an answer but such as would condemn themselves, and therefore they were silent.

5. An ass or an ox] See on chap. xiii. 15.

7. They chose out the chief rooms] When custom and law have regulated and settled places in public assemblies, a man who is obliged to attend, may take the place which belongs to him, without injury to himself or to others; when nothing of this nature is settled, the law of humanity, and the love of order, are the only judges of what is proper. To take the highest place when it is not our due, is public vanity: obstinately to refuse it when offered, is another instance of the same vice, though private and concealed. Humility takes as much care to avoid the ostentation of an affected refusal, as the open seeking of a superior place. See Quenest. In this parable our Lord only repeats advices which the rabbins had given to their pupils, but were too proud to conform to themselves. Rabbi Akiba said, Go two or three seats lower than the place that belongs to thee, and sit there till they say unto thee, go up higher: but do not take the uppermost seat, lest they say unto thee, come down; for it is better that they should say unto thee, go up, go up: than that they should say, come down, come down. See Schoettgen.

11. For whosoever exalteth himself, &c.] This is the unchangeable conduct of God: he is ever abasing the proud, and giving grace, honour, and glory to the humble.

12. Call not thy friends, &c.] Our Lord certainly does not mean that a man should not entertain, at particular times, his friends, &c. but what he inculcates here is charity to the poor: and what he condemns, is those entertainments which are given to the rich, either to flatter them, or to procure a similar return; because the money that is thus criminally laid out, properly belongs to the poor.

14. For they cannot recompense thee] Because you have done it for God's sake only, and they cannot make you a recompense, therefore God will consider himself your debtor: and will recompense you in the resurrection of the righteous. There are many very excellent sayings among the Rabbins on the excellence of charity. They produce both Job and Abraham as examples of a very merciful disposition.—"Job, say they, had an open door on each of the four quarters of his house, that the poor, from whatever direction they might come, might find the door of hospitality open to receive them. But Abraham was more charitable than Job, for he travelled over the whole land in order to find out the poor, that he might conduct them to his house."

15. That shall eat bread in the kingdom of God.] This is spoken in conformity to the general expectation of the Jews, who imagined that the kingdom of the Messiah should be wholly of a secular nature. Instead of apros, bread, EKMS—V. more than one hundred others, with some Veronesi and Fathers, read apros, a dinner. This is probably the best reading, as it is likely it was a dinner at which they now sat: and it would be natural for the person to say, happy is he who shall dine in the kingdom of God. It does not appear that there was any but this person present, who was capable of relishing the conversation of our Lord, or entering at all into his spiritual reference.

16—24. A certain man made a great supper, &c.] See a similar parable to this, though not spoken on the same occasion, explained, Matt. xxii. 1—14.

23. Compel them to come in] Ἀναγκάζω, prevail on them by the most earnest entreaties. The word is used by Matthew, chap. xiv. 22, and by Mark, chap. vi. 45. In both which places, when Christ is said, ἀναγκάζω, to constrain his disciples to get into the vessel, nothing but his commanding or persuading them to do it, can be reasonably understood. The Latins use cogo, and compello, in exactly the same sense, i. e. to prevail on by prayers, counsels, entreaties, &c. See several examples in Bishop FRANK, and in KYPKE. No other kind of constraint is ever recommended in the Gospel of Christ: every other kind of compulsion is antichristian, can only be submitted to by cowards and knaves, and can produce nothing but hypocrites. See at the end of the chapter.

26. And hate not] Matthew, chap. x. 37. expresses the true meaning of this word, when he says, he who loveth his father and mother more than me. In chap. vi. 24. he uses the word hate in the same sense. When we read, Rom. ix. 13. Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated, the meaning is simply, I have loved 32 Or else, while the other is yet a great way off, he sendeth an ambassador, and desireth conditions of peace.

33 So likewise, whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple.

q Matt. 5. 13.

Jacob—the Israelites; more than Esau—the Edomites: and that this is no arbitrary interpretation of the word hate, but one agreeable to the Hebrew idiom, appears from what is said on Gen. xlix. 30, 31, where Leah's being hated is explained by Rachel's being loved more than Leah. See also Deut. xxi. 15—17, and Bishop Pearce on this place. See also the notes on Matt. x. 37.

27. Doth not bear his cross See on Matt. x. 38, xvi. 24.
28. To build a tower [Probably this means no more than a dwelling-house, on the top of which, according to the Asiatic manner, battlements were built both to take the fresh air on, and to serve for refuge from, and defence against an enemy. It was also used for prayer and meditation. This parable represents the absurdity of those who undertook to be disciples of Christ, without considering what difficulties they were to meet with, and what strength they had to enable them to go through with the undertaking. He that will be a true disciple of Jesus Christ, shall require no less than the mighty power of God to support him; as both hell and earth will unite to destroy him.]

33. Whosoever he be of you This seems to be addressed particularly to those who were then, and who were to be preachers of his Gospel; and who were to travel over all countries, publishing salvation to a lost world.

34. Salt is good See on Matt. v. 13, and Mark ix. 51. On the subject referred to this place from ver. 23. Compel them to come in, which has been adduced to favour religious persecution; I find the following sensible and just observations in Dr. Dodd's notes.

"1st. Persecution for conscience sake, that is, inflicting penalty upon men merely for their religious principles of worship, is plainly founded on a supposition that one man has a right to judge for another in matters of religion, which is manifestly absurd, and has been fully proved to be so by many excellent writers of our church.

"2d. Persecution is most evidently inconsistent with that fundamental principle of morality; that we should do to others as we could reasonably wish they should do to us; a rule which carries its own demonstration with it, and was intended to take off that bias of self-love, which would divert us from the straight line of equity, and render us partial judges betwixt our neighbours and ourselves. I would ask the advocates of wholesome severities, how he would relish his own arguments if turned upon himself? What if he were to go abroad into the world among Papists, if he be a Protestant; among Mahometans, if he be a Christian? supposing he was to behave like an honest man, a good neighbour, a peaceable subject, avoiding every injury, and taking all opportunities to serve and oblige those about him; would he think that merely because he refused to follow his neighbours to their stirs or their mosques, he should be seized and imprisoned, his goods confiscated, his person condemned to tortures or death? Undoubtedly he would complain of this as a very great hardship, and soon see the absurdity and injustice of such a treatment when it fell upon him, and when such measures as he would mete to others, was measured to him again.

"3d. Persecution is absurd, as being by no means calculated to answer the end which its patrons profess to intend by it; namely, the glory of God, and the salvation of men. Now if it does any good to men at all, it must be by making them truly religious: but religion is not a mere name or a ceremony. True religion imports an entire change of the heart, and it must be founded in the inward conviction of the mind; or it is impossible it should be what yet it must be, a reasonable servitude. Let it only be considered, what violence and persecution can do towards producing such an inward conviction. A man might as reasonably expect to bind an immaterial spirit with a cord, or to beat down a wall with an argument, as to convince the understanding by threats and tortures. Persecution is much more likely to make men hypocrites, than sincere converts. They may perhaps, if they have not a firm and heroic courage, change their profession while they retain their sentiments; and supposing them before to be unwarily 34 'Salt is good: but if the salt have lost his savour, where-with shall it be seasoned?

35 It is neither fit for the land, nor yet for the dunghill; but men cast it out. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

Mark 9. 50.

in the wrong, they may learn to add falsehood and villany to error. How glorious a prize! especially when one considers at what an expense it is gained. But,

"4th. Persecution tends to produce much mischief and confusion in the world. It is mischievous to those on whom it falls; and in its consequences so mischievous to others, that one would wonder any wise princes should ever have admitted it into their dominions, or that they should not have immediately banished it thence; for even where it succeeds so far as to produce a change in men's forms of worship, it generally makes them no more than hypocritical professors of what they do not believe, which must undoubtedly debase their characters; so that having been villains in one respect, it is very probable that they will be so in another; and having brought deceit and falsehood into their religion, that they will easily bring it into their conversation and commerce. This will be the effect of persecution where it is yielded to, and where it is opposed, (as it must often be by upright and conscientious men, who have the greater claim upon the protection and favour of government,) the mischievous consequences of its fury will be more flagrant and shocking. Nay, perhaps where there is no true religion, a native sense of honour in a generous mind may stimulate it to endure some hardships for the cause of truth. 'Obstinacy,' as one well observes, 'may rise as the understanding is oppressed, and continue its opposition for a while, merely to avenge the cause of its injured liberty.'

"Nay, 5th. The cause of truth itself must, humanly speaking, be not only obstructed, but destroyed, should persecuting principles universally prevail. For even upon the supposition, that in some countries it might tend to promote and establish the purity of the Gospel, yet it must surely be a great impediment to its progress. What wise Heathen or Mahometan prince would ever admit Christian preachers into his dominions, if he knew it was a principle of their religion, that as soon as the majority of the people were converted by arguments, the rest, and himself with them, if he continued obstinate, must be proselyted or extirpated by fire and sword? If it be, as the advocates for persecution have generally supposed, a dictate of the law of nature to propagate the true religion by the sword; then certainly a Mahometan or an idolater, with the same notions, supposing him to have truth on his side, must think himself obliged in conscience to arm his powers for the extirpation of Christianity; and thus a holy war must cover the face of the whole earth, in which nothing but a miracle could render Christians successful against so vast a disproportion in numbers. Now it seems hard to believe that to be a truth which would naturally lead to the extirpation of truth in the world; or that a divine religion should carry in its own bowels the principle of its own destruction.

"But, 6th. This point is clearly determined by the lip of truth itself; and persecution is so far from being encouraged by the Gospel, that it is most directly contrary to many of its precepts, and indeed to the whole genius of it. It is condemned by the example of Christ, who went about doing good; who came not to destroy men's lives, but to save them: who waved the exercise of his miraculous power against his enemies, even when they most unjustly and cruelly assaulted him, and never exerted it to the corporal punishment, even of those who had most justly deserved it. And his doctrine also, as well as his examples, has taught us to be harmless as doves; to love our enemies; to do good to them that hate us; and pray for them that despitefully use and persecute us."

From all this we may learn, that the church which tolerates, encourages, and practises persecution, under the pretence of concern for the purity of the faith, and zeal for God's glory; is not the church of Christ; and that no man can be of such a church, without endangering his salvation. Let it ever be the glory of the Protestant church, and especially of the church of England, that it discountenances and abhors all persecution on a religious account; and that it has diffused the same benign temper through that STATE, with which it is associated.

CHAPTER XV.

Publicans and sinners draw near to hear our Lord, at which the Pharisees are offended, 1, 2. Christ vindicates his conduct in receiving them by the parable of the lost sheep, 3—7. The parable of the last piece of money, 8—10; and the effecting parable of the prodigal son, 11—32. [A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CXCII. 1.]

1 ¶ WHEN he drew near unto him all the publicans and sinners to hear him.

2 And the Pharisees and scribes murmured, saying, This man receiveth sinners, and eateth with them.

a Matt. 9. 10.—b Acts 11. 3. Gal. 2. 12.

NOTES.—Verse 1. Publicans and sinners] Τελωναιοι και αμαρτωλοι, tax-gatherers and heathens; persons who neither believed in Christ nor in Moses. See the note on chap. vii. 36. Concerning the tax-gatherers, see the note on Matt. v. 46.

2. Receiveth sinners] Ηποδοξασται. He receives them cordially, affectionately—takes them to his bosom; for so the

3 ¶ And he spake this parable unto them, saying,

4 ¶ What man of you, having a hundred sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness, and go after that which is lost, until he find it?

c Matt. 18. 12.

word implies. What mercy! Jesus receives sinners in the most loving, affectionate manner, and saves them unto eternal life! Reader, give glory to God for ever!

4. What man of you] Our Lord spoke this and the following parable to justify his conduct in receiving and conversing with sinners, or heathens.

6 And when he hath found it, he layeth it on his shoulders, rejoicing.

6 And when he cometh home, he calleth together his friends and neighbours, saying unto them, Rejoice with me; for I have found my sheep which was lost.

7 I say unto you, that likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons, which need no repentance.

8 Either what woman having ten pieces of silver, if she lose one piece, doth not light a candle, and sweep the house, and seek diligently till she find it?

9 And when she hath found it, she calleth her friends and her neighbours together, saying, Rejoice with me; for I have found the piece which I had lost.

10 Likewise, I say unto you, there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth.

1 Pat. 9. 10. 11. — 2 Ch. 5. 22. — Drachma, here translated, a piece of silver, is the Greek name of an ounce, which cometh as vengeance half-penny; and is equal to

A hundred sheep) Parables similar to this are frequent among the Jewish writers. The whole flock of mankind, both Jews and Gentiles, belongs unto this divine Shepherd; and it is but reasonable to expect, that the gracious Proprietor will look after those who are gone astray, and bring them back to the flock. The lost sheep is an emblem of a heedless, thoughtless sinner: one who follows the corrupt dictates of his own heart, without ever reflecting upon his conduct, or considering what will be the issue of his unholiness of life. No creature strays more easily than a sheep; none is more heedless; and none so incapable of finding its way back to the flock, when once gone astray; it will bleat for the flock, and still run in an opposite direction to the place where the flock is: this I have often noticed. No creature is more defenceless than a sheep, and more exposed to be devoured by dogs and wild beasts. Even the fowls of the air seek their destruction; I have known ravens often attempt to destroy lambs by picking out their eyes, in which, when they have succeeded, as the creature does not see whether it is going, it soon falls an easy prey to its destroyer. Satan is ever going about as a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour: in order to succeed, he blinds the understanding of sinners, and then leads it an easy matter to tumble them into the pit of perdition. Who but a Pharisee or a devil would find fault with the shepherd who endeavours to rescue his sheep from so much danger and ruin.

7. Just persons, which need no repentance.) Who do not require such a change of mind and purpose as these do—who are not so profligate, and cannot repent of sins they have never committed. Distinctions of this kind frequently occur in the Jewish writings. There are many persons who have been brought up in a sober and regular course of life, attending the ordinances of God, and being true and just in all their dealings; these most materially differ from the heathens mentioned ver. 1. because they believe in God, and attend the means of grace; they differ also essentially from the tax-gatherers, mentioned in the same place, because they wrong no man, and are upright in their dealings. Therefore they cannot repent of the sins of a heathen, which they have not practised; nor of the rapine of a tax-gatherer, of which they have never been guilty. As therefore these just persons are put in opposition to the tax-gatherers and heathens, we may at once see the scope and design of our Lord's words: these need no repentance, in comparison of the others, as not being guilty of their crimes. And as these belonging, by outward profession at least, to the flock of God, and were sincere and upright according to their light; they are considered as being in no danger of being lost: and as they fear God, and work righteousness according to their light, he will take care to make these further discoveries to them, of the purity of his nature, the holiness of his law, and the necessity of the atonement, which he sees to be necessary. See the case of Cornelius, Acts x. 1, &c. On this ground, the owner is represented as feeling more joy in consequence of finding one sheep that was lost, there having been almost no hope of his recovery, than he feels at seeing ninety and nine, still safe under his care. "Men generally rejoice more over a small unexpected advantage, than over a much greater good, to which they have been accustomed." There are some, and their opinion need not be hastily rejected, who imagine that by the ninety and nine just persons, our Lord means the angels—that they are in proportion to men, as ninety-nine are to one, and that the Lord takes more pleasure in the return and salvation of one sinner, than in the uninterrupted obedience of ninety-nine holy angels; and that it was through his superior love to fallen man, that he took upon him his nature, and not the nature of angels. I have met with the following weak objection to this: viz. "The text says just persons; now angels are not persons, therefore angels cannot be meant." This is extremely foolish: they may be the person of an angel, as well as of a man: we allow persons even in the Godhead; besides, the original word ἀνθρώπων, means simply just ones, and may be, with as much propriety, applied to angels as to men. After all, our Lord may refer to the Essenes, a sect among the Jews, in the time of our Lord, who were strictly and conscientiously moral; living at the utmost distance from both the hypocrisy and pollutions of their countrymen. These, when compared with the great mass of the Jews, needed no repentance. The reader may take his choice of these inter-

11 And he said, a certain man had two sons:

12 And the younger of them said to his father, Father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me. And he divided unto them his living.

13 And not many days after the younger son gathered all together, and took his journey into a far country, and there wasted his substance with riotous living.

14 And when he had spent all, there arose a mighty famine in that land; and he began to be in want.

15 And he went and joined himself to a citizen of that country; and he sent him into his fields to feed swine.

16 And he would fain have filled his belly with the husks that the swine did eat: and no man gave unto him.

17 And when he came to himself, he said, How many hired servants of my father's have bread enough and to spare, and I perish with hunger.

the Roman penny, Matt. 18. 28.—g Den. 21. 16. Psalms 17. 14. Prov. 19. 13, 14.—h Mark 12. 41.—i Pat. 7. 27. Prov. 23. 2. 1 Pat. 4. 2.

pretations; or make a better for himself. I have seen other methods of explaining these words, but they have appeared to me either too absurd, or too improbable, to merit particular notice.

8. Ten pieces of silver) Δραχμῶν δέκα, ten drachmas. I think it always best to retain the names of these ancient coins, and to state their value in English money. Every reader will naturally wish to know by what names such and such coins were called in the countries in which they were current. The Grecian drachma was worth about seven pence three farthings of our money; being about the same value as the Roman denarius.

The drachma that was lost, is also a very expressive emblem of a sinner who is estranged from God, and enslaved to habits of iniquity. The longer a piece of money is lost, the less probability is there of its being again found, as it may not only lose its colour, and not be easily observed, but it will continue to be more and more covered with dust and dirt; or its value may be yearly lessened by being so trampled on, that a part of the substance, together with the image and inscription, may be worn off. So the sinner sinks deeper and deeper into the impurities of sin, loses even his character among men, and gets the image and superscription of his Maker defaced from his heart. He who wishes to find the image of God which he has lost by sin, must attend to that word which will be a lantern to his steps, and receive that Spirit which is a light to the soul, to convince of sin, righteousness, and judgment. He must sweep the house—put away the evil of his doings; and seek diligently—use every mean of grace, and cry incessantly to God till he restore to him the light of his countenance. Though parables of this kind must not be obliged to go on all fours, as it is termed; yet they afford many useful hints to preachers of the Gospel by which they may edify their hearers. Only let all such take care not to force meanings on the words of Christ, which are contrary to their gravity and majesty.

12. Give me the portion of goods) It may seem strange that such a demand should be made, and that the parent should have acceded to it, when he knew, that it was to minister to his debauches, that his profligate son made the demand here specified. But the matter will appear plain, when it is considered, that it has been an immemorial custom in the East, for sons to demand and receive their portion of the inheritance during their father's lifetime: and the parent, however aware of the dissipated inclinations of the child, could not legally refuse to comply with the application. It appears indeed that the spirit of this law was to provide for the child in case of ill treatment by the father, yet the demand must first be acceded to before the matter could be legally inquired into: and then "if it was found, that the father was irrefragable in his character, and had given no just cause for the son to separate from him; in that case, the civil magistrate fined the son in two hundred puns of cowries." See Code of Gentoo Laws, pr. disc. p. 55. see also do. chap. ii. sec. 9. p. 81, 82. xxi. sec. 10. p. 301.

13. Not many days after) He probably hastened his departure for fear of the fine which he must have paid, and the reproach to which he must have been subjected, had the matter come before the civil magistrate. See above.

Riotous living.) ἔσθ' ἀσώτως; in a course of life that led him to spend all: from a, not, and σώω, I save. And this, we are informed, ver. 30. was among harlots; the readiest way in the world to exhaust the body, debase the mind, ruin the soul, and destroy the substance.

14. A mighty famine in that land) As he was of a profligate turn of mind himself, it is likely he sought out a place where riot and excess were the ruling characteristics of the inhabitants; and as poverty is the sure consequence of profligity, it is no wonder that famine preyed on the whole country.

15. To feed swine) The basest and vilest of all employments; and, to a Jew, peculiarly degrading. Shame, contempt, and distress, are wedded to sin, and can never be divorced. No character could be meaner in the sight of a Jew than that of a swineherd; and Herodotus informs us, that in Egypt, they were not permitted to mingle with civil society, nor to appear in the worship of the gods, nor would the very dregs of the people have any matrimonial connexion with them. Herod. lib. ii. cap. 47.

16. With the husks) Κερατῶν. Bochart, I think, has proved that κεραία does not mean husks: to signify which the Greek 18 I will arise, and go to my father, and will say unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven and before thee.

19 And am no more worthy to be called thy son: make me as one of thy hired servants.

20 And he arose, and came to his father. But when he was yet a great way off, his father saw him, and had compassion, and ran, and fell on his neck, and kissed him.

21 And the son said unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and in thy sight, and am no more worthy to be called thy son.

22 But the father said to his servants, Bring forth the best robe, and put it on him; and put a ring on his hand, and shoes on his feet:

23 And bring hither the fatted calf, and kill it; and let us eat, and be merry:

24 For this my son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost, and is found. And they began to be merry.

25 Now his elder son was in the field: and as he came and drew nigh to the house, he heard music and dancing.

1. Act 2. 28. Eph. 2. 13. 17.—1. Psal. 51. 4.—1. Mat. 22. 1. 2. 1. 2. 1. Rev. 3. 1.—1. Mat. 22. 15. Act 14. 46. Rom. 11. 25, 31.

hellenical writers use the word λαβον; several examples of which he gives from Theophrastus. He shows also, that the original word means the fruit of the ceratonia or charub tree, which grows plentifully in Syria. This kind of pulse, Columella observes, was made use of to feed swine. See BOHMANN, Heros. lib. ii. cap. lvi. col. 707—10.

17. When he came to himself] A state of stis is represented in the Sacred Writings, as a course of folly and madness: and repentance is represented as a restoration to sound sense. See this fully explained on Mat. iii. 2.

I perish with hunger!] Or, I perish επιειμα—Qde, here, is added by BDL. Syriac, all the Arabic and Persic, Coptic, Ethiopic, Gothic, Saxon, Vulgate, all the Itala, and several of the Fathers.

18. Against heaven] Ες τον ουρανον; that is, against God. The Jews often make use of this periphrasis in order to avoid mentioning the name of God, which they have ever treated with the utmost reverence. But some contend that it should be translated, even unto heaven; and a Hebrew for, I have sinned exceedingly—beyond all description.

20. And kissed him.] Or, kissed him again and again; the proper import of κατεφιλησεν αυτον. The father thus showed his great tenderness towards him, and his great affection for him.

21. Make me as one of thy hired servants, is added here by several MSS. and Versions: but it is evident this has been added, merely to make his conduct agree with his resolution, ver. 19. But by this a very great beauty is lost: for the design of the inspired penman is to show, not merely the depth of the prodigal son's repentance, and the sincerity of his conversion, but to show the great affection of the father, and his readiness to forgive his disobedient son. His tenderness of heart cannot wait till the son has made his confession; his bowels yearn over him, and he cuts short his tale of contrition, and self-reproach, by giving him the most plenary assurances of his pardoning love.

22. Bring forth the best robe] Bring out that chief garment, την εσπλην την σπουδην, the garment which was laid by, to be used only on birth-days or festival times. Such as that which Rebecca had laid by for Esau, and which she put on Jacob, when she made him personate his brother. See the notes on Gen. xxvii. 15.

Put a ring on his hand] Giving a ring was in ancient times a mark of honour and dignity.—See Gen. xli. 42. 1 Kings xxi. 8. Esth. viii. 2. Dan. vi. 17. James ii. 2.

Shoes on his feet] Formerly those who were captivated had their shoes taken off, Isa. xx. 1. and when they were restored to liberty, their shoes were restored. See 2 Chron. xviii. 15.

23. The fatted calf and kill it] Θωαρε, sacrifice it. In ancient times the animals provided for public feasts were first sacrificed to God. The blood of the beast being poured out before God, by way of atonement for sin, the flesh was considered as consecrated, and the guests were considered as feeding on divine food. This custom is observed among the Asiatics to this day.

24. Was dead] Lost to all good, given up to all evil. In this figurative sense the word is used by the best Greek writers. See many examples in Kypte.

25. His elder son] Meaning probably persons of a regular moral life, who needed no repentance in comparison of the prodigal already described.

In the field] Attending the concerns of the farm. He heard music] Συμφωνιας, a number of sounds mingled together, as in a concert.

Dancing] Χορον. But Le Clerc denies that the word means dancing at all, as it properly means a choir of singers. The symphony mentioned before, may mean the musical instruments, which accompanied the choir of singers.

25. He was angry] This refers to the indignation of the scribes and Pharisees, mentioned ver. 1, 2. In every point of view, the anger of the old son was improper and unreasonable. He had already received his part of the inheritance, see verse 12, and his prodigal brother had received no more than what was his just dividend. Besides, what the father had acquired since that division, he had a right to dispose of as he pleased, even to give it all to one son, nor did the ancient customs of the Asiatic countries permit the other children to 26 And he called one of his servants, and asked what these things meant.

27 And he said unto him, Thy brother is come; and thy father hath killed the fatted calf, because he hath received him safe and sound.

28 And he was angry, and would not go in; therefore came his father out, and entreated him.

29 And he answering, said to his father, "Lo; these many years do I serve thee, neither transgressed I at any time thy commandment; and yet thou never gavest me a kid, that I might make merry with my friends:

30 But as soon as this thy son was come, which hath devoured thy living with harlots, thou hast killed for him the fatted calf.

31 And he said unto him, "Son, thou art ever with me, and all that I have is thine.

32 It was meet that we should make merry, and be glad: for this thy brother was dead, and is alive again; and was lost, and is found.

1. Gen. 28. 41.—1. Mat. 6. 2. & 15. 9. Ch. 16. 15. & 22. 11.—1. Jan. 2. 4. Mat. 22. 12.—1. Verse 24. Psal. 119. 75. Mat. 13. 12.

claim any share in such property thus disposed of. The following is an institute of the Gentoo Law on this subject (Coor, chap. ii. sec. 9. p. 79.) "If a father gives by his own choice, land, houses, orchards, and the earning of his own industry, to one of his sons, the other sons shall not receive any share of it." Besides, whatever property the father had acquired after the above division, the son or sons, as the prodigal in the text, could have no claim at all on, according to another institute in the above Asiatic laws, see chap. ii. sect. 2. p. 86. but the father might divide it among those who remained with him: therefore is it said in the text, "Son, thou art ALWAYS with me, and ALL that I have is THINE," ver. 31.

29. Never—a kid] It is evident from ver. 12 that the father gave him his portion when his prodigal brother claimed his; for he divided his whole substance between them. And though he had not claimed it, so as to separate from, and live independently of his father, yet, he might have done so, whenever he chose; and therefore his complaining was both unjustified and unjust.

30. This thy son] This son of THINE—words expressive of supreme contempt; this son—he would not condescend to call him by his name, or to acknowledge him for his brother; and at the same time bitterly reproaches his amiable father, for his affectionate tenderness and readiness to receive his once unfaithful, but now penitent child!

For ετα] I have marked those words in small capitals which should be strongly accented in the pronunciation: this last word shows how supremely he despised his poor unfortunate brother.

31. All that I have is thine.] See on ver. 28.

32. This thy brother] Or, this brother of THINE. To awaken this ill-natured, angry, inhumane man, to a proper sense of his duty, both to his parent and brother, this amiable father returns him his own unhired sword, but in a widely different spirit. This son of mine to whom I show mercy is thy brother to whom thou shouldst show bowels of tenderness and affection; especially as he is no longer the person he was: he was dead in sin—he is quickened by the power of God; he was lost to thee, to me, to himself, and to our God; but now he is found: and he will be a comfort to me, a help to thee, and a standing proof to the honour of the Most High, that God receiveth sinners. This, as well as the two preceding parables, was designed to vindicate the conduct of our blessed Lord in receiving tax-gatherers and heathens: and as the Jews to whom it was addressed, could not but approve of the conduct of this benevolent father, and reprobate that of his elder son, so they could not but justify the conduct of Christ towards those outcasts of men, and at least in the silence of their hearts, pass sentences of condemnation upon themselves. For the sublime, the beautiful, the pathetic, and the instructive history of Joseph in the Old Testament, and the parable of the prodigal son in the New, have no parallels either in sacred or profane history.

The following reflections, taken chiefly from pious Quernel, cannot fail making this incomparable parable still more instructive.

Three points may be considered here, I. The degrees of his fall. II. The degrees of his restoration, and, III. The consequence of his conversion.

I. The prodigal son is the emblem of a sinner who refuses to depend on, and be governed by the Lord. How dangerous is it for us to desire to be at our own disposal, to live in a state of independency, and to be our own governors. God cannot give to wretched man a greater proof of his wrath, than to abandon him to the corruption of his own heart.

Not many days, &c. ver. 13. The misery of a sinner has its degrees; and he soon arrives, step by step, at the highest pitch of his wretchedness.

The first degree of his misery is, that he loses sight of God, and removes at a distance from him. There is a bottomless distance between the love of God, and impure self-love; and yet, strange to tell, we pass in a moment from the one to the other! The second degree of a sinner's misery is, that the love of God being no longer retained in the heart, carnal love and impure desires necessarily enter in, reign there, and corrupt all his actions. The third degree is, that he squanders away all spiritual riches, and wastes the substance of his gracious father in riot and debauch. When he had spent all, &c. ver. 14. The fourth degree of an apostate sinner's misery is, that having forsaken God, and lost his grace and love, he can now find nothing but poverty, misery, and want. How empty is that soul which God does not fill! What a famine is there in that heart which is no longer nourished by the bread of life! In this state he joined himself—ενελληθη, he cemented, closely united himself, and feverently cleaved to a citizen of that country, ver. 15. The fifth degree of a sinner's misery is, that he renders himself a slave to the devil, is made partaker of his nature, and incorporated into the infernal family. The further a sinner goes from God, the nearer he comes to eternal ruin. The sixth degree of his misery is, that he soon finds by experience, the hardship and rigour of his slavery. There is no master so cruel as the devil; no yoke so heavy as that of sin; and no slavery so mean and vile as for a man to be the drogue of his own carnal, shameful, and brutish passions. The seventh degree of a sinner's misery is, that he has an insatiable hunger and thirst after happiness; and as this can be had only in God, and he seeks it in the creature, his misery must be extreme. He desired to fill his belly with the husks, ver. 16. The pleasures of sense and appetite are the pleasures frequent recourse to them, 2 Pet. 11. 22.

II. Let us observe in the next place, the several degrees of a sinner's conversion and salvation. The first is, he begins to know and feel his misery, the guilt of his conscience, and the corruption of his heart. His comes to himself, becomes the Spirit of God first comes to him, ver. 17. The second is, that he resolves to forsake sin, and all the occasions of it; and truly purges in his soul to return immediately to his God. I will arise, &c. verse 18. The third is, when, under the influence of the spirit of faith, he is enabled to look towards God as a compassionate and tender-hearted father. I will arise and go to my father. The fourth is, when he makes a confession of his sin, and feels himself utterly unworthy of all God's favours, ver. 19. The fifth is, when he comes in the spirit of obedience, determined through grace to submit to the authority of God; and to take his word for the rule of all his actions, and his Spirit for the guide of all his affections and desires. The sixth is, his putting his holy resolutions into practice without delay; using the light and power already mercifully restored to him, and seeking God in his appointed ways. And he arose and came, &c. ver. 20. The seventh is, God tenderly receives him with the kiss of peace and love, blots out all his sins, and restores him to, and reinstates him in, the heavenly family. His father—fell on his neck, and kissed him, ib. The eighth is, his being clothed with holiness, united to God, married as it were to Christ Jesus, 2 Cor. xi. 2. and having his feet shod with the shoes of the preparation of the Gospel of peace, Eph. vi. 15. so that he may run the ways of God's commandments with alacrity and joy. Bring the best robe—put a ring—and shoes, &c. ver. 22.

III. The consequences of the sinner's restoration to the favour and image of God are, first, the sacrifice of thanksgiving is offered to God in his behalf; he enters into a covenant with his Maker, and feasts on the fatness of the house of the Most High. Secondly, The whole heavenly family are called upon to share in the general joy, the church above and the church below both triumph; for there is joy, (peculiar joy) in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth. See ver. 10. Thirdly, God publicly acknowledges him for his son, not only by enabling him to abstain from every appearance of evil, but to walk before him in newness of life, ver. 24. The tender-hearted father repeats these words at ver. 28. to show more particularly, that the soul is dead, when separated from God; and that it can only be said to be alive when united to him through the Son of his love. A Christian's sin, is a brother's death; and in proportion to our concern for a brotherly heart towards our brethren, as God has that of a father towards his children; and seems to be afflicted at their loss, and to rejoice at their being found again, as if they were necessary to his happiness.

In this parable the younger prodigal son may represent the Gentile world; and the elder son, who so long served his father, ver. 28 the Jewish people. The anger of the elder son explains itself at once—it means the indignation evidenced by the Jews, at the Gentiles being received into the favour of God, and made, with them, fellow heirs of the kingdom of heaven.

It may also be remarked, that those who were since called Jews and Gentiles, were at first one family, and children of the same father: that the descendants of Ham and Japhet, from whom the principal part of the Gentile world was formed, were, in their progenitors, of the primitive great family, but had afterward fallen off from the true religion; and that the parable of the prodigal son may well represent the conversion of the Gentile world, in order that, in the fulness of time, both Jews and Gentiles may become one fold under one Shepherd and Bishop of all souls.

CHAPTER XVI.

The parable of the unjust steward, 1—8. Christ applies this to his hearers, 9—13. The Pharisees take offence, 14. Our Lord reproves them, and shows the immutability of the law, 15—17. Counsels against divorce, 18. The story of the rich man and the beggar, commonly called Dives and Lazarus, 19—31. [A. M. 4083. A. D. 39. An. Olymp. OCCL 1.]

A rich man had also unto his disciples, There was a certain steward unto him that he had wasted his goods.

2 And he called him, and said unto him, How is it that I hear this of thee? give an account of thy stewardship; for thou mayest be no longer steward.

3 Then the steward said within himself, What shall I do? for my lord taketh away from me the stewardship: I cannot dig; to beg I am ashamed.

a. Gen. 15. 10. — b. Ps. 10. 10. — c. The word Betus, in the original, comprehendeth also gallons three quarters: see Ezek. 45. 10, 11, 14.

NOTES.—Verse 1. A steward] Οικονομος, from οικος, a house, or οικια, a family, and νομος, I administer; a man who superintends domestic concerns, and ministers to the support of the family, having the products of the field, business, &c. put into his hands for this very purpose. See on chap. viii. 3.

There is a parable very like this in Rab. Dav. Kimchi's comment on Isaiah, chap. xl. 21. "The whole world may be considered as a house bulked up; heaven is its roof, the stars its lamps; and the fruits of the earth the table spread. The owner and builder of this house, is the holy blessed God; and man is the steward, into whose hands all the business of the house is committed. If he considers in his heart, that the master of the house is always over him, and keeps his eye upon his work; and if in consequence he act wisely, he shall find favour in the eyes of the master of the house: but if the master find wickedness in him, he will remove him, וירדנו מן מקדשנו, from his stewardship. The foolish steward doth not think of this: for as his eyes do not see the master of the house, he saith in his heart, 'I will eat and drink what I find in this house, and will take my pleasure in it, nor shall I be careful whether there be a Lord over this house or not.' When the Lord of the house marks this, he will come and expel him from the house, speedily and with great anger. Therefore it is written, He bringeth the princes to nothing." As is usual, our Lord has greatly improved this parable, and made it in every circumstance more striking and impressive. Both in the Jewish and Christian edition, it has great beauties. Wasted his goods.] Had been profuse and prodigate; and had embzzled his master's substance.

2. Give an account of thy, &c.] Produce thy books of receipts and disbursements, that I may see whether the accusations against thee be true or false. The original may be translated, Give up the business, την λογην, of the stewardship.

3. I cannot dig] He could not submit to become a common

4 I am resolved what to do, that, when I am put out of the stewardship, they may receive me into their houses.

5 So he called every one of his lord's debtors unto him, and said unto the first, How much owest thou unto my lord?

6 And he said, A hundred measures of oil. And he said unto him, Take thy bill, and sit down quickly, and write fifty.

7 Then said he to another, And how much owest thou? And he said, A hundred measures of wheat. And he said unto him, Take thy bill, and write fourscore.

d The word here interpreted, a measure, in the original containeth about fourteen bushels and a pebble.

day-labourer, which was both a severe and base employment: To beg I am ashamed. And as these were the only honest ways left him to procure a morsel of bread, and he would not submit to either, he found he must continue the system of knavery, in order to provide for his idleness and luxury, or else starve. Wo to the man who gets his bread in this way! the curse of the Lord must be on his head, and on his heart; in his basket, and in his store.

4. They may receive me] That is, the debtors and tenants, who paid their debts and rents, not in money, but in kind; such as wheat, oil, and other produce of their lands.

6. A hundred measures of oil] Εκατον βαρων, a hundred baths. The βαθ bath was the largest measure of capacity among the Hebrews, except the homer, of which it was the tenth part: see Ezek. xiv. 11, 14. It is equal to the ephah, i. e. to seven gallons and a half of our measure.

Take thy bill] Thy account—το γραμμα. The writing in which the debt was specified, together with the obligation to pay so much, at such and such times. This appears to have been in the hand writing of the debtor, and probably signed by the steward: and this precluded imposition on each part. To prevent all appearance of forgery in this case, he is desired to write it over again, and to cancel the old engagement.

7. A hundred measures of wheat] Εκατον κοπων, a hundred cors. Κοπος, from the Hebrew קור cor, was the largest measure of capacity among the Hebrews, whether for solids or liquids. As the bath was equal to the ephah, so the cor was equal to the homer. It contained about seventy-five gallons and five pints English. For the same reason for which I preserve the names of the ancient coins, I preserve the names of the ancient measures. What idea can a mere English reader have of the word measure in this and the preceding verse, when the original words are not only totally different, but the quantity is as seven to seventy-five? The original

8 And the Lord commended the unjust steward, because he had done wisely: for the children of this world are, in their generation, wiser than the children of light.

9 And I say unto you, Make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness: that, when ye fail, they may receive you into everlasting habitations.

10 He that is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much: and he that is unjust in the least, is unjust also in much.

11 If therefore ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches?

12 And if ye have not been faithful in that which is another man's, who shall give you that which is your own?

13 No servant can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon.

John 12. 36. Eph. 5. 8. 1 Thess. 5. 5. Dan. 4. 27. Matt. 6. 19. & 19. 21. Ch. 11. 41. 1 Tim. 8. 17, 19. Or, riches.—Matt. 22. 21. Chap. 19. 17.—1 Cor. 13. 11.—1 Tim. 6. 17.—Matt. 22. 14.—Ch. 10. 32.—1 Tim. 7. 9.

terms should be immediately inserted in the text, and the contents inserted in the margin. The present marginal reading is incorrect. I follow Bishop Cumberland's weights and measures.—See on chap. xv. 8.

In the preceding relation, I have no doubt our Lord alluded to a custom frequent in the Asiatic countries: a custom which still prevails, as the following account taken from Capt. Hadley's Hindostan Dialogues sufficiently proves. A person thus addresses the captain: "Your Sirkar's deputy, whilst his master was gone to Calcutta, established a court of justice. Having searched for a good many debtors and their creditors, he learned the accounts of their bonds. He then made an agreement with them to get the bonds out of the bondsmen's hands for half the debt, if they would give him one fourth. Thus, any debtor for a hundred rupees, having given fifty to the creditor, and twenty-five to this knave, got his bond for seventy-five rupees. Having seized and flogged 126 bondholders, he has in this manner determined their loans, and he has done this business in your name." Hadley's Gram. Dialogues, p. 79. 5th edit. 1801.

8. The Lord commended] Viz. the master of this unjust steward. He spoke highly of the address and cunning of his iniquitous servant. He had, on his own principles, made a very prudent provision for his support; but his master no more approved of his conduct in this, than he did in his wasting his substance before. From the ambiguous and improper manner in which this is expressed in the common English translation, it has been supposed that our blessed Lord commended the conduct of this wicked man: but the word κρίσις, there translated lord, simply means the master of the unjust steward.

The children of this world] Such as mind worldly things only, without regarding God or their souls. A phrase by which the Jews always designate the Gentiles.

Children of light] Such as are illuminated by the Spirit of God, and regard worldly things only as far as they may subserve the great purposes of their salvation, and become the instruments of good to others. But ordinarily, the former evidence more carefulness and prudence, in providing for the support and comfort of this life, than the latter do, in providing for another world.

The mammon of unrighteousness] Μαμωνά της ἀδικίας—literally, the mammon or riches, of injustice. Riches promise much, and perform nothing; they excite hope and confidence, and deceive both; in making a man depend on them for happiness, they rob him of the salvation of God, and of eternal glory. For these reasons, they are represented as unjust and deceitful. See the note on Matt. vi. 24. where this is more particularly explained. It is evident that this must be the meaning of the words, because the false or deceitful riches here, are put in opposition to the true riches, ver. 11. i. e. those divine graces and blessings which promise all good, and give what they promise; never deceiving the expectation of any man. To insinuate, that if a man has acquired riches by unjust means, that he is to sanctify them, and provide himself a passport to the kingdom of God, by giving them to the poor, is a most horrid and blasphemous perversion of our Lord's words. Ill gotten gain must be restored to the proper owners: if they are dead, then to their successors.

When ye fail] That is, when ye die. The Septuagint use the word ἐκλείπειν, in this very sense, Jer. xlii. 17, 22. See the note on Gen. xxv. 8. So does Josephus, War, chap. iv. 1, 9.

They may receive you] That is, say some, the angels. Others, the poor whom ye have relieved will welcome you into glory. It does not appear that the poor are meant, 1. Because those who have relieved them may die a long time before them; and therefore they could not be in heaven to receive them on their arrival. 2. Many poor persons may be relieved who will live and die in their sins, and consequently, never enter into heaven themselves. The expression seems to be a mere Hebraism:—they may receive you, for, ye shall be received; i. e. God shall admit you, if you make a faithful use of his gifts and graces. He who does not make a faithful use of what he has received from his Maker, has no reason to hope for eternal felicity. See Matt. xxv. 33. and for similar Hebraisms consult in the original, chap. vi. 38. xli. 20. Rev. xii. 6. xvi. 15.

10 He that is faithful in that which is least, &c.] He, who

14 And the Pharisees also, who were covetous, heard all these things: and they derided him.

15 And he said unto them, Ye are they which justify yourselves before men; but God knoweth your hearts: for that which is highly esteemed among men, is abomination in the sight of God.

16 The law and the prophets were until John: since that time, the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it.

17 And it is easier for heaven and earth to pass, than one tithe of the law to fail.

18 Whosoever putteth away his wife, and marrieth another, committeth adultery: and whosoever marrieth her that is put away from her husband, committeth adultery.

19 There was a certain rich man, who was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day:

1 Sam. 16. 7.—Matt. 4. 17. & 11. 12. Luke 7. 25.—Ps. 132. 17. Jer. 2. 2. & 51. 6. Matt. 6. 19. 1 Pt. 1. 22.—Matt. 5. 32. & 19. 2. Mark 10. 11. 1 Cor. 7. 11.—Prov. 11. 22. 1 Mos. 10. 62. 1 Pt. 3. 3, 4.

has the genuine principles of fidelity in him, will make a point of conscience of carefully attending to even the smallest things: and it is by habituating himself to act uprightly in little things, that he acquires the gracious habit of acting with propriety, fidelity, honour, and conscience, in matters of the greatest concern. On the contrary, he who does not act uprightly in small matters, will seldom feel himself bound to pay much attention to the dictates of honour and conscience, in cases of high importance. Can we reasonably expect, that a man who is continually falling by little things, has power to resist temptations to great evils?

12. That which is another man's] Or, rather, another's, τοῦ ἀλλοτρίου. That is, worldly riches, called another's. 1. Because they belong to God, and he has not designed that they should be any man's portion. 2. Because they are continually changing their possessors, being in the way of commerce, and in providence going from one to another. This property of worldly goods is often referred to by both sacred and profane writers. See a fine passage in Horace, Sat. l. li. s. 2. v. 129.

Nam propria telluris herum natura neque illius, Nec me, nec quemquam statuit.

Nature will no perpetual heir assign, Nor make the farm his property, or mine.—FRANCIS.

And the following, in one of our own poets:

"Who steals my purse steals trash; 'tis something, nothing; 'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands."

That which is your own?] Grace and glory, which God has particularly designed for you—which are the only proper satisfying portion for the soul; and which no man can enjoy in their plenitude, unless he be faithful to the first small motions and influences of the Divine Spirit.

13. No servant can serve two masters] The heart will be either wholly taken up with God, or wholly engrossed with the world. See on Matt. vi. 24.

14. They derided him] Or, rather, they treated him with the utmost contempt. So we may translate the original words, ἐξευκρίσθησαν αὐτῷ, which literally signifies, in illam emanserunt—but must not be translated into English, unless, to come a little near it, we say, they turned up their noses at him.—and why? because they were lovers of money, and he showed them that all such were in danger of perdition. As they were wedded to this life, and not concerned for the other, they considered him one of the most absurd and foolish of men, and worthy only of the most severe contempt, because he taught that spiritual and eternal things should be preferred before the riches of the universe. And how many thousands are there of the very same sentiment to the present day!

15. Ye justify yourselves] Ye declare yourselves to be just. Ye endeavour to make it appear to men, that ye can still feel an insatiable thirst after the present world, and yet secure the blessings of another:—that ye can reconcile God and mammon; and serve two masters with equal zeal and affection; but God knoweth your hearts: and he knoweth that ye are alive to the world, and dead to God and goodness. Therefore, howsoever ye may be esteemed among men, ye are an abomination before him. See the note on chap. vii. 28.

16. The law and the prophets were until John] The law and the prophets continued to be the sole teachers till John came, who first began to proclaim the glad tidings of the kingdom of God; and now, he who wishes to be made a partaker of the blessings of that kingdom, must rush speedily into it; as there will be but a short time, before an utter destruction shall fall upon this ungodly race. They who wish to be saved, must imitate those who take a city by storm—rush into it, without delay, as the Romans are about to do into Jerusalem. See also on Matt. xi. 12.

17. For heaven and earth to pass] See on Matt. v. 17, 18.

18. Putteth away (or divorceth) his wife] See on Matt. v. 31, 32. xix. 9, 10. Mark x. 12. where the question concerning divorce is considered at large. These verses, from the 13th to the 18th inclusive, appear to be part of our Lord's sermon on the mount; and stand in a much better connexion there than they do here: unless we suppose our Lord delivered the same discourse at different times and places, which is very probable.

19. There was a certain rich man] In the Scholia of some 20 And there was a certain beggar, named Lazarus, which was laid at his gate, full of sores.

21 And desiring to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table: moreover the dogs came, and licked his sores.

[Job 27. Eccles. 9.2.

MSS. the name of this person is said to be Nivisee. This account of the rich man and Lazarus, is either a parable or a real history. If it be a parable, it is what may be: if it be a history, it is that which has been. Either a man may live as is here described, and go to perdition when he dies; or, some have lived in this way, and are now suffering the torments of an eternal fire. The account is equally instructive, in whichsoever of these lights it is viewed. Let us carefully observe all the circumstances offered here to our notice, and we shall see, 1. THE CAUSE of this man; and II. HIS PUNISHMENT.

1. There was a certain rich man in Jerusalem. Provided this be a real history, there is no doubt our Lord could have mentioned his name; but as this might have given great offence, he chose to suppress it. His being rich is, in Christ's account, the first part of his sin. To this circumstance our Lord adds nothing, he does not say that he was born to a large estate, or that he acquired one by improper methods; or that he was haughty or insolent in the possession of it. Yet here is the first degree of his reprobation—he got all he could, and kept all to himself.

2. He was clothed with purple and fine linen. Purple was a very precious and costly stuff; but our Lord does not say that in the use of it, he exceeded the bounds of his income, nor of his rank in life: nor is it said, that he used his superb dress to be an agent in his crimes, by corrupting the hearts of others. Yet our Lord lays this down as a second cause of his perdition.

3. He feasted sumptuously every day. Now let it be observed, that the law of Moses, under which this man lived, forbade nothing on this point, but excess in eating and drinking: indeed it seems as if a person was authorised to taste the sweets of an abundance, which that law promised as a reward of fidelity. Besides, this rich man is not accused of having eaten food which was prohibited by the law, or of having neglected the abstinences and fasts prescribed by it. It is true, he is said to have feasted sumptuously every day, but our Lord does not intimate that this was carried to excess, or that he ministered to debauch. He is not accused of licentious discourse, of gaming, of frequenting any thing like our modern plays, balls, masquerades, or other impure and unholy assemblies; or of speaking an irreverent word against divine revelation, or the ordinances of God. In a word, his probity is not attacked, nor is he accused of any of those crimes which pervert the soul, or injure civil society. As Christ has described this man, does he appear culpable? What are his crimes? Why, 1. He was rich. 2. He was finely clothed. And, 3. He feasted well. No other evil is spoken of him. In comparison of thousands, he was not only blameless, but he was a virtuous man.

4. But it is intimated by many, that "he was an uncharitable, hard-hearted, unfeeling wretch." Yet of this there is not a word spoken by Christ. Let us consider all the circumstances, and we shall see that our blessed Lord has not represented this man as a monster of inhumanity, but merely as an indolent man, who sought, and had his portion in this life, and was not at all concerned about another.

Therefore we do not find that when Abraham addressed him on the cause of his reprobation, ver. 25, that he reproached him with hard-heartedness, saying, "Lazarus was hungry, and thou gavest him no meat; he was thirsty, and thou gavest him no drink," &c. but he said simply, Son, remember that thou didst receive thy good things in thy lifetime, ver. 26.—"Thou hast sought thy consolation upon the earth, thou hast borne no cross, mortified no desire of the flesh, received not the salvation God had provided for thee—thou didst not belong to the people of God upon earth, and thou canst not dwell with them in glory."

There are few who consider, that it is a crime for those called Christians to live without Christ, when their lives are not stained with transgression. If Christianity only required men to live without gross outward sin, paganism could furnish us with many bright examples of this sort. But the religion of Christ requires a conformity, not only in a man's conduct, to the principles of the Gospel; but also a conformity in his heart, to the Spirit and mind of Christ.

5. There was a certain beggar named Lazarus [His name is mentioned, because his character was good, and his end glorious; and because it is the purpose of God, that the righteous shall be had in everlasting remembrance. Lazarus 77] is a contraction of the word עֲזַרְיָה Ehazar, which signifies the help or assistance of God—a name properly given to a man who was both poor and afflicted, and had no help but that which came from heaven.

21. And desiring to be fed with the crumbs And it is likely this desire was complied with, for it is not intimated that he refused away the poor man from the gate, or that his suit was rejected. And as we find, ver. 24, that the rich man desired that Lazarus should be sent with a little water to him, it is a strong intimation, that he considered him under some kind of obligation to him: for had he refused him a few crumbs in his lifetime, it is not reasonable to suppose, that he would now have requested such a favour from him: nor does Abra-

22 And it came to pass, that the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom: the rich man also died, and was buried;

23 And in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments, and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom:

Acts 2.2. 1 Pet. 4.17.

ham glance at any such uncharitable conduct on the part of the rich man.

We may now observe.

II. In what the punishment of this man consisted.

1. Lazarus dies, and is carried into Abraham's bosom. By the phrase Abraham's bosom, an allusion is made to the custom at Jewish feasts, of persons reclining on their left elbows on a couch, when the person whose head came near the breast of the other, was said to lie in his bosom. So it is said of the beloved disciple, John xiii. 25. Abraham's bosom was a phrase used among the Jews to signify the Paradise of God. See Josephus's account of the Maccabees, chap. xiii.

22. The rich man also died, and was buried There is no mention of this latter circumstance in the case of Lazarus; he was buried, no doubt—necessity required this; but he had the burial of a pauper, while the pomp and pride of the other followed him to the tomb.—But what a difference in these burials, if we take in the reading of my old MS. B. And he is supported by several Versions: Forsooth the rich man is dead: and is buried in hell. And this is also the reading of the Anglo-Saxon, And þay on hell gebýrged, and was in hell buried. In some MSS. the point has been wanting after crash, he was buried; and the following and, removed and set before crash, he lifted up: so that the passage reads thus, The rich man died also, and was buried in hell; and lifting up his eyes, being in torment, he saw, &c. But let us view the circumstances of this man's punishment. Scarcely had he entered the place of his punishment, when he lifted up his eyes on high; and what must his surprise be, to see himself separated from God, and to feel himself tormented in that flame! Neither himself nor friends, ever suspected that the way in which he walked, could have led to such a perdition.

1. And seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom, ver. 23. He sees Lazarus clothed with glory and immortality—this is the first circumstance in his punishment. What a contrast! what a desire does he feel to resemble him, and what rage and despair because he is not like him! We may safely conclude, that the view which damned souls have in the gulf of perdition, of the happiness of the blessed, and the conviction that they themselves might have eternally enjoyed this felicity, from which through their own fault, they are eternally excluded, will form no mean part of the punishment of the lost.

2. The presence of a good to which they never had any right, and of which they are now deprived, affects the miserable less than the presence of that to which they had a right, and of which they are now deprived. Even in hell, a damned spirit must abhor the evil by which he is tormented, and desire that good that would free him from his torment. If a lost soul could be reconciled to its torment, and to its situation, then, of course, its punishment must cease to be such. An eternal desire to escape from evil, and an eternal desire to be united with the supreme good, the gratification of which is for ever impossible, must make a second circumstance in the misery of the lost.

3. Son, remember that in thy lifetime thou receivedst thy good things, ver. 25. The remembrance of the good things possessed in life, and now to be enjoyed no more for ever, together with the remembrance of graces offered or abused, will form a third circumstance in the perdition of the ungodly. Son, remember that in thy lifetime, &c.

4. The torments which a soul endures in the hell of fire, will form, through all eternity, a continual present source of indescribable wo. Actual torment in the flames of the bottomless pit, forms a fourth circumstance in the punishment of the lost. I am tormented in this flame, ver. 24.

5. The known impossibility of ever escaping from this place of torment, or to have any alleviation of one's misery in it, forms a fifth circumstance in the punishment of ungodly men, —Besides all this, between us and you there is a great gulf, ver. 26. The eternal purpose of God, formed on the principles of eternal reason, separates the persons and the places of abode, of the righteous and the wicked, so that there can be no intercourse—they who wish to pass over hence to you, cannot; neither can they pass over, who would come from you hither. A happy spirit cannot go from heaven to alleviate their miseries, nor can any of them escape from the place of their confinement, to enter among the blessed. There may be a discovery from hell of the paradise of the blessed; but there can be no intercourse nor connexion.

6. The iniquitous conduct of relatives and friends, who have been perverted by the bad example of those who are lost, is a source of present punishment to them; and if they come also to the same place of torment, must be to those, who were the instruments of bringing them thither, an eternal source of anguish. Send Lazarus to my father's family, for I have five brothers, that he may earnestly testify (ἀπαγγέλλῃ) to them, that they come not into this place of torment. These brothers had probably been influenced by his example to content themselves with an earthly portion, and to neglect

24 And he cried and said, Father Abraham, have mercy on me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue; for I am tormented in this flame.

25 But Abraham said, Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivest thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things; but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented.

26 And beside all this, between us and you there is a great gulf fixed: so that they which would pass from hence to you cannot; neither can they pass to us, that would come from thence.

z Zech. 14. 12.—Isaiah 63. 24. Mark 9. 44, &c.—Job 31. 13. Chap. 6. 24 their immortal souls.—Those who have been instruments of bringing others into hell, shall suffer the deeper perdition on that account.

29. They have Moses and the prophets] This plainly supposes they were all Jewish believers—they had these writings in their hands, but they did not permit them to influence their lives.

30. If one went unto them from the dead, &c.] Many are desirous to see an inhabitant of the other world, and converse with him, in order to know what passes there. Make way, here is a damned soul which Jesus Christ has evoked from the hell of fire! hear him! Hear him tell of his torments! hear him us er his regrets! "But we cannot see him." No: God has, in his mercy, spared you for the present, this punishment. How could you bear the sight of this damned spirit? Your very nature would fall at the appearance. Jesus keeps him as it were behind the curtain, and holds a conversation with him in your hearing, which you have neither faith nor courage sufficient to hold with him yourselves.

31. If they hear not Moses, &c.] This answer of Abraham contains two remarkable propositions. 1. That the Sacred Writings contain such proofs of a divine origin, that though all the dead were to arise, to convince an unbeliever of the truths therein declared; the conviction could not be greater nor the proof more evident, of the divinity and truth of these Sacred Records, than that which themselves afford. 2. That to escape eternal perdition, and get at last into eternal glory, a man is to receive the testimonies of God, and to walk according to their dictates. And these two things show the sufficiency and perfection of the Sacred Writings. What influence could the personal appearance of a spirit have on an unbelieving and corrupted heart? None, except to terrify it for the moment—and afterward to leave it ten thousand reasons for uncertainty and doubt. Christ caused this to be exemplified in the most literal manner, by raising Lazarus from the dead. And did this convince the unbelieving Jews? No. They were so much the more enraged; and from that moment, conspired both the 27 Then he said, I pray thee therefore, father, that thou wouldest send him to my father's house:

28 For I have five brethren; that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of torment.

29 Abraham saith unto him, They have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them.

30 And he said, Nay, father Abraham; but if one went unto them from the dead, they will repent.

31 And he said unto him, If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead.

z Lev. 8. 20. & 24. 15. John 5. 28, &c. Acts 13. 21. & 17 11.—y John 12. 10, 11.

death of Lazarus and of Christ! Faith is satisfied with such proofs as God is pleased to afford: Infidelity never has enow. See a Sermon on this subject, by the author of this work.

To make the parable of the unjust steward still more profitable, let every man consider, 1. That God is his master, and the author of all the good he enjoys, whether it be spiritual or temporal. 2. That every man is only a steward, not a proprietor of those things. 3. That all must give an account to God, how they have used or abused the blessings with which they have been entrusted. 4. That the goods which God has entrusted to our care, are goods of body and soul: goods of nature and grace: of birth and education: His word, Spirit, and ordinances; goods of life, health, genius, strength, dignity, riches; and even poverty itself, is often a blessing from the hand of God. 5. That all these may be improved to God's honour, our good, and our neighbour's edification and comfort. 6. That the time is coming, in which we shall be called to an account before God, concerning the use we have made of the good things with which he has entrusted us. 7. That we may even now be accused before our Maker, of the awful crime of wasting our Lord's substance. 8. That if this crime can be proved against us, we are in immediate danger of being deprived of the blessings which we have thus abused; and of being separated from God and the glory of his power for ever. 9. That on hearing of the danger to which we are exposed, though we cannot dig to purchase salvation; yet we must beg, incessantly beg, at the throne of grace, for mercy to pardon all that is past. 10. That not a moment is to be lost—the arrest of death may have gone out against us; and this very night—hour—minute, our souls may be required of us. Let us therefore learn wisdom from the prudent dispatch which a worldly-minded man would use to retrieve his ruinous circumstances: and watch and pray, and use the little spark of the divine light which yet remains, but which is ready to die, that we may escape the gulph of perdition, and get into some humble place of the heaven of glory. Our wants are pressing; God calls loudly; and eternity is at hand!

CHAPTER XVII.

Christ teaches the necessity of avoiding offences, 1, 2. How to treat an offending brother, 3, 4. The efficacy of faith, 5, & No man by his services or obedience can profit his Maker, 7—10. He cleanses ten lepers, 11—19. The Pharisees inquire where the kingdom of God shall commence? Christ answers them, and corrects their improper views of the subject, 20, 21. [A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCII. 1.]

THEN said he unto the disciples, It is impossible but that offences will come; but wo unto him, through whom they come!

2 It were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he cast into the sea, than that he should offend one of these little ones.

3 Take heed to yourselves: If thy brother trespass against thee, rebuke him; and if he repent, forgive him.

4 And if he trespass against thee seven times in a day, and seven times in a day return again to thee, saying, I repent; thou shalt forgive him.

5 And the apostles said unto the Lord, Increase our faith.

z Matt. 18. 6, 7. Mark 9. 42. 1 Cor. 11. 19.—b Matt. 18. 18, 21.—c Levit. 18. 17.

NOTES.—Verse 1. It is impossible but that offences will come] Such is the corrupt state of the human heart, that notwithstanding all the influences of grace, and the promises of glory, men will continue to sin against God; and his justice must continue to punish. See on Matt. xviii. 6.

2. A millstone] That drowning a person, with a stone tied about the neck, was an ancient mode of punishment, see proved in the note on Matt. xviii. 6, 7, to which let the following be added. To have a millstone hanged about the neck, was a common proverb. "Samuel saith, A man may marry, and after that addict himself to the study of the law. Rab. Joohanan saith, No: shall he addict himself to the study of the law with a millstone about his neck?"

The place in Aristophanes, to which the reader is referred in the note on Matt. xviii. 6, is the following:

Ἄγαν περιέρου, εἰς τὸ βάραθρον ἐπιβαλὼν, Ἐκ τοῦ λάβυρινθοῦ κερματὰς πρὶ ἐβόλῃ.

"[Lifting him up into the air, I will plunge him into the deep: a great stone being hung about his neck." Aristoph. in Equit. ver. 1269.

3, 4. If thy brother trespass] See the notes on Matt. xviii. 21, 22.

5. Increase our faith] This work of pardoning every offence, of every man, and that continually, seemed so difficult, even to the disciples themselves, that they saw, without an extra-

6 4 And the Lord said, If ye had faith as a grain of mustard-seed, ye might say unto this sycamine-tree, Be thou plucked up by the root, and be thou planted in the sea; and it should obey you.

7 But which of you, having a servant ploughing or feeding cattle, will say unto him by and by, when he is come from the field, Go and sit down to meat?

8 And will not rather say unto him, Make ready wherewith I may sup, and gird thyself, and serve me, till I have eaten and drunken; and afterward thou shalt eat and drink?

9 Both he thank that servant, because he did the things that were commanded him? I trow not.

Prov. 17. 10. James 5. 15.—d Matt. 17. 20. & 21. 21. Mark 9. 23. & 11. 23.—e Ch. 12. 27 ordinary degree of faith, they should never be able to keep this command. But some think that this and what follows relate to what Matthew has mentioned, chap. xvii. 19, 20.

6. As a grain of mustard-seed] A faith that increases and thrives as that is described to do, Matt. xiii. 23, where see the note. See also Matt. xvii. 20.

This sycamine] The words seem to intimate, that they were standing by such a tree. The sycamine is probably the same as the sycamore. Sycamore with us, says Mr. Et alius, is falsely so called, being our acer majus, greater maple. The true sycamore is the ficus Pharaonis, or Egyptia, Pharaon's or Egyptian fig-tree; called also from its similitude in leaves and fruit, morosygnus, or mulberry fig-trees. The Arabians call it guttree: it grows in Cyprus, Caria, Rhodes, and in Judea and Galilee, where our Lord at this time was: see ver. 11. St. Jerom, who was well acquainted with these countries, translates the word mulberry tree.

Be thou plucked up by the root] See the note on Matt. xxi. 21, where it is shown, that this mode of speech refers to the accomplishment of things very difficult, but not impossible.

7—9. Which of you having a servant] It is never supposed that the master waits on the servant—the servant is bound to wait on his master, and to do every thing for him to the utmost of his power; nor does the former expect thanks for it, for he is bound by his agreement to act thus, because of the 10 So likewise ye, when ye shall have done all those things which are commanded you, say, We are unprofitable servants: we have done that which was our duty to do.

11 And it came to pass, as he went to Jerusalem, that he passed through the midst of Samaria and Galilee.

12 And as he entered into a certain village, there met him ten men that were lepers, which stood afar off:

13 And they lifted up their voices, and said, Jesus, Master, have mercy on us.

14 And when he saw them, he said unto them, I go show yourselves unto the priests. And it came to pass, that, as they went, they were cleansed.

15 And one of them, when he saw that he was healed, turned back, and with a loud voice glorified God, 16 And fell down on his face at his feet, giving him thanks: and he was a Samaritan.

17 And Jesus answering said, Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine?

18 Where are not found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger?

19 There are not found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger.

20 He passed through the midst of Samaria, and Galilee. This text has often been produced, to prove that no man can live without committing sin against God. But let it be observed, the text says, unprofitable servants, not sinful servants. If this text could be fairly construed to contenance sinful imperfection, it would be easy to demonstrate, that there is not one of the spirits of just men made perfect, in paradise, nor a ministering angel at the throne of God, but is sinfully imperfect: for none of these can work righteousness in the smallest degree, beyond those powers which God has given them: and justice and equity require, that they should exert those powers to the utmost in the service of their Maker; and after having acted them, it may be justly said, they have done only what it was their duty to do. The nature of God is illimitable, and all the attributes of that nature are infinitely glorious: they cannot be lessened by the transgressions of his creatures, nor can they be increased by the uninterrupted eternal obedience, and unceasing hallelujahs, of all the intelligent creatures that people the whole vortex of nature. When ages, beyond the power of arithmetic to sum up, have elapsed, it may be said of the most pure and perfect creatures, "Ye are unprofitable servants." Ye have derived your being from the infinite fountain of life; Ye are upheld by the continued energy of the Almighty; His graces are infinite and eternal, and your obedience and services, however excellent in themselves, and profitable to you, have added nothing, and can add nothing, to the absolute excellencies and glories of your God.

21 He passed through the midst of Samaria, and Galilee. He first went through Galilee, whence he set out on his journey: and then through Samaria, of which mention is made, chap. ix. 51, 52. All who went from Galilee to Jerusalem, must have necessarily passed through Samaria, unless they had gone to the westward, a very great way about. Therefore John tells us, chap. iv. 4. that when Jesus left Judea to go into Galilee, it was necessary for him to pass through Samaria; for this plain reason, because it was the only proper road. "It is likely that our Lord set out from Capernaum, traversed the remaining villages of Galilee as far as Samaria: and then passed through the small country of Samaria: preaching and teaching every where, and curing the diseased as usual." Calmet.

22 Ten-lepers Concerning the leprosy, see the note on Matt. viii. 2. and on Levit. xiii. and xiv.

23 Which stood afar off They kept at a distance, because forbidden by law and custom to come near to those who were smitten, for fear of infecting them. See Levit. xiii. 46. Numb. v. 2. Kings xv. 5.

24 They lifted up their voices They cried with one accord—they were all equally necessitous, and there was but one voice among them all, though ten were engaged in crying at the same time. As they were companions in suffering, they were also companions in prayer. Prayer should be strong and earnest, when the disease is great and inveterate. Sin is the worst of all leprosy: it not only separates those to whom it cleaves from the righteous, but it separates them from God: and nothing but the pitying heart and powerful hand of Christ Jesus, can set any soul free from it.

25 Show yourselves unto the priests According to the direction, Lev. xiii. 2. &c. xiv. 2. &c. Our Lord intended that their cure should be received by faith; they depended on his goodness and power, and though they had no promise, yet they went at his command to do that which those only were required by the law to do, who were already healed.

26 And as they went In this spirit of implicit faith; they were cleansed. God highly honors this kind of faith, and makes it the instrument in his hand of working many miracles. He who will not believe, till he receives what he calls a reason for it, is never likely to get his soul saved. The highest, the most sovereign reason that can be given for believing, is, that God has commanded it.

27 One of them, when he saw that he was healed, &c. It seems that he did not wait to go first to the priest, but turned 19 And he said unto him, Arise, go thy way: thy faith hath made thee whole.

20 And when he was demanded of the Pharisees, when the kingdom of God should come, he answered them and said, The kingdom of God cometh not with observation:

21 Neither shall they say, Lo here! or, lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you.

22 And he said unto the disciples, The days will come, when ye shall desire to see one of the days of the Son of man, and ye shall not see it.

23 And they shall say to you, See here; or see there; go not after them, nor follow them.

24 For as the lightning, that lighteneth out of the one part under heaven, shineth unto the other part under heaven: so shall also the Son of man be in his day.

25 But first must he suffer many things, and be rejected of this generation.

26 And as it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man.

27 They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were 10, with outward show.—Ver. 23.— Rom. 14. 17.—Or, among you. John 1. 26.— See Matt. 9. 15. John 17. 12.— Matt. 24. 33. Mark 13. 21. Ch. 24. 27.— Mark 6. 31. & 9. 31. & 10. 33. Ch. 9. 22.— Gen. 7. Matt. 24. 27.

Immediately back, and gave public praise to the kind hand from which he had received his cure.

28 He was a Samaritan. One who professed a very corrupt religion; and from whom much less was to be expected, than from the other nine, who probably were Jews.

29 Where are the nine? Where are the numbers that from time to time have been converted to God? Are they still found praising him, with their faces on the dust, as they did at first? Alas! how many are turned back to perdition! and how many are again mingled with the world! Reader! art thou of this number?

30 This stranger. Often God receives more praise and affectionate obedience from those who had long lived without his knowledge and fear, than from those who were bred up among his people, and who profess to be called by his name. The simple reason is, Those who have much forgiven will love much, chap. vii. 47.

31 Thy faith hath made thee whole. Thy faith hath been the mean of receiving that influence, by which thou hast been cleansed.

32 Cometh not with observation. With scrupulous observation. That this is the proper meaning of the original, μὴ παρατηρούμενος, ΚΥΡΙΑΚ and others have amply proved from the best Greek writers. As if he had said, "The kingdom of God, the glorious religion of the Messiah, does not come in such a way as to be discerned only by sagacious critics, or is only to be seen by those who are scrupulously watching for it; it is not of such a nature as to be confined to one place, so that men might say of it, behold, it is only here, or only there, for this very kingdom of God is publicly revealed; and behold it is among you; I proclaim it publicly, and work those miracles which prove that the kingdom of God is come: and none of these things are done in a corner.

Dr. Lightfoot has well observed, that there are two senses especially in which the phrase "kingdom of heaven" is to be understood. 1. The promulgation and establishment of the Christian religion. 2. The total overthrow of the Jewish polity. The Jews imagined that when the Messiah should come, he would destroy the Gentiles, and reign gloriously over the Jews: the very reverse of this our Lord intimates should be the case. He was about to destroy the whole Jewish polity, and reign gloriously among the Gentiles. Hence he mentions the case of the general deluge, and the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah. As if he had said, "the coming of this kingdom shall be as fatal to you as the deluge was to Sodom and Gomorrah." Our Lord states, that this kingdom of heaven was within them, i. e. that they themselves should be the scene of these desolations, as through their disobedience and rebellion, they possessed the seeds of these judgments. See on Matt. lii. 2.

33 Lo here! or, lo there! Perhaps those Pharisees thought, that the Messiah was kept secret, in some private place, known only to some of their rulers; and that by and by he should be proclaimed in a similar way to that in which Joah was by Jehoiada the priest. See the account, 2 Chron. xxiii. 1—11.

34 When ye shall desire to see one of the days As it was our Lord's constant custom to support and comfort the minds of his disciples, we cannot suppose that he intimates here that they shall be left destitute of those blessings necessary for their support in a day of trial. When he says, ye shall desire to see one of the days of the Son of man, he either means, ye of this nation, ye Jews, and addresses his disciples as if they should bear witness to the truth of the declaration; intimating that heavy calamities were about to fall upon them; and that they should desire in vain to have those opportunities of returning to God which now they rejected; or he means that such should the distressed state of this people be, that the disciples would through pity and tenderness desire the removal of those punishments from them; which could not be removed, because the cup of their iniquity was full. But the former is more likely to be the sense of the place.

35 And they shall say, Or, And we they shall say. Two MSS., the Syriac and Armenian, have car, it.

given in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and the flood came, and destroyed them all.

28 *Likewise also as it was in the days of Lot: they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded;

29 But *the same day that Lot went out of Sodom, it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all.

30 Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man * is revealed.

31 In that day, he * which shall be upon the housetop, and his stuff in the house, let him not come down to take it away: and he that is in the field, let him likewise not return back.

10 Gen. 19 -> Gen. 19 16, 24. -> 9 Thos. 1. 7. -> Mat. 24 17. Mk. 13 15. -> Gen. 19 25. -> Matt. 10 29 & 18 25. Mark 8 23. Ch. 9 24. John 12 27.

See here] KM, sixteen others, and the latter Syriae, have * xporos, behold, the Christ is here. This is undoubtedly the meaning of the place. See on Matt. xxiv. 23.

28. As the lightning, that lighteneth] See this particularly explained, Matt. xxiv. 27, 28.

29. But first must he suffer many things] As the cup of the iniquity of this people shall not be full, till they have finally rejected and crucified the Lord of life and glory: so this desolation cannot take place till after my death.

26. As it was in the days of Noe] See on Matt. xxiv. 38.

27. They did eat, they drank, &c.] They spent their whole lives in reference to this world; and made no sort of provision for their immortal souls. So it was when the Romans came to destroy Judea; there was a universal carelessness, and no one seemed to regard the warnings given by the Son of God.

29. It rained fire and brimstone] Instead of it rained; Gen. xiv. 24. Justifies the insertion of the pronoun he, as implied in the verb βρασε; for it is there said that Jehovah rained fire and brimstone from Jehovah out of heaven.

31. He which shall be upon the housetop] See this explained on Matt. xxiv. 17.

32. Remember Lot's wife.] Relinquish every thing, rather than lose your souls. She looked back, Gen. xiv. 26. probably 32 * Remember Lot's wife.

33 * Whosoever shall seek to save his life shall lose it; and whosoever shall lose his life shall preserve it.

34 * I tell you, in that night there shall be two men in one bed; the one shall be taken, and the other shall be left.

35 Two women shall be grinding together, the one shall be taken, and the other left.

36 * Two men shall be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other left.]

37 And they answered and said unto him, * Where, Lord? And he said unto them, Whosoever the body is, thither will the eagles be gathered together.

* Mat. 24 40, 41. 1 Thos. 4 17 -> 2 Thos. 2 35. Verse is wanting in most of the Greek copies. -> Job 39 23. Mat. 24 28.

she turned back also to carry some of her goods away; for so much the preceding verse seems to intimate; and became a monument of the divine displeasure, and of her own folly and sin. It is a proof that we have loved with a criminal affection, that which we leave with grief and anxiety, though commanded by the Lord to abandon it.

33. Whosoever shall seek to save his life] These, or similar words, were spoken on another occasion. See on Matt. x. 29. xvi. 25, 26.

34 and 36. On the subject of these verses, see Matt. xxiv. 40, 41. The 36th verse is, without doubt, an interpolation: see the margin. It was probably borrowed from Matt. xxiv. 40.

37. Where, Lord? In what place shall all these dreadful evils fall? The answer our Lord gives in a figure: the application of which they are to make themselves. Where the dead carcass is, there will be the birds of prey—where the sin is, there will the punishment be. See on Matt. xxiv. 28. The following chapter seems to be a continuation of this discourse: at least it is likely they were spoken on the same occasion. Both contain truths which the reader should carefully ponder, and receive in the spirit of prayer and faith; that he may not come into the same condemnation, into which these have fallen.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The parable of the importunate widow, 1-8. Of the Pharisee and the publican, 9-14. Infants brought to Christ, 15-17. The ruler who wished to know how he might inherit eternal life, 18-23. Our Lord's reflections on his case, 24-27. What they shall receive who follow Christ, 28-30. He foretells his approaching passion and death, 31-34. He restores a blind man to sight at Jericho, 35-43. [A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An Olymp. CCL. 1.]

AND he spake a parable unto them to this end, that men ought * always to pray, and not to faint;

2 Saying, There was * in a city a judge, which feared not God, neither regarded man:

3 And there was a widow in that city; and she came unto him, saying, Avenge me of mine adversary.

4 And he would not for a while; but afterward, he said within himself, Though I fear not God, nor regard man; a Chap. 11 5. & 21, 38. Rom. 12 12. Eph. 5 18. Col. 4 2. 1 Thos. 5 17. -> b Gr. in a certain city.

NOTES.—Verse 1. Men ought always to pray] Therefore the plain meaning and moral of the parable are evident: viz. that as afflictions and desolations were coming on the land, and they should have need of much patience and continual fortitude, and the constant influence and protection of the Almighty; therefore they should be instant in prayer. It states further, that men should never cease praying for that, the necessity of which God has given them to feel, till they receive a full answer to their prayers. No other meaning need be searched for in this parable: St. Luke, who perfectly knew his master's meaning, has explained it as above.

2. A judge, which feared not God, neither regarded man] It is no wonder that our Lord calls this person an unrighteous judge, ver. 6. No person is worthy to be put in the sacred office of a judge, who does not deeply fear God, and tenderly respect his fellow-creatures. Because this person feared not God, he paid no attention to the calls of justice; and because he respected not man, he was unmoved at the complaint of the widow. Eve among the heathens, this was the character of a man totally abandoned to all evil. So Dion Cassius says of Vitellius, that he neither regarded gods nor men—οὐτε τῶν ἀνθρώπων, οὐτε τῶν θεῶν ἐφορούετο.

3. Avenge me of mine adversary.] The original, ἐξιπύσω με ἀπὸ τοῦ ἀδικητοῦ μου, had better be translated, do me justice against, or vindicate me from my adversary. If the woman had come to get revenge, as our common translation intimates, I think our blessed Lord would never have permitted her to have the honour of a place in the sacred records. She desired to have justice, and that only; and by her importunity she got that which the unrighteous judge had no inclination to give, but merely for his own ease.

4. He said within himself] How many actions which appear good, have neither the love of God nor that of our neighbour, but only self-love of the basest kind, for their principle and motive.

5. She weary me] Ἰταροῦσα με, στυμ με. A metaphor taken from boxers, who bruise each other, and by beating each other about the face, blacken the eyes. See 1 Cor. ix. 27.

6. Hear what the unjust judge saith.] Our blessed Lord intimates that we should reason thus with ourselves: "If a man so wicked an infamous character as this judge was,

5 * Yet because this widow troubleth me, I will avenge her, lest by her continual coming she weary me.

6 And the Lord said, Hear what the unjust judge saith.

7 And * shall not God avenge his own elect, which cry day and night unto him, though he bear long with them?

8 I tell you, * that he will avenge them speedily. Nevertheless when the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?

9 * And he spake this parable unto certain * which trusted to a Chapter 11. 2. -> Rev. 6. 10. -> Hebrews 10. 37. 2 Peter 3 8, 9. -> Chapter 18 29 & 16 15.

could yield to the pressing and continual solicitations of a poor widow, for whom he felt nothing but contempt; how much more ready must God be, who is infinitely good and merciful, and who loves his creatures in the tenderest manner, to give his utmost salvation to all them who diligently seek it."

7. And shall not God avenge his own elect?] And will not God the righteous Judge do justice for his chosen? Probably this may refer to the cruel usage which his disciples had met with, and were still receiving, from the disobedient and unbelieving Jews; and which should be finally visited upon them in the destruction of their city, and the calamities which should follow. But we may consider the text as having a more extensive meaning. As God has graciously promised to give salvation to every soul that comes unto him through his Son, and has put his Spirit in their hearts, inducing them to cry unto him necessarily for it: the goodness of his nature and the promise of his grace, bind him to hear the prayers they offer unto him, and to grant them all that salvation which he has led them by his promise and Spirit to request.

Which cry day and night unto him, &c.] This is a genuine characteristic of the true elect, or disciples of Christ. They feel they have neither light, power, nor goodness, but as they receive them from him; and as he is the desire of their soul, they necessarily seek that they may be upheld and saved by him.

Though he bear long with them?] Rather, and he is compassionate towards them, and consequently not in all like to the unrighteous judge. Instead of μακροθυῶν, and be long-suffering, as in our translation, I read μακροθυῶν, he is compassionate, which reading is supported by ABDI. Q. and several others. The reason which our Lord gives for the success of his chosen, is. 1. They cry unto him day and night. 2. He is compassionate towards them. In consequence of the first, they might expect justice even from an unrighteous judge; and in consequence of the second, they are sure of salvation, because they ask it from that God, who is towards them a Father of eternal love and compassion. There was little reason to expect justice from the unrighteous judge: 1. Because he was unrighteous; and 2. Because he had no respect for man: no, not even for a poor desolate widow. But there is all the reason under heaven to expect mercy from themselves that they were righteous, and despised others: 10 Two men went up into the temple to pray; the one a Pharisee, and the other a publican.

11 The Pharisee stood and prayed thus with himself, I God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican.

12 I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess.

Or, as we say, dominus—h Psal. lxxv. Ch. 10. 23 & 16. 10.—1 Jewish l. 15. & 53. R. 24. 10. 1.

God; 1. Because he is righteous, and he has promised it; and 2. Because he is compassionate towards his creatures: being ever prone to give more than the most enlarged heart can request of him. Every reader must perceive that the common translation is so embarrassed as to be almost unintelligible while that in this note, from the above authorities, is as plain as possible, and shows this beautiful parable to be one of the most invaluable pieces in the word of God.

3. He will avenge them speedily Or, he will do them justice speedily—εὐραχί, ἰαταίνῃ, ἐν τριβίῃ. 1. Because he has promised it; and 2. Because he is inclined to do it.

When the Son of man cometh To require the produce of the seed of the kingdom sown among this people.

Shall he find faith on the earth? Or rather, shall he find fidelity in this land? Shall he find that the soil has brought forth a harvest proportioned to the culture bestowed on it? No! And therefore he destroyed that land.

9. Despised ἐξουθενῶντας, disdaind, made nothing of others, treated them with overbearing contempt. Our Lord grants that the Pharisees made clean the outside; but alas! what pride, vain-glory, and contempt for others, were lodged within.

10. A Pharisee For a description of the Pharisees and their tenets, see on Matt. xvi. 1.

Publican See an account of these on Matt. v. 46. Both these persons went to the temple to pray, i. e. to worship God: they were probably both Jews, and felt themselves led by different motives to attend at the temple, at the hour of prayer; the one to return thanks for the mercies he had received; the other to implore that grace which alone could redeem him from his sins.

11. Stood and prayed thus with himself Or, stood by himself and prayed, as some would translate the words. He probably supposed it disgraceful to appear to have any connexion with this penitent publican: therefore his conduct seemed to say, "Stand by thyself; I am more holy than thou." He seems not only to have stood by himself, but also to have prayed by himself; neither associating in person nor in petitions with his poor guilty neighbour.

God, I thank thee, &c.] In Matt. v. 20. our Lord says, Unless your righteousness abound more than that of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of God: see the note there. Now, the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, is described here by a Pharisee himself. We find it was two-fold: 1. It consisted in doing no harm to others. 2. In attending all the ordinances of God, then established in the Jewish economy; and in these things they were not like others: the bulk of the inhabitants of the land, paying little or no attention to them. That the Pharisees were in their origin, a pure and holy people, can admit of little doubt: but that they had awfully degenerated before our Lord's time, is sufficiently evident. They had lost the spirit of their institution; and retained nothing else than its external regulations. See on Matt. xvi. 1.

1. This Pharisee did no harm to others—I am not rapacious, nor unjust, nor an adulterer. I seize no man's property through false pretences. I take the advantage of no man's ignorance in buying or selling. I avoid every species of uncleaness. In a word, I do to others as I wish them to do to me. How many of those called Christians, are not half as good as this Pharisee! and yet, he was far from the kingdom of God.

2. He observed the ordinances of religion—I fast twice in the week. The Jewish days of fasting in each week, were the second and fifth; what we call Monday and Thursday. These were instituted in remembrance of Moses's going up to the Mount to receive the law, which they suppose to have been on the fifth day: and of his descent, after he had received the two tables, which they suppose was on the second day of the week.

12. I give tithes of all that I possess. Or, of all I acquire, κτῆματα. Rappelinus has well observed, that this verb in the present tense signifies to acquire—in the preterit to possess: the Pharisee's meaning seems to be, "As fast as I gain any thing, I give the tenth part of it to the house of God and to the poor." Those who dedicate a certain part of their earnings to the Lord, should never let it rest with themselves, lest possession should produce consciousness. This was the Pharisee's righteousness, and the ground on which he built his hope of final salvation. That the Pharisees had a strong opinion of their own righteousness, the following history will prove:

"Rabbi Simeon, the son of Jochai, said: The whole world is not worth thirty righteous persons, such as our father Abraham. If there were only thirty righteous persons in the world, I and my son should make two of them: and if there were but twenty, I and my son would be of the number: and if there were but ten, I and my son would be of the number: and if there were but five, I and my son would be of the five: and if there were but two, I and my son would be those two: and 13 And the publican, standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner.

14 I tell you, this man went down to his house justified rather than the other: for every one that exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

15 And they brought unto him also infants, that he would bless them: which he did.

If there were but one, myself should be that one." Beresith Rabba, s. 36. fol. 34. This is a genuine specimen of Pharisaic pride. No wonder that our Lord accused these of pride and vain-glory: they were far from humility, and consequently far from righteousness.

13. The publican, standing afar off Not because he was a heathen, and dared not approach the holy place; (for it is likely he was a Jew;) but because he was a true penitent, and felt himself utterly unworthy to appear before God.

Would not lift up—his eyes Holding down the head with the eyes fixed upon the earth, was, 1. A sign of deep distress. 2. Of a consciousness and confession of guilt. And 3. It was the very posture that the Jewish rabbins required in those who prayed to God. See Ezra ix. 6. and Mishna, in Beracoth, clup. v. and Kypte's note here. So the Pharisee appears to have forgotten one of his own precepts.

But smote upon his breast Smiting the breast was a token of excessive grief, commonly practised in all nations. It seems to intimate a desire in the penitent, to punish that heart, through the evil propensities of which the sin deplored had been committed. It is still used among the Roman Catholics in their general confessions.

God be merciful to me] ἰλασθῆναι μοι—be propitious towards me through sacrifice—or, let an atonement be made for me. I am a sinner, and cannot be saved but in this way. The Greek word ἰλασθῆναι, or ἰλασθῆναι, often signifies to make expiation for sin; and is used by the Septuagint, Psal. lxxv. 4. lxxviii. 28. lxxxix. 9. for כפר kippur, he made an atonement. So ἰλασθῆναι, a propitiation, is used by the same, for חטאת chataah, a sacrifice for sin, Ezek. xlv. 27. and ἰλασθῆναι, the mercy-seat, is, in the above version, the translation of כפרת kapporeth, the lid of the ark of the covenant, on and before which the blood of the expiatory victim was sprinkled, on the great day of atonement. The verb is used in exactly the same sense by the best Greek writers. The following from Herodotus, lib. i. p. 19. edit. Gale, is full in point. Ἐσθίοντες μὲν ἄλλοι τὸν ἐν Δελφοῖσι θεῶν ἱαλασκέτο. Crossus appeased, or made an atonement to the Delphic god by immense sacrifices. We see then, at once, the reason why our blessed Lord said that the tax-gatherer went down to his house justified rather than the other: he sought for mercy through an atonement for sin, which was the only way in which God had, from the beginning, purposed to save sinners. As the Pharisee depended on his doing no harm, and observing the ordinances of religion, for his acceptance with God; according to the economy of grace and justice, he must be rejected: for as all had sinned, and come short of the glory of God, and no man could make an atonement for his sins, so he who did not take refuge in that which God's mercy had provided, must be excluded from the kingdom of heaven. This was no new doctrine—it was the doctrine publicly and solemnly preached by every sacrifice offered under the Jewish law. Without shedding of blood there is no remission, was the loud and constant cry of the whole Mosaic economy. From this we may see what it is to have a righteousness superior to that of the scribes and Pharisees. We must humble ourselves before God, which they did not: we must take refuge in the blood of the cross, which they would not: and be meek and humble of heart, which they were not.

Many suppose, that the Pharisees thought they could acquire righteousness of themselves, independently of God; and that they did not depend on him for grace or power; but let us not make them worse than they were—for this is disclaimed by the Pharisee in the text, who attributes all the good he had to God: O God, I thank thee, that I am not as others—it is thou who hast made me to differ. But this was not sufficient—restraining grace must not be put in the place of the great atonement. Guilt, he had contracted—and this guilt must be blotted out; and that there was no way of doing this but through an atonement, the whole Jewish law declared. See the note on Matt. v. 20.

14. Went down to his house justified His sin blotted out, and himself accepted.

Rather than the other He excused: that is, the other was not accepted, because he exalted himself—he made use of the mercies which he acknowledged he owed to God, to make claims on the divine approbation; and to monopolize the salvation of the Most High! He was abased, because he vainly trusted that he was righteous, and depended on what he had been enabled to do; and looked not for a change of heart, nor for reconciliation to God. It is a strange perversion of the human mind, to attempt to make God our debtor, by the very blessings which his mere mercy has conferred upon us! It was a maxim among the Jews, that whoever brought a sacrifice to the temple, returned justified. But our Lord shows, that this depended on the state of mind—if they were not humbled under a sense of sin, they were not justified, though they had even offered a sacrifice.

touch them : but when his disciples saw it, they rebuked them. 16 But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God.

17 Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, shall in nowise enter therein.

18 And a certain ruler asked him, saying, Good Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?

19 And Jesus said unto him, Why callest thou me good? none is good, save one, that is, God.

20 Thou knowest the commandments. Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Honour thy father and thy mother.

21 And he said, All these have I kept from my youth up.

22 Now when Jesus heard these things, he said unto him, Yet lackest thou one thing : sell all that thou hast, and distribute unto the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven : and come, follow me.

23 And when he heard this, he was very sorrowful : for he was very rich.

24 And when Jesus saw that he was very sorrowful, he said, How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God!

25 For it is easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

26 And they that heard it said, Who then can be saved?

27 And he said, The things which are impossible with men, are possible with God.

28 Then Peter said, Lo, we have left all, and followed thee.

29 And he said unto them, Verily I say unto you, There is no man that hath left house, or parents, or brethren, or wife, or children, for the kingdom of God's sake,

1 Cor. 13. 10. 1 Pet. 2. 9. n Mark 10. 15. n Matt. 19. 16. Mark 10. 17. p Rev. 19. 15. Rev. 5. 12. Rev. 19. 15. Rev. 5. 2. Col. 3. 23. n Matt. 6. 19. 19. & 19. 3. Tim. 6. 19. n Prov. 11. 28. Matt. 19. 27. Mark 10. 23. n Jer. 31. 17. Zech. 5. 6. Mal. 19. 32. Ch. 13. 7. n Matt. 19. 17.

15-17. They brought unto him also infants) On these verses, the reader is requested to consult the notes on Matt. xix. 13, 14, and on Mark x. 16.

18-23. A certain ruler) See the case of this person largely explained on Matt. xix. 18-22, and Mark x. 21, 22.

24. How hardly shall they that have riches, &c.] See the notes on this discourse of our Lord, on Matt. xix. 24-30, and Mark x. 20.

25. It is easier for a camel) Instead of καμηλον, a camel, S. and four other MSS. read καμηλον, a cable. See the same reading noticed on the parallel place, Matt. xix. 24.

26. We have left all) Our trades, our houses, and families. The reader is desired to consult the notes on Matt. iv. 20. xix. 27, &c.

29. That hath left house or parents, &c.] See on Matt. xix. 28, 29, and Mark x. 29, 30.

Or brethren) Η αδελφους, or SISTERS, is added by the Cod. Bezae, and some others.

31. Behold, we go up to Jerusalem) See the notes on this discourse, Matt. xx. 17-19, and Mark x. 32.

33. And the third day he shall rise again.) See Hos. vi. 2, and let the reader observe, that the passage should be read thus: In the third day he will raise him up, (ΥΠΕΡ) and we shall live before him; his resurrection shall be the pledge, token, and cause of ours.

34. They understood none of these things) Notwithstanding all the information which Christ had given them concerning this awful subject, they could not as yet fully comprehend how the Messiah should suffer; or how their Master, whose power they know was unlimited, should permit the Jews and Gentiles to torment and slay him, as he here intimates they would.

30 Who shall not receive manifold more in this present time, and in the world to come life everlasting.

31 Then he took unto him the twelve, and said unto them, Behold, we go up to Jerusalem, and all things that are written by the prophets concerning the Son of man shall be accomplished.

32 For he shall be delivered unto the Gentiles, and shall be mocked, and spitefully entreated, and spitted on :

33 And they shall scourge him, and put him to death : and the third day he shall rise again.

34 And they understood none of these things : and this saying was hid from them, neither knew they the things which were spoken.

35 And it came to pass, that as he was come nigh unto Jericho, a certain blind man sat by the way-side begging :

36 And hearing the multitude pass by, he asked what it meant.

37 And they told him, that Jesus of Nazareth passeth by.

38 And he cried, saying, Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy on me.

39 And when they went before rebuked him, that he should hold his peace : but he cried so much the more, Thou son of David, have mercy on me.

40 And Jesus stood, and commanded him to be brought unto him : and when he was come near, he asked him, 41 Saying, What wilt thou that I shall do unto thee? And he said, Lord, that I may receive my sight.

42 And Jesus said unto him, Receive thy sight : thy faith hath saved thee.

43 And immediately he received his sight, and followed him, glorifying God : and all the people, when they saw it, gave praise unto God.

v. 33. p. 10. v. 34. p. 10. v. 35. p. 10. v. 36. p. 10. v. 37. p. 10. v. 38. p. 10. v. 39. p. 10. v. 40. p. 10. v. 41. p. 10. v. 42. p. 10. v. 43. p. 10. v. 44. p. 10. v. 45. p. 10. v. 46. p. 10. v. 47. p. 10. v. 48. p. 10. v. 49. p. 10. v. 50. p. 10. v. 51. p. 10. v. 52. p. 10. v. 53. p. 10. v. 54. p. 10. v. 55. p. 10. v. 56. p. 10. v. 57. p. 10. v. 58. p. 10. v. 59. p. 10. v. 60. p. 10. v. 61. p. 10. v. 62. p. 10. v. 63. p. 10. v. 64. p. 10. v. 65. p. 10. v. 66. p. 10. v. 67. p. 10. v. 68. p. 10. v. 69. p. 10. v. 70. p. 10. v. 71. p. 10. v. 72. p. 10. v. 73. p. 10. v. 74. p. 10. v. 75. p. 10. v. 76. p. 10. v. 77. p. 10. v. 78. p. 10. v. 79. p. 10. v. 80. p. 10. v. 81. p. 10. v. 82. p. 10. v. 83. p. 10. v. 84. p. 10. v. 85. p. 10. v. 86. p. 10. v. 87. p. 10. v. 88. p. 10. v. 89. p. 10. v. 90. p. 10. v. 91. p. 10. v. 92. p. 10. v. 93. p. 10. v. 94. p. 10. v. 95. p. 10. v. 96. p. 10. v. 97. p. 10. v. 98. p. 10. v. 99. p. 10. v. 100. p. 10. v. 101. p. 10. v. 102. p. 10. v. 103. p. 10. v. 104. p. 10. v. 105. p. 10. v. 106. p. 10. v. 107. p. 10. v. 108. p. 10. v. 109. p. 10. v. 110. p. 10. v. 111. p. 10. v. 112. p. 10. v. 113. p. 10. v. 114. p. 10. v. 115. p. 10.

35. A certain blind man) Bartimæus.—See this transaction explained at large, on Matt. xx. 29-34, and Mark x. 46, &c.

40. And when he was come near) See the remarkable account of the negro and white man, related on Mark x. 50.

43. And all the people—gave praise unto God.) They saw the finger of God in what was done; and they gave him that praise which was due to his name. The Pharisees either saw not, or would not acknowledge this. The common people are often better judges of the work of God than the Doctors themselves. They are more simple, are not puffed up with the pride of learning, and are less liable to be warped by prejudice or self-interest. Happy are those spiritually blind persons to whom Christ has given eyes, that they may know him: feet, that they may follow him: a tongue, that they may praise him: and a heart, that they may love him! A true conversion which no way contradicts itself, but is followed by an edifying life, makes known the majesty and power of God in a more eminent manner than the greatest external miracles. Queerest!

For a practical use of the principal subjects in this chapter, see the parallel places in Matthew and Mark. How shall I be justified? is a most important question, which the parable of the Pharisee and the publican most distinctly answers. A deep consciousness of sin, humiliation of heart, and taking refuge by faith in the great atonement, is the way, and the only way. Even the worst transgressors coming thus to God, are accepted. Blessed news for penitent sinners! for though they cannot boast of a righteousness equal to that of the scribes and Pharisees; yet they find they can, coming as the publican, be justified freely, through the blood of the cross, from all things, from which they could not be justified by the law of Moses. If this be so, how shall they escape who neglect so GREAT A SALVATION!

CHAPTER XIX.

The conversion of Zaccheus, 1-10. The parable of the nobleman and his ten servants, and the ten pounds, 11-27. Christ sends his disciples for a colt, on which he rides into Jerusalem, 28-40. He weeps over the city, and foretells its destruction, 41-44. Goes into the temple, and casts out the buyers and sellers, 45, 46. The chief priests and the scribes seek to destroy him, but are afraid of the people, who hear him attentively, 47, 48. [A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CXXI. 1.]

AND Jesus entered and passed through Jericho. 2 And behold, there was a man named Zaccheus, which was the chief among the publicans, and he was rich.

3 And he sought to see Jesus who he was; and could not for the press, because he was little of stature.

a Exa 2. 9. b Matt. 9. 10.

NOTES.—Verse 1. Entered and passed through) Was passing through.—Our Lord had not as yet passed through Jericho—he was only passing through it; for the house of Zaccheus, in which he was to lodge, ver. 6, was in it.

2. Zaccheus) It is not unlikely, that this person was a Jew by birth, see ver. 9, but because he had engaged in a business so infamous in the eyes of the Jews, he was considered as a mere heathen, ver. 7.

Chief among the publicans) Either a farmer-general of the taxes, who had subordinate collectors under him; or else the most respectable and honourable man among that class, at Jericho.

He was rich) And therefore the more unlikely to pay attention to an impoverished Messiah, preaching a doctrine of universal mortification and self-denial.

4 And he ran before, and climbed up into a sycamore-tree to see him: for he was to pass that way.

5 And when Jesus came to the place, he looked up, and saw him, and said unto him, Zaccheus, make haste and come down; for to-day I must abide at thy house.

c Luke 23. 3.

3. And he sought to see Jesus who he was) So the mere principle of curiosity in him, led to his conversion and salvation, and to that of his whole family, ver. 9.

4. He ran before) The shortness of his stature was amply compensated by his agility and invention. Had he been as tall as the generality of the crowd, he might have been equally unnoticed with the rest. His getting into the tree made him conspicuous: had he not been an low of stature, he would not have done so. Even the imperfections of our persons may become subservient to the grace of God in our eternal salvation. As the pass-over was at hand, the road was probably crowded with people going to Jerusalem; but the fame of the cure of the blind man, was probably the cause of the concourse at this time.

5. Make haste and come down.) With this invitation, our

6 And he made haste, and came down, and received him joyfully.
 7 And when they saw it, they all murmured, saying, "That he was gone to be guest with a man that is a sinner."
 8 And Zaccheus stood, and said unto the Lord; Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor: and if I have taken any thing from any man by false accusation, I restore him fourfold.
 9 And Jesus said unto him, This day is salvation come to this house, forasmuch as he also is a son of Abraham.
 10 For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.
 11 And as they heard these things, he added and spake a parable, because he was nigh to Jerusalem, and because they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear.
 12 He said therefore, A certain nobleman went into a far country, to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return.

bleased Lord conveyed heavenly influence to the heart; hence he was disposed to pay the most implicit and cheerful obedience to the call, and thus he received not the grace of God in vain.

6. Received him joyfully.] He had now seen who he was: and he wished to hear what he was; and therefore he rejoiced in the honour that God had now conferred upon him. How often does Christ make the proposal of lodging, not only in our house, but in our heart, without its being accepted! We lose much because we do not attend to the visitations of Christ: he passes by—he blesses our neighbours and our friends—but often, neither curiosity nor any other motive, is sufficient to induce us to go even to the house of God, to hear of the miracles of mercy, which he works in behalf of those who seek him.

7. To be guest with a man that is a sinner.] Meaning that he was a heathen, or, though by birth a Jew, yet as bad as a heathen, because of his unholiness and oppressive office. See the note on chap. vii. 37.

8. The half of my goods I give to the poor.] Probably he had already done so for some time past; though it is generally understood that the expressions only refer to what he now purposed to do.

If I have taken any thing—by false accusation] Ερωτοπαρρησια, from ερωω, a fit, and παρρησια, I show, or declare; for among the primitive Athenians, when the case of that fruit was first brought out, or in the time of a dearth, when all sorts of provisions were exceedingly scarce, it was enacted, that no figs should be exported from Attica; and this law (not being actually repealed, when a plentiful harvest had rendered it useless, by taking away the reason of it) gave occasion to ill-natured and malicious fellows to accuse all persons they found breaking the letter of it; and from them all busy informers have ever since been branded with the name of ερωτοπαρρησια. Ferrass's Antiq. vol. i. c. 21. end.

Restores him fourfold.] This restitution the Roman laws obliged the tax-gatherers to make when it was proved they had abused their power by oppressing the people. But here was no such proof; the man to show the sincerity of his conversion, does it of his own accord. He who has wronged his fellow must make restitution, if he have it in his power. He that does not do so, cannot expect the mercy of God. See the observations at the end of Gen. xiii. and Num. v. 7.

9. Jesus said unto him] Bishop Pearce observes, "Probably Luke wrote αρωω, not ερωω, said unto them, i. e. to those who had before called Zaccheus a sinner, (ver. 7.) for Jesus here speaks of Zaccheus in the third person, he also is a son of Abraham, and therefore he was not then speaking to him." This conjecture of this respectable prelate, is supported by the margin of the latter Syriac, and by every copy of the Itala but two.

To this house] To mine room, to this very house or family. As if he had said, "If he be a sinner, he stands in the greater need of salvation, and the Son of man is come to seek and save what was lost; v. 10. and therefore to save this lost soul, is a part of my errand into the world." See the sentiment contained in this verse, explained on Matt. xviii. 11.

11. And as they heard these things] I believe the participle of the present tense here is used for the participle of the past, or rather that the participle of the present conveys sometimes the sense of the past: for this discourse appears to have taken place the next day after he had lodged at the house of Zaccheus, for the text says, that he was then drawing nigh to Jerusalem, from which Jericho was distant nineteen miles. I have not ventured to translate it so, yet I think probably the text should be read thus: And after they had heard these things, he proceeded to speak a parable, because they were nigh to Jerusalem.

Immediately appear.] Perhaps the generality of his followers thought, that on his arrival at Jerusalem he would proclaim himself king.

12. A certain nobleman] In the following parable there are two distinct morals intended; but it be viewed in these two points of light. 1. The behaviour of the citizens to the nobleman; and 2. The behaviour of his own servants to him. 1. By the behaviour of the citizens, and their punishment, (verses 14, 27.) we are taught that the Jews, who were the people of Christ, would reject him, and try to prevent his 13 And he called his ten servants, and delivered them ten pounds, and said unto them, Occupy till I come.

14 But his citizens hated him, and sent a message after him, saying, We will not have this man to reign over us.

15 And it came to pass, that when he was returned, having received the kingdom, then he commanded these servants to be called unto him, to whom he had given the money, that he might know how much every man had gained by trading.

16 Then came the first, saying, Lord, thy pound hath gained ten pounds.

17 And he said unto him, Well, thou good servant: because thou hast been faithful in a very little, have thou authority over ten cities.

18 And the second came, saying, Lord, thy pound hath gained five pounds.

19 And he said likewise to him, Be thou also over five cities.

20 And the third came, saying, Lord, behold, here I am, and the pounds which I gave thee, I have kept hid in a napkin: for I was afraid, because thou art a severe man, and I was afraid, lest thou shouldst take me, and cast me into prison: therefore I hid the pound, lest thou shouldst take it from me: and lo, here it is.

21 And he answered and said unto him, Thou wicked and slothful servant, thou knewest that I reap where I sow, and I scatter where I tread: therefore ought thou also to have reaped and sown.

22 And he will punish that servant at that day, who so shall say, I will not have this man to reign over me, nor this man's son, nor this man's brethren.

23 And he will smite that servant, which shall say unto him, My lord, I have feared thee, because thou art an austere man: I hid my talents, lest thou shouldst take me, and cast me into prison: and lo, here are the pounds, which I gave thee.

24 And he will smite that servant, which shall say unto him, My lord, I have feared thee, because thou art an austere man: I hid my talents, lest thou shouldst take me, and cast me into prison: and lo, here are the pounds, which I gave thee.

25 And he will smite that servant, which shall say unto him, My lord, I have feared thee, because thou art an austere man: I hid my talents, lest thou shouldst take me, and cast me into prison: and lo, here are the pounds, which I gave thee.

26 And he will smite that servant, which shall say unto him, My lord, I have feared thee, because thou art an austere man: I hid my talents, lest thou shouldst take me, and cast me into prison: and lo, here are the pounds, which I gave thee.

27 And he will smite that servant, which shall say unto him, My lord, I have feared thee, because thou art an austere man: I hid my talents, lest thou shouldst take me, and cast me into prison: and lo, here are the pounds, which I gave thee.

28 And he will smite that servant, which shall say unto him, My lord, I have feared thee, because thou art an austere man: I hid my talents, lest thou shouldst take me, and cast me into prison: and lo, here are the pounds, which I gave thee.

29 And he will smite that servant, which shall say unto him, My lord, I have feared thee, because thou art an austere man: I hid my talents, lest thou shouldst take me, and cast me into prison: and lo, here are the pounds, which I gave thee.

30 And he will smite that servant, which shall say unto him, My lord, I have feared thee, because thou art an austere man: I hid my talents, lest thou shouldst take me, and cast me into prison: and lo, here are the pounds, which I gave thee.

31 And he will smite that servant, which shall say unto him, My lord, I have feared thee, because thou art an austere man: I hid my talents, lest thou shouldst take me, and cast me into prison: and lo, here are the pounds, which I gave thee.

32 And he will smite that servant, which shall say unto him, My lord, I have feared thee, because thou art an austere man: I hid my talents, lest thou shouldst take me, and cast me into prison: and lo, here are the pounds, which I gave thee.

33 And he will smite that servant, which shall say unto him, My lord, I have feared thee, because thou art an austere man: I hid my talents, lest thou shouldst take me, and cast me into prison: and lo, here are the pounds, which I gave thee.

34 And he will smite that servant, which shall say unto him, My lord, I have feared thee, because thou art an austere man: I hid my talents, lest thou shouldst take me, and cast me into prison: and lo, here are the pounds, which I gave thee.

35 And he will smite that servant, which shall say unto him, My lord, I have feared thee, because thou art an austere man: I hid my talents, lest thou shouldst take me, and cast me into prison: and lo, here are the pounds, which I gave thee.

36 And he will smite that servant, which shall say unto him, My lord, I have feared thee, because thou art an austere man: I hid my talents, lest thou shouldst take me, and cast me into prison: and lo, here are the pounds, which I gave thee.

37 And he will smite that servant, which shall say unto him, My lord, I have feared thee, because thou art an austere man: I hid my talents, lest thou shouldst take me, and cast me into prison: and lo, here are the pounds, which I gave thee.

38 And he will smite that servant, which shall say unto him, My lord, I have feared thee, because thou art an austere man: I hid my talents, lest thou shouldst take me, and cast me into prison: and lo, here are the pounds, which I gave thee.

20 And another came, saying, Lord, Behold, here is thy pound, which I have kept laid up in a napkin:

21 * For I feared thee, because thou art an austere man: thou takest up that thou laydest not down, and reapest that thou didst not sow.

22 And he saith unto him, * Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee, thou wicked servant. * Thou knewest that I was an austere man, taking up that I laid not down, and reaping that I did not sow:

23 Wherefore then gavest not thou my money into the bank, that at my coming I might have required mine own with usury?

24 And he said unto them that stood by, Take from him the pound, and give it to him that hath ten pounds.

25 (And they said unto him, Lord, he hath ten pounds.)

26 For I say unto you, * That unto every one which hath shall be given; and from him that hath not, even that he hath shall be taken away from him.

27 But those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before me.

28 * And when he had thus spoken, * he went before, ascending up to Jerusalem.

29 * And it came to pass, when he was come nigh to Bethphage and Bethany, at the mount called the mount of Olives, he sent two of his disciples, 30 Saying, Go ye into the village over against you; in the which at your entering ye shall find a colt tied, whereon yet never man sat: loose him, and bring him hither.

31 And if any man ask you, Why do ye loose him? thus shall ye say unto him, Because the Lord hath need of him.

32 And they that were sent, went their way, and found even as he had said unto them.

33 And as they were loosing the colt, the owners thereof said unto them, Why loose ye the colt?

34 And they said, The Lord hath need of him.

35 And they brought him to Jesus: and they cast their garments upon the colt, and they set Jesus thereon.

36 * And as they went, they spread their clothes in the way.

37 And when he was come nigh, even now at the descent of the mount of Olives, the whole multitude of the disciples began to rejoice and praise God with a loud voice, for all the mighty works that they had seen;

38 Saying, * Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord; * peace in the heaven, and glory in the highest.

39 And some of the Pharisees, from among the multitude, said unto him, Master, rebuke thy disciples.

40 And he answered, and said unto them, I tell you that if these should hold their peace, * the stones would immediately cry out.

41 * And when he was come near, he beheld the city, and wept over it.

42 Saying, If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes.

43 For the days shall come upon thee, that thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee, and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side, 44 And shall lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within thee; and * they shall not leave in thee one stone upon another; because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation.

45 * And he went into the temple, and began to cast out them that sold therein, and them that bought;

46 Saying unto them, * It is written, My house is the house of prayer: but ye have made it a den of thieves.

47 * And he taught daily in the temple. But * the chief priests and the scribes and the chief of the people sought to destroy him.

48 And could not find what they might do: for all the people were very attentive to hear him.

36 And they brought him to Jesus: and they cast their garments upon the colt, and they set Jesus thereon.

36 * And as they went, they spread their clothes in the way.

37 And when he was come nigh, even now at the descent of the mount of Olives, the whole multitude of the disciples began to rejoice and praise God with a loud voice, for all the mighty works that they had seen;

38 Saying, * Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord; * peace in the heaven, and glory in the highest.

39 And some of the Pharisees, from among the multitude, said unto him, Master, rebuke thy disciples.

40 And he answered, and said unto them, I tell you that if these should hold their peace, * the stones would immediately cry out.

41 * And when he was come near, he beheld the city, and wept over it.

42 Saying, If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes.

43 For the days shall come upon thee, that thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee, and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side, 44 And shall lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within thee; and * they shall not leave in thee one stone upon another; because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation.

45 * And he went into the temple, and began to cast out them that sold therein, and them that bought;

46 Saying unto them, * It is written, My house is the house of prayer: but ye have made it a den of thieves.

47 * And he taught daily in the temple. But * the chief priests and the scribes and the chief of the people sought to destroy him.

48 And could not find what they might do: for all the people were very attentive to hear him.

<sup>a</sup> Matt. 23: 24-28; 2 Sam. 1: 16. Job 15: 6. Matt. 12: 37-40; Matt. 23: 26-40; Matt. 12: 12 & 25: 28; Matt. 4: 15. Ch. 8. Matt. 21: 1. Mark 11: 1-7. John 12: 14. -x. Matt. 21: 6.-y. Psa. 118: 7. Kings 9: 13. Matt. 21: 7. John 12: 14. -x. Matt. 21: 6.-y. Psa. 118: 25. Ch. 13: 35.-x. Ch. 2: 14. Eph. 2: 14.-x. Heb. 2: 11.

<sup>b</sup> John 11: 35.-x. Isa. 53: 4. Jer. 6: 3. Chap. 21: 30.-x. Kings 9: 7, 8. Psa. 2: 12 & 25: 28. Mark 12: 9. Ch. 31. -x. Psa. 5: 24. Ch. 13: 35. -x. 1 Peter 2: 12.-x. Matt. 21: 2. Mark 11: 15. John 2: 14, 15.-x. Isa. 26: 7.-x. Jer. 7: 11.-x. Mark 11: 18. John 7: 19 & 8: 27.-x. Or, hanged on him, Acts 16: 14.

to each man's ability, seem to intimate, that God has given different capacities and advantages to men, by which, this one gift of the Gospel may be differently improved.

17. Over ten cities.] This is to be understood as referring to the new kingdom which the nobleman had just received. His former trustiest and most faithful servants be now represents as being made governors under him, over a number of cities, according to the capacity he found in each; which capacity was known by the improvement of the minas.

20. Lord, behold here is thy pound.] See Matt. xxv. 18.

23. With usury?] Exv. roxv, with it produce, i. e. what the loan of the money is fairly worth, after paying the person sufficiently for using it: for in least money, both the lender and borrower are supposed to reap profit.

25. And they said unto him, Lord, he hath ten pounds.] This whole verse is omitted by the Codex Bezae, a few others, and some copies of the Itala. It is probably an observation that some person made while our Lord was delivering the parable, with a design to correct him in the distribution: as if he had said, "Why give the minas to that person? he has got ten already; give it to one of those who has fewer."

26. And from him that hath not.] See this particularly explained Matt. xiii. 12. Perhaps it would be well, with Bishop Pearson, to supply the word gained—give it to him who hath gained ten minas: for I say unto you, That unto every one who hath gained, shall be given; and from him who hath not gained, even that which he hath received shall be taken away.

27. Those enemies—bring hither.] The Jews, whom I shall shortly slay by the sword of the Romans.

28. He went before.] Joyfully to anticipate his death, say some. Perhaps it means that he walked at the head of his disciples; and that he and his disciples kept on the road before other companies who were then also on their way to Jerusalem, in order to be present at the feast.

29-33. See this triumphant entry into Jerusalem explained at large, on Matt. xxi. 1.—11. and Mark xi. 1.—10.

33. Glory in the highest.] May thou receive the uttermost degree of glory! See on Matt. xxi. 9.

40. If these should hold their peace, the stones would cry out.] Of such importance is my present conduct to you and to others, being expressly predicted by one of your own prophets, Zech. ix. 9. as pointing out the triumph of humility over pride, and of meekness over rage and malice, as signifying the salvation which I bring to the lost souls of men, that if this multitude were silent, God would give even to the stones a voice, that the advent of the Messiah might be duly celebrated.

41. And wept over it.] See on Matt. xxiii. 37.

42. The things which belong unto thy peace.] It is very likely that our Lord here alludes to the meaning of the word Jerusalem, ירושלים, Jerushalaim, he shall see; and שְׁלוֹמָה, shalom, peace or prosperity. Now because the inhabitants of it had not seen this peace and salvation, because they had refused to embrace their eyes, and behold this glorious light of heaven which shone among them; therefore he said, see they are hidden from thy eyes, still alluding to the import of the name.

43. Cast a trench about thee.] This was literally fulfilled when this city was besieged by Titus. Josephus gives a very particular account of the building of this wall, which he says was effected in three days, though it was not less than thirty-nine furlongs in circumference: and that when this wall and trench were completed, the Jews were so enclosed on every side, that no person could escape out of the city, and no provision could be brought in, so that they were reduced to the most terrible distress by the famine which ensued. The whole account is well worth the reader's attention. See Josephus, War, book v. chap. xii. sec. 1, 2, 3.

44. The time of thy visitation.] That is, the time of God's gracious offers of mercy to thee. This took in all the time which elapsed from the preaching of John the Baptist to the coming of the Roman armies, which included a period of above forty years.

45. Went into the temple.] See all this transaction explained, Matt. xxi. 12—16.

47. And he taught daily in the temple.] This he did for five or six days before his crucifixion. Some suppose that it was on Monday in the passion week that he thus entered into Jerusalem, and purified the temple: and on Thursday he was seized late at night: during these four days he taught in the temple, and lodged each night at Bethany. See the note on Matt. xxi. 17.

48. Were very attentive to hear him.] Or, they heard him with the utmost attention, ἐκπεπαυροσιν αὐρου ακουουσιν, literally, They hung upon him, hearing. The same form of speech is used often by both Greek and Latin writers of the best repute. "Ex vultu dicentis, pendet omnium vultus." The face of every man hung on the face of the speaker. "Penditque sermum narrantis ab ore." Vms. An. iv. 79. And she hung again on the lips of the narrator.

The words of the evangelist, mark not only the deepest attention, because of the importance of the subject, but also the very high gratification which the hearers had from the discourse. Those who read or hear the words of Christ in this way, must inevitably become wise to salvation.

The reader is requested to refer to Matt. xxiv. and to Matt. xxv. 14. for more extensive information on the different subjects in this chapter, and to the other parallel places marked in the margin. The prophecy relative to the destruction of Jerusalem, is one of the most circumstantial, and the most literally fulfilled of any prediction ever delivered. See this particularly remarked at the conclusion of Matt. chap. xxiv. where the whole subject is amply reviewed.

CHAPTER XX.

The question concerning the authority of Christ, and the baptism of John, 1-8. The parable of the vineyard let out to wicked husbandmen, 9-18. The chief priests and scribes are offended, and lay snares for him, 19, 20. The question about tribute, 21-26. The question about the resurrection of the dead, and our Lord's answer, 27-40. How Christ is the son of David, 41-44. He warns his disciples against the hypocrisy of the scribes, whose condemnation he points out 45-47. [A. M. 4038. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCII. l.]

AND it came to pass, that on one of those days, as he taught the people in the temple, and preached the Gospel, the chief priests and the scribes came upon him with the elders, and spake unto him, saying, Tell us by what authority doest thou these things? or who is he that gave thee this authority?

And he answered and said unto them, I will also ask you one thing: and answer me:

The baptism of John, was it from heaven, or of men?

And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, from heaven: he will say, Why then believed ye him not?

But and if we say, Of men: all the people will stone us: for they be persuaded that John was a prophet.

And they answered, that they could not tell whence it was.

And Jesus said unto them, Neither tell I you by what authority I do these things.

Then began he to speak to the people this parable: A certain man planted a vineyard, and let it forth to husbandmen, and went into a far country for a long time.

And at the season he sent a servant to the husbandmen, that they should give him of the fruit of the vineyard: but the husbandmen beat him, and sent him away empty.

And again he sent another servant: and they beat him also, and entreated him shamefully, and sent him away empty.

And again he sent a third: and they wounded him also, and cast him out.

Then said the lord of the vineyard, What shall I do? I will send my beloved son: it may be they will reverence him when they see him.

But when the husbandmen saw him, they reasoned among themselves, saying, This is the heir: come, let us kill him, that the inheritance may be ours.

So they cast him out of the vineyard, and killed him. What therefore shall the lord of the vineyard do unto them?

He shall come and destroy those husbandmen, and shall give the vineyard to others. And when they heard it, they said, God forbid.

And he beheld them, and said, What is this then that is written, The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner?

And whosoever shall fall upon that stone shall be broken: but on whomsoever it shall fall it will grind him to powder.

And the chief priests and the scribes the same hour sought to lay hands on him; and they feared the people: for they perceived that he had spoken this parable against them.

And they watched him, and sent forth spies, which should feign themselves just men, that they might take hold of his words, that so they might deliver him unto the power and authority of the governor.

And they asked him, saying, Master, we know that thou sayest and teachest rightly, neither acceptest thou the person of any, but teachest the way of God truly:

And he said unto them, I have said unto you, I know not the man's name.

And they sought to kill him, but they feared the people.

And he departed thence, and went into the temple, and taught, and said unto them, I have said unto you, I know not the man's name.

And they sought to kill him, but they feared the people.

And he departed thence, and went into the temple, and taught, and said unto them, I have said unto you, I know not the man's name.

And they sought to kill him, but they feared the people.

And he departed thence, and went into the temple, and taught, and said unto them, I have said unto you, I know not the man's name.

And they sought to kill him, but they feared the people.

And he departed thence, and went into the temple, and taught, and said unto them, I have said unto you, I know not the man's name.

And they sought to kill him, but they feared the people.

And he departed thence, and went into the temple, and taught, and said unto them, I have said unto you, I know not the man's name.

And they sought to kill him, but they feared the people.

And he departed thence, and went into the temple, and taught, and said unto them, I have said unto you, I know not the man's name.

And they sought to kill him, but they feared the people.

And he departed thence, and went into the temple, and taught, and said unto them, I have said unto you, I know not the man's name.

And they sought to kill him, but they feared the people.

And he departed thence, and went into the temple, and taught, and said unto them, I have said unto you, I know not the man's name.

And they sought to kill him, but they feared the people.

And he departed thence, and went into the temple, and taught, and said unto them, I have said unto you, I know not the man's name.

And they sought to kill him, but they feared the people.

And he departed thence, and went into the temple, and taught, and said unto them, I have said unto you, I know not the man's name.

Is it lawful for us to give tribute unto Caesar, or no?

But he perceived their craftiness, and said unto them, Why tempt ye me?

Show me a penny. Whose image and superscription hath it? They answered and said, Caesar's.

And he said unto them, Render therefore unto Caesar the things which be Caesar's, and unto God the things which be God's.

And they could not take hold of his words before the people: and they marvelled at his answer, and held their peace.

Then came to him certain of the Sadducees, which deny that there is any resurrection; and they asked him, Saying, Master, Moses wrote unto us, If any man's brother die, having a wife, and he die without children, that his brother should take his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother.

There were therefore seven brethren: and the first took a wife, and died without children.

And the second took her to wife, and he died childless.

And the third took her; and in like manner the seven also: and they left no children, and died.

Last of all the woman died also.

Therefore in the resurrection whose wife of them is she? for seven had her to wife.

And Jesus answering said unto them, The children of this world marry, and are given in marriage:

But they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage:

Neither can they die any more: for they are equal unto the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection.

Now that the dead are raised, even Moses showed at the bush, when he calleth the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob.

For he is not a God of the dead, but of the living: for all live unto him.

Then certain of the scribes answering, said, Master, thou hast well said.

And after that they durst not ask him any question at all.

And he said unto them, How say they that Christ is David's son?

And David himself saith in the book of Psalms, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand,

Till I make thine enemies thy footstool.

David therefore calleth him Lord, how is he then his son?

Then in the audience of all the people he said unto his disciples,

Beware of the scribes which desire to walk in long robes, and love greetings in the markets, and the highest seats in the synagogues, and the chief rooms at feasts;

Which devour widows' houses, and for a show make long prayers: the same shall receive greater damnation.

And he said unto them, I have said unto you, I know not the man's name.

And they sought to kill him, but they feared the people.

And he departed thence, and went into the temple, and taught, and said unto them, I have said unto you, I know not the man's name.

And they sought to kill him, but they feared the people.

And he departed thence, and went into the temple, and taught, and said unto them, I have said unto you, I know not the man's name.

And they sought to kill him, but they feared the people.

And he departed thence, and went into the temple, and taught, and said unto them, I have said unto you, I know not the man's name.

NOTES.—Verse 1. One of these days] Supposed to have been one of the four last days of his life, mentioned chap. xix. 47, probably Tuesday before the passover.

2. By what authority, &c.] See the note on Matt. xxi. 23—27.

3. A certain man planted a vineyard, &c.] See this parable largely explained, Matt. xxi. 33—46. See also on Mark xii. 4—9.

6. God forbid.] Or, let it not be, my yeovra. Our phrase, God forbid, answers pretty well to the meaning of the Greek, but it is no translation.

19. Grind him to powder.] See on Matt. xxi. 44.

20. They watched him] Παρασπύροντες, insidiously watching. See on chap. xiv. 1.

21. Spies] Επασπύροντες, from ερ, in, and σπύρον, I let down, to set in ambush. One who crouches in some secret place to spy, listen, catch, or hurt. Hesiychius explains the word by ἀποσπύροντες, those who lie in wait, or in ambush, to surprise and slay. Josephus uses the word to signify a person bribed for a particular purpose. See War, b. ii. c. 2. a. 5. and b. vi. c. 5. a. 2. No doubt the persons mentioned in the text were men of the basest principles, and were hired by the malicious Pharisees to do what they attempted in vain to perform.

22. Is it lawful for us to give tribute unto Caesar? See this incident, but important question, considered at large on Matt. xxii. 16—22.

29. There were therefore seven brethren] See on Matt. xxii. 23—33.

34. The children of this world] Men and women in their present state of mortality and probation; procreation being necessary to restore the waste made by death, and to keep up the population of the earth.

36. Equal unto the angels] Who neither marry nor die. See the Jewish testimonies to the resurrection of the barren lady, quoted at length on 1 Cor. xv. 42.

38. All these unto him.] There is a remarkable passage in Josephus's account of the Maccabees, chap. xvi. which proves that the best informed Jews believed that the souls of righteous men were in the presence of God in a state of happiness.

"They who love their lives for the sake of God, live unto God as do Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and the rest of the patriarchs."

And one not less remarkable in Shemath Rabbi, fol. 159. "Rabbi Abbin saith, the Lord said unto Moses, and me out ten righteous persons among the people, and I will not destroy thy people."

Then said Moses, Behold, here am I, Aaron, Eliazar, Ithamar, Phineas, Caleb, and Joshua; but God said here are but seven, where are the other three?

When Moses knew not what to do, he said, O Eternal God, do these live that are dead? Yes, saith God. Then said Moses, if those that are dead do live, remember Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob."

So the resurrection of the dead, and the immortality and immateriality of the soul, were not strange or unknown doctrines among the Jews.

40. They durst not ask] Or, did not venture to ask any other question, for fear of being again confounded as they had already been.

41. How say they] See the note on Matt. xxii. 42—46.

43. Thy footstool] Literally the footstool of thy feet. They shall not be so far humbled that the feet may be set on them; but they shall be actually subjected, and put completely under that Christ whom they now despise, and are about to crucify.

46. Beware of the scribes] Take heed that ye be not seduced by those who should show you the way of salvation. See on Matt. xxiii. 4—14.

1. How it can be supposed that the ancient Jewish church had no distinct notion of the resurrection of the dead, is to me truly surprising.—The justice of God, as peculiarity conspicuous under the old covenant, might have led the people to infer that there must be a resurrection of the dead, if even the passage to which our Lord refers, had not made a part of our law. As the body makes a part of the man, justice requires, that not only they who are martyrs for the testimony of God, but also all those who have devoted their lives to his service, and died in his yoke, should have their bodies raised again. The justice of God is as much concerned in the resurrection of the dead, as either his power or mercy.—To be freed from earthly incumbrances, earthly passions, bodily infirmities, sickness, and death, to be brought into a state of conscious existence with a refined body, and a sublime soul, both immortal, and both ineffably happy; how glorious the privilege! But of this, who shall be counted worthy in that day? Only those who have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb; and who, by patient continuing in well-doing, have sought for glory, and honour, and immortality.

2 A bad example, supported by the authority, reputation, and majesty of religion, is a very subtle poison, from which it is very difficult for men to preserve themselves. It is a great misfortune for any people to be obliged to beware of those very persons who ought to be their rule and pattern.—This is a reflection of pious Father Quenal; and while we admire its depth, we may justly lament that the evil he refers to should be so prevalent, as to render the observation, and the caution on which it is founded, so necessary. But let no man imagine that bad and immoral ministers are to be found among one class of persons only. They are to be found in the branches as well as in the root: in the different sects and parties, as well as in the mother or national churches, from which the others have separated. On either hand there is little room for glorying.—Professors and Ministers may change, but the Truth of the Lord abideth for ever.

CHAPTER XXI.

The poor widow casting two mites into the treasury, 1—4. The destruction of the temple foretold, 5, 6. The signs of this desolation, 7. False Christs, 8, Wars, 9, 10. Earthquakes and fearful sights, 11. Persecutions against the godly, 12—19. Directions how to escape, 20—22. The tribulation of those times, 23—25. The parable of the fig-tree, illustrative of the time when they may expect these calamities, 26—33. The necessity of sobriety and watchfulness, 34—36. He teaches by day in the temple, and lodges by night in the mount of Olives, and the people come early to hear him, 37, 38. [A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCL. 1.]

AND he looked up, and saw the rich men casting their gifts into the treasury.

2 And he saw also a certain poor widow casting in thither two mites.

3 And he said, Of a truth I say unto you, that this poor widow hath cast in more than they all:

4 For all these have of their abundance cast in unto the offerings of God: but she of her penury hath cast in all the living that she had.

5 And as some spake of the temple, how it was adorned with goodly stones and gifts, he said,

6 As for these things which ye behold, the days will come, in the which there shall not be left one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down.

7 And they asked him, saying, Master, but when shall these things be? and what sign will there be when these things shall come to pass?

8 And he said, Take heed that ye be not deceived: for many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and the time draweth near: go ye not therefore after them.

9 But when ye shall hear of wars and commotions, be not terrified: for these things must first come to pass; but the end is not by and by.

10 Then said he unto them, Nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom:

11 And great earthquakes shall be in divers places, and famines, and pestilences; and fearful sights, and great signs shall there be from heaven.

12 But before all these, they shall lay their hands on you, and persecute you, delivering you up to the synagogues, and into prisons, being brought before kings and rulers for my name's sake.

13 And it shall turn to you for a testimony.

14 Settle it therefore in your hearts, not to meditate before what ye shall answer:

15 For I will give you a mouth and wisdom, which all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay nor resist.

16 And ye shall be betrayed both by parents, and brethren, and kinsfolks, and friends; and some of you shall they cause to be put to death.

17 And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake.

18 But there shall not a hair of your head perish.

19 In your patience possess ye your souls.

20 And when ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh.

21 Then let them which are in Judea flee to the mountains; and let them which are in the midst of it depart out; and let not them that are in the countries enter therein.

22 For these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled.

23 But wo unto them that are with child, and to them that give suck, in those days! for there shall be great distress in the land, and wrath upon this people.

24 And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled.

25 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

26 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

26 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

27 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

28 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

29 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

30 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

31 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

32 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

33 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

34 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

35 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

36 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

37 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

38 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

39 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

40 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

41 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

42 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

43 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

44 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

45 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

46 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

47 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

48 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

49 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

50 And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; and the sea and the waves roaring;

NOTES.—Verse 1. The rich men casting their gifts into the treasury.] See verse 1 to 4. explained on Mark xii. 41—44.

2. A certain poor widow.] A widow miserably poor; this is the proper import of πεινησαν, and her being miserably poor heightened the merit of the action.

(Two mites) Which Mark says, chap. xii. 42. make a farthing, or quadrans, the fourth part of an as, or penny, as we term it. In Plutarch's time we find the smallest piece of brass coin in use among the Romans was the quadrans, but it appears that a smaller piece of money was in circulation among the Jews in our Lord's time, called here, and in Mark, chap. xii. 42, a lepton, i. e. small, diminished, from leptos, I fall. In ancient times our penny used to be marked with a deep indented cross, dividing the piece into four equal parts, which, when broken in two, made the half-penny, and when broken into four made the fourthing, what we have corrupted into farthing. Probably the Roman quadrans was divided in this way for the convenience of the poor. Our term mite seems to have been taken from the animal called by that name; for as that appeared to our ancestors to be the smallest of all animals, so this being the smallest of all coins was called by its name. Junius says that mittle was a small base coin among the Dutch. Our word mite seems to be a contraction of the Latin minutus, a small thing, whence the French mieste, a crumb, a very small morsel. See the note on Mark xii. 41.

5. Goodly stones] Or, costly stones. It has been thought, by some, that this relates not so much to the stones of which the temple was built, but to the precious stones with which it was decorated. For stones of the temple, see on Mark xiii. 1.

And gifts] Or consecrated things, αγιασματα, Αγιασμα, properly signifies a thing consecrated to sacred uses: Αγιασμα, signifies a thing devoted to a curse, or to destruction. They both come from the same root, αγιασμαι, I lay up, separate: and though two meanings cannot be more opposite than those assigned to these words, yet in the words themselves a short vowel (ε) in the place of a long one (η) makes all the difference between blessing and cursing.

6. One stone upon another] This was literally fulfilled. See Matt. xxiv. 2.

8. Many shall come in my name] Usurping my name; calling themselves the Messiah. See Matt. xiv. 5. Concerning this prediction of the destruction of Jerusalem, and its literal accomplishment, see the notes on Matt. xiv. 1—42.

9. Commotions] Seditions and civil dissensions, with which no people were more agitated than the Jews.

11. Fearful sights] What these were the reader will find in detail in the notes on Matt. xxiv. 7.

12. Synagogues] Or, assemblies, &c. See these all explained on Mark xii. 9.

13. It shall turn to you for a testimony.] That is, R shall turn out on your part for a testimony to them, (your persecutors,) that you are thoroughly persuaded of the truth of what you teach: and that you are no impostors.

14. Settle it therefore, &c.] See on Matt. x. 19.

15. I will give you a mouth and wisdom] Σωφια, a mouth, must appear plain to every person to be used here for a ready utterance, or eloquence in speaking. They shall have an abundance of wisdom to know what to say: and they shall have an irresistible eloquence to say what they ought.

18. But there shall not a hair of your head perish.] A proverbial expression for, ye shall not suffer any essential injury. Every genuine Christian shall escape when this desolation comes upon the Jewish state.

19. In your patience] Rather, your perseverance, your faithful continuance in my word and doctrine. Ye will preserve your souls. Ye shall escape the Roman sword, and not one of you shall perish in the destruction of Jerusalem. Instead of κρανασθη, possess or preserve ye, I read κρανασθε, ye shall persevere. This reading is supported by AB—B. See others, both the Syriac, all the Arabic, Æthiopic, Vulgate, all the Itala except two, Origen, Macarius, and Tertullian.

22. These be the days of vengeance] See on Matt. xxiv. 21.

24. They shall fall by the edge of the sword] Those who perished in the siege, are reckoned to be not less than eleven hundred thousand. See Matt. xxiv. 22.

26 Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after these things which are coming on the earth: * for the powers of heaven shall be shaken.

27 And then shall they see the Son of man * coming in a cloud, with power and great glory.

28 And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh.

29 * And he spake to them a parable; Behold the fig-tree, and all the trees;

30 When they now shoot forth, ye see and know of your own selves, that summer is now nigh at hand.

31 So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand.

32 Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass away till all be fulfilled.

1. Matt. 24. 29.—2. Matt. 24. 30. Rev. 1. 7 & 14. 14.—3. Rom. 8. 19, 23.—4. Matt. 24. 32. Mark 13. 28.—5. Matt. 24. 33.—6. Rom. 12. 13. 1. Thess. 5. 6. 1 Pet. 4. 7.

And shall be led away captive] To the number of ninety-seven thousand. See Josephus, War, b. vi. c. ix. s. 2, 3, and on Matt. xxiv. 31.

Trodden down of the Gentiles] Judea was so completely subjugated, that the very land itself was sold by Vespasian; the Gentiles possessing it, while the Jews were either nearly all killed or led away into captivity.

Of the Gentiles be fulfilled] Till the different nations of the earth, to whom God shall have given the dominion over this land, have accomplished all that which the Lord hath appointed them to do; and till the time of their conversion to God take place. But when shall this be? We know not. The nations are still treading down Jerusalem, and the end is known only to the Lord. See the note on Matt. xxiv. 31.

35. The sea and the waves roaring] Figuratively pointing out the immense Roman armies by which Judea was to be overrun and destroyed.

36. Men's hearts failing them for fear] Or, men fainting away through fear, (Ασθενεσθαι) being ready to die.

Coming on the earth] Or, coming upon this land, οκωμυζεν. See this translation of the word vindicated in note on ch. ii. l.

29. He spake to them a parable] Illustrated all these predicted facts by the simile of a fig tree. See this explained on Matt. xxiv. 32.

31. The kingdom of God is nigh at hand.] After the destruction of the Jewish state, the doctrine of Christ crucified shall be preached every where, and every where prevail.

32. This generation] This race of men; but see on Matt. xxiv. 34. and Mark xiii. 30.

34. Take heed to yourselves] See our Lord's parable relative to this matter explained, Mark xiii. 34.

Be overcharged] Literally be made heavy, as is generally the case with those who have eaten or drunk too much.

33 * Heaven and earth shall pass away: but my words shall not pass away.

34 * And * take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares.

35 For * as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth.

36 * Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man.

37 * And in the day time he was teaching in the temple; and * at night he went out, and abode in the mount that is called the mount of Olives.

38 And all the people came early in the morning to him in the temple, for to hear him.

1. 1. Thess. 5. 2. 2. Pet. 3. 10. Rev. 3. 3. & 16. 16.—2. Matt. 24. 42. & 25. 13. Mark 13. 33.—3. Ch. 13. 1.—4. 1. Pet. 1. 8. Eph. 6. 13.—5. John 8. 1, 2.—6. Ch. 22. 29.

Take heed that ye be not rendered secure by an improper use of lawful things: do not make this earth your portion: expect its dissolution, and prepare to meet your God.

36. The face of the whole earth] Or, of this whole land The land of Judea, on which these heavy judgments were to fall. See ver. 35. see also chap. ii. l.

36. Watch ye therefore, and pray always] Perhaps we should connect εν νηπιε κειται, continually, with αποπειρατε, watch, as it appears to be the most natural order. Indeed the word continually belongs equally to both watch and pray, and no man is safe, at any time, who does not attend to this advice as literally as possible.

That shall come to pass] That is, the tribulations which are on their way to overwhelm and destroy the Jewish people. These are sufficiently stated in the preceding verses.

To stand before the Son of man.] To be acquitted, and to be condemned, are expressed in Rom. xiv. 4. by standing and falling. Those who were faithful to the grace they had received, were not only not destroyed in the destruction of Jerusalem; but became heralds of the grace and mercy of God to the nations. Thus they were counted worthy to stand before the Son of man—to minister salvation in his name.

37. And in the day time] Or, every day—ras nyctas. This probably relates to the four last days of his life already mentioned.

Abode in the mount] He taught all day in the temple, and withdrew every evening, and lodged in Bethany; a town at the foot, or on the declivity of the mount of Olives. See the note on Matt. xxi. 17.

38. The people came early] He returned early from the mount of Olives, and the people came early in the morning to the temple to hear his teaching. For practical observations on the awful subject of this chapter, see Matt. xxiv. at the end.

CHAPTER XXII.

The chief priests and scribes plot our Lord's destruction, 1, 2. Judas, at the instigation of the devil, betrays him, 3-6. He eats his last supper with his disciples, 7-18. Institutes the eucharist, 19, 20. Announces one of his disciples as the traitor, 21-33. The contention which should be greatest, 34-30. Warns Peter against Satan's devices, 31, 32. Peter's resolution, 33. His denial foretold, 34. Tells his disciples to make prudent provision for their own support, 35-37. The two swords, 38. He goes to the mount of Olives, and has his agony in the garden, 39-46. Judas comes with a mob, 47, 48. Peter cuts off the ear of the high-priest's servant, which Christ heals by a touch, 49-51. He addresses the chief priests and captains of the temple, 52, 53. They lead him to the high-priest's house, and Peter follows, and denies his Master, 54-60. Christ looks upon him, he is stung with remorse, and weeps bitterly, 61, 62. Jesus is mocked, and variously insulted, 63-65. The next morning he is questioned before the council, 66, 67. He acknowledges himself to be the Son of God, 68-70. They condemn him, 71. [A. M. 4038. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCII. 1.]

NOW * the feast of unleavened bread drew nigh, which is called the pass-over.

2 And * the chief priests and scribes sought how they might kill him; for they feared the people.

1. Matt. 26. 2. Mark 14. 1.—2. Matt. 26. 2. John 11. 47. Acts 1. 12.

NOTES.—Verse 1. The feast of unleavened bread, &c.] See this largely explained Exod. xxiii. 14. Levit. xxiii. 2-40. and on Matt. xxvi. 2.

2. They feared the people] The great mass of the people seem to have been convinced that Christ was at least a prophet sent from God; and it is likely they kept steady in their attachment to him. The multitude, who are represented as clamouring for his blood at the crucifixion, appear to have been a mere mob, formed out of the creatures of the chief priests and Pharisees.

3. Then entered Satan into Judas] The devil filled the heart of Judas with avarice; and that infamous passion led him to commit the crime here specified. This at once accounts for that whole of this most unprincipled and unnatural transaction. None but a devil, or he who was possessed by one, could have been guilty of it:—let the living lay this to heart. A minister of the Gospel, who is a lover of money, is constantly betraying the interests of Christ. He cannot serve two masters; and while his heart is possessed with the love of self, the love of God, and zeal for perishing souls, cannot dwell in him. What Satan could not do by the envy and malice of the high-priests and Pharisees; he effects by Judas, a false and fallen minister of the Gospel of God. None are so dangerous to the interests of Christianity as persons of this stamp.

4. And captains] Among the priests who were in waiting at the temple, some were appointed φυλακας, for a guard to the temple; and over these were στρατηγους, commanding officers:

3 * * Then entered Satan into Judas surnamed Iscariot, being of the number of the twelve.

4 And he went his way, and communed with the chief priests and captains, how he might betray him unto them.

1. Matt. 26. 14. Mark 14. 10. John 13. 2, 27.

both sorts are mentioned by Josephus, War, b. vi. c. 5. s. 3. Bp. PEARCE. See another sense of captains, in the note on Matt. xxvii. 65. Dr. Lightfoot supposes these to have been the captains over the watches; for in three places the priests kept watch and ward in the temple, viz. in Beth Abiata, in Beth Nisots, and in Beth Mokad. The Levites also in twenty-one places more, Middoth, chap. 1. Though these watches consisted of several persons in each, there was one set over them, as the captain or head of that watch. He thinks that Matthew, chap. xxvii. 65. refers to one of these: Ye have a watch of your own; let some of them be sent to guard these sepulchres. The captain of the temple, he supposes to have been the chief or head of all these watches; and thus he was captain of the captains. In the same Talmudical tract it is said, The ruler of the mountain of the temple, (i. e. captain of the temple) takes his walk through every watch with torches lighted before him: If he found any upon the watch, that he was not standing on his feet, he said, Peace be with thee: but if he found him sleeping, he struck him with a stick, and he might also burn his clothes. And when it was said by others, What noise is that in the court? the answer was, It is the noise of a Levite under correction, whose garments they are burning, because he slept upon his watch. This custom casts light on Rev. xvi. 16. Behold I come as a thief: blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame. It is easy to distinguish this captain of the mountain of the temple, from the ruler of the temple or sagan: the former pro-

5 And they were glad, and 4 covenanted to give him money.
 6 And he promised, and sought opportunity to betray him unto them, 4 in the absence of the multitude.
 7 ¶ Then came the day of unleavened bread, when the pass-over must be killed.
 8 And he sent Peter and John, saying, Go and prepare us the pass-over, that we may eat.
 9 And they said unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare?
 10 And he said unto them, Behold, when ye are entered into the city, there shall a man meet you, bearing a pitcher of water; follow him into the house where he entereth in.
 11 And ye shall say unto the good man of the house, The Master saith unto thee, Where is the guest-chamber, where I shall eat the pass-over with my disciples?
 12 And he shall show you a large upper room furnished: there make ready.

13 And they went, and found as he had said unto them: and they made ready the pass-over.
 14 ¶ And when the hour was come, he sat down, and the twelve apostles with him.
 15 And he said unto them, With desire I have desired to eat this pass-over with you before I suffer:
 16 For I say unto you, I will not any more eat thereof, 1 until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God.
 17 And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and said, Take this, and divide it among yourselves:
 18 For I say unto you, I will not drink of the fruit of the vine, until the kingdom of God shall come.
 19 ¶ And he took bread, and gave thanks, and brake it, and gave unto them, saying, This is my body which is given for you: 2 this do in remembrance of me.

2 Zech. 11. 12.—Or, without thank.—Matt. 26. 17. Mark 14. 12.—p. Matt. 26. 20. Matt. 14. 17.—Or, I have heartily desired.—1 Ch. 14. 15. Acts 10. 41. Rev. 19. 9.—p. Matt. 26. 17. Mark 14. 25.—1 Matt. 26. 21. Mark 14. 28.—in 1 Cor. 11. 26.—n. 1 Cor. 10. 16.—p. Ps. 41. 9. Matt. 26. 21, 23. Mark 14. 18. John 13. 21, 28.—p. Matt. 26. 21.—1 Ps. 42. 2. & 4. 2.

side only over the guards; the latter over the whole service of the temple. We have them both distinguished Acts iv. 1. there is the captain of the temple; and Annas, who was the sagan. See Lightfoot.

5. They—covenanted to give him money.] Matthew says thirty pieces, or staters, of silver, about 4l. 10s. English, the common price of the meanest slave. See the note on Matt. xxvi. 15.

6. And he promised] That is, to do it.—εἰσπαρονοῶν: or, he accepted the proposal.—See Wakefield.

7. The pass-over] Πάσχα, ver. 1. is the name of the feast; το πάσχα here, is supposed to be the name of that on which they feasted, viz. the sacrificed paschal lamb. But see the notes on Matt. xxvi. and especially the observations at the end of that chapter.

8.—13. He sent Peter and John, &c.] See the subject of these verses largely explained on Matt. xxvi. 17—19. and Mark xiv. 13, 15.

14. And when the hour was come] That is, the evening. See Matt. xxvi. 20. and Mark xiv. 17.

15. With desire I have desired] A Hebraism for, I have desired most earnestly. Our Lord's meaning seems to be, that having purposed to redeem a lost world by his blood, he ardently longed for the time in which he was to offer himself up. Such love did the holy Jesus bear to the human race. This eucharistic pass-over was celebrated once by way of anticipation, before the bloody sacrifice of the victim of salvation, and before the deliverance it was appointed to commemorate; as the figurative pass-over had been likewise once celebrated before the going out of Egypt, and the deliverance of God's chosen people. Queen.

16. Until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God] That is, until that of which the pass-over is a type, is fulfilled in my death, through which the kingdom of God, or of heaven, (see Matt. iii. 2.) shall be established among men.

17. He took the cup] This was not the sacramental cup, for that was taken after supper, ver. 20. but was the cup which was ordinarily taken before supper.

Divide it among yourselves] Pass the cup from one to another; thus the cup which Christ gave to the first person on his right hand, continued to be handed from one to another, till it came to the last person on his left.

18. I will not drink of the fruit of the vine] That is, before the time of another pass-over, the Holy Ghost shall descend, the Gospel of the kingdom be established, and the sacramental supper shall take place of the paschal lamb: for in a few hours his crucifixion was to take place. See on Matt. xxvi. 29.

19. Took bread] See the nature and design of the Lord's supper explained in the notes on Matt. xxvi. 26—29.

This do in remembrance of me.] That the Jews in eating the pass-over, did it to represent the sufferings of the Messiah, is evident from the tract Peasachim, fol. 119. quoted by Schoettgen.—Why do we call this the great hall? (i. e. the hymn composed of several psalms, which they sung after the paschal supper.) Ans. Because in it these five things are contained. 1. The Exodus from Egypt. 2. The dividing of the Red Sea. 3. The promulgation of the law. 4. The resurrection of the dead. And 5. The sufferings of the Messiah. The first referred to Psa. cxlv. 1. When Israel went out of Egypt. The second in Psa. cxlv. 3. The sea saw it, and fled. The third in Psa. cxlv. 4. The mountains skipped like rams. The fourth in Psa. cxlv. 9. I will walk before the 30 Likewise also the cup after supper, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you.

21 ¶ But, behold, the hand of him that betrayeth me is with me on the table.

22 ¶ And truly the Son of man goeth, as it was determined: but wo unto that man by whom he is betrayed!

23 ¶ And they began to inquire among themselves, which of them it was that should do this thing.

24 ¶ And there was also a strife among them, which of them should be accounted the greatest.

25 ¶ And he said unto them, The kings of the Gentiles exercise lordship over them; and they that exercise authority upon them are called benefactors.

26 ¶ But ye shall not be so: but he that is greatest among you, let him be as the younger; and he that is chief, as he that doth serve.

27 ¶ For whether is greater, he that sitteth at meat, or he that serveth? is not he that sitteth at meat? but I am among you as he that serveth.

28 Ye are they which have continued with me in my temptations.

29 And I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me;

30 That ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel.

31 ¶ And the Lord said, Simon, Simon; behold, Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat:

32 But I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not: and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren.

33 And he said unto him, Lord, I am ready to go with thee, both into prison, and to death.

21 Matt. 26. 23. John 13. 27. 28.—Matt. 26. 24. Luke 22. 21.—Matt. 26. 25. Mark 14. 27.—Matt. 26. 26. 1 Pet. 2. 2.—Ch. 12. 32.—1 Matt. 26. 28. John 13. 14. Phil. 2. 7.—Hab. 4. 15.—Matt. 26. 27. Ch. 12. 32. 2 Cor. 1. 7. 2 Tim. 2. 22.—1 Matt. 8. 11. Ch. 14. 16. Rev. 19. 9.—Psa. 49. 14. Matt. 19. 28. 1 Cor. 6. 2. Rev. 3. 21.—1 Pet. 2. 8.—1 Amos 9. 9.—John 17. 2, 14, 15.—1 Psa. 91. 13. John 2. 15, 16, 17.

Lord in the land of the living. The fish in Psa. cxvi. 1. Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto thy name give glory; for thy mercy and thy truth's sake. See on Matt. xxvi. 30.

20. This cup is the new testament in my blood] Perhaps it might be better to paraphrase the passage thus; This cup which is poured out for you, signifies the blood of the new covenant, which is shortly to be ratified in (or by) the shedding of my blood. Or, This cup is the new covenant, poured out for you with my blood—that is, the paschal sacrifice and my sacrifice happen together. But see Kypke.

It does not appear that our Lord handed either the bread or the cup to each person: he gave it to him who was next to him, and by handing it from one to another, they shared it among themselves, ver. 17. In this respect, the present mode of administering the Lord's supper is not strictly according to the original institution.

21. The hand of him that betrayeth me, &c.] What can be desired more, says Dr. Lightfoot, as a demonstration that Judas was present at the Eucharist? and whereas the contrary is endeavoured to be proved out of John xiii. nothing is made out of nothing; for there is not one syllable throughout that whole chapter, of the paschal supper; but of a supper before the feast of the pass-over.

22. The Son of man goeth] That is, he is about to die. Απερχομαι, ορχομαι, abire, going, going away, and departing, are used by the best Greek and Latin writers, for death and dying. See Rosenmuller.

23. They began to inquire among themselves] See the notes on Matt. xxvi. 23, 24.

24. There was also a strife among them] There are several different instances of this sort of contention or strife mentioned by the evangelists, each of which was accompanied with very different circumstances; one by Matthew, in chap. xviii. 1. &c. by Mark, chap. ix. 33. &c. and by Luke, in chap. ix. 46. 1. &c. That contention cannot have been the same with this which is mentioned here. The other, related in Matt. xx. 20. &c. and Mark x. 35. &c. must be what Luke intended here to record; and this strife or contention was occasioned by the request which Zebedee's wife made to our Lord in favour of her sons, James and John: but then, Luke has mentioned this very much out of the order of time, it having happened while our Lord and his disciples were on their way to Jerusalem; Matt. x. 17. Mark x. 32. See Bp. PRABER.

25. Are called benefactors] The very Greek word used by the evangelists, εὐεργεταί, was the surname of some of the Ptolemies of Egypt: Ptolemy Energetes, i. e. the Benefactor. It was a custom among the ancient Romans, to distribute part of the lands which they had conquered on the frontiers of the empire to their soldiers; those who had enjoyed such lands were called beneficiarii, benefited persons; and the lands themselves were termed beneficia, benefices, as being held on the beneficence of the sovereign, and it is no wonder that such sovereigns, however tyrannical or oppressive they might have been in other respects, were termed benefactors by those who were thus dependent on their bounty.

26. Let him be as the younger] Dr. Lightfoot justly conjectures that Peter was the eldest of all the disciples; and he supposes that the strife was kindled between him and the sons of Zebedee, James and John. These three disciples were those whom Christ had distinguished by peculiar marks of his favour: and therefore it is natural to conclude, that the strife lay between these three, the two brothers and Peter. Siball

34<sup>a</sup> And he said, I tell thee, Peter, the cock shall not crow this day, before that thou shalt thrice deny that thou knowest me.

35<sup>b</sup> And he said unto them, When I sent you without purse, and scrip, and shoes, lacked ye any thing? And they said, Nothing.

36 Then said he unto them, But now, he that hath a purse, let him take it, and likewise his scrip: and he that hath no sword, let him sell his garment, and buy one.

37 For I say unto you, that this that is written must yet be accomplished in me, I And he was reckoned among the transgressors: for the things concerning me have an end.

38 And they said, Lord, behold, here are two swords. And he said unto them, It is enough.

39<sup>b</sup> And he came out, and I went, as he was wont, to the mount of Olives: and his disciples also followed him.

40<sup>a</sup> And when he was at the place, he said unto them, Pray that ye enter not into temptation.

34<sup>a</sup> Matt. 26. 34. Mark 14. 30. John 13. 28.—b Matt. 10. 9. Ch. 9. 3. & 10. 4.—1. Isa. 52. 4. 2. Matt. 23. 34.—3. Matt. 26. 35. Mark 14. 30. John 13. 1.—4. Ch. 21. 37.—5. Matt. 6. 12. & 26. 41. Mark 14. 28. Verse 65.

we or Peter be at the head? Neither, says our Lord. Let him, Peter, who is chief (ἀρχηγός, the eldest) among you, be as John, & scorpis, the younger. The younger part of the disciples do not appear to have taken any part in this contention; and our Lord shows Peter and the sons of Zebedee, that they must be as unambitious as the younger, in order to be acknowledged as his disciples. Dr. Lightfoot thinks that Peter was the mover of this strife, and therefore our Lord rebukes him by name.

39. I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me] The Codex Alexandrinus, with some other MSS., the latter Syriac, and Origen, read, in the first clause, de Jure, a covenant. I appoint unto you a COVENANT, as my Father hath appointed unto me a kingdom:—Yeshall be ministers of the New Covenant, as I am King in that spiritual kingdom to which it relates. This is a curious reading: but our Lord is probably to be understood, as promising that they should get a kingdom—a state of blessedness, as he should get it—they must go through much tribulation, in order to enter into the kingdom of God. So the Son of man suffered, that he might enter into his glory: for the joy that was set before him, he endured the cross, and despised the shame, and is set down on the right hand of God.

39. Sit on thrones] See on Matt. xix. 28. Marcion left the whole of this verse out, according to Epiphanius; probably because he did not understand it.

31. Simon, Simon] When a name is thus repeated in the Sacred Writings, it appears to be always intended as an expression of love, manifested by a warning voice. As if he had said, While thou and the others are contending for supremacy, Satan is endeavouring to destroy you all: but I have prayed for thee, as being in most danger.

Satan hath desired—you] That is, all the apostles, but particularly the three contenders: the plural pronoun vos, sufficiently proves that these words were not addressed to Peter alone. Satan had already got one, Judas; he had nearly got another, Peter; and he wished to have all. But we see by this, that the devil cannot even tempt a man unless he receive permission. He desires to do all evil; he is permitted only to do some.

32. I have prayed for thee] From the natural forwardness and impetuosity of thy own spirit, thou wilt be brought into the most imminent danger; but I have supplicated for thee, that thy faith may not utterly fail—excessu, from ex, out, and arsu, falli, to fall utterly or entirely off. Peter's faith did fall, but not utterly: he did fall, but he did not fall off, apostatize, or forsake his Master and his cause finally, as Judas did. Every body sees from Peter's denial of his Lord, that his faith did fall, and his great courage too; and yet they read, in the common translation, that Christ prayed that it might not fall.—Can they then conceive that our Lord's prayer was heard? The translation which I have given above, removes this embarrassment and apparent contradiction. It was certainly Peter's advantage that our Lord did pray for him: but it was not so much for his honour, that he should stand in need of such a prayer beyond all others. Lightfoot.

When thou art converted] Restored to a sense of thy folly and sin, and to me and my cause; establish these thy brethren. All the disciples forsook Jesus and fled, merely through fear of losing their lives: Peter, who continued for awhile near him, denied his Master with oaths, and repeated this thrice; our Lord seems to intimate, that after this fall, Peter would become more cautious and circumspect than ever; and that he should become uncommonly strong in the faith, which was the case; and that notwithstanding the baseness of his past conduct, he should be a proper instrument for strengthening the feeble minded, and supporting the weak. His two epistles to the persecuted Christians, show how well he was qualified for this important work.

34. The cock shall not crow this day] Matthew xxvi. 34. and Mark xiv. 31. say, this night; both expressions are right, because the Jewish day of twenty-four hours, began with the evening, and ended at the evening of the following day.—On Peter's denial, see the notes on Matt. xxvi. 31—35.

35. When I sent you without purse] See on Matt. x. 9, 10.

36. He that hath no sword] Bp. PEARCE supposes that the word scarpas, sword, has been inserted here, from what is 41<sup>a</sup> And he was withdrawn from them about a stone's cast, and kneeled down, and prayed, 42 Saying, Father, if thou be<sup>t</sup> willing, remove this cup from me: nevertheless not my will, but thine, be done.

43 And there appeared<sup>d</sup> an angel unto him from heaven, strengthening him.

44<sup>a</sup> And being in an agony he prayed more earnestly: and his sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground.

45 And when he rose up from prayer, and was come to his disciples, he found them sleeping for sorrow, 46 And said unto them, Why sleep ye? rise and pray, lest ye enter into temptation.

47<sup>b</sup> And while he yet spake, behold, a multitude, and he that was called Judas, one of the twelve, went before them, and drew near unto Jesus to kiss him.

48 But Jesus said unto him, Judas, betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss?

a Matt. 26. 29. Mark 14. 25.—b Gr. willing to remove.—c John 5. 30. & 6. 23.—d Matt. 4. 11.—e John 12. 27. Heb. 5. 7.—f Ver. 40.—g Matt. 26. 47. Mark 14. 30. John 13.

said in ver. 38, as it is evident our Lord never intended to make any resistance, or to suffer a sword to be used on the occasion; see Matt. xxvi. 52. The word stands rather oddly in the passage: the verse translated in the order in which it stands, is as follows: And he who hath none, let him sell his garment and buy—a sword. Now it is plain that the verb πωλασθε, let him buy, may be referred to πρασ, a scrip, in the former part of the verse: therefore, if, according to the Bishop's opinion, the word sword be omitted, the passage may be understood thus: "When I sent you out before, chap. x. 1, &c. I intended you to continue itinerants only for a few days, and to preach the Gospel only to your countrymen; therefore you had but little need of a staff, purse, or scrip, as your journey was neither long nor expensive; but now I am about to send you into all the world, to preach the Gospel to every creature; and as ye shall be generally hated and persecuted for my sake, ye will have need to make every prudent provision for your journey; and so necessary will it be for you to provide yourselves victuals, &c. for your passage through your inhospitable country, that if any of you have no scrip vallet, he should sell even his upper garment to provide one." Others, who are for retaining the word sword, think that it was a proverbial expression, intimating a time of great difficulty and danger, and that now the disciples had need to look to themselves, for his murderers were at hand. The reader will observe that these words were spoken to the disciples just before he went to the garden of Gethsemane, and that the danger was now so very near, that there could be no time for any of them to go and sell his garment, in order to purchase a sword to defend himself and his master from the attack of the Jewish mob.

Judas was at this time, as we have already noticed, much infested by robbers: while our Lord was with his disciples, they were perfectly safe, being shielded by his miraculous power. Shortly they must go into every part of the land, and will need weapons to defend themselves against wild beasts; and to intimidate wicked men, who, if they found them totally defenceless, would not hesitate to make them their prey, or take away their life. However the matter may be understood, we may rest satisfied that these swords were not to be considered as offensive weapons, nor instruments to propagate the truth. The genius and spirit of the Christian religion is equally against both. Perhaps in this counsel of our Lord, he refers to the contention among yourselves about who shall be greatest, ye have more need to unite yourselves against the common enemy, who are now at hand: this counsel was calculated to show them the necessity of union among themselves, as their enemies were both numerous and powerful.

37. Must yet be accomplished] Probably meaning, that though this prophecy did refer to some particular matter in the time of the prophet, yet it further (ετι) related to Christ, and could not have its complete accomplishment, but in his crucifixion as a criminal.

For the things concerning me have an end.] As if he had said, My work is now almost done; yours is only beginning; I am now about to be crucified and numbered with the transgressors; think what will be done to you, and what ought to be done by you; and then think, if this be a time for you to be contending with each other.—Lightfoot.

38. Lord, behold, here are two swords. And he said unto them, It is enough.] These words cannot be well understood as being an answer to the supposed command of Christ, for every one who had no sword, to go and sell his garment, and buy one; for in this case, they were not enough, or sufficient, as nine of the disciples must be without any instrument of defence; but they may be understood as pointing out the readiness and determination of Peter, and perhaps some others, to defend our Lord; thou shalt not be treated as a transgressor; here are two swords, and we will fight for thee. In ver. 33. Peter had said, he was ready to go with Christ either to prison or death; which showed his strong resolution to stand by, and defend his Master, even at the expense of his life. But also he depended too much on himself.

It is enough.] The meaning probably is, there is enough said on the subject; so immediately after this he entered into his agony.

49 When they which were about him saw what would follow, they said unto him, Lord, shall we smite with the sword?
 50 And one of them smote a servant of the high-priest, and cut off his right ear.
 51 And Jesus answered and said, Suffer ye thus far. And he touched his ear, and healed him.
 52 Then Jesus said unto the chief priests, and captains of the temple, and the elders, which were come to him, Be ye come out as against a thief, with swords and staves?
 53 When I was daily with you in the temple ye stretched forth no hands against me: but this is your hour, and the power of darkness.
 54 Then took they him, and led him, and brought him into the high-priest's house. And Peter followed afar off.
 55 And when they had kindled a fire in the midst of the hall, and were set down together, Peter sat down among them.
 56 But a certain maid beheld him as he sat by the fire, and earnestly looked upon him, and said, This man was also with him.
 57 And he denied him, saying, Woman, I know him not.
 58 And after a little while, another saw him and said, Thou art also of them. And Peter said, Man, I am not.
 59 And about the space of one hour after, another confidently affirmed, saying, Of a truth this fellow also was with him: for he is a Galilean.

I must here confess, that the matter about the sword appears to me very obscure. I am afraid I do not understand it, and I know of none who does. Schoottgen and Lightfoot have said much on the subject; others endeavour to get rid of the difficulty by translating μαχαιρα, a knife, which was necessary on long journeys for providing forage and fuel: as they were to depend wholly on their own industry, under God, for all the necessities of life, while going through the nations of the earth, preaching the Gospel to Jews and Gentiles. I cannot say which sense the reader should prefer.

40. When he was at the place Viz. Gethsemane. On this agony of our Lord see the notes on Matt. xxvi. 36-46.

43. There appeared an angel—from heaven! It was as necessary that the fullest evidence should be given, not only of our Lord's divinity, but also of his humanity—his miracles sufficiently attested the former: his hunger, weariness, and agony in the garden, as well as his death and burial, were proofs of the latter. As man, he needs the assistance of an angel to support his body, worn down by fatigue and suffering. See at the end of ver. 44.

44. Prayed more earnestly! With greater emphasis and earnestness than usual, with strong crying and tears, Heb. v. 7, the reason given for which is, that he was in an agony. Kypke well observes: Pro agony, summum animi angorem et dolorem indicat; et idem est, quod adpugnavit, Matt. xvii. 3. Mark xiv. 34. "The word agony, (agony) points out the utmost anguish and grief of soul, and is of the same import with adpugnavit in Matthew and Mark." See the note on Matt. xvi. 37.

Drops of blood! See the note on Matt. xvi. 33. Some have thought that the meaning of the words is, that the sweat was so profuse that every drop was as large as a drop of blood, not that the sweat was blood itself: but this does not appear likely. There have been cases in which persons in a debilitated state of body, or through horror of soul, have had their sweat tinged with blood. Dr. Mead from Galen observes, Contingere interdum, poros esse multo aut fervido spiritu adeo dilatari, ut etiam lœnt sanguis per eos, fultque eundem sanguineus. "Cases sometimes happen, in which, through mental pressure, the pores may be so dilated, that the blood may issue from them; so that there may be a bloody sweat." And Ep. PEARCE gives an instance from Thuanus (De Thou) of an Italian gentleman being so distressed with the fear of death, that his body was covered with a bloody sweat. But it is fully evident, that the fear of death could have no place in the mind of our blessed Lord. He was in the bloom of life, in perfect health, and had never suffered any thing from disease of any kind; this sweat was most assuredly produced by a preternatural cause. See at the end of the chapter.

48. Betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss? Dost thou attempt to kiss me as a friend, while thou art delivering me up into the hands of my enemies? We need not wonder at all this, as Satan himself had entered into the heart of this traitor; see ver. 3. consequently we can expect nothing from him but what is fell, deceitful, and cruel.

51. Suffer ye thus far. Or, Suffer me to go thus far. As they had now a firm hold of Christ, Matt. xxvi. 50. he wished them to permit him to go as far as Malchus, whose ear was cut off, that he might head it. See the objections brought against this interpretation, answered by Kypke; and see the examples he produces. However, the words may be understood as an address to his disciples; Let them proceed; make no resistance, for in this way only are the Scriptures to be fulfilled.

53. I was daily with you in the temple! Alluding to the four preceding days, during the whole of which he taught in the temple, see chap. xxi. 37. and Matt. xxi. 17.

This is your hour, and the power of darkness. That is, the time in which you are permitted to unrein your malice; which ye could not do before, because God did not permit you;

60 And Peter said, Man, I know not what thou sayest. And immediately, while he yet spake, the cock crew.
 61 And the Lord turned, and looked upon Peter. And Peter remembered the word of the Lord, how he had said unto him, Before the cock crew, thou shalt deny me thrice.
 62 And Peter went out, and wept bitterly.
 63 And the men that held Jesus mocked him, and smote him.
 64 And when they had blindfolded him, they struck him on the face, and asked him, saying, Prophecy, who is it that smote thee?
 65 And many other things blasphemously spake they against him.
 66 And as soon as it was day, the elders of the people, and the chief priests, and the scribes, came together, and led him into their council, saying, 67 Art thou the Christ? tell us. And he said unto them, If I tell you, ye will not believe:
 68 And if I also ask you, ye will not answer me, nor let me go.
 69 Hereafter shall the Son of man sit on the right hand of the power of God.
 70 Then said they all, Art thou then the Son of God? And he said unto them, Ye say that I am.
 71 And they said, What need we any further witness? for we ourselves have heard of his own mouth.

and so perfectly are ye under his control, that neither you nor the prince of darkness can proceed a hair's breadth against me, but through this permission: see at the end of the chapter. What a comfortable thought is it to the followers of Christ, that neither men nor demons can act against them, but by the permission of their heavenly Father; and that he will not suffer any of those who trust in him, to be tried above what they are able to bear; and will make the trial issue in their greater salvation, and in his glory.

56. A certain maid beheld him! Or, attentively beholding him, arvisore. And this she did by the help of the light of the fire at which Peter sat.

57. And he denied him! See the notes on Matt. xvi. 58, 60, &c.

61. The Lord turned and looked upon Peter. See the note on Matt. xxvi. 75. where this delicate reproof is particularly noted.

62. And Peter went out! The word Peter is omitted by BDKLM. and many other good MSS. with some of the ancient Versions. Griesbach leaves it out of the text.

63. Mocked him and smote him. This and the following verses are placed by Matthew and Mark, before the relation of Peter's denial. For their explanation, see on Matt. xvi. 67, 68.

68. And if I also ask you! Concerning the Christ, in case ye cannot give me such an answer as may prove I am not the Christ, ye will not let me go; for I know ye are determined to put me to death.

69. Hereafter! From this very time, are ye set. The kingdom of God is now going to be set up. See the note on Matt. xvi. 27, 28.

70. Art thou then the Son of God? They all insisted on an answer to this question, and the high-priest particularly put it to him. Matt. xxvi. 63.

71. We ourselves have heard! We have heard him profess himself the Son of God; he is therefore guilty of blasphemy, and as an impious pretender to a divine mission, we must proceed against, and condemn him to death. See the note on Matt. xxvi. 66. Thus they proceeded as far as they could: he must now be brought before Pilate, as the Jews had no power to put him to death. His trial before Pilate is related in the subsequent chapter.

On our Lord's agony in the garden, related in the 43d and 44th verses, much has been written, but to little purpose. The cause of this agony seems not to have been well understood; and there have been many wild conjectures concerning it. Some think it was occasioned by "the divine wrath pressing in upon him; for as he was bearing the sin of the world, God looked on, and treated him as if he were a sinner." There is something very shocking in this supposition; and yet it is truly astonishing, how general it is. The ministry of the angel, in this case, is a sufficient refutation of this opinion; for what sort of strength could an angel give Christ against God's indignation? Angelic strength could not enable him to bear either the sin of the world, or God's wrath. If an angel could have succoured him, in this, an angel might have made the whole atonement. Indeed the ministry of the angel, who must have been sent from God, and sent in love too, is a full proof that God's wrath was not poured out on our blessed Redeemer at this time. Dr. Lightfoot conjectures, that his conflict in the garden was with a devil, who appeared to him in a bodily shape, most horrible, and that it was through this apparition, that he began to be sore assailed, and very hoarse, Mark xiv. 33. for as Satan assaulted the first Adam in a garden, in a bodily shape, it is not unreasonable to conclude, that in the same way, he assaulted the second Adam in a garden. St. Luke tells us, chap. iv. 13. that when the devil had finished all his temptations, he departed from him for a season: this season in the garden probably was the season, or fit opportunity for him to return—the prince of this world came and found nothing in him; John xiv. 30. but though there was nothing in the immaculate Jesus, on which Satan could work, yet he might, as the Doctor supposes, assume some terrible shape in order to appeal his mind, and shake his firmness: and the evangelist seems to intimate, that he had desired to be permitted to try, or riñt the disciples in this way, see ver. 31. and it is probable, that it is some personal, horrid appearance, that the apostle alludes, when he speaks of the messenger of Satan that buffeted him, 2 Cor. xii. 7. The angel therefore from heaven, may be supposed to come against this angel from hell; and as the one appeared to terrify, the other appeared to strengthen him. It was not necessary to exert the divine power to crush this devil, and therefore an angel from heaven is sent to counteract his influence. This is the sum of Dr. Lightfoot's reasonings upon this very difficult subject.

Others suppose, that while our Lord was praying intensely in the garden, the extreme fervour of his application to God in the behalf of the poor deluded Jesus, and in behalf of the world, was too much for his human nature to support; that he, in consequence, fell into a swoon, in which he had a vision of an angel coming from heaven to strengthen him. Let these sentiments stand on their respective merits.

What renders this circumstance more difficult, is, that there is no mention of it in any of the other evangelists: and it is worthy of remark, that among many of the ancients, the authenticity of these two verses, the 43d and 44th, has been doubted, and in consequence, they are omitted in several MSS. and in some Versions and Fathers; the Codex Alexandrinus, and the Codex Vaticanus, the two oldest MSS. in the world, omit both verses: in some other very ancient MSS. they stand with an asterisk before them, as a mark of dubiousness; and they are both wanting in the Coptic fragments published by Dr. Ford. They are however extant in such a vast number of MSS. Versions, and Fathers, as to leave no doubt with most critics of their authenticity. After all that has been said, or perhaps can be said on this subject, there will remain mysteries, which only the bright light of the eternal world can sufficiently illustrate. That Christ was now suffering, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God; and that he was bearing in his body, the punishment due to their sins, I have no doubt: and that the agony of his mind, in these terrific sufferings, caused the effusion from his body of the bloody sweat, may be easily credited, without supposing him to be at all under the displeasure of his heavenly Father; for as God can see nothing but as it is, he could not see him as a sinner who was purify itself. In every act, Jesus was that beloved Son, in whom the Father was ever well pleased.

As to the angel strengthening him, probably no more is meant by it than a friendly sympathizing of one of those heavenly beings, with their Lord in distress: this circumstance is the most difficult in the whole relation; but understood thus, the difficulty is removed; for what strength could the highest angel in heaven afford to our blessed Lord in his atoning acts? Surely none.—The bare supposition is insupportable. But if we allow that the angel came to sympathize with him during his passion, the whole account will appear plain and consistent.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Christ is led to Pilate, and accused by the Jews, 1, 2. Pilate examines, and pronounces him innocent, 3, 4. The Jews virulently accuse him, 5. Pilate understanding that he was of Galilee, sends him to Herod, by whom he is examined, 6—9. The chief priests and scribes vehemently accuse him, and Herod and his soldiers mock him, 10, 11. Pilate and Herod become friends, 12. Pilate, before the chief priests, rulers, and people, pronounces Christ to be innocent, and offers to release him, 13—20. The Jews clamour for his condemnation, and Pilate gives him up to their will, 21—26. Simon bears his cross, 26. The people bear it, and he foretells the destruction of the Jewish state, 27—31. He and two malefactors are brought to Calvary, and are crucified, 32, 33. He prays for his crucifiers, 34. He is derided, mocked, and insulted by the rulers, and by the soldiers, 35—37. The superscription on the cross, 38. The conduct of the two malefactors, to one of whom he promises paradise, 39—43. The great darkness, 44, 45. He gives up the ghost, 46. The centurion and many others are greatly affected at his death, 47—49. Joseph of Arimathea begs the body, and puts it in his own new tomb, 50—53. The women prepare spices and ointments to embalm him, 54—56. [A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCLII.]

AND the whole multitude of them arose, and led him unto Pilate.

2 And they began to accuse him, saying, We found this fellow perverting the nation, and forbidding to give tribute to Cæsar, saying, that he himself is Christ a king.

3 And Pilate asked him, saying, Art thou the King of the Jews? and he answered him, and said, Thou sayest it.

4 Then said Pilate to the chief priests and to the people, I find no fault in this man.

5 And they were the more fierce, saying, He stirreth up the people, teaching throughout all Jewry, beginning from Galilee to this place.

6 When Pilate heard of Galilee, he asked whether the man were a Galilean.

7 And as soon as he knew that he belonged unto Herod's jurisdiction, he sent him to Herod, who himself also was at Jerusalem at that time.

8 And when Herod saw Jesus, he was exceeding glad: for he was desirous to see him of a long season, because he had heard many things of him; and he hoped to have seen some miracle done by him.

9 Then he questioned with him in many words; but he answered him nothing.

10 And the chief priests and scribes stood, and vehemently accused him.

11 And Herod with his men of war set him at nought, and mocked him, and arrayed him in a gorgeous robe, and sent him again to Pilate.

12 And the same day Pilate and Herod were made friends: for before they were at enmity to one another.

13 Pilate therefore desired to release him: but the Jews answered and said unto him, We have a law, that no man should be put to death, except we see the sign of the prophet Jonas. And he answered and said unto them, Whosoever shall confess me before men, I will confess him before my Father which is in heaven: but whosoever shall deny me, I will deny him before my Father which is in heaven.

14 And he stood with the multitude, and said unto them, Behold, I have examined you, and find no fault in this man: nevertheless, because ye have desired it, I will do unto you whatsoever ye shall say.

15 And they answered and said unto him, Give us here Barabbas: for we have a custom, that we should release unto thee one man, whom thou wilt, at the feast of Passover. Now Barabbas was bound with certain fellows for a tumult, and for murder, whom they had put to death: but this man we have bound, because he stirred up the people, saying that he was Christ the King of the Jews.

16 And Pilate answered and said unto them, Whether ye will that I release unto you Barabbas, or Jesus which is called Christ the King of the Jews? Forasmuch as ye have desired this, and have said, Give us Barabbas, I will do unto you as ye have said.

17 And he released unto them Barabbas: and Jesus, which was called Christ the King of the Jews, he crucified. And with him were crucified two thieves, one on the right hand, and one on the left hand. And the Scripture was fulfilled, which saith, He was numbered with the transgressors.

18 And they parted his raiment, and cast lots.

19 And Jesus said, Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do. And his raiment was parted, and they cast lots.

20 And when the sixth hour was come, there was darkness over the whole land, unto the ninth hour.

21 And at the ninth hour, Jesus said, I thirst: there was placed a vessel full of vinegar: and they dipped a sponge in the vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink.

22 And when Jesus had said, I thirst, there stood a vessel full of vinegar: and they dipped a sponge in the vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink.

jurisdiction, he sent him to Herod, who himself also was at Jerusalem at that time.

8 And when Herod saw Jesus, he was exceeding glad: for he was desirous to see him of a long season, because he had heard many things of him; and he hoped to have seen some miracle done by him.

9 Then he questioned with him in many words; but he answered him nothing.

10 And the chief priests and scribes stood, and vehemently accused him.

11 And Herod with his men of war set him at nought, and mocked him, and arrayed him in a gorgeous robe, and sent him again to Pilate.

12 And the same day Pilate and Herod were made friends: for before they were at enmity to one another.

13 Pilate therefore desired to release him: but the Jews answered and said unto him, We have a custom, that we should release unto thee one man, whom thou wilt, at the feast of Passover.

14 And he answered and said unto them, Whether ye will that I release unto you Barabbas, or Jesus which is called Christ the King of the Jews? Forasmuch as ye have desired this, and have said, Give us Barabbas, I will do unto you as ye have said.

15 And he released unto them Barabbas: and Jesus, which was called Christ the King of the Jews, he crucified.

16 And with him were crucified two thieves, one on the right hand, and one on the left hand. And the Scripture was fulfilled, which saith, He was numbered with the transgressors.

17 And they parted his raiment, and cast lots.

18 And Jesus said, Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do. And his raiment was parted, and they cast lots.

19 And when the sixth hour was come, there was darkness over the whole land, unto the ninth hour.

20 And at the ninth hour, Jesus said, I thirst: there was placed a vessel full of vinegar: and they dipped a sponge in the vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink.

21 And when Jesus had said, I thirst, there stood a vessel full of vinegar: and they dipped a sponge in the vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink.

22 And when Jesus had said, I thirst, there stood a vessel full of vinegar: and they dipped a sponge in the vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink.

23 And when Jesus had said, I thirst, there stood a vessel full of vinegar: and they dipped a sponge in the vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink.

24 And when Jesus had said, I thirst, there stood a vessel full of vinegar: and they dipped a sponge in the vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink.

25 And when Jesus had said, I thirst, there stood a vessel full of vinegar: and they dipped a sponge in the vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink.

26 And when Jesus had said, I thirst, there stood a vessel full of vinegar: and they dipped a sponge in the vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink.

27 And when Jesus had said, I thirst, there stood a vessel full of vinegar: and they dipped a sponge in the vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink.

28 And when Jesus had said, I thirst, there stood a vessel full of vinegar: and they dipped a sponge in the vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink.

29 And when Jesus had said, I thirst, there stood a vessel full of vinegar: and they dipped a sponge in the vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink.

30 And when Jesus had said, I thirst, there stood a vessel full of vinegar: and they dipped a sponge in the vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink.

13 <sup>1</sup> And Pilate, when he had called together the chief priests and the rulers and the people,
 14 said unto them, <sup>2</sup> Ye have brought this man unto me, as one that perverteth the people: and behold, <sup>3</sup> I, having examined him before you, have found no fault in this man touching those things whereof ye accuse him:
 15 No, nor yet Herod: for I sent you to him; and lo, nothing worthy of death is done unto him.
 16 <sup>4</sup> I will therefore chastise him, and release him.
 17 <sup>5</sup> (For of necessity he must release one unto them at the feast.)
 18 And <sup>6</sup> they cried out all at once, saying, Away with this man, and release unto us Barabbas:
 19 (Who, for a certain sedition made in the city, and for murder, was cast into prison.)
 20 Pilate therefore, willing to release Jesus, spake again to them.
 21 But they cried, saying, Crucify him, crucify him.
 22 And he said unto them the third time, Why, what evil hath he done? I have found no cause of death in him: I will therefore chastise him, and let him go.
 23 And they were instant with loud voices, requiring that he might be crucified. And the voices of them and of the chief priests prevailed.
 24 And <sup>7</sup> Pilate gave sentence that it should be as they required.
 25 And he released unto them him that for sedition and murder was cast into prison, whom they had desired; but he delivered Jesus to their will.

m. Matt. 27:23. Mark 15:14. John 18:39 & 19:4.—n. Ver. 1, 2.—p. Matt. 27:24. John 19:1.—q. Matt. 27:15. Mark 15:20.—r. Acts 3:14.—s. Matt. 27:25. Mk. 15:18. John 19:16.—t. Or, Assented. 2s. Kt. 2.—u. Matt. 27:25. Mark 15:21. See John 19:17.—v. Matt. 27:19. Ch. 21:23.—w. Isa. 10. Hos. 10. 8. Rev. 6:15 & 9:6.

blood Pilate had mingled with that of their sacrifices. These were Herod's subjects, and Pilate seems to have fallen on them at the time they were offering sacrifices to God at the temple. Wicked men cannot love one another: this belongs to the disciples of Christ. But when Christ, his truth, or his followers, are to be persecuted, for this purpose the wicked unite their counsels and their influence. The Mobites and Ammonites, who were enemies among themselves, united against poor Israel, and, as Rabbi Touchum says, may be likened to two contending dogs, who, when the wolf comes, join together to destroy him; each knowing that if he do not, the wolf will kill both in succession: whereas, by their union, they may now kill or buffet him. And there is a proverb among the rabbins, that when the cat and weasel marry together, misery becomes increased.

15. No, nor yet Herod: for I sent you to him] That is, to see whether he could find that Christ had ever attempted to raise any disaffection or sedition among the Galileans: among whom he had spent the principal part of his life; and yet Herod has not been able to find out any evil in his conduct. Your own accusations I have fully weighed, and find them to be the last degree frivolous.

Instead of ἀπελευθερώσει γὰρ ὑμᾶς ἕνα ἄλλον, for I sent you to him, ΒΗΚΛΜ, and many other MSS. with some Versions, read ἀπελευθερώσει γὰρ ἄλλον ἕνα ὑμᾶς, for he hath sent him to us. As if he had said, "Herod hath sent him back to us, which is a sure proof that he hath found no blame in him."

Nothing worthy of death is done unto him] Or rather, nothing worthy of death is committed by him, ἧλιπαρῶμενος ἄλλοι, not done unto him. This phrase is of the same sense with οὐδὲν ἔσπευξε ἄλλοι, he hath done nothing, and is frequent in the purest Attic writers. See many examples in Kypke.

17. For of necessity he must release one] That is, he was under the necessity of releasing one at this feast. The custom, however it originated, had now been so completely established that Pilate was obliged to attend to it. See on Matt. xxvii. 15.

18. Away with this man] That is, put him to death—ἀπέλευθερώσει, literally, take this one away, i. e. to punishment—to death.

22. I have found no cause of death in him] I find no crime worthy of death in him. There is nothing proved against him that can at all justify me in putting him to death. So here our blessed Lord was in the most formal manner justified by his judge. Now as this decision was publicly known, and perhaps registered, it is evident that Christ died as an innocent person, and not as a malefactor. On the fullest conviction of his Innocence, his judge pronounced him guiltless; after having patiently heard every thing that the inventive malice of those wicked men could allege against him; and when he wished to dismiss him, a violent mob took and murdered him.

26. Simon, a Cyrenian] See on Matt. xvii. 33.

27. Bewailed and lamented him] Ἐκθρῆνεν, beat their breasts. See on Matt. xi. 17.

28. Weep not for me] Many pious persons have been greatly distressed in their minds, because they could not weep on reading or hearing of the sufferings of Christ. For the relief of all such, let it be for ever known, that no human spirit can possibly take any part in the passion of the Messiah. His sufferings were such, as only God manifested in the flesh could bear; and as they were all of an expiatory nature, no man could taste of, or share in them. Besides, the sufferings of Christ are not a subject of sorrow to any man; but on the contrary, of eternal rejoicing to the whole of a lost world. doms have even prayed to participate in the sufferings of Christ. The legend of St. Francis and his stigmata is well known. He is fabled to have received the marks in his hands, 26 <sup>1</sup> And as they led him away, they laid hold upon one Simon, a Cyrenian, coming out of the country, and on him they laid the cross, that he might bear it after Jesus.

27 And there followed him a great company of people, and of women, which also bewailed and lamented him.

28 But Jesus, turning unto them, said, Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children.

29 <sup>2</sup> For, behold, the days are coming, in the which they shall say, Blessed are the barren, and the wombs that never bare, and the paps which never gave suck.

30 <sup>3</sup> Then shall they begin to say to the mountains, Fall on us, and to the hills, Cover us.

31 <sup>4</sup> For if they do these things in a green tree, what shall be done in the dry?

32 <sup>5</sup> And there were also two other malefactors led with him to be put to death.

33 And <sup>6</sup> when they were come to the place which is called Calvary, there they crucified him, and the malefactors, one on the right hand, and the other on the left.

34 <sup>7</sup> Then said Jesus, Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do. And <sup>8</sup> they parted his raiment, and cast lots.

35 <sup>9</sup> And <sup>10</sup> the people stood beholding. And the rulers also with them derided him, saying, He saved others; let him save himself if he be Christ, the chosen of God.

36 And the soldiers also mocked him, coming to him, and offering him vinegar, 37 And saying, If thou be the king of the Jews, save thyself.

a. Prov. 11:31. Jer. 39:25. Ezek. 37:47 & 51:3 & 1. 1. Ps. 4:17.—y. Isa. 51:15. Matt. 27:33. Mark 15:28. John 19:17, 18.—z. Or, the place of a skull.—A. Matt. 27:33. Acts 7:1. Cor. 4:15.—A. Acts 3:17.—B. Matt. 27:33. Mark 15:24. John 19:22.—Paulus 22:17. Zechariah 12:10.—C. Matt. 27:33. Mark 15:26.

fest, and side. Relative to this point, there are many unwarrantable expressions used by religious people in their prayers and hymns. To give only one instance, how often do we hear these or similar words said or sung:

"Give me to feel thy agonies!"

"One drop of thy sad cup afford!"

Reader! one drop of this cup would bear down thy soul to endless ruin; and those agonies would annihilate the universe. He suffered alone: for of the people there was none with him; because his sufferers were to make an atonement for the sins of the world: and in the work of redemption he had no helper.

30. Mountains, fall on us] As this refers to the destruction of Jerusalem, and as the same expressions are used, Rev. vi. 6 Dr. Lightfoot conjectures that the whole of that chapter may relate to the same event.

31. If they do these things in a green tree] This seems to be a proverbial expression, the sense of which is: If they spare not a tree which, by the beauty of its foliage, abundance and excellence of its fruits, deserves to be preserved: then the tree which is dry and withered will surely be cut down. If an innocent man be put to death in the very face of justice, in opposition to all its dictates and decisions, by a people who profess to be governed and directed by divine laws; what desolation, injustice, and oppression, may not be expected: when anarchy and confusion sit in the place where judgment and justice formerly presided? Our Lord alludes prophetically to those tribulations which fell upon the Jewish people about forty years after. See the notes on Matt. xxiv.

32. Two other malefactors] Ἐρπίσι δύο κακοῦργοι, should certainly be translated two others, malefactors, as in the Bibles published by the king's printer, Edinburgh. As it now stands in the text, it seems to intimate that our blessed Lord was also a malefactor.

33. The place called Calvary] See on Matt. xxvii. 33.

They crucified him] See the nature of this punishment explained, Matt. xxvii. 35.

34. They know not what they do.] If ignorance do not excuse a crime, it at least diminishes the atrocity of it. However, these persons well knew that they were crucifying an innocent man; but they did not know that by this act of theirs, they were bringing down on themselves and on their country, the heaviest judgments of God. In the prayer, Father, forgive them! the word of prophecy was fulfilled, He made intercession for the transgressors, Isa. liii. 12.

35. Derided him] Treated him with the utmost contempt, ἐτιμωροῦντες, in the most infamous manner. See the meaning of this word explained, chap. xvi. 14.

36. Offering him vinegar] See on Matt. xxvii. 34. Vinegar or small sour wine, was a common drink of the Roman soldiers: and it is supposed that wherever they were on duty, they had a vessel of this liquor standing by. It appears that at least two cups were given to our Lord: one before he was nailed to the cross, viz. of wine mingled with myrrh, and another of vinegar, while he hung on the cross. Some think there were three cups: one of wine mixed with myrrh, the essence of vinegar mingled with gall, and the third of simple vinegar. Allow these three cups, and the different expressions in all the evangelists will be included. See Lightfoot.

37. An exasperation] See Matt. xxvii. 37.

In letters of Greek, and Latin, and Hebrew] The inscription was written in all these languages, which were the most common, that all might see the reason why he was put to death. The inscription was written in Greek, on account of the Hellenistic Jews, who were then at Jerusalem, because of the 39 <sup>5</sup> And a superscription also was written over him in letters of Greek, and Latin, and Hebrew, THIS IS THE KING OF THE JEWS.

40 <sup>7</sup> And one of the malefactors which were hanged raised up him, saying, If thou be Christ, save thyself and us.

41 <sup>8</sup> But the other answering, rebuked him, saying, Dost not thou fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation?

42 <sup>9</sup> And we indeed justly: for we receive the due reward of our deeds: but this man hath done nothing amiss.

43 <sup>10</sup> And he said unto Jesus, Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom!

44 <sup>11</sup> And Jesus said unto him, Verily, I say unto thee, To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise.

45 <sup>12</sup> And it was about the sixth hour, and there was darkness over all the earth, unto the ninth hour.

46 <sup>13</sup> And the sun was darkened, and the veil of the temple was rent in the midst.

47 <sup>14</sup> And when Jesus had cried with a loud voice, he said, Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit: and having said thus, he gave up the ghost.

48 <sup>15</sup> Now when the centurion saw what was done, he glorified God, saying, Certainly this was a righteous man.

49 <sup>16</sup> And all his acquaintance, and the women that followed him from Galilee, stood afar off, beholding these things.

50 <sup>17</sup> And behold, there was a man named Joseph, a counsellor; and he was a good man, and a just:

51 <sup>18</sup> (The same had not consented to the counsel and deed of them;) he was of Arimathea, a city of the Jews, the same himself waited for the kingdom of God.

52 <sup>19</sup> This man went unto Pilate, and begged the body of Jesus.

53 <sup>20</sup> And he took it down, and wrapped it in linen, and laid it in a sepulchre that was hewn in stone, wherein never man before was laid.

54 <sup>21</sup> And that day was the preparation, and the sabbath drew on.

55 <sup>22</sup> And the women also, which came with him from Galilee, followed after, and beheld the sepulchre, and how his body was laid.

56 <sup>23</sup> And they returned, and prepared spices and ointments; and rested the sabbath day, according to the commandment.

57 <sup>24</sup> And in the evening, and as it began to grow dark, Joseph took the body, and wrapped it in fine linen, and laid it in a new tomb, which he had hewn out of the rock, and rolled the stone away from the door of the tomb, and laid the body therein. And he rolled away the stone, and sat upon it, and his feet were toward the tomb, and he bowed himself upon the face of the earth, and worshipped God.

58 <sup>25</sup> And when Joseph had so done, he went home, and sat at home, and waited for the resurrection of Jesus.

59 <sup>26</sup> And on the first day of the week, very early in the morning, the women came to the tomb, and found the stone rolled away, and entered into the tomb, and found the body there.

60 <sup>27</sup> And when they were come out, they told all these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

61 <sup>28</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

62 <sup>29</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

63 <sup>30</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

64 <sup>31</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

65 <sup>32</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

66 <sup>33</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

67 <sup>34</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

68 <sup>35</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

69 <sup>36</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

70 <sup>37</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

71 <sup>38</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

72 <sup>39</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

73 <sup>40</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

74 <sup>41</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

75 <sup>42</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

76 <sup>43</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

77 <sup>44</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

78 <sup>45</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

79 <sup>46</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

80 <sup>47</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

81 <sup>48</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

82 <sup>49</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

83 <sup>50</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

84 <sup>51</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

85 <sup>52</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

86 <sup>53</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

87 <sup>54</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

88 <sup>55</sup> And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

glorified God, saying, Certainly this was a righteous man.

And all his acquaintance, and the women that followed him from Galilee, stood afar off, beholding these things.

And he took it down, and wrapped it in linen, and laid it in a sepulchre that was hewn in stone, wherein never man before was laid.

And that day was the preparation, and the sabbath drew on.

And the women also, which came with him from Galilee, followed after, and beheld the sepulchre, and how his body was laid.

And they returned, and prepared spices and ointments; and rested the sabbath day, according to the commandment.

And in the evening, and as it began to grow dark, Joseph took the body, and wrapped it in fine linen, and laid it in a new tomb, which he had hewn out of the rock, and rolled the stone away from the door of the tomb, and laid the body therein.

And he rolled away the stone, and sat upon it, and his feet were toward the tomb, and he bowed himself upon the face of the earth, and worshipped God.

And when Joseph had so done, he went home, and sat at home, and waited for the resurrection of Jesus.

And on the first day of the week, very early in the morning, the women came to the tomb, and found the stone rolled away, and entered into the tomb, and found the body there.

And when they were come out, they told all these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

And they returned home, and told these things unto the apostles, but they were not believing them, because they were saying, they were idle tales.

pen-over: It was written in Latin, that being the language of the government under which he was crucified: and it was written in Hebrew, that being the language of the place in which this deed of darkness was committed. But by the good providence of God, the inscription itself excuplated him, and proved the Jews to be rebels against, and murderers of, their King. See the note on Matt. xvii. 37. It is not to be wondered at, that they wished Pilate to alter this inscription, John xix. 31. as it was a record of their own infamy.

39. One of the malefactors which were hanged! It is likely that the two robbers were not nailed to their crosses, but only tied to them by cords, and thus they are represented in ancient paintings. If not nailed, they could not have suffered much, and therefore they were found still alive, when the soldiers came to give the coup de grace, which put a speedy end to their lives. John xix. 31-33.

40. Dost not thou fear God! The sufferings of this person had been sanctified to him, so that his heart was open to receive help from the hand of the Lord: he is a genuine penitent: and gives the fullest proof he can give of it, viz. the acknowledgment of the justice of his sentence. He had sinned, and he acknowledges his sin; his heart believes unto righteousness, and with his tongue he makes confession unto salvation. While he condemns himself, he bears testimony that Jesus was innocent. Bishop France supposes that these were not robbers in the common sense of the word, but Jews who took up arms on the principle that the Romans were not to be submitted to, and that their levies of tribute money were oppressive; and therefore they made no scruple to rob all the Romans they met with. These Jews Joseph calls Agorai, robbers, the same term used by the evangelists. This opinion gains some strength from the penitent thief's confession; we receive the record of our deeds—we rose up against the government, and committed depredations in the country; but this man hath done nothing amiss—arose, out of place, disorderly,—nothing calculated to raise sedition or insurrection, nor inconsistent with his declarations of peace and good will towards all men; nor with the nature of that spiritual kingdom which he came to establish among men; though he is now crucified under the pretence of disaffection to the Roman government.

42. Lord, remember me, &c.] It is worthy of remark, that this man appears to have been the first who believed in the resurrection of Christ.

43. To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise.] Marcion and the Manichees are reported to have left this verse out of their copies of this evangelist. This saying of our Lord is justly considered as a strong proof of the immateriality of the soul; and it is no wonder that those who have embraced the contrary opinion, should endeavour to explain away this meaning. In order to do this, a comma is placed after crucifus, to-day, and then our Lord is supposed to have meant, "Thou shalt be with me after the resurrection; I tell thee this, Roman 1." I am sorry to find men of great learning and abilities attempting to support this most feeble and worthless criticism. Such support a good cause cannot need; and, in my opinion, even a bad cause must be discredited by it.

In paradise. The garden of Eden, mentioned Gen. ii. 8. is also called from the Septuagint, the garden of paradise. The word Eden, signifies pleasure and delight. Several places were thus called; see Gen. iv. 16. 2 Kings xix. 12. Isa. xxvii. 12. Ezek. xxvii. 28. and Amos i. 6. and such places probably had this name from their fertility, pleasant situation, &c. &c. In this light the Septuagint have viewed Gen. ii. 8. as they render the passage thus: εὐφροσύνη εὐδαιμονία; εὐδαιμονία εὐδαιμονία, God planted a paradise in Eden. Hence the word has been transplanted into the New Testament; and is used to signify a place of exquisite pleasure and delight. Even this the ancient heathens borrowed their ideas of the gardens of the Hesperides, where the trees bore golden fruit. And the garden of Adams, a word which is evidently derived from the Hebrew Eden: and hence the origin of sacred groves, gardens, and other enclosures dedicated to purposes of devotion, some comparatively innocent, others impure. The word paradise is not Greek, but is of Asiatic origin. In Arabic and Persian it signifies a garden, a vineyard, and also the place of the blessed. In the Kulluf ul Loghat, a very celebrated Persian Dictionary, the جنت ال فردوس Jenet al Ferdos, Garden of Paradise, is said to have been "created by God out of light, and that the prophets and wise men ascend thither."

Paradise was, in the beginning, the habitation of man in his state of innocence, in which he enjoyed that presence of his Maker, which constituted his supreme happiness. Our Lord's words intimate, that this penitent should be immediately taken to the abode of the spirits of the just, where he should enjoy the presence and approbation of the Most High. In the Institutes of Menu, chap. Economics, Inst. 243. are the following words: "A man habitually pious, whose offences have been expiated, is instantly conveyed, after death, to the higher world, with a radiant form, and a body of ethereal substance." The state of the blessed is certainly what our Lord here means: in what the locality of that state consists, we know not. The Jews have a multitude of fables on the subject.

44. Darkness over all the earth! See the note on Matt. xxvii. 45. The darkness began at the sixth hour, about our twelve o'clock at noon, and lasted till the ninth hour, which answered to our three o'clock in the afternoon.

45. The sun was darkened! See an examination of the accounts of Phlegon, Thallus, and Dionysius, on Matt. xxvii. 45. The veil—was rent! See Matt. xxvii. 51.

46. Into thy hands I commend my spirit! Or, I will commit my spirit—I deposit my soul in thy hands. Another proof of the immateriality of the soul, and of its separate existence when the body is dead.

48. And all the people! All were deeply affected except the priests, and those whom they had employed to serve their base purposes. The darkness, earthquake, &c. had brought terror and consternation into every heart. How dreadful is the state of those who, in consequence of their long opposition to the grace and truth of God, are at last given up to a reprobate

50. 51. Joseph—of Arimathea! See the notes on Matt. xxvii. 57-60. and those especially on Mark xv. 43.

54. And the Sabbath drew on! Or, the Sabbath was lighting up, εσπέρωσεν, i. e. with the candles which the Jews light just before six in the evening, when the Sabbath commences. The same word is used for the dawning of the day, Matt. xviii. 1. Wakefield. The Jews always lighted up candles on the Sabbath: and it was a solemn precept, that "if a man had not bread to eat, he must beg from door to door to get a little oil to set up his Sabbath light." The night of the Sabbath drew on, which the Jews were accustomed to call the Light. See Lightfoot.

55. The women also, which came! These were Mary of Magdala, Joanna, and Mary the mother of James, chap. xxiv. 10. To these three, Mark, in chap. xvi. 1. adds Salome, but some think that this was only a surname of one of these Marys.

56. Prepared spices and ointments! This was in order to embalm him; which sufficiently proves that they had no hope of his resurrection the third day.

And rested the Sabbath day! For though the Jewish canons allowed all works, necessary for the dead, to be done, even on the Sabbath, such as washing and anointing, provided they moved not a limb of the dead person; yet as the Jews had put Christ to death, under the pretence of his being a malefactor, it would not have been either prudent or safe to appear too forward in the present business; and therefore they rested on the Sabbath.

Certain copies of the Itala have some remarkable additions in these concluding verses. The conclusion of the 48th verse in one of them, is read thus: beating their breasts and their foreheads, and saying, wo to us because of what is done this day, on account of our sins: for the desolation of Jerusalem is at hand. To ver. 52. another adds, And when Pilate heard that he was dead, he glorified God, and gave the body to Joseph. On the circumstances of the crucifixion, see the observations at the end of Matt. xxvii. and consider how heinous sin must be in the sight of God, when it required such a sacrifice.

18 And the one of them, whose name was Cleopas, answering said unto him, Art thou only a stranger in Jerusalem, and hast not known the things which are come to pass there in these days?

19 And he said unto them, What things? And they said unto him, Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, which was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people.

20 And how the chief priests and our rulers delivered him to be condemned to death, and have crucified him.

21 But we trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel: and besides all this, to-day is the third day since these things were done.

22 Yea, and certain women also of our company made us astonished, which were early at the sepulchre:

23 And when they found not his body, they came, saying, that they had also seen a vision of angels, which said that he was alive.

24 And certain of them which were with us went to the sepulchre, and found it even so as the women had said: but they saw not.

25 Then he said unto them, O fools and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken!

26 Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?

John 19:28.—Matthew 21. Chapter 7. 14. John 2. 2 & 4. 19. & 6. 14. Acts 2. 22.—Acts 7. 55.—Chapter 1. 68. & 2. 38. Acts 13.—Mark 16. 10. Ver. 3. 10. John 20. 14.—Ver. 12.—Ver. 6. Acts 17. 3. Part. 1. 11.—Ver. 6.—Ver. 2. 15 & 16. & 2. 17. & 2. 18. & 2. 19. & 2. 20. & 2. 21. & 2. 22. & 2. 23. & 2. 24. & 2. 25. & 2. 26. & 2. 27. & 2. 28. & 2. 29. & 2. 30. & 2. 31. & 2. 32. & 2. 33. & 2. 34. & 2. 35. & 2. 36. & 2. 37. & 2. 38. & 2. 39. & 2. 40. & 2. 41. & 2. 42. & 2. 43. & 2. 44. & 2. 45. & 2. 46. & 2. 47. & 2. 48. & 2. 49. & 2. 50. & 2. 51. & 2. 52. & 2. 53. & 2. 54. & 2. 55. & 2. 56. & 2. 57. & 2. 58. & 2. 59. & 2. 60. & 2. 61. & 2. 62. & 2. 63. & 2. 64. & 2. 65. & 2. 66. & 2. 67. & 2. 68. & 2. 69. & 2. 70. & 2. 71. & 2. 72. & 2. 73. & 2. 74. & 2. 75. & 2. 76. & 2. 77. & 2. 78. & 2. 79. & 2. 80. & 2. 81. & 2. 82. & 2. 83. & 2. 84. & 2. 85. & 2. 86. & 2. 87. & 2. 88. & 2. 89. & 2. 90. & 2. 91. & 2. 92. & 2. 93. & 2. 94. & 2. 95. & 2. 96. & 2. 97. & 2. 98. & 2. 99. & 2. 100.

1 Sam. xiii. 3. So in PALÆSTRAS, de Incredib. c. 38. p. 47. quoted by Kypke, πὸ ἀναρ βασιλεὺς αἰσῶν, he was a great and eminent king. So ἀναρ βασιλεὺς, here signifies, he was a convincing prophet, nothing like those fales ones by whom the people have been so often deceived; and he has proved the divinity of his mission by his heavenly teaching and astonishing miracles.

Mighty in word] Irresistibly eloquent. Powerful in deed, working incontrovertible miracles. See Kypke in loco.

21—24. Cleopas paints the real state of his own mind in these verses. In his relation there is scarcely any thing well connected; important points are referred to, and not explained, though he considered the person to whom he spoke as entirely unacquainted with these transactions: his own hopes and fears he cannot help mixing with the narration, and throwing over the whole that confusion that dwell in his own heart. The narration is not at all in Luke's style, but as it is probable he was the other disciple who was present, and had heard the words of Cleopas, he gave them in that simple, natural, artless manner, in which they were spoken. Had the account been forged, those simple, natural touches would not have appeared.

To-day is the third day] Our Lord had often said that he would rise again the third day; and though Alpheus had little hope of this resurrection, yet he could not help recollecting the words he had heard, especially as they seemed to be confirmed by the relation of the women, ver. 22—24.

25. O fools and slow of heart to believe] Inconsiderate men, justly termed such, because they had not properly attended to the description given of the Messiah by the prophets, nor to his teaching and miracles, as proofs that he alone was the person they described.

Slow of heart—Backward, not easy to be persuaded of the truth, always giving way to doubtfulness and distrust. This very imperfection in them, is a strong evidence of the truth of the doctrine which they afterward believed, and proclaimed to the world. Had they not had the fullest assurance of these things, they never would have credited them: and it is no small honour to the new covenant Scriptures, that such persons were chosen, first, to believe them, secondly, to proclaim them in the world, and thirdly, to die on the evidence of those truths, the blessed influence of which they felt in their own hearts, and fully exemplified in their lives.

26. Ought not Christ to have suffered? ὀφείλοῦς εἶναι παθεῖν τὸν Χριστὸν, ἢ οὐκ ἦν ἀνάγκη τοῦ Χριστοῦ παθεῖν. Was it not necessary that Christ should suffer. This was the way in which sin must be expiated, and without this, no soul could have been saved. The suffering Messiah is he alone by whom Israel and the world can be saved.

27. Beginning at Moses, &c.] What a sermon this must have been, where all the prophecies relative to the incarnation, birth, teaching, miracles, sufferings, death, and resurrection of the blessed Jesus, were all adduced, illustrated, and applied to himself, by an appeal to the well-known facts which had taken place during his life! We are almost irresistibly impelled to exclaim, What a pity this discourse had not been preserved! No wonder their hearts burned within them, while hearing such a sermon, from such a preacher. The law and the prophets had all borne testimony, either directly or indirectly, to Christ: and we may naturally suppose that these prophecies and references were those which our Lord at this time explained and applied to himself. See ver. 32.

28. He made as though he would have gone further.] That is, he was going on, as though he intended to go further; and so he doubtless would, had they not earnestly pressed him to lodge with them. His preaching had made a deep impression upon their hearts, ver. 32 and now they feel it their greatest privilege to entertain the preacher.

This is a constant effect of the doctrine of Christ; wherever it is felt, the Author of it the ever-blessed Jesus, is earnestly 27 And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the Scriptures, the things concerning himself.

28 And they drew nigh unto the village, whither they went: and he made as though he would have gone further.

29 But they constrained him, saying, Abide with us: for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent. And he went in to tarry with them.

30 And it came to pass, as he sat at meat with them, he took bread and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them.

31 And their eyes were opened, and they knew him; and he vanished out of their sight.

32 And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the scriptures?

33 And they rose up the same hour, and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven gathered together, and them that were with them.

34 Saying, The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon.

35 And they told what things were done in the way, and how he was known of them in breaking of bread.

36 And as they thus spake, Jesus himself stood in the midst of them, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you.

10. 11. & 20. & 4. 53. Jer. 21. 5. & 23. 14. 15. Ezech. 34. 32 & 27. 25. Dan. 9. 24. Mic. 7. 21. Mal. 3. 1. & 4. 2. See on John 1. 42.—b See on John 7. 25 & 42. 7. Mark 6. 62.—c Genesis 19. 2. Acts 16. 15.—d Matthew 14. 19.—e Or, seemed to be seen of them. See Chapter 20. John 5. 56.—f 1 Corinthis 15. 5.—g Mark 16. 14. John 20. 13. 1 Corinthis 15. 5.

entreated to dwell in the heart; and he who preaches it, is amply provided with the necessities of life by those who have received his testimony.

29. For it is toward evening] And consequently both inconvenient and unsafe to proceed to another village. Reader! it is probably the eve of thy life, whether thou be old or young; thy day may have already declined, and there is, possibly, but a step between thee and the eternal world! Hath the Lord Jesus taught thee by his word and Spirit to believe in him that thou mightest be saved? Is he come into thy heart? Hast thou the witness of his Spirit that thy sin is blotted out through his blood? Rom. viii. 16. Gal. iv. 6. 1 John v. 10, 11, 12. If thou have not, get thee to God right humbly. Jesus is about to pass by, perhaps for ever! O constrain him by earnest faith and prayer to enter into thy soul, and lodge with thee! May God open thy eyes! may he stir up and inflame thy heart!

And he went in] And so he will to thee, thou penitent soul! therefore take courage, and be not faithless but believing.

30. He took bread] This was the office of the master and father of a family; and this was our Lord's usual custom among his disciples. Those whom Christ lodges with, he feeds, and feeds too with bread that himself hath blessed, and this feeding not only strengthens them, but also enlightens the soul.

31. Their eyes were opened] But we are not to imagine that he administered the holy eucharist at this time; there is not the most distant evidence of this. It was a mere family meal, and ended before it was well begun.

They knew him] His acting as father of the family, in taking, blessing, and distributing the bread among them, caused them to recollect those tips which they had often heard speak, and those hands by which they had often been fed. Perhaps he also threw off the disguise which he had before assumed; and now appeared in his own person.

He vanished out of their sight] Probably during their surprise, he took the opportunity of withdrawing from the place; leaving them to reflect and meditate on what they had heard and seen.

32. Did not our heart burn within us] His word was in our heart as a burning fire, Jer. xx. 9. Our hearts waxed hot within us, and while we were musing the fire burned, Psal. xxxix. 3. In some such way as this the words of the disciples may be understood; but there is a very remarkable reading here in the Codex Beza; instead of εὐφρανόμενοι, burned, it has εὐφρανόμενοι, called, and one of the Itala, has, fruit exarostum, was blinded. Was not our heart called (blinded) when he conversed with us on the way, and while he unfolded the Scriptures to us, seeing we did not know him?

34. Saying, The Lord is risen indeed] The meaning here is, that these two disciples found the apostles, and those who were with them, unanimously testifying that Christ had risen from the dead. It is not to the two disciples to whom we are to refer the word ἀποστόλων, saying; but to the body of the disciples. See the note on Mark xvi. 12.

35. And they] The two disciples who were just come from Emmaus, related what had happened to them on the way, going to Emmaus, and how he had been known unto them in the breaking of bread, while supping together at the above village. See on ver. 31.

36. And as they thus spake] While the two disciples who were going to Emmaus were conversing about Christ, he joined himself to their company. Now while they and the apostles are confirming each other in their belief of his resurrection, Jesus comes in, to remove every doubt, and to give them the fullest evidence of it. And it is ever true, that wherever two or three are gathered together in his name, he is in the midst of them.

Peace be unto you.] The usual salutation among the Jews. May you prosper in body and soul, and enjoy every heavenly and earthly good! See the notes on Matt. v. 9. x. 13.

37 But they were terrified and affrighted, and supposed that they had seen a spirit.

38 And he said unto them, Why are ye troubled? and why do thoughts arise in your hearts?

39 Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: I handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have.

40 And when he had thus spoken, he showed them his hands and his feet.

41 And while they yet believed not for joy, and wondered, he said unto them, I have ye here any meat?

42 And they gave him a piece of a broiled fish, and of a honeycomb.

43 And he took it, and did eat before them.

44 And he said unto them, These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms, concerning me.

37. And supposed that they had seen a spirit.] But if there be no such thing as a disembodied spirit, would not our Lord have shown them their error? Instead of this, he confirms them in their opinion, by saying, A spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have, ver. 39. therefore he says, handle me and see me. They probably imagined that it was the soul only, of our blessed Lord which they saw; but they were soon fully convinced of the identity of his person, and the reality of his resurrection: for, 1. They saw his body. 2. They heard him speak. 3. They handled him. 4. They saw him eat a piece of broiled fish and honeycomb, which they gave him. In these things it was impossible for them to have been deceived.

41. They—believed not for joy] They were so overcome with the joy of his resurrection, that they did not for some time, properly receive the evidence that was before them—as we phrase it, they thought the news too good to be true.

44. The law—the prophets—the psalms.] This was the Jewish division of the whole Old Covenant. The Law contained the five books of Moses; the PROPHETS, the Jews divided into former and latter; they were, according to Josephus, thirteen. "The PSALMS included not only the book still so named, but also three other books, Proverbs, Job, and Canticles. These all," says the above author, "contain hymns to God, and rules for the conduct of the lives of men." Joseph. cont. App. l. 8. This account is imperfect: the common Jewish division of the writings of the Old Covenant is the following, and indeed seems to be the same to which our Lord alludes:

- I. The LAW תורה, torah, including Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy.
- II. The PROPHETS, נביאים nabiamim, or teachers, including Isaiah, Judges, the two books of Samuel, and the two books of Kings, (these were termed the former prophets) Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Hosea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Jonah, Micah, Nahum, Habakkuk, Zephaniah, Haggai, Zachariah, and Malachi: these were termed the latter prophets.

III. The HAGIOGRAPHIA, (holy writings) כתובי kethubim, which comprehended the Psalms, Proverbs, Job, Canticles, Ruth, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes, Esther, Daniel, Ezra, Nehemiah, and the two books of Chronicles. The Jews made anciently only twenty-two books of the whole, to bring them to the number of the letters in the Hebrew alphabet: and this they did by joining Ruth to Judges, making the two books of Samuel only one; and so of Kings and Chronicles; joining the Lamentations to Jeremiah, and making the twelve minor prophets only one book.

45. Then opened he their understanding] δινοίξεν, he fully opened. They had a measure of light before, so that they discerned the Scriptures to be the true word of God, and to speak of the Messiah: but they had not light sufficient to enable them to apply these Scriptures to their Lord and Master; but now, by the influence of Christ, they see, not only the prophecies which pointed out the Messiah, but also the Messiah who was pointed out by these prophecies. The book of God may be received in general as a divine revelation, but the proper meaning, reference, and application of the Scriptures can only be discerned by the light of Christ. Even the very plain word of God is a dead letter to those who are not enlightened by the grace of Christ: and why? because this word speaks of spiritual and heavenly things; and the carnal mind of man cannot discern them. They who receive not this inward teaching, continue dark and dead while they live.

47. Repentance] See its nature fully explained in the notes on Matt. iii. 1.

Remission of sins] ἀφεσιν aphesin, the taking away—removal of sins, in general—every thing that relates to the destruction of the power, the pardoning of the guilt, and the purification of the heart from the very nature of sin.

Should be preached in his name] See the office of a preacher, herald, or preacher, explained in the note on Matt. iii. 1. and particularly at the end of that chapter.

In his name—] On his authority, and in virtue of the atonement made by him: for on what other ground could the inhabitants of the earth expect remission of sins?

Among all nations] Because God wills the salvation of 45 Then opened he their understanding, that they might understand the Scriptures.

46 And said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day:

47 And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem.

48 Ye are witnesses of these things.

49 I And, behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you; but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high.

50 I And he led them out as far as to Bethany, and he lifted up his hands, and blessed them.

51 I And it came to pass, while he blessed them, he was parted from them, and carried up into heaven.

52 I And they worshipped him, and returned to Jerusalem with great joy:

53 And were continually in the temple praising and blessing God. Amen.

ALL; and Jesus Christ by his grace has tasted death for every man. Heb. ii. 9.

Beginning at Jerusalem] Making the first overtures of mercy to my murderers! If then the sinners of Jerusalem might repent, believe, and be saved; y none, on this side hell, need despair.

48. Ye are witnesses of these things.] He gave them a full commission to proclaim these glad tidings of peace and salvation to a lost world. The disciples were witnesses not only that Christ had suffered and rose again from the dead; but also that he opens the understanding by the inspiration of his Spirit, that he gives repentance, that he pardons sins, and purifies from all unrighteousness, and that he is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come unto the knowledge of the truth and be saved. And these are the things of which their successors in the Gospel ministry must bear witness. As far as a man steadily and affectionately proclaims these doctrines, so far God will bless his labour to the salvation of those who hear him. But no man can with any propriety bear witness of that grace that saves the soul, whose own soul is not saved by that grace.

49. The promise of my Father] That is, the Holy Ghost, promised, John xv. 26. See Acts i. 4. ii. 33.

Until ye be endued with power] The energy of the Holy Ghost was to be communicated to them for three particular purposes. 1. That he might be in them, a sanctifying comforter, fortifying their souls, and bringing to their remembrance whatever Jesus had before spoken to them.

2. That their preaching might be accompanied by his demonstration and power to the hearts of their hearers, so that they might believe and be saved.

3. That they might be able to work miracles, to confirm their pretensions to a divine mission; and to establish the truth of the doctrines they preached.

50. He led them out as far as to Bethany] The difficulties in this verse, when collated with the accounts given by the other evangelists, are thus reconciled by Dr. Lightfoot.

"1. This very evangelist (Acts i. 12.) tells us, that when the disciples came back from the place where our Lord had ascended, they returned from mount Olivet, distant from Jerusalem a Sabbath day's journey. But now the town of Bethany was about fifteen furlongs from Jerusalem, John xi. 18. and that is double a Sabbath day's journey.

"2. Josephus tells us, that Mount Olivet was but five furlongs from the city, and a Sabbath day's journey was seven furlongs and a half. Antiq. lib. 20. cap. 6. About that time there came to Jerusalem a certain Egyptian, pretending himself a prophet, and persuading the people that they should go out with him to the mount of Olives. Ο κατ' τας πολυας διασκευας παλαιων, ανηκει ολιβια ορος; which being situated on the front of the city, is distant five furlongs. These things are all true: 1. That the mount of Olives lay but five furlongs distant from Jerusalem. 2. That the town of Bethany was fifteen furlongs. 3. That the disciples were brought by Christ as far as Bethany. 4. That when they returned from the mount of Olives, they travelled more than five furlongs. And, 5. Returning from Bethany they travelled but a Sabbath day's journey. All which may be easily reconciled, if we would observe; that the first space from the city was called Bethphage, which I have cleared elsewhere from Talmudic authors, the evangelist's themselves also confirming it. That part of the mount was known by that name to the length of about a Sabbath day's journey, till it came to that part which is called Bethany. For there was a Bethany, a tract of the mount, and the town of Bethany. The town was distant from the city about fifteen furlongs, i. e. about two miles, or a double Sabbath day's journey; but the first border of this tract (which also bore the name of Bethany) was distant but one mile, or a single Sabbath day's journey.

"Our Saviour led out his disciples, when he was about to ascend, to the very first region or tract of mount Olivet, which was called Bethany, and was distant from the city a Sabbath day's journey. And so far from the city itself did that tract extend itself which was called Bethphage: and when he was come to that place where the bounds of Bethphage and Be-

They met and touched one another, he then ascended; in that very place where he got upon the sea when he rode into Jerusalem, Mark xi. 1. Whereas, therefore, Josephus saith, that mount Olivet was but five furlongs from the city, he means the first brink and border of it. But our evangelist must be understood of the place where Christ ascended, where the name of Olivet began, as it was distinguished from Bethpage."

Between the appearance of Christ to his apostles, mentioned in ver. 36, &c. almost all the forty days had passed, before he led them out to Bethany. They went by his order into Galilee, Matt. xxvi. 32. xxviii. 10. Mark xiv. 28. xvi. 7. and there he appeared to them, as is mentioned by Matthew, chap. xxviii. 16, &c. and more particularly by John, chap. xxi. 1, &c. See Bishop PEARCE.

Lifted up his hands] Probably to lay them on their heads, for this was the ordinary way in which the paternal blessing was conveyed. See Gen. xlviii. 8—20.

51. Carried up into heaven.] Ascipero—into that heaven from which he had descended, John i. 18. iii. 13. This was forty days after his resurrection, Acts i. 3. during which time he had given the most convincing proofs of that resurrection, not only to the apostles, but to many others—to upwards of five hundred at one time, 1 Cor. xv. 6.

As in his life they had seen the way to the kingdom, and in his death the price of the kingdom, so in his ascension they had the fullest proof of the immortality of the soul, the resurrection of the human body, and of his continual intercession at the right hand of God.

There are some remarkable circumstances relative to this ascension, mentioned in Acts i. 4—12.

52. They worshipped him] Let it be observed that this worship was not given by way of civil respect, for it was after he was parted from them, and carried back into heaven, that they offered it to him: but acts of civil respect are always performed in the presence of the person. They adored him as their God, and were certainly too much enlightened to be capable of any species of idolatry.

Returned to Jerusalem with great joy] Having the fullest proof that Jesus was the promised Messiah; and that they had a full commission to preach repentance and remission of sins to mankind; and that they should be divinely qualified for this great work by receiving the promise of the Father, ver. 49.

53. Were continually in the temple] Especially till the day of Pentecost came, when they received the promise, mentioned ver. 49.

Praising and blessing God.] Magnifying his mercy, and speaking good of his name. Thus the days of their mourning were ended; and they began that life upon earth in which they still live in the kingdom of God. May the God of infinite love give the reader the same portion in time and in eternity! through the same glorious and ever-blessed Jesus. Amen and Amen.

There are various subscriptions to this book in the MSS. and Versions. The following are the principal.

Through the assistance of the Most High God, the Gospel of St. Luke the physician, the proclaimers of eternal life, is finished. AMEN. The most holy Gospel of Luke the Evangelist, is completed. Syn. The end of the holy Gospel according to Luke—written in Greek—published in Alexandria the great,—in Treves, in Rome, in the confines of Achaia and Bœotia, in Bithynia,—in Macedonia,—in the Italic (or Latin) character, fifteen years after the ascension of Christ.

It is likely the word Amen, was added by the church, on the reading of this book; but there is no evidence that it was added by the evangelist. It is omitted by some of the best MSS. and versions.

It is evident, that at the conclusion of this Gospel, St. Luke passes very rapidly over a number of interesting circumstances related by the other evangelists, and particularly by St. John concerning the last forty days of our Lord's sojourning on earth; but to compensate for this, he has mentioned a variety of important particulars which the others have passed by, a list of which I think it necessary to subjoin. It seems as if the providence of God had designed that none of these evangelists should stand alone; each has his peculiar excellency, and each his own style and mode of narration. They are all witnesses to the truth in general; and each most pointedly to every great fact of the Gospel history. In each there is something new; and no serious reader ever finds, that the perusal of any one supersedes the necessity of carefully consulting and reading the others. The same facts and doctrines are exhibited by all in different points of view, which readers them both impressive and interesting; and this one circumstance serves to fix the narrative more firmly in the memory. We should have had slighter impressions from the Gospel history, had we not had the narrative at four different hands. This variety is of great service to the church of God, and has contributed very much to diffuse the knowledge of the facts and doctrines contained in this history. Parallel passages have been carefully studied, and the different shades of meaning accurately marked out; and the consequence has been what the wisdom of God designed, the fuller edification of the faithful. It is not the business of a commentator to point out beauties in the composition of the sacred text.—Many might be selected from the evangelists in general, and not a few from Luke, who not only tells a true story, but tells it well; especially when he has occasion to connect the different parts of the narration with observations of his own. But this is his least praise; for from his own account we learn, that he took the utmost pains to get the most accurate and circumstantial information relative to the facts he was to relate; see the note on chap. i. ver. 3. While, therefore, he was thus diligently and conscientiously sought for truth, the unerring Spirit of God led him into all truth. Even he who expected the revelation of the Almighty, and to be inspired by the Holy Spirit, that he might correctly, forcibly, and successfully proclaim the truth and righteousness of his Maker, must stand upon his watch, and set himself upon his tower, and watch to see what God would speak in him, Hab. ii. 1. In a similar spirit we may expect the fruits of these revelations. He who carefully and conscientiously sees the means, may expect the accomplishment of the end.

I cannot close these observations with a more profitable word than what is contained in that truly apostolic and sublime prayer for the second Sunday in Advent: and may he who reads it weigh every word in the spirit of faith and devotion. "Blessed God! who hast caused all Holy Scriptures to be written for our learning; grant that we may in such wise hear them, read, mark, fears, and inwardly digest them, that by patience and comfort of thy holy word, we may embrace and ever hold fast the blessed hope of everlasting life, which thou hast given us in our Saviour Jesus Christ!"

Now to him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father, to Him be glory and dominion for ever and ever! Amen.

Parts and circumstances related at large by St. Luke, which are either not mentioned at all, or but very transiently, by the other Evangelists.

The conception of Elizabeth, chap. i. 8—25. The salutation of Mary, ibid. 26—41. Mary's visit to Elizabeth, ibid. 38—45. The birth of John the Baptist, ibid. 57—78. The decree of Cæsar Augustus, chap. ii. 1—6. Apparition of the angel to the shepherds, ibid. 8—21. The circumcision of Christ, ibid. 21. The presentation of Christ in the temple, ibid. 22—24. Dispute with the doctors when twelve years of age, ibid. 41—52. Chronological dates at the commencement of our Lord's ministry, chap. iii. 1, 2. Success of the preaching of John the Baptist, ibid. 10—15. Christ's preaching and miraculous signs at Nazareth, chap. iv. 15—30. Remarkable particulars in the call of Simon, Andrew, James, and John, chap. v. 1—10. The exorcism that fell on certain epileptic, chap. xii. 1—9. Mission of the seventy disciples, chap. x. 1—16. The return of the seventy disciples, with an account of their success, ibid. 17—24. Story of the good Samaritan, ibid. 25—37. Cure of the woman who had been diseased eighteen years, chap. xiii. 10—20. The question answered, Are there few that be saved, ibid. 23—25. Curing of the man with the drooping, chap. xiv. 1—12. Difficulties attending the profession of Christianity, ibid. 17—24. Parable of the lost sheep, and the lost piece of money, chap. x. 1—10. Parable of the fig-tree, ibid. 11—31. Parable of the unjust steward, chap. xv. 1—13. Parable of the man with the fig-tree, chap. xiv. 12—19. The Pharisee and the publican, chap. xviii. 1—14. Account of the domestic attractions of Martha and Mary, chap. x. 38—42. The account of Zaccheus, chap. xix. 2—10. The parable of the sower that went to obtain a kingdom, ibid. 11—28. Pilate sends Jesus to Herod, chap. xiii. 1—16. Account of the woman that deplored our Lord's sufferings, ibid. 27—32. Remarkable particulars concerning the two thieves that were crucified with our Lord, ibid. 33—43. Account of the two disciples going to Emmaus, chap. xvi. 12—17. Remarkable circumstances concerning his appearance to the eleven, after his resurrection, ibid. 37—48.

LONDON, Feb. 16, 1813.

PREFACE TO ST. JOHN.

John, the writer of this Gospel, was the son of a fisherman, named Zebedee, and his mother's name was Salome. Compare Matt. xxvii. 56. with Mark xv. 40. and xvi. 1. His father Zebedee was probably of Bethsaida, and with his sons James and John, followed his occupation on the sea of Galilee. The call of these two brothers to the apostleship is related Matt. iv. 21, 22. Mark i. 19, 20. Luke v. 1—10. John is generally supposed to have been about 26 years of age, when he began to follow our Lord.

Theophylect makes him one of the relatives of our Lord, and gives his genealogy thus: "Joseph, the husband of the blessed Mary, had seven children by a former wife; four sons, and three daughters, Martha, (perhaps, says Dr. Lardner, it should be Mary,) Esther, and Salome, whose son John was; therefore Salome was reckoned our Lord's sister, and John was his nephew." If this relationship did exist, it may have been, at least in part, the reason of several things mentioned in the Gospels; as the petition of the two brothers, for the two chief places in the kingdom of Christ; John's being the beloved disciple and friend of Jesus, and being admitted to some freedoms denied to the rest; and possibly performing some offices about the person of his Master; and finally, our Lord's committing to him the care of his mother, as long as she should survive him. In a MS. of the Greek Testament in the Imperial Library of Vienna, numbered 34 in Lambecius's Catalogue, there is a marginal note which agrees pretty much with the account given above by Theophylact: viz. "John the evangelist was cousin to our Lord Jesus Christ according to the flesh; for Joseph, the spouse of the God-bearing Virgin, had four sons by his own wife, James, Simon, Jude, and Joseph; and three daughters, Esther, and Thamar, and a third, who with their mother was called Salome, who was given by Joseph in marriage to Zebedee: of her, Zebedee begot James, and also John the Evangelist." The writer of the MS. professes to have taken this account from the commentaries of St. Sophronius.

This evangelist is supposed by some to have been the bridegroom at the marriage of Cana in Galilee; see chap. ii. 1.

John was with our Lord in his transfiguration on the mount, Matt. xvii. 2. Mark ix. 2. Luke ix. 28. during his agony in the garden, Matt. xxvi. 37. Mark xiv. 33. and when he was crucified, John xix. 26.

He saw our Lord expire upon the cross, and saw the soldier pierce his side with a spear, John xix. 34, 35.

He was one of the Lord's disciples that visited the sepulchre after the resurrection of Christ; and was present with the other disciples, when Jesus showed himself to them on the evening of the same day on which he arose; and likewise eight days after, chap. xx. 19-29.

In conjunction with Peter, he cured a man who had been lame from his mother's womb, for which he was cast into prison, Acts iii. 1-10. He was afterward sent to Samaria, to confer the Holy Ghost on those who had been converted there by Philip the deacon, Acts viii. 5-26. St. Paul informs us, Galat. ii. that John was present at the council of Jerusalem, of which an account is given, Acts xv.

It is evident that John was present at most of the things related by him in his Gospel; and that he was an eye and ear witness of our Lord's labours, journeyings, discourses, miracles, passion, crucifixion, resurrection, and ascension. After the ascension he returned with the other apostles from Mount Olivet to Jerusalem, and took part in all transactions previous to the day of Pentecost; on which time, he, with the rest, partook of the mighty outpouring of the Holy Spirit, by which he was eminently qualified for the place he afterward held in the Christian church.

Some of the ancients believed that he went into Parthia, and preached the Gospel there; and his first epistle has been sometimes cited under the name of the Epistle to the Parthians.

Irenæus, Eusebius, Origen, and others, assert that he was a long time in Asia, continuing there till Trajan's time, who succeeded Nerva, A. D. 98. And Polycrates, bishop of Ephesus, A. D. 194, asserts that John was buried in that city. Jerom confirms this testimony, and says that John's death happened in the 68th year after our Lord's passion.

Tertullian and others say, that Domitian having declared war against the church of Christ in the 15th year of his reign, A. D. 95, John was banished from Ephesus, and carried to Rome, where he was immersed in a cauldron of boiling oil, out of which, however, he escaped unhurt: and that afterward he was banished to the Isle of Patmos, in the Ægean Sea, where he wrote the Apocalypse. Domitian, having been slain in A. D. 96, his successor, Nerva, recalled all the exiles who had been banished by his predecessor: and John is supposed to have returned the next year to Ephesus, being then about 90 years of age. He is thought to have been the only apostle who died a natural death, and to have lived upwards of 100 years. Some say, having completed 100 years, he died the day following. This Gospel is supposed by learned men to have been written about A. D. 68 or 70, by others A. D. 85, and by others A. D. 97, but the most probable opinion is, that it was written at Ephesus about the year 86.

Jerom, in his comment on Galat. vi. says, that John continued preaching when he was so enfeebled with old age, that he was obliged to be carried into the assembly: and that not being able to deliver any long discourse, his custom was to say, in every meeting, My dear children, love one another! The holy virgin lived under his care till the day of her death; which is supposed to have taken place 15 years after the crucifixion.

John is usually painted holding a cup in his hand, with a serpent issuing from it: this took its rise from a relation by the spurious Procureus, who styles himself a disciple of St. John. Though the story is not worth relating, curiosity will naturally wish to be gratified with it. Some heretics had privately poisoned a cup of liquor with which they presented him; but after he had prayed to God, and made the sign of the cross over it, the venom was expelled in the form of a serpent!

Some of the first disciples of our Lord, misunderstanding the passage, John xxi. 22, 23. If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? believed that John should never die. Several in the primitive church were of the same opinion: and to this day his death is doubted by persons of the first repute for piety and morality. Where such doctors disagree, it would be thought presumption in me to attempt to decide, otherwise I should not have hesitated to say, that seventeen hundred years ago, he went the way of all flesh, and instead of a wandering lot in a miserable perishing world, is now glorified in that heaven, of which his writings prove he had so large an anticipation both before and after the crucifixion of his Lord.

Eusebius, (Hist. Eccles. lib. iii. cap. 24.) treats particularly of the order of the Gospels; and especially of this evangelist—his observations are of considerable importance, and deserve a place here. Dr. Lardner has quoted him at large, Works, vol. iv. p. 224.

"Let us," says he, "observe the writings of this apostle, which are not contradicted by any. And first of all must be mentioned, as acknowledged of all, the Gospel according to him, well known to all the churches under heaven. And that it has been justly placed by the ancients the fourth in order, and after the other three, may be made evident in this manner. Those admirable and truly divine men, the apostles of Christ, eminently holy in their lives, and as to their minds adorned with every virtue, but rude in language, confiding in the divine and miraculous power bestowed upon them by our Saviour, neither knew, nor attempted to deliver the doctrine of their Master with the artifice and eloquence of words. But using only the demonstration of the Divine Spirit, working with them, and the power of Christ performing by them, many miracles, they spread the knowledge of the kingdom of heaven all over the world. Nor were they greatly concerned about the writing of books, being engaged in a more excellent ministry, which was above all human power. Inasmuch that Paul, the most able of all in the furniture both of words and thoughts, has left nothing in writing, besides some very short (or a very few) epistles; although he was acquainted with innumerable mysteries, having been admitted to the sight and contemplation of things in the third heaven, and been caught up into the divine paradise, and there allowed to hear unspeakable words. Nor were the rest of our Saviour's followers unacquainted with these things, as the seventy disciples, and many other beside the twelve apostles. Nevertheless, of all the disciples of our Lord, Matthew and John only have left us any memoirs; who, too, as we have been informed, were compelled to write by a kind of necessity. For Matthew, having first preached to the Hebrews, when he was about to go to other people, delivered to them, in their own language, the Gospel according to him, by that writing supplying the want of his presence with those whom he was then leaving. And when Mark and Luke had published the Gospels according to them, it is said, that John, who all this while had preached by word of mouth, was at length induced to write for this reason. The three first written Gospels being now delivered to all men, and to John himself, it is said, that he approved them, and confirmed the truth of their narration by his own testimony; saying, there was only wanting a written account of the things done by Christ in the former part, and the beginning of his preaching. And certainly that observation is very true. For it is easy to perceive, that the other three evangelists have recorded only the actions of our Saviour for one year after the imprisonment of John, as they themselves declare, at the beginning of their history. For after mentioning the forty days fast, and the succeeding temptation, Matthew shows the time of the commencement of his account in these words, When he had heard that John was cast into prison he departed out of Judea into Galilee. In like manner Mark, Now after that John, says he, was cast into prison, Jesus came into Galilee. And Luke, before he begins the account of the acts of Jesus, gives a like hint, in this manner; that Herod added yet this, above all, that he shut up John in prison. For these reasons, as is said, the apostle John was entreated to relate in the Gospel according to him, the time omitted by the four evangelists, and the things done by our Saviour in that space, before the imprisonment of the Baptist. And they add further, that he himself hints as much, saying, This beginning of miracles did Jesus: as also in the history of the acts of Jesus, he makes mention of the Baptist, as still baptizing in Ænon nigh unto Salem. And it is thought that he expressly declares as much, when he says, For John was not yet cast into prison. John, therefore, in the Gospel according to him, relates the things done by Christ while the Baptist was not yet cast into prison. But the other three evangelists relate the things that followed the Baptist's confinement. Whoever attends to these things, will not any longer think the evangelists disagree with each other, inasmuch as the Gospel according to John contains the first actions of Christ, while the others give the history of the following time. And for the same reason John has omitted the genealogy of our Saviour according to the flesh, it having been recorded before by Matthew and Luke: but he begins with his divinity, which had been reserved by the Holy Ghost for him, as the most excellent person." The whole of this chapter, with the preceding and following, may be profitably consulted by the reader. See also Lardner, Works, vol. iv. 224. and vi. 166-222.

Besides the Gospel before us, John is generally reputed to have been the author of the three epistles which go under his name; and of the Apocalypse. The former certainly breathe the genuine spirit of this apostle; and are invaluable monuments of his spiritual knowledge, and deep piety, as well as of his divine inspiration: as the Gospel and Epistles prove him to have been an evangelist and apostle; his book of Revelations ranks him among the profoundest of the prophets.

Learned men are not wholly agreed about the language in which this Gospel was originally written. Some think St. John wrote it in his own native tongue, the Aramaic or Syriac, and that it was afterward translated, by rather an unskilful hand, into Greek. This opinion is not supported by any strong arguments. That it was originally written in Greek, is the general and most likely opinion.

Learned men are not wholly agreed about the language in which this Gospel was originally written. Some think St. John wrote it in his own native tongue, the Aramaic or Syriac, and that it was afterward translated, by rather an unskilful hand, into Greek. This opinion is not supported by any strong arguments. That it was originally written in Greek, is the general and most likely opinion.

Learned men are not wholly agreed about the language in which this Gospel was originally written. Some think St. John wrote it in his own native tongue, the Aramaic or Syriac, and that it was afterward translated, by rather an unskilful hand, into Greek. This opinion is not supported by any strong arguments. That it was originally written in Greek, is the general and most likely opinion.

Learned men are not wholly agreed about the language in which this Gospel was originally written. Some think St. John wrote it in his own native tongue, the Aramaic or Syriac, and that it was afterward translated, by rather an unskilful hand, into Greek. This opinion is not supported by any strong arguments. That it was originally written in Greek, is the general and most likely opinion.

Learned men are not wholly agreed about the language in which this Gospel was originally written. Some think St. John wrote it in his own native tongue, the Aramaic or Syriac, and that it was afterward translated, by rather an unskilful hand, into Greek. This opinion is not supported by any strong arguments. That it was originally written in Greek, is the general and most likely opinion.

Learned men are not wholly agreed about the language in which this Gospel was originally written. Some think St. John wrote it in his own native tongue, the Aramaic or Syriac, and that it was afterward translated, by rather an unskilful hand, into Greek. This opinion is not supported by any strong arguments. That it was originally written in Greek, is the general and most likely opinion.

What the design of St. John was in writing this Gospel, has divided and perplexed many critics and learned divines. Some suppose that it was to refute the errors taught by one Cerinthus, who rose up at that time, and asserted that Jesus was not born of a virgin, but was the real son of Joseph and Mary; that at his baptism, the Christ, what we term the divine nature, descended into him, in the form of a dove, by whose influence he worked all his miracles; and that when he was about to suffer, this Christ, or divine nature, departed from him, and left the man Jesus to suffer death. See Irenæus, advers. Hæreses.

Others suppose he wrote with the prime design of confuting the heresy of the Gnostics, a class of mongrels, who derived their existence from Simon Magus, and who formed their system out of Heathenism, Judaism, and Christianity; and whose peculiar, involved, and obscure opinions, cannot be all introduced in this place. It is enough to know, that concerning the person of our Lord, they held opinions similar to those of Cerinthus; and that they arrogated to themselves the highest degrees of knowledge and spirituality. They supposed that the Supreme Being had all things and beings included in a certain seminal manner, in himself; and that out of him they were produced. From God, or Bythos, the infinite Abyss, they derived a multitude of subaltern governors, called Eons; among which they divided into several classes, among which we may distinguish the following nine. Pater, Father; Kapis, Grace; Moonyvns, First-begotten; Aλyήte, Truth; Aoyos, Word; Φως, Light; Ζων, Life; Αωδωνος, Man; and Εκκλησια, Church; all these merging in what they termed Παρουσια, Fullness, or complete round of being and blessings; terms which are of frequent occurrence in John's Gospel, and which some think he has introduced to fix their proper sense, and to rescue them from being abused by the Gnostics. But this is not very likely, as the Gnostics themselves appealed to St. John's Gospel for a confirmation of their peculiar opinions, because of his frequent use of the above terms. These sacraments, therefore, do not appear to be tenable.

Professor Michaelis has expoused the opinion, that it was written against the Gnostics and Sabians, and has advanced several arguments in its favour; the chief of which are the following.

"The plan which St. John adopted to confute the tenets of the Gnostics and the Sabians, was first to deliver a set of aphorisms, as counterpositions to these tenets; and then to relate such speeches and miracles of Christ as confirmed the truth of what he had advanced. We must not suppose that the confutation of the Gnostic and Sabian errors is confined to the fourteen first verses of St. John's Gospel; for, in the first place, it is evident that many of Christ's speeches, which occur in the following part of the Gospel, were selected by the evangelist with the view of proving the positions laid down in these fourteen verses; and secondly, the positions themselves are not proofs, but merely declarations made by the evangelist. It is true, that for us Christians, who acknowledge the divine authority of St. John, his bare word is sufficient; but as the apostle had to combat with adversaries, who made no such acknowledgment, the only method of convincing them, was to support his assertion by the authority of Christ himself.

"Some of the Gnostics placed the 'WORD' above all the other Eons, and next to the Supreme Being; but Cerinthus placed the 'Only-Begotten' first, and then the 'WORD.' Now St. John lays down the following positions.

"1. The Word and the Only-begotten are not different, but the same person, chap. i. 14. "We beheld his glory, as of the only-begotten of the Father." This is a strong position against the Gnostics, who usually ascribed all the divine qualities to the Only-Begotten. The proofs of this position are, the testimony of John the Baptist, chap. i. 18, 34. iii. 35, 36, the conversation of Christ with Nicodemus, chap. iii. 16, 18, in which Christ calls himself the only-begotten Son, the speech delivered by Christ to the Jews, chap. v. 17, 47, and other passages, in which he calls God his Father.

"2. The Word was never made, but existed from the beginning, chap. i. 1. The Gnostics granted that the Word existed before the creation; but they did not admit that the Word existed from all eternity. The Supreme Being, according to their tenets, and according to Cerinthus, the only-begotten Son likewise, as also the matter from which the world was formed, were prior in existence to the Word. This notion is contradicted by St. John, who asserts that the Word existed from all eternity. As a proof of this position may be alleged perhaps what Christ says, chap. viii. 58.

"3. The Word was in the beginning with God, chap. i. 1, 2. The Gnostics must have maintained a contrary doctrine, or St. John, in confuting their tenets, would not have thought it necessary to advance this position, since God is omnipresent, and therefore all things are present with him.

"4. The Word was God, chap. i. 1. The expression GOD must be here taken in its highest sense, or this position will contain nothing contrary to the doctrine of the Gnostics. For they admitted that the Word was an Eon, and therefore a deity in the lower sense of the word. The proofs of this position are contained in the 5th, 10th (ver. 30.) and 14th (ver. 7, 11.) chapters.

"5. The Word was the creator of all things, chap. i. 3, 10. This is one of St. John's principal positions against the Gnostics, who asserted that the world was made by a malevolent being. The assertion that the Word was the Creator of the world, is equivalent to the assertion that he was GOD, in the highest possible sense. In whatever form or manner we may think of God, the notion of Creator is inseparable from the notion of Supreme Being. We argue from the creation to the Creator; and this very argument is one proof of the existence of God.

"6. In the word was life, chap. i. 4. The Gnostics, who considered the different attributes or operations of the Almighty not so many separate energies, but as so many separate persons; considered Life as a distinct Eon from the Word. Without this Eon, the world, they said, would be in a state of torpor; and hence they called it not only Life, but the Mother of the living; from this Eon therefore might be expected the resurrection of the dead and eternal life. The proofs of this position are in chap. iii. 15, 21, the whole of the sixth, and the greatest part of the eighth chapter, as also chap. xiv. 6, 9, 19. But no part of St. John's Gospel is a more complete proof of this position, than his full and circumstantial account of the resurrection of Lazarus, which the other evangelists had omitted."—See more in Michaelis's Introduction to the New Testament. And for a general account of the Logos, see chap. I. at the end.

Though it is likely that the Gnostics held all these strange doctrines, and that many parts in John's Gospel may be successfully quoted against them, yet I must own I think the evangelist had a more general end in view than the confutation of their heresies. It is more likely that he wrote for the express purpose of giving the Jews, his countrymen, proper notions of the Messiah and his kingdom; and to prove that Jesus, who had lately appeared among them, was this Christ. His own words sufficiently inform us of his motive, object, and design, in writing this Gospel. These things are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing, ye might have life through his name, chap. xx. 31. This is a design as noble as it is simple; and every way highly becoming the wisdom and goodness of God.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST. JOHN.

[For Chronological Eras, see at the end of the Acta.]

CHAPTER I.

The eternity of the Divine Logos or Word of God, the dispenser of light and life, 1—8. The mission of John the Baptist, 6—13. The incarnation of the Logos or Word of God, 14. John's testimony concerning the Logos, 15—18. The priests and Levites question him concerning his mission, and his baptism, 19—22. His answer, 23—25. His further testimony on seeing Christ, 26—34. He points him out to two of his disciples, who thenceforth follow Jesus, 35—37. Christ's address to them, 38, 39. Andrew invites his brother, Simon Peter; Christ's address to him, 40—42. Christ calls Philip, and Philip invites Nathanael, 43—48. Christ's character of Nathanael, 47. A remarkable conversation between him and this disciple, 48—51. [Ante Orb. cond. to A. M. 4030. A. D. 26. An. Olymp. CCI. 2.]

IN the beginning <sup>a</sup> was the Word, and the Word was <sup>b</sup> with God, <sup>c</sup> and the Word was God.
<sup>d</sup> And the same was in the beginning with God.

<sup>a</sup> Ps. 82, 65, etc. Col. 1. 17. 1 John 1. 1. Rev. 1. 2, & 19. 13.—<sup>b</sup> Prov. 8. 20. Ch. 17. 8. 1 John 1. 2.—<sup>c</sup> Phil. 2. 6. 1 John 5. 7.—<sup>d</sup> Gen. 1. 1.

NOTES.—John's introduction is from verse i. to ver. 18. inclusive. Some harmonists suppose it to end with ver. 14. but from the connexion of the whole, ver. 18 appears to be its natural close, as it contains a reason why the Logos or Word was made flesh. Verse 15. refers to ver. 6, 7, and 8, and in these passages John's testimony is anticipated in order of time, and as very fitly mentioned to illustrate Christ's pre-eminence.

3 * All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made."
 4 † In him was life; and † the life was the light of men.

<sup>e</sup> Ps. 23. 6. Col. 1. 16. Ver. 10. Eph. 3. 9. Heb. 1. 2. Rev. 4. 11.—<sup>f</sup> Chapter 8. W. 1 John 5. 11.—<sup>g</sup> Ch. 8. 12 & 9. 6. & 12. 35, 46.

Veres 16 and 17 have a plain reference to ver. 14. See Bp. Newcome.

1. In the beginning That is, before any thing was formed—ere God began the great work of creation. This is the meaning of the word in Gen. i. 1. to which the evangelist evidently alludes. This phrase fully proves, in the mouth of an inspired writer, that Jesus Christ was no part of the creation.

5 And the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not.

6 There was a man sent from God, whose name was John.

7 The same came for a witness, to bear witness of the Light, that all men through him might believe.

8 He was not that Light, but was sent to bear witness of that Light.

9 That was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world.

Ch 3:19.—1 Mat. 3:1. Mat. 3:1. Lk. 3:2. Verse 31.—A. M. 3000 B.C.E. An. Olymp. CXCVIIA.—k Acts 19:4.—l Verse 4. Isa. 49: 6. 1 John 2: 8.—m Ver. 3. Heb. 1:2 & 11:3.—n Luke 18:14. Acts 2: 28. & 13:46.—o Isa. 56: 9. Rom. 8:15. Gal.

as he existed when no part of that existed; and that consequently he is no creature, as all created nature was formed by him; for without him was nothing made that is made, ver. 3. Now, as what was before creation must be eternal, and as what gave being to all things, could not have borrowed or derived its being from any thing; therefore Jesus, who was before all things, and who made all things, must necessarily be the eternal God.

Was the Word? Or, existed the Logos. This term should be left untranslated, for the very same reason why the names Jesus and Christ are left untranslated. The first I consider as proper an appellation of the Saviour of the world, as I do either of the two last. And as it would be highly improper to say, the Deliverer, the Anointed, instead of Jesus Christ, so I deem it improper to say, the Word, instead of the Logos. But as every appellation of the Saviour of the world, was descriptive of some excellence in his person, nature, or work; so the epithet Λογος, Logos, which signifies a word spoken, speech, eloquence, doctrine, reason, or the faculty of reasoning, is very properly applied to him, who is the true light which lighteth every man who cometh into the world, ver. 9. who is the fountain of all wisdom; who giveth being, life, light, knowledge, and reason, to all men; who is the grand Source of revelation, who has declared God unto mankind; who spake by the prophets, for the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy, Rev. xix. 10. who has illustrated life and immortality by his Gospel, 2 Tim. i. 10. and who has fully made manifest the deep mysteries which lay hidden in the bosom of the invisible God from all eternity, John i. 18.

The apostle does not borrow this mode of speech from the writings of Plato, as some have imagined; he took it from the Scriptures of the Old Testament, and from the subsequent style of the ancient Jews. It is true the Platonists make mention of the Logos in this way:—καὶ οὐρα, τα γινώσκοντα πάντα—by whom eternally existing, all things were made. But as Plato, Pythagoras, Zeno, and others, travelled among the Jews, and conversed with them, it is reasonable to suppose that they borrowed this, with many others of their most important notions and doctrines from them.

And the word was God? Or, God was the Logos:—therefore, no subordinate being; no second to the Most High, but the Supreme Eternal Jehovah.

3. All things were made by him? That is, by this Logos. In Gen. i. 1. God is said to have created all things: in this verse Christ is said to have created all things: the same unerring Spirit spake in Moses and in the evangelist: therefore Christ and the Father are One. To say that Christ made all things by a delegated power from God, is absurd; because the thing is impossible. Creation means, causing that to exist that had no previous being: this is evidently a work which can be effected only by Omnipotence. Now God cannot delegate his omnipotence to another: were this possible, he to whom this omnipotence was delegated, would, in consequence, become God: and he from whom it was delegated, would cease to be such; for it is impossible that there should be two omnipotent beings.

On these important passages, I find that many eminently learned men differ from me: it seems they cannot be of my opinion, and I feel I cannot be of theirs. May He who is the Light and the Truth, guide them and me into all truth!

4. In him was life? Many MSS., Versions, and Fathers, connect this with the preceding verse thus: All things were made by him, and without him was nothing made. What was made had life in it; but τὸ ζῆν ἦν τὸ φῶς τῶν ἀνθρώπων. That is, though every thing he made had a principle of life in it, whether vegetable, animal, or intellectual; yet this, that life or animal principle in the human being, was not the light of men; not that light which could guide them to heaven, for the world by wisdom knew not God, 1 Cor. i. 21. Therefore, the expression, in him was life, is not to be understood of life natural, but of that life eternal which he revealed to the world, 2 Tim. i. 10. to which he taught the way, chap. xiv. 6. which he promised to believers, chap. x. 28. which he purchased for them, chap. vi. 51, 53, 54, which he is appointed to give them, chap. xvii. 2. and to which he will raise them up, ver. 29. because he hath the life in himself, ver. 28. All this may be proved, 1. From the like expressions, 1 John v. 11. This is the promise, that God hath given unto us eternal life; and this life is in his Son: whence he is styled the true God, and eternal life, ver. 20. the resurrection and the life, chap. xi. 25. the way, the truth, and the life, chap. xiv. 6. 2. From these words, ver. 7. John came to bear witness of this light, that all might believe through him, viz. to eternal life, 1 Tim. i. 16. for so John witnesseth, chap. iii. 15, 36. And hence it follows, that this life must be the light of men, by giving them the know-

10 He was in the world, and the world was made by him, and the world knew him not.

11 He came unto his own, and his own received him not.

12 But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name;

13 Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God.

14 And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among

3:28. 2 Pet. 1: 4. 1 John 3:1.—Or, the right, or, privilege.—Ch. 3:8. James 1: 18. 1 Pet. 3:1.—Mat. 1: 16, 20. Luke 1: 31, 35. & 2: 7. 1 Tim 3: 16.—e Matt. 1: 3. Gal. 4.—f Heb. 2: 11, 14, 16, 17.—B. C. E. to A. D. 30.

ledge of this life, and of the way leading to it. See Whitty on the place. Is there any reference here to Gen. iii. 20. And Adam called his wife's name Eve, ἡν ὀνόμαζεν, Ζωὴν, LIFE, because she was the mother of all living? And was not Jesus that seed of the woman that was to bruise the head of the serpent, and to give life to the world?

5. And the light shineth in darkness? By darkness here may be understood, 1. The heathen world, Eph. v. 8. 2. The Jewish people. 3. The fallen spirit of man.

Comprehended it not? ἄνευ οὐ καταλαβόν, prevented it not—hindered it not, says Mr. Wakefield, who adds the following judicious note: "Even in the midst of that darkness of ignorance and idolatry which overspread the world, this light of divine wisdom was not totally eclipsed; the Jewish nation was a lamp perpetually shining to the surrounding nations, and many bright luminaries among the heathen, were never wanting in just and worthy notions of the attributes and providence of God's wisdom, which enabled them to shine in some degree, though but as lights in a dark place, 2 Pet. i. 19. Compare Acts xiv. 17. xvii. 23, 29."

6. Whose name was John? This was John the Baptist: see his name and the nature of his office explained, Mark i. 4. and Matt. iii. 1—3.

7. That all men through him might believe? He testified that Jesus was the true Light—the true teacher of the way to the kingdom of glory; and the Lamb or sacrifice of God, which was to bear away the sin of the world, ver. 29. and invited men to believe in him for the remission of their sins, that they might receive the baptism of the Holy Ghost, ver. 23—34. This was bearing the most direct witness to the light, which was now shining in the dark wilderness of Judea, and from thence shortly to be diffused over the whole world.

9. Which lighteth every man? As Christ is the Spring and Fountain of all wisdom, so all the wisdom that is in man comes from him: the human intellect is a ray from his brightness; and reason itself springs from this Logos, the eternal reason. Some of the most eminent rabbins understand Isa. lx. 1. Rise and shine, for thy Light is come, of the Messiah, who was to illuminate Israel, and who, they believe, was referred to in that word, Gen. i. 3. And God said, Let there be Light; and there was light. Let a Messiah be provided: and a Messiah was accordingly provided. See Schoettgen.

That cometh into the world? Or, coming into the world—ερχόμενον εἰς τὸν κόσμον: a common phrase among the rabbins, to express every human being. As the human creature sees the light of the world as soon as it is born, from which it had been excluded while in the womb of its parent: in like manner, this heavenly light shines into the soul of every man, to convince of sin, righteousness, and judgment: and it is through this light, which no man brings into the world with him, but which Christ mercifully gives to him on his coming into it, that what is termed conscience among men is produced. No man could discern good from evil, were it not for this light thus supernaturally and graciously restored. There was much light in the law, but this shone only upon the Jews: but the superior light of the Gospel is to be diffused over the face of the whole earth.

The following not only proves what is asserted in this verse, but is also an excellent illustration of it.

The GAYATRI, or holiest verse of the VEDAS, i. e. the ancient Hindoo Scriptures.

"Let us adore the supremacy of that divine Sun, the God-head who illuminates all, who recreates all, from whom all proceed—to whom all must return; whom we invoke to direct our understandings aright, in our progress towards his holy seat."

The ancient comment. "What the sun and light are to this visible world, that are the supreme good and truth to the intellectual and invisible universe; and as our corporeal eyes have a distinct perception of objects enlightened by the sun, thus our souls acquire certain knowledge by meditating on the light of truth, which emanates from the Being of beings, that is the light by which alone our minds can be directed in the path to blessedness." Sir Wm. Jones's Works, vol. vi. p. 417.

Sir William observes, that the original word Bhargava, which he translates Godhead, consists of three consonants, and is derived from bha, to shine; ram, to delight; and gam, to move:—the Being, who is the fountain of light, the source of happiness, and the all-persuading energy.

10. He was in the world? From its very commencement—he governed the universe—regulated his church—spoke by his prophets—and often, as the angel or messenger of Jehovah, appeared to them and to the patriarchs.

The world knew him not? ἄνευ οὐκ ᾔσθησαν—did not acknowledge him: for the Jewish rulers knew well enough that he us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only-begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth.

15<sup>1</sup> John bare witness of him, and cried, saying, This was he of whom I spake, that cometh after me is preferred before me: for he was before me.

16 And of his fulness have all we received, and grace for grace.

17 For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ.

18 No man hath seen God at any time; the only-begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him.

19 And this is the record of John, when the Jews sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem to ask him, Who art thou?

20 He answered and said unto them, I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord, as said the prophet Esaias.

21 And they said unto him, What sayest thou? He answered and said, I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord.

22 And they said unto him, Where is the Lord? He answered and said, I know not. But he that speaketh of him, he whom ye seek, he is the Spirit and the Bride, saying, Come, and take the water of life freely.

23 And he that heareth the voice of the Spirit and the Bride, let him come and take the water of life freely.

24 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

25 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

26 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

27 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

28 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

29 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

30 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

31 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

32 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

33 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

34 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

35 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

36 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

37 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

17 For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ.

18 No man hath seen God at any time; the only-begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him.

19 And this is the record of John, when the Jews sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem to ask him, Who art thou?

20 He answered and said unto them, I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord, as said the prophet Esaias.

21 And they said unto him, What sayest thou? He answered and said, I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord.

22 And they said unto him, Where is the Lord? He answered and said, I know not. But he that speaketh of him, he whom ye seek, he is the Spirit and the Bride, saying, Come, and take the water of life freely.

23 And he that heareth the voice of the Spirit and the Bride, let him come and take the water of life freely.

24 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

25 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

26 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

27 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

28 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

29 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

30 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

31 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

32 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

33 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

34 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

35 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

36 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

37 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

38 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

39 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

40 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

41 And he that is thirsty, let him come and take the water of life freely.

maculate Deity condescended to dwell. The word is probably an allusion to the Divine Shechinah in the Jewish temple; and as God has represented the whole Gospel dispensation by the types and ceremonies of the Old Covenant; so the Shechinah in the tabernacle and temple, pointed out this manifestation of God in the flesh. The word is thus used by the Jewish writers: it signifies with them a manifestation of the Divine Shechinah.

The original word σεννα, from σεν, a shadow, signifies, 1. To build a booth, tent, or temporary hut, for present shelter or convenience, and does not properly signify a lasting habitation or dwelling-place; and therefore fitly applied to the human nature of Christ, which, like the tabernacle of old, was to be here, only for a temporary residence for the eternal Divinity. 2. It signifies to erect such a building as was used on festival occasions, when a man invited and enjoyed the company of his friends. To this meaning of the word, which is a common one in the best Greek writers, the evangelist might allude, to point out Christ's associating his disciples with himself; living, conversing, eating, and drinking with them; so that while they had the fullest proof of his divinity, by the miracles which he wrought; they had the clearest evidence of his humanity, by his tabernacled among, eating, drinking, and conversing with them. Concerning the various acceptations of the verb σεννα, see Raphellus on this verse.

The doctrine of vicarious sacrifice, and the incarnation of the Deity, have prevailed among the most ancient nations in the world, and even among those which were not favourable with the letter of divine revelation. The Hindoos believe that their god has already become incarnate, not less than nine times, to save the wretched race of man.

On this subject, Creashna, an incarnation of the Supreme God, according to the Hindoo Theology, is represented in the Bhagvat Geeta, as thus addressing one of his disciples: "Although I am not in my nature subject to birth or decay, and am the Lord of all created beings; yet having command over my own nature, I am made evident by my own power: and as often as there is a decline of virtue, and an insurrection of vice and injustice in the world, I make myself evident; and thus I appear from age to age, for the preservation of the just, the destruction of the wicked, and the establishment of virtue." Geeta, p. 51, 62.

The following piece, already mentioned Luke 1. 68. translated from the Sanscreeet, found on a stone, in a cave near the ancient city of Gya, in the East Indies, is the most astonishing and important of any thing found, out of the compass of the Sanscreeet Writings, and a proper illustration of this text.

"The Deity, who is the Lord, the possessor of all, appeared in this ocean of natural beings, at the beginning of the Kalee Yog, (the age of contention and baseness.) He who is omnipresent, and everlastingly to be contemplated, the Supreme Being, the Eternal One, the Divinity worthy to be adored—appeared here, with a portion of his DIVINE NATURE. Reverence be unto thee in the form of Bood-dha! Reverence be unto the Lord of the earth! Reverence be unto thee, an INCARNATION of the Deity, and the Eternal One! Reverence be unto thee, O GOD! in the form of the God of Mercy! the dispeller of PAIN and TROUBLES, the Lord of all things, the Deity who overcometh the sins of the Kalee Yog, the guardian of the universe, the emblem of mercy towards those who serve thee! O'M! the possessor of all things, in VITAL FORM! Thou art Brahma, Veeshnoo, and Maheesa! Thou art Lord of the universe! Thou art under the form of all things, moveable and immovable, the possessor of the whole! And thus I adore thee! Reverence be unto the BESTOWER of SALVATION, and the ruler of the faculties! Reverence be unto thee, the DESTROYER of the EVIL SPIRIT! O Damordara, show me favour! I adore thee who art celebrated by a thousand names, and under various forms, in the shape of Bood-dha, the God of Mercy! Be propitious, O most High God!" Asiatic Researches, vol. 1. p. 284, 285.

Bood-dha. The name of the Deity, as author of happiness.

O'M. A mystic emblem of the Deity, forbidden to be pronounced but in silence. It is a syllable formed of the Sanscreeet letters, l, u, u, which in composition coalesce, and make o, and the nasal consonant m. The first letter stands for the Creator, the second for the Preserver, and the third for the Destroyer. It is the same among the Hindooes as יהוה Yehovah is among the Hebrews.

Brahma, the Deity in his creative quality.

Veeshnoo, he who filleth all space, the Deity in his preserving quality.

Maheesa, the Deity in his destroying quality.

This is properly the Hindoo Trinity: for these three names belong to the same God. See the notes to the Bhagvat Geeta.

Damordara, or Darmadara, the Indian God of Virtue.

20 And he confessed, and denied not; but confessed, I am not the Christ.

21 And they asked him, What then? Art thou Elias? And he saith, I am not. Art thou that prophet? And he answered, No.

g Luke 3. 15. Chapter 3. 22. Acts 73. 25.—h Mal. 4. 5. Matthew 17. 10.—i Dost. p. 15. 18.

We beheld his glory] This refers to the transfiguration, at which John was present, in company with Peter and James.

The glory as of the only-begotten] That is, such a glory as became, or was proper to the Son of God; for thus the particle ὡς should be here understood. There is also here an allusion to the manifestations of God above the ark in the tabernacle: see Exod. xxv. 22. Numb. vii. 89. and this connects itself with the first clause, he tabernacled, or fixed his tent, among us. While God dwelt in the tabernacle among the Jews, the priests saw his glory; and while Jesus dwelt among men, his glory was manifested in his gracious words and miraculous acts.

The only-begotten of the Father] That is, the only person born of a woman, whose human nature never came by the ordinary way of generation; it being a mere creation in the womb of the Virgin, by the energy of the Holy Ghost.

Fall of grace and truth] Fall of favour, kindness and mercy to men; teaching the way to the kingdom of God, with all the simplicity, plainness, dignity, and energy of truth.

16. Of him] The glorious personage before-mentioned: John the Baptist, whose history was well known to the persons to whom this Gospel came in the beginning, bars witnesses; and he cried, being deeply convinced of the importance and truth of the subject, he delivered his testimony with the utmost zeal and earnestness, saying, This is he of whom I spake, He that cometh after me—for I am no other than the voice of the crier in the wilderness, Isa. xl. 3. the forerunner of the Messiah.

Was before me] Speaking by the prophets', and warning your fathers to repent and return to God, as I now warn you; for he was before me—he was from eternity, and from him I have derived both my being and my ministry.

16. This verse should be put in the place of the fifteenth, and the fifteenth inserted between the 18th and 19th, which appears to be its proper place: thus John's testimony is properly connected.

And of his fulness] Of the plenitude of his grace and mercy, by which he made an atonement for sin; and of the plenitude of his wisdom and truth, by which the mysteries of heaven have been revealed, and the science of eternal truth taught, we have all received. All we apostles have received grace or mercy to pardon our sins, and truth to enable us so to write and speak concerning these things, that those who attend to our testimony shall be unerringly directed in the way of salvation; and with us continue to receive grace upon grace, one blessing after another, till they are filled with all the fulness of God. I believe the above to be the meaning of the evangelist, and think it improper to distract the mind of the reader with the various translations and definitions, which have been given of the phrase, grace for grace. It is only necessary to add, that John seems here to refer to the Gospel as succeeding the Law; the Law was certainly a dispensation both of grace and truth; for it pointed out the gracious design of God to save men by Christ Jesus; and it was at least a most expressive and well-defined shadow of good things to come: but the Gospel which had now taken place, introduced that plenitude of grace and truth to the whole world, which the Law had only shadowed forth to the Jewish people, and which they imagined should have been restrained to themselves alone. In the most gracious economy of God, one dispensation of mercy and truth is designed to make way for, and to be followed by another and a greater: thus the Law succeeded the patriarchal dispensation, and the Gospel the Law: more and more of the plenitude of the grace of the Gospel becomes daily manifest to the genuine followers of Christ: and to those who are faithful unto death, a heaven full of eternal glory will soon succeed to the following passage in Philo to illustrate this point more fully, the following passage in Philo the Jew has been adduced: "God is always sparing of his first blessings or graces, (ἄρτα ἡρώα) and afterwards gives other graces upon them, (ἀρτ' ἑτέραν) and a third sort upon the second, and always new ones upon old ones, sometimes of a different kind, and at other times of the same sort." Vol. i. p. 254. ed. Mang. In the above passage, the preposition ἄρτα, for, inserted thrice in the sense of exi, upon. To confirm the above interpretation, Ep. Pearce produces the following quotations: Ecclesi. xxvi. 15. Χαρις ἐπὶ χάριτι ἰσως ἀεὶ ἀρχαίωρα—A modest woman is a grace upon a grace, i. e. a double grace or blessing. Euripides uses the very same phrase with John, where he makes Theoclymenas say to Helena, Χαρις ἐπὶ χάριτι εἶσθε, May grace upon grace come to you! Hellen. v. 1250. ed. Barn.

17. The law was given by Moses] Moses received the Law from God, and through him it was given to the Jews, Acts vii. 38.

But grace and truth] Which he had already mentioned, and which were to be the subject of the book which he was now writing, came to all mankind through Jesus Christ, who is the mediator of the New Covenant, as Moses was of the Old: Heb. viii. 6. ix. 15. Gal. iii. 12. See a fine discourse on 22 Then said they unto him, Who art thou? that we may give an answer to them that sent us. What sayest thou of thyself?

23 He said, I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord, as said the prophet Esaias.

24 And they which were sent were of the Pharisees.

k Or, a prophet.—l Matthew 2. 3. Mark 1. 3. Luke 3. 4. Chapter 3. 5.—m Yahsh 40. 2.

this text by Mr. Claude, "Essay on the Composition of a Sermon," vol. 1. p. 119, &c. edit. Lond. 1789.

The Law of Moses, however excellent in itself, was little in comparison of the Gospel: as it proceeded from the justice and holiness of God, and was intended to convict men of sin, that the way of the Gospel might be the better prepared, it was a law of rigour, condemnation, and death; Rom. iv. 15. 2 Cor. iii. 7, 8. It was a law of shadows, types, and figures; Heb. x. 1. and incapable of expiating sin by its sacrifices; Rom. vii. 3. Heb. vii. 18, 19. x. 1, 11. But Christ has brought that grace which is opposed to condemnation: Rom. v. 13, 20, 21. viii. 1. Gal. iii. 10. and he is himself the spirit and substance of all those shadows: Col. ii. 19. Heb. x. 1.

Jesus Christ] JESUS THE CHRIST, the Messiah, or anointed Prophet, Priest, and King, sent from heaven. To what has already been said on the important name Jesus, (see Matt. i. 21. and the places there referred to) I shall add the following explanation, chiefly taken from Professor Schultens, who has given a better view of the ideal meaning of the root yash, than any other divine or critic.

He observes, that this root in its true force, meaning, and majesty, both in Hebrew and Arabic, includes the ideas of amplified expansion, and space, and should be translated, he was spacious—open—ample: and particularly, he possessed an spacious or extensive degree of rank. And is applied, 1. To a person possessing abundance of riches. 2. To one possessing abundant power. 3. To one possessing abundant or extensive knowledge. 4. To one possessing abundance of happiness, beatitude, and glory. Hence we may learn the true meaning of Zech. ix. 9. Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion—behold, thy king cometh unto thee, he is just, and having salvation יְשׁוּעָה—he is possessed of all power to enrich, strengthen, teach, enlarge, and raise to glory and happiness, them who trust in him. Man by nature is in want and poverty; in abjectness and weakness; in darkness and ignorance; in straits and captivity; in wretchedness and infamy. His Redeemer is called יְשׁוּעָה JESUS—he who looses, enlarges, and endows with salvation. 1. He enriches man's poverty: 2. Strengthens his weakness: 3. Teaches his ignorance: 4. Brings him out of straits and difficulties: and 5. Raises him to happiness, beatitude, and glory. And the aggregate of these is SALVATION. Hence that saying, His name shall be called JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins. See Schultens Origines Hebrææ, p. 16.

18. No man hath seen God at any time] Moses and others heard his voice, and saw the cloud and the fire, which were the symbols of his presence: but such a manifestation of God as had now taken place in the person of Jesus Christ, had never before been exhibited to the world. It is likely that the word seen here, is put for known, as in chap. iii. 32. 1 John iii. 2, 6. and 3d Epist. ver. 11. and this sense the latter clause of the verse seems to require:—No man, how highly soever favoured, hath fully known God at any time, in any nation or age; the only-begotten Son, (see on ver. 14.) who is in the bosom of the Father, who was intimately acquainted with all the counsels of the Most High, He hath declared him, ἐξηγήσατο, hath announced the divine oracles unto men; for in this sense the word is used by the best Greek writers. See Kypka in loco.

Lying in the bosom, is spoken of in reference to the Asiatic custom of reclining while at meals; the person who was next the other, was said to lie in his bosom; and he who had this place in reference to the master of the feast, was supposed to share his peculiar regards, and to be in a state of the utmost favour and intimacy with him.

19. And this is the record of John] He persisted in this assertion, testifying to the Jews that this Jesus was THE CHRIST.

20. He confessed, and denied not; but confessed] A common mode of Jewish phraseology. John renounces himself, that Jesus may be all in all. Though God had highly honoured him, and favoured him with peculiar influence in the discharge of his work, yet he considered he had nothing but what he had received, and therefore giving all praise to his benefactor, takes care to direct the attention of the people to him alone, from whom he had received his mercies. He who makes use of God's gifts to feed and strengthen his pride and vanity, will be sure to be stripped of the goods wherein he trusts, and fall down into the condemnation of the devil. We have nothing but what we have received; we deserve nothing of what we possess; and it is only God's infinite mercy which keeps us in the possession of the blessings which we now enjoy.

21. Art thou Elias?] The scribes themselves had taught, that Elijah was to come before the Messiah. See Matt. xvii. 10. and this belief of theirs they supported by a literal construction of Mal. iv. 5.

Art thou that prophet?] The prophet spoken of by Moses, Deut. xviii. 15, 18. This text they had also misunderstood: for the prophet or teacher promised by Moses, was no other than the Messiah himself. See Acts iii. 22. But the Jews had 25 And they asked him, and said unto him, Why baptizest thou then, if thou be not that Christ, nor Elias, neither that prophet?

26 John answered them, saying, I baptize with water: * but there standeth one among you, whom ye know not;

27 He it is, who coming after me is preferred before me, whose shoe's latchet I am not worthy to unloose.

28 These things were done * in Bethabara beyond Jordan, where John was baptizing.

29 The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold, * the Lamb of God, * which taketh away the sin of the world.

30 This is he of whom I said, After me cometh a man which is preferred before me: for he was before me.

31 And I knew him not: but that he should be made manifest to Israel, * therefore am I come baptizing with water.

a Matt 3. 11. — b Mat 3. 1. — c Ver. 15. 31. Acts 19. 4. — d Judges 7. 20. Ch. 10. 40. — e Mark 1. 2. — f Luc 3. 16. — g Acts 1. 22. 1 Pet. 1. 10. Rev. 6. 6. — h See Mark 11. 1 Cor. 13. Gal. 1. 19. Heb. 13. 17. & 2. 23. 1 Pet. 2. 24. & 3. 18. 1 John 2. 2. & 3. 5. & a tradition that Jeremiah was to return to life, and restore the pot of manna, the ark of the covenant, &c. which he had hidden, that the Babylonians might not get them. Besides this, they had a general expectation that all the prophets should come to life in the days of the Messiah.

I am not, I am not the prophet which you expect, nor Elijah: though he was the Elijah that was to come; for in the spirit and power of that eminent prophet he came, proclaiming the necessity of reformation in Israel. See Matt. xi. 14. xvii. 10—13.

32 That we may give an answer to them that sent us? These Pharisees were probably a deputation from the grand sanhedrim; the members of which hearing of the success of the Baptist's preaching, were puzzled to know what to make of him: and seriously desired to hear from himself, what he professed to be.

33 [Am the voice of one crying] See the notes on Matt. iii. 3. Mark i. 4, 5.

34 Why baptizest thou then? Baptism was a very common ceremony among the Jews, who never received a proselyte into the full enjoyment of a Jew's privileges, till he was both baptized and circumcised. But such baptisms were never performed except by an ordinance of the sanhedrim, or in the presence of three magistrates: besides, they never baptized any Jew or Jewess, nor even those who were the children of their proselytes; for as all these were considered as born in the Covenant, they had no need of baptism, which was used only as an introductory rite. Now, as John had, in this respect, shared the common custom so very essentially, admitting to his baptism the Jews in general; the sanhedrim took it for granted, that no man had authority to make such changes, unless especially commissioned from on high: and that only the prophet, or Elijah, or the Messiah himself, could have authority to act as John did. See the observations at the conclusion of Mark.

35 I baptize with water? See on Mark i. 8. I use the common form, though I direct the baptized to a different end, viz. that they shall repent of their sins, and believe in the Messiah.

There standeth one among you? That is, the person whose forerunner I am, is now dwelling in the land of Judea, and will shortly make his appearance among you. Christ was not present when John spoke thus, as may be seen from ver. 29.

36 He is preferred before me? Of επιπροσθεν μου γενομενος, who was before me. This clause is wanting in B<sup>0</sup>L., four others, the Coptic, Ethiopic, Slavonic, and two copies of the Itala; and in some of the primitive Fathers. Griesbach has left it out of the text. It is likely that it was omitted by the above, because it was found in verses 15. and 30. At the end of this verse, EG. and ten others, with some copies of the Slavonic, add, He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire.

37 These things were done in Bethabara? It is very probable that the word Bethabara should be inserted here instead of Bethabara. This reading in the judgment of the best critics, is the genuine one. The following are the authorities, by which it is supported; A<sup>BC</sup>EGHLM<sup>SX</sup>. BV. of Matthaï, upwards of a hundred others, Syriac, Armenian, Perseic, Coptic, Slavonic, Vulgate, Saxon, and all the Itala, with some of the most eminent of the primitive Fathers, before the time of Origen, who is supposed to have first changed the reading. Bethabara signifies literally, the house of passage; and is thought to be the place where the Israelites passed the river Jordan, under Joshua. There was a place called Bethany about two miles from Jerusalem, at the foot of the mount of Olives. But there was another of the same name, beyond Jordan, in the tribe of Reuben. It was probably of this that the evangelist speaks; and Origen, not knowing of this second Bethany, altered the reading to Bethabara. See Roemsmuller.

38 The next day? The day after that on which the Jews had been with John, ver. 19.

Behold the Lamb of God, &c.] This was said in allusion to what was spoken in Isa. lvi. 7. Jesus was the true Lamb of Sacrifice required and appointed by God, of which those offered daily in the tabernacle and temple, Exod. xxix. 38, 39, and especially the paschal lamb, were only the types and representations. See Exod. xii. 4, 5. 1 Cor. v. 7. The continual morning and evening sacrifice of a lamb under the Jewish law, was intended to point out the continual efficacy of the 32 And John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him.

33 And I knew him not: but he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, * the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost.

34 And I saw, and bare record that this is the Son of God.

35 * Again, the next day after, John stood, and two of his disciples;

36 And looking upon Jesus as he walked, he saith, * Behold the Lamb of God!

37 And the two disciples heard him speak, and they followed Jesus.

38 Then Jesus turned, and saw them following, and saith unto them, What seek ye? They said unto him, Rabbi, (which is to say, being interpreted, Master,) where dwellest thou?

4. 10. Rev. 1. 5. — a Or, search. — b Ver. 15. 32. — c Mat. 3. 1. Matt. 8. 6. Luke 1. 17. 76. 77. & 3. 4. — d Matt. 1. 10. Mark 1. 10. Luke 3. 32. Ch. 5. 22. — e Matt. 3. 11. Acts 1. 4. & 1. 10. 44. & 19. 6. — f Ver. 29. — g Or, abode.

blood of atonement: for even at the throne of God, Jesus Christ is ever represented as a lamb ewily slain, Rev. v. 6. But John, pointing to Christ, calls him emphatically the lamb of God — all the lambs which had been hitherto offered, had been furnished by men: this was provided by GOD, as the only sufficient and available sacrifice for the sin of the world. In three essential respects, this lamb differed from those by which it was represented. 1st. It was the Lamb of God: the most excellent, and most available. 2d. It made an atonement for sin, it carried sin away in reality, the others only representatively. 3d. It carried away the sin of the world; whereas the other was offered only in behalf of the Jewish people: in Yalcut Rubeni, fol. 30. it is said, "The Messiah shall bear the sins of the Israelites." But this salvation was now to be extended to the whole world.

31. And I knew him not, &c.] John did not know our Lord personally, and perhaps had never seen him at the time he spoke the words in ver. 15. Nor is it any wonder that the Baptist should have been unacquainted with Christ, as he had spent thirty years in the hill country of Hebron, and our Lord remained in a state of great privacy in the obscure city of Nazareth, in the extreme borders of Galilee.

But that he should be made manifest to Israel? One design of my publicly baptizing was, that he, coming to my baptism, should be shown to be what he is, by some extraordinary sign: from heaven.

32. I saw the Spirit descending, &c.] See the notes on Matt. iii. 16, 17.

33. He that sent me said unto me? From this we may clearly perceive, that John had a most intimate acquaintance with the Divine Being; and received not only his call and mission at first, but every subsequent direction, by immediate, unequivocal inspiration. Who is fit to proclaim Jesus, but he who has continual intercourse with God! who is constantly receiving light and life from Christ their fountain; who bears a steady, uniform testimony to Jesus, even in the presence of his enemies; and who at all times abases himself, that Jesus alone may be magnified. Reformation of manners, and salvation of souls, will accompany such a person's labours withersoever he goeth.

35. The next day? After that mentioned ver. 29.

Two of his disciples? One of them was Andrew, ver. 40. and it is very likely, that John himself was the other; in every thing in which he might receive honour, he studiously endeavours to conceal his own name.

36. And looking upon Jesus? Attentively beholding, επιβλεψας, from επι, into, and βλεπω, to look—to view with steadfastness and attention. He who desires to discover the glories and excellencies of this lamb of God, must thus look on him. At first sight, he appears only as a man among men, and as dying in testimony to the truth, as many others have died. But on a more attentive consideration, he appears to be no less than God manifest in the flesh, and by his death making an atonement for the sin of the world.

Behold the Lamb of God? By this the Baptist designed to direct the attention of his own disciples to Jesus, not only as the great sacrifice for the sin of the world, but also as the complete teacher of heavenly truth.

37. And the two disciples heard him? And they perfectly understood their Master's meaning: in consequence of which, they followed Jesus. Happy they, who on hearing of the salvation of Christ, immediately attach themselves to its Author! Delays are always dangerous; and in this case, often fatal. Reader! hast thou ever had Christ as a sacrifice for thy sins pointed out unto thee? If so, hast thou followed him? If not, thou art not in the way to the kingdom of God. Lose not another moment! Eternity is at hand! and thou art not prepared to meet thy God. Pray that he may alarm thy conscience, and stir up thy soul to seek till thou have found.

38. What seek ye? These disciples might have felt some embarrassment in addressing our blessed Lord, after hearing the character which the Baptist gave of him: to remove or prevent this, he graciously accosts them, and gives them an opportunity of explaining themselves to him. Such questions were not conceived by the blessed Jesus still puts to those who in simplicity of heart desire an acquaintance with him. A question of this nature we may profitably ask ourselves: What seek ye? In this place? In the company you frequent? In the 39 He saith unto them, Come and see. They came and saw where he dwelt, and abode with him that day: for it was about the tenth hour.

40 One of the two which heard John speak, and followed him, was Andrew, Simon Peter's brother.

41 He first findeth his own brother Simon, and saith unto him, we have found the Messiah, which is, being interpreted, the Christ.

42 And he brought him to Jesus. And when Jesus beheld him, he said, Thou art Simon, the son of Jona: of whom shall be called Cephas, which is, by interpretation, a stone.

43 ¶ The day following Jesus would go forth into Galilee, and findeth Philip, and saith unto him, Follow me.

a This was two hours before noon.—b Matt. 4. 16.—c Or, the associated.—d Matt. 4. 16.—e Or, Peter.—f Ch. 12. 21.—g Ch. 21. 2.—h Gen. 3. 15.—i 49. 10. Deut. 19. 12. See on Luke 9. 27.—j 1st. 4. 2. & 7. 14. & 9. 6. & 11. 2. Mic. 5. 2. Zach. 6. 12. & conversation you engage in? In the affairs with which you are occupied? In the works which you perform? Do ye seek the humiliation, illumination, justification, edification, or sanctification of your soul? The edification of your neighbor? The good of the church of Christ? Or the glory of God? Questions of this nature, often put to our hearts in the fear of God, would induce us to do many things which we now leave undone; and to leave undone many things which we now perform.

Rabb[il] Teacher. Behold the modesty of these disciples—we wish to be scholars, we are ignorant—we desire to be taught; we believe thou art a teacher come from God.

Where dwellest thou? That we may come and receive thy instructions.

39. Come and see! If those who know not the salvation of God would come at the command of Christ, they should soon see that with him is the fountain of life, and in his light they should see light. Reader, if thou art seriously inquiring where Christ dwelleth, take the following for answer: He dwells not in the tumult of worldly affairs, nor in profane assemblies, nor in worldly pleasures, nor in the place where drunkards proclaim their shame, nor in carelessness and indolence. But he is found in his temple, wherever two or three are gathered together in his name, in secret prayer, in self-denial, in fasting, in self-examination. He also dwells in the humble, contrite spirit, in the spirit of faith, of love, of forgiveness, of universal obedience; in a word, he dwells in the heaven of heavens, whither he graciously purposes to bring thee, if thou wilt come and learn of him, and receive the salvation which he has bought for thee by his own blood.

The tenth hour.] Generally supposed to be about what we call four o'clock in the afternoon. According to chap. xi. 9. the Jews reckoned twelve hours in the day, and of course each hour of the day, thus reckoned, must have been something longer or shorter, according to the different times of the year in that climate. The sixth hour with them, answered to our twelve o'clock, as appears from what Josephus says in his Life, chap. liv. that on the Sabbath-day it was the rule for the Jews to go to dinner at the sixth hour, (ἕκτῃ ὥρᾳ.) The Romans had the same way of reckoning twelve hours in each of their days. Hence, what we meet with in Flor. lib. ii. sat. v. l. 24. ante secundam, signifies, as we should express it, before eight o'clock. And when, in lib. l. sat. vi. l. 122. he says, ud quartam facio, he means that he lay in bed till ten o'clock. See Bishop Pearce on this place. Dr. Macknight, however, is of opinion, that the evangelist is to be understood as speaking of the Roman hour, which was ten o'clock in the morning; and as the evangelist remarks, they abode with him that day, it implies there was a considerable portion of time spent with our Lord, in which, by his conversation, he renewed all their scruples, and convinced them that he was the Messiah. But had it been the Jewish tenth hour, it would have been useless to remark their abiding with him that day, as there were only two hours of it still remaining. Harmony, vol. i. p. 52.

41. Findeth his own brother Simon! Every discovery of the Gospel of the Son of God produces benevolence, and leads those to whom it is made, to communicate it to others. Those who find Jesus, find in him a treasure of wisdom and knowledge, through which they may not only become rich themselves, but be instruments in the hand of God, of enriching others. These disciples having tasted the good word of Christ, were not willing to eat their bread alone, but went and invited others to partake with them. Thus the knowledge of Christ became diffused, one invited another to come and see: Jesus received all, and the number of disciples was increased, and the attentive hearers were innumerable. Every man who has been brought to an acquaintance with God, should endeavour to bring, at least, another with him: as by his first attention should be fixed upon those of his own household.

42. Cephas, which is, by interpretation, a stone. The reason why this name was given to Simon, who was ever afterward called Peter, may be seen in the notes on Matt. xvi. 18, 19. and particularly in Luke, at the end of chap. ix.

43. Philip] This apostle was a native of Bethsaida in Galilee. Eusebius says he was a married man, and had several daughters. Clemens Alexandrinus mentions it as a thing universally acknowledged, that it was this apostle who, when commanded by our Lord to follow him, said, Let me first go and bury my father, Matt. viii. 21, 22. Theodoret says he 44 Now [Philip was of Bethsaida, the city of Andrew and Peter. 45 Philip findeth Nathanael, and saith unto him, We have found him, of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph.

46 And Nathanael said unto him, Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth? Philip saith unto him, Come and see. 47 Jesus saith Nathanael coming to him, and saith unto him, Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile!

48 Nathanael saith unto him, Whence knowest thou me? Jesus answered and said unto him, Before that Philip called thee, when thou wast under the fig-tree, I saw thee.

49 Nathanael answered and saith unto him, Rabbi, thou art the Son of God; thou art the King of Israel.

9. 9. See more on Luke 9. 27.—b Matt. 2. 23. Luke 2. 4.—c Ch. 7. 41, 42, 28.—d Pa. 2. 2. & 12. 1. Ch. 5. 39. Rom. 2. 23, 29. & 3.—e Matt. 14. 23.—f Matt. 21. 8. & 7. 11, 48. Ch. 18. 27. & 19. 3.

proached in the two Phrygiæ; and Eusebius says he was buried in Phrygia Pacatiana. He must not be confounded with Philip the Deacon, spoken of Acts vi. 5.

47. Nathanael! This apostle is supposed to be the same with Bartholomew, which is very likely, for these reasons: 1. That the evangelists who mention Bartholomew, say nothing of Nathanael; and that St. John, who speaks of Nathanael, says nothing of Bartholomew. 2. No notice is taken any where of Bartholomew's vocation, unless his and that of Nathanael mentioned here, be the same. 3. The name of Bartholomew is not a proper name: it signifies the son of Ptolemy; and Nathanael might have been his own name. 4. St. John seems to rank Nathanael with the apostles, when he says that Peter and Thomas, the two sons of Zebedee, Nathanael, and two other disciples, being gone a fishing, Jesus showed himself to them, John xxi. 2-4.

Moses in the law! See Gen. iii. 15. xlii. 18. xliii. 10. Deut. xviii. 18.

And the prophets! See Isa. lv. 2. vii. 14. xl. 2. xli. 10. lxx. l. &c. Jer. xxiii. 6. xxxiii. 14. 15. Ezech. xxxv. 9. xxxvii. 24. Dan. ix. 24. Mic. v. 2. Zach. vi. 12. ix. xii. 10.

46. Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth? Bishop Pearce supposes that the ἄγαθόν of the evangelist has some particular force in it: for in Jer. xxiii. 14. God says, I will perform that good thing which I promised, &c. and this in ver. 15. is explained to mean, his causing the branch of righteousness, (i. e. the Messiah) to grow up unto David, from whom Jesus was descended: in this view, Nathanael's question seems to imply, that not Nazareth, but Bethlehem, was to be the birth-place of the Messiah, according to what the chief priests and scribes had determined, Matt. ii. 4, 5, 6. If this conjecture be not thought solid, we may suppose that Nazareth, at this time, was become so abandoned, that no good could be expected from any of those who dwelt in it; and that its wickedness had passed into a proverb; Can any thing good be found in Nazareth? Or, that the question is illiberal, and full of national prejudice.

Come and see! He who candidly examines the evidences of the religion of Christ, will infallibly become a believer. No history ever published among men, has so many external and internal proofs of authenticity as this has. A man should judge of nothing by first appearances, or human prejudices. Who are they who cry out, The Bible is a fable? Those who have never read it, or read it only with the fixed purpose to gossipy it. I once met with a person, who professed to disbelieve every title of the New Testament, a chapter of which he acknowledged, he had never read: I asked him had he ever read the Old? He answered, No! and yet this man had the assurance to reject the whole as an imposture! God has mercy on those whose ignorance leads them to form prejudices against the truth: but he confounds those who take them up through envy and malice, and endeavour to communicate them to others.

47. Behold an Israelite indeed! A worthy descendant of the patriarch Jacob, who not only professes to believe in Israel's God, but who worships him in sincerity and truth, according to his light.

In whom is no guile! Deceitfulness ever has been, and still is, the deeply marked characteristic of the Jewish people. To find a man living in the midst of so much corruption, walking in uprightness before his Maker, was a subject worthy the attention of God himself. Behold this man! and while you see and admire, imitate his conduct.

48. Whence knowest thou me? He was not yet acquainted with the divinity of Christ, could not conceive that he could search his heart, and therefore asks how he could acquire this knowledge of him, or who had given him that character. It is the comfort of the sincere and upright, that God knows their hearts; and it should be the terror of the deceitful and of the hypocrites, that their false dealing is ever noticed by the all-seeing eye of God.

Under the fig-tree! Probably engaged in prayer with God for the speedy appearing of the salvation of Israel; and the shade of this fig-tree, was perhaps the ordinary place of retreat for this upright man. It is not a fig-tree, but ῥοσῶν, ram fig-trees, one particularly distinguished from the others. There are many proofs that the Jewish rabbins chose the shade of trees, and particularly the fig-tree, to sit and study under. See many examples in Schoetgen. How true is the saying, The eyes of the Lord are through all the earth, beholding the evil and the good. Wheresoever we are, whatso-

30 Jesus answered and said unto him, Because I said unto thee, I saw thee under the fig-tree, believest thou? thou shalt see greater things than these.

p. 300. 28. 12. Matt. 4. 11.

ever we are about, may a deep conviction of this truth rest upon our hearts, Thou, God, seest us.

49. Rabbi! That is, Teacher! and so this word should be translated.

Thou art the Son of God! The promised Messiah.

Thou art the King of Israel! The real descendant of David, who art to sit upon that spiritual throne, of which the throne of David was the type.

50. Because I said—I saw thee, &c.] As thou hast credited my divine mission on this simple proof, that I saw thee when and where no human eye, placed where mine was, could see thee; thy faith shall not rest merely upon this, for thou shalt see greater things than these—more numerous and express proofs of my eternal power and Godhead.

51. Verily, verily! Amen, amen. The doubling of this word probably came from this circumstance: that it was written in both Hebrew [אמן] and in Greek amen, signifying, it is true.

Heaven open! This seems to be a figurative expression:

1. Christ may be understood by this saying to mean, that a clear and abundant revelation of God's will should be now made unto men; that heaven itself should be laid as it were open, and all the mysteries which had been shut up, and hidden in it for eternity, relative to the salvation and glorification of man, should be now fully revealed. 2. That by the angels of God ascending and descending, is to be understood, that a perpetual intercourse should now be opened between heaven and earth, through the medium of Christ, who was God manifested in the flesh. Our blessed Lord is represented in his mediatorial capacity as the ambassador of God to men; and the angels ascending and descending upon the Son of man, is a metaphor taken from the custom of despatching couriers or messengers from the prince to his ambassador in a foreign court, and from the ambassador back to the prince. This metaphor will receive considerable light, when compared with 2 Cor. v. 19. 20. God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself:—we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us, we pray you in Christ's stead to be reconciled to God. The whole concerns of human salvation shall be carried on, from henceforth, through the Son of man; and an incessant intercourse be established between heaven and earth. Some have illustrated this passage by the account of Jacob's vision, Gen. xxviii. 12. But though that vision may intimate, that God had established at that time, a communication between heaven and earth, through the medium of angels; yet it does not appear that our Lord's saying here has any reference to it; but that it should be understood as stated above.

What a glorious view does this give us of the Gospel dispensation! It is heaven opened to earth; and heaven opened on earth. The church militant and the church triumphant become one, and the whole heavenly family in both, see and adore their common Lord. Neither the world nor the church is left to the caprices of time or chance. The Son of man governs as he upholds all. Whosoever we are praying, studying, hearing, meditating, his gracious eye is upon us. He notes our wants, our weakness, and our petitions; and his eye affects his heart. Let us be without guile, deeply, habitually sincere, serious, and upright; and then we may rest assured, that not only the eye, but the hand of our Lord, shall be ever upon us for good. Happy the man whose heart can rejoice in the reflection, Thou, God, seest me!

1. Testimonies concerning the Logos, or word of God; from the Chaldee Targums.

The person here styled the Logos, is called דְּבַר אֱלֹהִים debar Yehovah, the word of Jehovah, Gen. i. 1, 4. 1 Sam. iii. 7. 21. ex. 10. 1 Kings xiii. 9. 17. xix. 9. 15. Psal. cvii. 20. and the Targums, or Chaldee paraphrases, frequently substitute דְּבַר אֱלֹהִים debar Yehovah, the word of the Lord, for יְהוֹשֻׁעַ Yehoshua himself. Thus the Jerusalem Targum in Gen. iii. 22. and both that and the Targum of Jonathan ben Uzziel, in Gen. xix. 24. And Onkelos, on Gen. iii. 8. & for the voice of the Lord God, has, the voice of the word of the Lord. The Jerusalem Targum on Gen. i. 27. for, And God created man, has, The word of Jehovah created, &c. Compare Targum Jonathan, on Isa. xiv. 12. xlviii. 13. Jer. xxvii. 5. And on Gen. xxii. 14. that of Jerusalem says, Abraham invoked בְּשֵׁם אֱלֹהִים beשמם deyism deyism deyism, in the name of the word of the Lord, and said, יְהוֹשֻׁעַ אֱלֹהִים Yehoshua. So Onkelos, Gen. xxviii. 20. 21. If the word of Jehovah will be my help—then, the word of Jehovah shall be my God. See Parkhurst under the word ΛΟΓΟΣ.

After a serious reading of the Targums, it seems to me evident that the Chaldee term דְּבַר אֱלֹהִים debar Yehovah, or word, is taken personally, in a multitude of places in them. When Jonathan ben Uzziel speaks of the Supreme Being, as doing or saying any thing, he generally represents him as performing the whole by this debar Yehovah, or word, which he considers not as a speech or word spoken, but as a person distinct from the Most High, and to whom he attributes all the operations of the Deity. To attempt to give the word any other meaning than this, in various places throughout the Targums, would, in my opinion, be set opposition to every rule of construction; though 51 And he saith unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Hereafter ye shall see heaven open, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man.

Leho 2. 9, 13. & 22. 43. & 24. 4. Aox 1. 10.

like the Greek word Logos, it has other acceptations in certain places. See Lightfoot.

2. Testimonies concerning the personality, attributes, and influence of the word of God, taken from the Zend Avesta and other writings attributed to Zoroaster.

Let thy terrible word which I pronounce, O Ormusd! elevate itself on high. May it be great before thee, and satisfy my desires." ZAND AVESTA, vol. 1. Vendidad Sade, p. 104.

Zoroaster consulted Ormusd, and spoke thus to him: "O Ormusd, absorbed in excellence, just Judge of the world, pure, who existest by thy own power, what is that great word given by God, that living and powerful word; O Ormusd, tell me plainly, which existed before the heavens, before the water, before the earth, before the flocks, before the fire, the cause of Ormusd, before men, before the whole race of existing beings, before all the benefits, and before all the pure genes given by Ormusd?" Ormusd replied: "Pronounce that great word well, that word which existed before heaven was made, before the water, before the earth, before brute animals, before men, and before the holy angels (amshaspands). I pronounce that word with majesty, and all the pure beings which are, and which have been, and which shall be, were formed. I continue to pronounce it in its utmost extent, and abundance is multiplied." Ibid. p. 133, 139.

By his original word, Ormusd created the world, and vanquished Ahriman, the genius of evil." Ibid. p. 140. not. 1.

The saints in heaven and earth pronounce the sacred word:—under the character of Honover, (i. e. pure desire,) it is worshipped." Ibid. 141.

Ormusd, together with the luminous and excellent word, is invoked, to defend the true worshipper from the oppression of evil spirits." Ibid. p. 174.

Man is healed by the Supreme word." Ib. 324.

By this word all defiled places are rendered pure: fire, water, earth, trees, flocks, men, women, stars, moon, sun, and the primeval light, with all the blessings given by Ormusd, are purified by it." Ibid. p. 363.

The word of Ormusd is termed, "Ezem baf, I am:—and is represented as "putting every thing in a safe state—as the author of abundance; the source of all productions: the holy, pure, precious, and desirable word, which watches over all the creation." Ibid. Jeschi Rashti Raat, vol. ii. p. 236.

It is called "the excellent, elevated, and victorious word; the source of light; the principle of action, which amites and triumphs; which gives health, discomfits wicked men and spirits; which exists through all the world, destroying the evil, and fulfilling the desires of the good." Ibid. Jeschi of Ormusd, vol. ii. p. 145.

The Word is invoked as "The pure word—the most pure word; the strong—the most strong; the extended and ancient—the most extended and the most ancient; the victorious—the most victorious; the salutary—the most salutary; which gives health—in the abundant source of health, and cures wounds and diseases of all kinds." Ibid. Jeschi of Ardebehest, vol. ii. p. 157.

It is termed "the creator, or creating principle." Ibid. Jeschi of Fervardin, vol. ii. p. 252.

Prayer is made to the word of the excellent word, the body of which is supremely luminous." Ibid. p. 262.

Through the whole government of Ormusd, men are commanded to invoke that most pure and excellent word." Ib. p. 264.

That the word in the above places, does not mean the Sacred books of the Parsees, it is expressly said, that "The Law of the Mazdejanans (the disciples of Zoroaster) comes from this super-excellent Word." Ibid. Si-Rousi; Mansrepan, p. 323, 354.

The Law is the body under which the primitive word, which created the world, is manifested. The primitive word, therefore, is worshipped in reading and reverencing that Law; and the effects produced in the soul by it, are no less than a new creation, in some sort similar to that, which this omnific Word formed in the beginning." Ibid. vol. ii. p. 596.

The word proceeds from the first principle, time without bounds, i. e. eternity: it is before all created beings, and by it all the creation of God has been formed." Ibid. vol. ii. p. 592.

I find a word of the same import used in exactly the same sense, in the Zend Avesta, attributed to the ancient Persian lawgiver, Zoroaster.

One might suppose that Mohammed had the first chapter of St. John's Gospel in his eye when he wrote ver. 33 of Surat. xix. of his Koran:

وَمَا مِنْ عِلْمٍ إِلَّا فِيهِ مَوْلًى لَهُ زَيْلٌ يَا بَنِي إِسْرَائِيلَ إِنَّ يَسُوعَ ابْنُ مَرْيَمَ كَانَتْ حَقًّا مِنْ رَبِّكَ فَخَلِّصُوا أَنْفُسَكُمْ يَوْمَ الْقِيَامَةِ إِنَّ يَسُوعَ ابْنَ مَرْيَمَ كَانَتْ حَقًّا مِنْ رَبِّكَ فَخَلِّصُوا أَنْفُسَكُمْ يَوْمَ الْقِيَامَةِ

3. Testimonies concerning the Logos, or word of God; from Philo Judaeus.

After I had begun my collections from Philo Judaeus, relative to the Logos; I casually met with a work of the late very learned Mr. Jacob Bryant, entitled, The sentiments of Philo Judaeus concerning the ΛΟΓΟΣ, or WORD of GOD &c Cambridge, 1797. From this valuable tract, I shall make a few extracts, and beg leave to refer the reader to the pamphlet itself.

"Philo Judeus speaks at large in many places, of the Word of God, the Second Person, which he mentions as (δευτερος Θεος) the second divinity, the great cause of all things; and styles him, as Plato, as well as the Jews, had done before, the Logos. Of the divine Logos or Word, he speaks in many places, and maintains at large the divinity of the Second Person, and describes his attributes in a very precise and copious manner, styling him " δευτερον Θεον ος εστιν εκει του (Θεου πρωτου) Λογος, the second Deity, who is the word of the supreme God; " Πρωτογονου υιου, his first-begotten Son; " Εισωθ Θεου, the Image of God: and " Ποιητη της ιερας αγλης, the Shepherd of his holy flock. In his treatise upon Creation, he speaks of the Word, as " the divine operator by whom all things were disposed: and mentions him as " superior to the angels and all created beings, and the image and likeness of God, and says, that this Image of the true God was esteemed the same as God—" ος ανθρω (Θεου) κατανοει. " This LOGOS, the Word of God, says he, is superior to all the world, and more ancient; being the producer of all that was produced. " The eternal word of the everlasting God is the sure and fixed foundation, upon which all things depend. He mentions man as in need of redemption, and says, what Intelligent person, who views mankind engaged in unworthy and wicked pursuits, but " must be grieved to the heart, and call upon that only Saviour God, that these crimes may be extenuated, and that, by a ransom and price of redemption being given for his soul, it may again obtain its freedom " He pleased God therefore to appoint his Logos to be a Mediator. " To his Word, the chief and most ancient of all in heaven, the Great Author of the world, gave this especial gift, that he should stand as a medium, (or intercessor) between the Creator and the created; and he is accordingly the advocate for all mortals. " The same " Word is the intercessor for man, who is always tending to " corruption; and he is the appointed messenger of God, the governor of all things, to man in subjection to him. " He therefore exhorts every person, who is able, to exert himself in the race which he is to run, to bend his course without " remission to the divine Word above, who is the fountain of all wisdom; that by drinking at this sacred spring, he, instead of death, may obtain the reward of everlasting life." He repeats continually, that the Logos is the express Image of God.

"The Word, by which the world was made, is the image of the supreme Deity. " As we perceive the sun's light, though the sun itself is not seen; and behold the brightness of the moon, though its orb may not appear to the eye; so men look up to, and acknowledge, the likeness of God, in his minister the Logos, whom they esteem as God." He attempts to describe his nature by representing him as, " not uncreated, like God; nor yet created, as man: but of a divine substance. " For the Word of God, which is above all the host of heaven, cannot be comprehended by human wisdom, having nothing in his nature that is perceptible to mortal sense. For being the image of God, and the eldest of all intelligent beings, he is seated immediately next to the one God, without any interval of separation." This, in the language of Scripture, is sitting on the right hand of God. He adds, " For not being liable to any voluntary, or involuntary change, or falling off, he has God for his lot and portion, and his residence is in God." The like is mentioned in another place, where he is represented again as sinless, and as the great High-priest of the world. " We maintain, that by the (true) High-priest, is not meant a man, but the divine Word, who is free from all voluntary and involuntary transgressions; being of heavenly parentage, born of God, and of that divine Wisdom, by which all things were produced." He speaks to the same purpose in another place, where he makes mention of the Word. " Ενωθ και Αρχιερεις, ε προνοητος ανθρω (Θεου) Θεου Λογος, in which presides that High-priest, the holy Word, the first-born of God; at other times styled πρωτογενος υιος Θεου, the Son of God, antecedent to all creation. " Τρωπος μεν γαρ πρωτογενος υιου ε του υιου αντεκει Παντος ο τροπος εσται ανθρω ανωτατος. It is manifest, that every attribute which the sacred writers have given to Christ, in his mediatorial capacity, Philo has attributed to him in his divine character, antecedent to creation." page 15-22.

* Philo. Fragm. vol. ii. p. 625. b De Agricult. vol. i. p. 303. De Mundi Opif. vol. i. p. 6. d De Agricult. vol. i. p. 308. De Mundi Opif. vol. i. p. 4. e De Profugia. vol. i. p. 561. De Somnia. vol. i. p. 658. f De Leg. Alleg. vol. i. p. 121. i De Plantatione. Naë. vol. i. p. 331. k De Confus. Ling. vol. i. p. 418. l 50. m Quis Rerum Divin. Hæres. vol. i. p. 501. 502. n Ibid. p. 501. l. 49. " For καρπουτος αι προς το εσθραυ, we should certainly read προς το θλαρον. " De Profugia. vol. i. p. 580. l. 31. " The present reading is ανλευς, the meaning of which I do not comprehend. The true reading is probably ανλευς, from ανλευτος, without remission—indeed, without stopping to take breath. " De Monarchid. vol. ii. l. ii. p. 225. " Τον δε αοαρων και νονον Θεου Λογος εισωθ Λογος Θεου. De Mundi Opif. vol. i. p. 6. " De Somnia. vol. i. p. 656. l. 33. " Quis Rer. Divin. Hæres. vol. i. p. 502. " De Profugia. vol. i. p. 561. l. 16. " Ibid. 224. " Ibid. p. 662. l. 13. " De Somnia. vol. i. p. 653. " De Confus. Ling. vol. i. p. 414.

Mr. Bryant thinks that Philo derived all this knowledge concerning the Logos, from the apostles, and the works and conversation of Christian writers; for it is very probable, that Philo was contemporary with our Lord himself. Mr. B. is so well satisfied that Philo derived all this knowledge from these sources, that he goes on to ask:

"Whence else could he have obtained so many terms, which bear such an analogy with the expressions and doctrines in the apostolical writings? Such are Υιος Θεου, Λογος πρωτογενος, πρωτοβατος, αιδιος, Λογος Αρχιερεις, μετος, μεθοριος, Ιερατης του Σηητου, δημιουργος, Ποιητη της ιερας αγλης, Υπαρχος Θεου, σφραγεις, εισων Θεου, φως, πνευμα Θεου, πνευμα κατασοφου. We read further concerning redemption, and—αντρα και σωσρα, the price and ransom for the soul, αντη Σαυατα, ζωην αιδιου, and υιος ανθρωπου νεος Θεου. To these, other instances might be added equally significant; and few of which are to be found in the Greek version, or in any Jewish doctrines, at least in the acceptation given. They were obtained either from the conversation or from the writings of the first Christians; or rather from both, page 202."

At p. 106. Mr. B. gives "A recapitulation of the characters and attributes of the Logos, with the collateral evidence from Scripture." This, with some other matters of a collateral import, he argues in 52 particulars, from which I have extracted the following, as being most closely allied to the subject, inserting the original words along with the translation. The references, in all cases, are to Dr. Mangey's edition of Philo, 2 vols. folio, London, 1742.

- 4. A list of some of the particular terms and doctrines found in Philo, with parallel passages from the New Testament. 1. The Logos is the Son of God—υιος Θεου. De Agric. vol. i. p. 308. De Profug. ib. p. 562. compare Mark i. l. Luke iv. 41. John i. 34. Acts viii. 37.
- 2. The second divinity—δευτερος Θεος Λογος. Fragm. vol. ii. p. 625. comp. John i. l. i. Cor. i. 24.
- 3. The first-begotten of God—Αρχιερεις πρωτογενος. De Somnia. vol. i. p. 658. comp. Heb. i. 6. Coloss. i. 15.
- 4. The image of God—εισωθ του Θεου. De Mundi Opif. vol. i. p. 6, 414, 419, 656. comp. Col. i. 15. Heb. i. 3. 2 Cor. iv. 4. Superior to angels—υπερανω παντων. (αγγελων) Λογος Θεου. De Profugia. vol. i. p. 561. comp. Heb. i. 4, 6.
- 5. Superior to all the world—Ο Λογος—υπερανω παντος εστι. De Leg. Allegor. vol. i. p. 121. comp. Heb. ii. 8.
- 6. By whom the world was created—του Θεου Λογος του ραυρα διασχερησρα. De Mund. Opif. vol. i. p. 4. comp. John i. 3. 1 Cor. viii. 6. Heb. i. 2, 10.
- 8. The great substitute of God—εταρχος του Θεου. De Agricult. vol. i. p. 308. comp. Jn. i. 3. and xvii. 4. Eph. iii. 9. Phil. ii. 7. The light of the world—φως κοσμου; and Intellectual sun ηλιος νοητος. De Somnia. vol. i. p. 6, 414, 632, 633. comp. John i. 4, 9. and viii. 12. 1 Pet. ii. 9.
- 10. Who only can see God—ο μονω τον Θεου εστιν καθραω. De Confus. Linguar. vol. i. p. 418. comp. John i. 18. and vi. 46.
- 11. Who resides in God—εν αυτω μονω κατοικησει. De Profug. vol. i. p. 561. comp. John i. 18. and xi. 11.
- 12. The most ancient of God's works, and before all things—πρωτοβατος του θεα γεγενη. De Confus. Linguar. vol. i. p. 427. De Leg. Allegor. ib. p. 121. comp. John i. 2. and xvii. 5, 24. 2 Tim. i. 9. Heb. i. 2.
- 13. Esteemed the same as God—Αλογος ως ανθρω (Θεου) κατανοει. De Somnia. vol. i. p. 656. comp. Mark ii. 7. Rom. ix. 5. Phil. ii. 6.
- 14. The Logos is eternal—δ αιδιος Λογος. De Plant. Naë. vol. i. p. 332. and vol. ii. p. 604. comp. John xii. 34. 2 Tim. i. 9. and iv. 18. Heb. i. 8. Rev. x. 6.
- 15. Beholds all things—οφειδαται παντος, ως παντα εσθραω εισωθ Ικανος. De Leg. Allegor. vol. i. p. 121. comp. Heb. iv. 12, 13. Rev. ii. 23.
- 16. He unites, supports, preserves, and perfects the world—δ τε γαρ τον νοτον Λογος δεσμος ων των αναντων—συνεχει τα μερη παντα, και σθηνηται—περιεχει τα ολα και πληρωσκει. De Prof. vol. i. p. 562. Fragm. vol. ii. p. 658. comp. John iii. 36. Col. i. 17. Heb. i. 3.
- 17. Nearest to God without any separation—δ εγγυωτατος με δευος ανθρω μεζωτου διαστηματος. De Profug. vol. i. p. 561. comp. John i. 18. and x. 30. and xv. 11. and xvii. 11.
- 18. Free from all taint of sin, voluntary or involuntary—ανη προηης Ικανωτου—και της ακουσιου. De Profug. vol. i. p. 561. comp. John viii. 46. Heb. vii. 26. and ix. 14. 1 Pet. ii. 22.
- 19. Who presides over the imperfect and weak—ουτος γαρ ημων των ανθρω αν επι Θεου. De Leg. Allegor. vol. i. p. 128. comp. Matt. xi. 5. Luke v. 32. 1 Tim. i. 15.
- 20. The Logos, the fountain of wisdom—Αλογος Θεου, ες σοφιας εστι πηνη. De Profug. vol. i. p. 560, 566. comp. John iv. 14. vii. 31. Cor. i. 24. Col. ii. 3.
- 21. A messenger sent from God—πρωτοβατης του ηθεουτου προς το υλοου. Quis Rer. Div. Hæres. vol. i. p. 501. comp. John v. 36. viii. 29, 42. 1 John iv. 9.
- 22. The advocate for mortal man—Ιερατης μεν εστι του Σηητου. Quis Rer. Div. Hæres. vol. i. p. 501. comp. John xiv. 16. xvii. 20. Rom. viii. 34. Heb. vii. 25.
- 23. He ordered and disposed of all things—διεταξε και δεσπειρα παντα. Ib. p. 605. comp. Col. i. 15. 1 Heb. xi. 3.
- 24. The shepherd of his flock—τον ορθων ανθρω Λογου,—ος την επιμελειαν της ιερας ταυτης αγλης. De Agricult. vol. i. p. 303. comp. John x. 14. Heb. xiii. 20. 1 Pet. ii. 25.

25. Of the power and royalty of the Logos—ο ρω ημεμων Λογος—ου βασιλευς δυνατις αυτου. De Profug. vol. i. p. 561. comp. 1 Cor. xv. 25. Eph. i. 41, 22. Heb. i. 2, 3. Rev. xvii. 14.

26. The Logos is the physician, who heals all evil—τω αυγελο (δε στυ Λογος) ωσπε λατρον ιατρον. De Leg. Allegor. vol. i. p. 122. comp. Luke iv. 18. vii. 21. 1 Pet. ii. 24. James i. 21.

27. The Logos is the seal of God—ο δε-στυ η σφραγισ. De Profug. vol. i. p. 547, 548. De Plant. Nove, lb. p. 332. comp. John vi. 27. Eph. i. 13. Heb. i. 3.

28. The sure refuge of those who seek him.—αφ' ην πρωτον καταφευγειν ασφαλιωμεν. De Profug. ib. p. 560. comp. Matt. xi. 28. 1 Pet. ii. 25.

29. Of heavenly food distributed by the Logos equally, to all who seek it—την ουραμιον τροφην ψυχης. Quis Rer. Divin. Hæc. vol. i. p. 499. comp. Matt. v. 6. vii. 7. xiii. 10. xxiv. 14. xviii. 19. Rom. x. 12, 13.

30. Of men's forsaking their sins, and obtaining spiritual freedom by the Logos—λευθερια της ψυχης. De Cong. Quar. Erud. Grat. vol. i. p. 534. De Prof. lb. p. 561, 563. comp. John viii. 36. 1 Cor. vii. 22. 2 Cor. iii. 17. Gal. v. 1, 13.

31. Of men's being freed by the Logos from all corruption, and entitled to immortality—ο ιερως Λογος τριτηρος, γερας ελευθερων δοξας, αληθην αθαναστη, την εν αθανατη, γενηται ταυτην. De Cong. Quar. Erud. Grat. vol. i. p. 535. comp. Rom. viii. 21. 1 Cor. xv. 52, 63. 1 Pet. i. 3, 4.

32. The Logos mentioned by Philo, not only as θεος Θεος, the Son of God; but also αγαπητων τεκνον, his beloved Son. De Leg. Allegor. vol. i. p. 129. comp. Matt. iii. 17. Luke ix. 38. Col. i. 13. 2 Pet. i. 17.

33. The just man advanced by the Logos to the presence of his Creator—την αυτη λογου—ιδρωσας κλησιν ταυτου. De Sacriticis, vol. i. p. 165. comp. John vi. 37. 44. xli. 26. xiv. 6.

34. The Logos, the true High-priest—αρχιεργος, ο πρωταγονος αυτου θεος Λογος. De Somniis, vol. i. p. 563. De Profug. lb. p. 562. comp. John i. 41. vii. 46. Acts iv. 27. Heb. iv. 14. vii. 26.

35. The Logos in his mediatorial capacity—Λογος αρχιεργος μεσεργος; of whom he says, Θευμακος και ταυ μετα σφωδρως ανωδης; φησιν ο ανθρωπος ιερος. Λογος, ην εν μεσων ταυ τεθνηκων αυτη τον ζωντων. "I am astonished to see the holy Logos running with so much speed and earnestness, that he may stand between the living and the dead." Quis Rer. Divinar. Hæc. vol. i. p. 501. comp. 1 Tim. ii. 5. Heb. viii. 1-6. ix. 11, 12, 24.

These testimonies are truly astonishing; and if we allow, as some contend, that Philo was not acquainted either with the disciples of our Lord, or the writings of the New Testament, we shall be obliged to grant that there must have been some measure of divine inspiration in that man's mind, who could, in such a variety of cases, write so many words and sentences, so exactly corresponding to those of the evangelists and apostles.

5. Testimonies concerning a Trinity among the Chinese, and concerning the Word of God.

Among the ancient Chinese characters which have been preserved, we find the following Δ, like the Greek delta, and since written 天 According to the Chinese dictionary Kang-hi, this character signifies union. According to Chou-ouen, a celebrated work, Δ is three united in one. The Lieou chou tung hoen, which is a rational and learned explanation of ancient characters, says: "Δ signifies intimate union, harmony, the chief good of man, of the heaven, and of the earth: it is the union of three."

The book See-ki says, "Formerly the emperor made a solemn sacrifice every three years to the Spirit Trinity in Unity." 天三一 chin, sun Y. The word Tao in ordinary discourse signifies, rule, law, wisdom, truth, way, word. In the text of Lao tse it signifies the divinity. "Tao, (says he) is an abyss of perfections which comprehends all beings. The Tao which can be described is not the eternal Tao. The Tao is its own rule and model. The Tao preserves the heavens, and sustains the earth. It is so deep that none can reach it: so deep that none can fathom it; so immense that it contains the universe: and notwithstanding it is complete in the smallest things."

"He who is as visible, and yet cannot be seen is denominated lieou 虚; he who can be heard, and yet speaks not to the ears, hi; he who is as tangible, and yet cannot be felt, is named ouci: in vain do you consult your senses concerning these three; your reason alone can discourse of them, and it will tell you that they are but one: above, there is no light; below, there is no darkness. He is eternal. There is no name which can designate him. He bears no similitude to any created thing. He is an image without form; and a form without matter. His light is encompassed with darkness. If you look upwards, you cannot see his commencement: if you follow him you cannot discover his end. What the Tao has always been, such he continues to be: for he is eternal, and the commencement of wisdom."

One of the missionaries at Peking, who wrote the letter from which I have made the above extract, takes it for granted, that the mystery of the Trinity was known among the ancient Chinese, and that the character Δ was its symbol. Lettre sur les caracteres Chinois, 4to. Bruxelles, 1773.

It is remarkable that Moses and the prophets, the ancient Chaldee Targumists, the author or authors of the Zend Avesta, Plato, and the first philosophers of Greece, Philo the Jew, John and the apostles, and perhaps even Mahammed himself, should all so perfectly coincide in their ideas concerning a glorious person in the Godhead! This must have been more than the effect of accident. Moses and the prophets received this divine doctrine from God himself; it was afterward confirmed to the apostles by divine inspiration; and ancient philosophers and lawgivers borrowed from both.

CHAPTER II.

The miracle at Cana in Galilee, where our Lord changed water into wine, 1-11. He goes to Capernaum, 12. He purges the temple at the feast of the pass-over, 13-17. The Jews require a miracle, as a proof that he had authority to do these things, 18. In answer, he refers to his own death and resurrection, 19-22. Many believe on him while at the feast of the pass-over, to whom Jesus would not trust himself, 23-25. [A. M. 4031. A. D. 27. An. Olymp. CCL 3.]

AND the third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee; and the mother of Jesus was there: 2 And both Jesus was called, and his disciples: to the marriage.

a See Josh. 13.23-b Ver. 11. Deut. 16. 14.

NOTES.—Verse 1. Cana of Galilee] This was a small city in the tribe of Asher, Josh. xix. 28; and by saying this was Cana of Galilee, the evangelist distinguishes it from another Cana, which was in the tribe of Ephraim, in the Samaritan country. See Josh. xvi. 8. xvii. 9.

Some suppose that the third day mentioned here, refers to the third day of the marriage feast: such feasts lasting among the Jews seven days. See Judg. xiv. 12, 17, 18. and Bishop Pearce.

The mother of Jesus was there] Some of the ancients have thought that this was the marriage of John the evangelist, who is supposed to have been a near relative of our Lord. See the sketch of his life prefixed to these notes.

2. And both Jesus was called, and his disciples.] There are several remarkable circumstances here. 1. This was probably the first Christian wedding that was ever in the world. 2. The great Author of the Christian religion with his disciples (probably then only four or five in number, see chapter i. 27, &c.) were invited to it. 3. The first miracle Jesus Christ wrought was at it, and in honour of it. 4. The mother of Christ, the most pure of all virgins, the most holy of all wives, and the first Christian mother, was also at it. 5. The marriage was according to God, or these holy persons would not have attended it. 6. The bride and bridegroom must have been a holy pair, otherwise they would have had nothing to do with such holy company.

Marriage is ever honourable in itself; but it is not at all times used honourably. Where Jesus is not invited to bless the union, no good can be expected: and where the disciples of sin and Satan are preferred to the disciples of Christ on such occasions, it is a melancholy intimation, that so bad a 3 And when they wanted wine, the mother of Jesus saith unto him, They have no wine.

4 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, what have I to do with thee? mine hour is not yet come.

c Ch. 19.28-d So 2 Sam. 16. 10; e 19. 22-f Ch. 7. 4 beginning will have a bad ending. I am afraid we may search long, before we find a marriage conducted on such principles as this appears to have been, even among those who make more than a common profession of the religion of Christ.

3. They have no wine.] Though the blessed Virgin is supposed to have never seen her Son work a miracle before this time, yet she seems to have expected him to do something extraordinary on this occasion; as from her acquaintance with him, she must have formed some adequate idea of his power and goodness.

4. Woman, what have I to do with thee?] That is, an abrupt denial, as if he had said, "We are not employed to provide the necessaries for this feast: this matter belongs to others, who should have made a proper and sufficient provision for the persons they had invited." The words seem to convey a reproof to the Virgin for meddling with that which did not particularly concern her. The holiest persons are always liable to errors of judgment: and should ever conduct themselves with modesty and humility, especially in those things in which the providence of God is particularly concerned. But here, indeed, there appears to be no blame. It is very likely the bride or bridegroom's family were relatives of the blessed Virgin; and she would naturally suppose that our Lord would feel interested for the honour and comfort of the family; and knowing that he possessed extraordinary power, made this application to him to come forward to their assistance. Our Lord's answer to his mother, if properly translated, is far from being disrespectful. He addresses the Virgin, as he did the Syrophenician woman, Matt. xv. 28.

5 His mother saith unto the servants, Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it.
 6 And there were set there six water-pots of stone, (after the manner of the purifying of the Jews, containing two or three firkins apiece.
 6 Jesus saith unto them, Fill the water-pots with water. And they filled them up to the brim.
 8 And he saith unto them, Draw out now, and bear unto the governor of the feast. And they bare it.
 9 When the ruler of the feast had tasted the water that was made wine, and knew not whence it was: (but the servants which drew the water knew;) the governor of the feast called the bridegroom,
 10 And saith unto him, Every man at the beginning doth set forth good wine; and when men have well drunk, then that which is worse; but thou hast kept the good wine until now.
 11 This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee,

Mark 7. 3.—Ch 4. 16.—8 Ch 1. 14.—1 Matt. 12. 45.—Exod. 12. 14. Deut. 16. 1, 14. Ver. 21. Ch. 5. 1 & 6. 4 & 11. 22.

as he did the Samaritan woman, John iv. 21. as he addressed his disconsolate mother when he hung upon the cross, chap. xix. 26. as he did his most affectionate friend Mary Magdalene, chap. xx. 15. and as the angels had addressed her before, ver. 13. and as St. Paul does the believing Christian woman, 1 Cor. vii. 16. in all which places the same term youai, which occurs in this verse, is used; and where certainly no kind of disrespect is intended; but on the contrary, complaisance, affability, tenderness, and concern; and in this sense it is used in the best Greek writers.

Mine hour is not yet come. Or, my time; for in this sense the word hour is often taken. My time for working a miracle is not yet fully come. What I do, I do when necessary, and not before. Nature is unsteady—full of haste; and ever blundering in consequence. It is the folly and sin of men, that they are ever finding fault with the divine Providence. According to them, God never does any thing in due time—be it too early or too late: whereas it is utterly impossible for the divine wisdom to forestall itself: or for the divine goodness to delay what is necessary.

5. His mother saith, &c. The Virgin seems to have understood our Lord as hinted above. It was not yet time to grant them a supply, because the want had not as yet been generally felt. But silently receiving the respectful caution, she saw that the miracle should be wrought, when it best suited the purposes of the divine wisdom.

6. After the manner of the purifying of the Jews Or, for the purpose of the purifying of the Jews. The preposition extra, which I have translated for the purpose, often denotes, in the best Greek writers, the final cause of a thing. See several examples produced by Raphellius from Arrianus and Herodotus. These six vessels were set in a convenient place, for the purpose of the Jews' washing their hands before they sat down to meat, and probably for other purposes of purification. See this custom referred to in Matt. xv. 2. As to the number six, we need seek for no mystery in it; the number of pots was proportioned to the number of the guests.

Containing two or three firkins apiece. Measures, or metretes, purperas. Bishop Cumberland supposes that the Syrian metretes is here meant, which he computes to have held seven pints and one eighth of a pint. And if this computation be right, the whole six water-pots might have contained about fourteen gallons and a quart. Others make each metretes to contain ten gallons and two pints: see Arbutnot. But the contents of the measures of the ancients are so very uncertain, that it is best in this, and numberless other cases, to attempt to determine nothing.

8. Governor of the feast. The original word, αρχιτριβικηνοσ, signifies one who is chief or head over three couches, or tables. In the Asiatic countries, they take their meals sitting, or rather reclining on small low couches. And when many people are present so that they cannot all eat together, three of these low tables or couches are put together in form of a crescent, and some one of the guests is appointed to take charge of the persons who sit at these tables. Hence the appellation of architribicinus, the chief over three couches or tables; which in process of time became applied to the governor or steward of a feast, let the guests be many or few; and such person having conducted the business well, had a festus crown put on his head by the guests, at the conclusion of the feast. See Ecclesiasticus, chap. xxiii. 1, 2, 3.

And they bare it. A question has been asked, "Did our Lord turn all the water into wine which the six measures contained?" To which I answer: There is no proof that he did; and I take it for granted that he did not. It may be asked, "How could a part be turned into wine, and not the whole?" To which I answer: The water in all likelihood was changed into wine as it was drawn out, and not otherwise. "But did not our Lord by this miracle minister to vice, by producing an excess of inebriating liquor?" No; for the following reasons: 1. The company was a select and holy company, where no excess could be permitted. And, 2. Our Lord does not appear to have furnished any extra quantity, but only what was necessary, and as it was necessary. "But it is intimated in the text, that the guests were nearly intoxicated before this miraculous addition to their wine took place; for the evangelist says, ορας μεδυσωσι, when they have become intoxicated." I answer, 1. It is not intimated, even in the most and manifested forth his glory; and his disciples believed on him.

 12 After this he went down to Capernaum, he, and his mother, and his brethren, and his disciples: and they continued there not many days.
 13 And the Jews' pass-over was at hand: and Jesus went up to Jerusalem,
 14 And found in the temple those that sold oxen, and sheep, and doves, and the changers of money, sitting:
 15 And when he had made a scourge of small cords, he drove them all out of the temple, and the sheep, and the oxen; and poured out the changers' money, and overthrew the tables;
 16 And said unto them that sold doves, Take these things hence; make not my Father's house a house of merchandise.
 17 And his disciples remembered that it was written, "The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up."
 18 Then answered the Jews, and said unto him, "What direct manner, that these guests were at all intoxicated. 2. The words are not spoken of the persons at that wedding at all: the governor of the feast only states that such was the common custom at feasts of this nature; without intimating that any such custom prevailed there. 3. The original word bears a widely different meaning from that which the objection forces upon it. The verbs μεδυσω and μεδω, from μεδω, wine, which, from μερα θυσιω, to drink after sacrificing, signify not only to inebriate, but to take wine, to drink wine, to drink enough: and in this sense the verb is evidently used in the Septuagint, Gen. xliii. 34. Cant. v. 1. 1 Macc. xvi. 16. Hag. i. 6. Eccles. i. 16. And the prophet Isaiah, chap. lviii. 11. speaking of the abundant blessings of the godly, compares them to a watered garden, which the Septuagint translate, ωσ κηπος μεδυωσ, by which is certainly understood, not a garden drowned with water, but one sufficiently saturated with it, not having one drop too much, nor too little.

1 Matt. 21. 12. Mark 11. 15. Luke 19. 45.—1a Luke 2. 46.—2a Ps. 69. 9.—3a Matt. 12. 29. Ch. 6. 30.

10. The good wine until now. That which our Lord now made being perfectly pure, and highly nutritive.

11. This beginning of miracles It was probably the first he ever wrought;—at any rate, it was the first he wrought after his baptism, and the first he wrought publicly.

His glory His supreme divinity; chap. i. 14. His disciples believed on him Were more abundantly confirmed in their faith, that he was either the promised Messiah, or a most extraordinary prophet, in the fullest intercourse with the ever-blessed God.

13. And the Jew's pass-over was at hand This was the reason why he staid but a few days at Capernaum, ver. 12. as he wished to be present at the celebration of this feast at Jerusalem. This was the first pass-over after Christ's baptism. The second is mentioned, Luke vi. 1. The third, John vi. 4. And the fourth, which was that at which he was crucified, chap. xi. 55. From which it appears, 1. That our blessed Lord continued his public ministry about three years and a half, according to the prophecy of Daniel, chap. ix. 27. And, 2. That having been baptized about the beginning of his thirtieth year, he was crucified precisely in the middle of his thirty-third. See Martin.

14. Found in the temple those that sold oxen, &c. This is a similar fact to that mentioned Matt. xxi. 12. Mark xi. 15. Luke xix. 45. See it explained on Matt. xxi. 12. If it be the same fact, then John anticipates three years of time in relating it here; as that cleansing of the temple mentioned by the other evangelists, took place in the last week of our Lord's life. Mr. Matt. Dr. Priestley, and Bp. Pearce, contend that our Lord cleansed the temple only once; and that was at the last pass-over. Calvin, Mr. Mede, L'Enfant and Beauvoivre, Dr. Lardner, Bp. Hurd, and Bp. Newcome, contend that he purged the temple twice; and that this, mentioned by John, was the first cleansing, which none of the other evangelists have mentioned. Let the reader, says Bp. Newcome, observe the order of events.

"Jesus works his first miracle at Cana of Galilee, chap. ii. 11. then he passes a few days at Capernaum, which brings him on his way to Jerusalem, ver. 12. The pass-over being near, he goes up to Jerusalem, ver. 13. and casts the traders out of the temple, ver. 15. 16. At the pass-over he works many miracles, ver. 23. While he is in Jerusalem, which city he does not leave till chap. iii. 22. Nicodemus comes to him by night, chap. iii. 1, 2. Chap. iii. 2. contains a reference to chap. ii. 23. After these things, Jesus departs from Jerusalem, and dwells and baptizes in Judea, chap. iii. 22. And all these incidents take place before John is cast in prison, ver. 24. But the second cleansing of the temple, happens most clearly during the last week of our Lord's life, after the death of the Baptist, and at a time when it would be absurd to say that afterward Jesus dwelt and baptized in Judea."

The vindication of God's house from profanation, was the first and the last care of our Lord: and it is probable he began and finished his public ministry by this significant act.

It certainly appears that John directly asserts an early cleansing of the temple, by the series of his history: as the other three evangelists assert a latter cleansing of it. And though the act mentioned here seems to be nearly the same with that mentioned by the other evangelists, yet there are some differences. St. John alone mentions the scourge of peskes, and the casting out of the sheep and oxen. Besides sign showed thou unto us, seeing that thou doest these things? 19 Jesus answered and said unto them, Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up.

20 Then said the Jews, Forty and six years was this temple in building, and wilt thou rear it up in three days?

21 But he spake of the temple of his body.

22 When therefore he was risen from the dead, his disciples remembered that he had said this unto them; and they be-

19 Matt. 26. 61, & 27. 40. Mark 14. 58. & 15. 23.—Cal. 2. 9. Heb. 9. 2. So 1 Cor. 3. 16 & 6. 19 & 2 Cor. 6. 16.—1 Luke 24. 2.

there is a considerable difference in our Lord's manner of doing it: in the cleansing mentioned by the three evangelists he assumes a vast deal of authority, and speaks more pointedly concerning himself than he appears to do in this cleansing mentioned by St. John: the reason which has been given is: In the first cleansing he was just entering upon his public ministry, and therefore avoided (as much as was consistent with the accomplishment of his work,) the giving any offence to the Jewish rulers: but in the last cleansing, he was just concluding his ministry, being about to offer up his life for the salvation of the world; in consequence of which, he speaks fully and without reserve. For answers to all the objections made against two cleansings of the temple, see the notes at the end of Bishop Newcome's Greek Harmony of the Gospels, pp. 7, 8, 9.

17. The zeal of thine house] See Psal. lix. 10. Zeal to promote thy glory, and to keep thy worship pure.

18. What sign showest thou] See on Matt. xii. 38. and xvi. 1. When Moses came to deliver Israel, he gave signs or miracles, that he acted under a divine commission: What miracle dost thou work to show us that thou art vested with similar authority?

19. Destroy this temple] Το ναυαο ναυαο, this very temple: perhaps pointing to his body at the same time.

20. Forty and six years was this temple in building] The temple of which the Jews spake, was begun to be rebuilt by Herod the Great, in the 18th year of his reign: Jos. Ant. b. xv. c. 11. s. 1. and xx. c. 9. s. 3, 7. But though he finished the main work in nine years and a half, yet some additional buildings or repairs were constantly carried on for many years afterwards. Herod began the work sixteen years before the birth of our Lord: the transactions which are here related, took place in the thirtieth year of our Lord, which make the term exactly forty-six years. Rosenmuller, Josephus, Ant. b. xx. c. 9. s. 5, 7, has told us, that the whole of the buildings belonging to the temple, were not finished till Nero's reign, when Albinus, the governor of Judea, was succeeded by Gessius Florus, which was eighty years after the 18th year of Herod's reign. See Bp. Pearce.

21. Of the temple of his body] Rather, the temple, his body: his body had no particular temple: but it was the temple of his divinity—the place in which, as in the ancient temple, his Godhead dwelt. See how the Jews perverted these words, Matt. xxvi. 60. and the notes there.

He loved the scripture, and the word which Jesus had said. 23 Now when he was in Jerusalem at the pass-over, in the feast day, many believed in his name, when they saw the miracles which he did.

24 But Jesus did not commit himself unto them, because he knew all men, 25 And needed not that any should testify of man: for he knew what was in man.

1 Sam. 16. 7. 1 Chron. 23. 9. Matt. 9. 4. Mark 2. 8. Ch. 6. 61. & 16. 30. Ase 1. Rev. 2. 23.

22. Remembered that he had said this unto them] Avrois, to them, is wanting in AETHIOP. Matt. BV. upwards of one hundred others; both the Syriac, Fersic, Arabic, Coptic, Ethiopic, Armenian, Slavonic, Vulgate, and Itala. Griesbach has left it out of the text.

They believed the scripture] The scripture which the evangelist immediately refers to, may have been Psalm xvi. 10. Compare this with Acts ii. 31, 32. and with chap. xiii. 35—37. See also Psalm ii. 7. and compare it with Hebrews i. 6. and chapter v. 6. and with Acts xiii. 33. They understood these Scriptures in a sense in which they never before understood them.

It is the property of many prophecies, never to be understood except by their accomplishment; but these are so marked, that when their fulfilment takes place, they cannot be misunderstood, or applied to any other event.

23. Many believed in his name] They believed him to be the promised Messiah, but did not believe in him to be the saviour of their souls: for we find from the following verse, that their hearts were not at all changed, because our blessed Lord could not trust himself to them.

24. He knew all men] Instead of ναυαο, all men, EGH. and about thirty others, read ναυαο, every man, or all things: and this I am inclined to believe is the true reading. Jesus knew all things, and why? because he made all things, chapter i. 3. and because he was the all-wise God, ver. 1. and he knew all men, because he alone searches the heart, and tries the reins. He knows who are sincere, and who are hypocritical: he knows those in whom he can confide, and those to whom he can neither trust himself nor his gifts. Reader, he also knows thee: thy cares, fears, perplexities, temptations, afflictions, desires, and hopes: thy helps and hindrances: the progress thou hast made in the divine life, or thy declension from it. If he know thee to be hypocritical or iniquitous, he looks upon thee with abhorrence: if he know thee to be of a meek and broken spirit, he looks on thee with pity, complacency and delight. Take courage—thou canst say, Lord, thou knowest all things, thou knowest that I do love thee, and mourn because I love and serve thee so little; then expect him to come into unto thee, and make his abode with thee: while thy eye and heart are simple, he will love thee, and thy whole soul shall be full of light. To him be glory and dominion forever.

CHAPTER III.

The conversation between Nicodemus and our Lord, about the new birth and faith in his testimony, 1—16. The love of God, the source of human salvation, 16. Who are condemned, and who are approved, 17—21. Jesus and his disciples come to Judea, and baptize, 22. John baptizes in Enon, 23, 24. The disciples of John and the Pharisees dispute about purifying, 25. The discourse between John and his disciples about Christ, in which the excellence, perfection, and privileges, of the Christian dispensation are pointed out, 26—36.

THERE was a man of the Pharisees, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews.

2 He came to Jesus by night, and said unto him, Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God: for no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him.

1 Ch. 2. 23 & 12. 32.—Ch. 9. 14, 23 & 21 & 7. 12 & 12. 42.—Ch. 9. 16, 31. Ase 2. 26.—Ase 10. 23.

NOTES.—Verse 1. Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews.] One of the members of the grand sanhedrim; for such were ordinarily styled rulers among the Jews. A person of the name of Nicodemus, the son of Gorkon, is mentioned in the Jewish writings, who lived in the time of Vespasian, and was reputed to be so rich, that he could support all the inhabitants of Jerusalem for ten years. But this is said in their usual extravagant mode of talking.

2. Came to Jesus by night] He had matters of the utmost importance, on which he wished to consult Christ: and he chose the night season, perhaps less through the fear of man, than through a desire to have Jesus alone, as he found him all the day encompassed with the multitude; so that it was impossible for him to get an opportunity to speak fully on those weighty affairs, concerning which he intended to consult him. However, we may take it for granted, that he had no design at present to become his disciple: as baptism and circumcision, which were the initiating ordinances among the Jews, were never administered in the night time. If any person received baptism by night, he was not acknowledged for a proselyte. See Wetstein.

Rabbi] My Master, or Teacher, a title of respect given to the Jewish doctors, something like our Doctor of Divinity, i. e. a teacher of divine things. But as there may be many found among us, who though they bear the title, are no teachers, so it was among the Jews: and perhaps it was in reference to this, that Nicodemus used the word διδάσκαλος, didas-

3 Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God.

4 Nicodemus saith unto him, How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the second time into his mother's womb, and be born?

3 Chapter 1. 13. Gal. 6. 15. Th. 3. 5. James 1. 18. 1 Pet. 1. 23. 1 John 2. 9.—1 Or, from above.

skalos, immediately after, by which, in chap. i. 39. St. John translates the word Rabbi. Rabbi, teacher, is often no more than a title of respect: didaskalos signifies a person who not only has the name of teacher, but who actually does teach.

We know that thou art a teacher come from God] We, all the members of the grand sanhedrim, and all the rulers of the people, who have paid proper attention to thy doctrine and miracles. We are all convinced of this, though we are not all candid enough to own it. It is possible, however, that αἰσχυροῦς, we know, signifies no more than, it is known, it is generally acknowledged and allowed, that thou art a teacher come from God.

No man can do these miracles] It is on the evidence of thy miracles that I ground my opinion of thee. No man can do what thou dost, unless the omnipotence of God be with him.

3. Jesus answered] Not in the language of compliment: he saw the state of Nicodemus's soul, and he immediately addressed himself to him on a subject the most interesting and important. But what connexion is there between our Lord's reply and the address of Nicodemus? Probably our Lord saw, that the object of his visit was to inquire about the Messianic kingdom, and in reference to this, he immediately says, Except a man be born again, &c.

The repetition of amen, or verily, verily, among the Jewish writers, was considered of equal import with the most solemn oath.

Be born again] Or, from above: diffused to that new birth, which the Jews supposed every baptized proselyte as-

5 Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.

6 That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit.

7 Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again.

8 The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit.

g Mark 16.16. Acts 9.28.—O. or, from above.—1. Cor. 11.5.—Ch. 6.62.—1. Masi. 11.27. Ch. 1.18. & 7.16. & 9.23. & 12.49. & 14.24.

joyed; for they held that the Gentile, who became a proselyte, was like a child new born. This birth was of water from below: the birth for which Christ contends is above, from above—by the agency of the Holy Spirit. Every man must have two births, one from heaven, the other from earth: one of his body, the other of his soul: without the first, he cannot see nor enjoy this world; without the last, he cannot see nor enjoy the kingdom of God. As there is an absolute necessity that a child should be born into the world, that he may see its light, contemplate its glories, and enjoy its good; so there is an absolute necessity that the soul should be brought out of its state of darkness and sin, through the light and power of the grace of Christ, that it may be able to see, know, or, to discern, the glories and excellencies of the kingdom of Christ here, and be prepared for the enjoyment of the kingdom of glory hereafter. The Jews had some general notion of the new birth; but like many among Christians, they put the acts of proselytism, baptism, &c. in the place of the Holy Spirit and his influence: they acknowledged that a man must be born again, but they made that new birth to consist in profession, confession, and external washing. See on ver. 10.

The new birth which is here spoken of, comprehends not only what is termed justification or pardon, but also sanctification or holiness. Sin must be pardoned, and the impurity of the heart washed away, before any soul can possibly enter into the kingdom of God. As this new birth implies the renewing of the whole soul in righteousness and true holiness, it is not a matter that may be dispensed with: heaven is a place of holiness, and nothing but what is like itself, can ever enter into it.

4. How can a man be born when he is old? It is probable that Nicodemus was pretty far advanced in age at this time; and from his answer we may plainly perceive, that like the rest of the Jews, and like multitudes of Christians, he rested in the letter, without paying proper attention to the spirit: the shadow, without the thing signified, had hitherto satisfied him. Our Lord knew him to be in this state, and this was the cause of his pointed address to him.

5. Of water and of the Spirit? To the baptism of water, a man was admitted when he became a proselyte to the Jewish religion; and in this baptism, he promised, in the most solemn manner, to renounce idolatry, to take the God of Israel for his God; and to have his life conformed to the precepts of the divine law. But the water which was used on the occasion was only an emblem of the Holy Spirit. The soul was considered as in a state of defilement, because of past sin; now, as by that water the body was washed, cleansed, and refreshed; so by the influence of the Holy Spirit, the soul was to be purified from its defilement, and strengthened to walk in the way of truth and holiness.

When John came baptizing with water, he gave the Jews the plainest intimations that this would not suffice; that it was only typical of that baptism of the Holy Ghost under the similitude of fire, which they must all receive from Jesus Christ: see Matt. iii. 11. Therefore, our Lord asserts that a man must be born of water and the Spirit, i. e. of the Holy Ghost, which, represented under the similitude of water, cleanses, refreshes, and purifies the soul. Reader, hast thou never had any other baptism than that of water? If thou hast not had any other, take Jesus Christ's word for it, thou canst not, in thy present state, enter into the kingdom of God. I would not say to thee merely, read what it is to be born of the Spirit: but pray, O pray to God incessantly, till he give thee to feel what is implied in it! Remember, it is Jesus only who baptizes with the Holy Ghost: see chap. 1. 33. He who receives not this baptism, has neither right nor title to the kingdom of God; nor can he with any propriety be termed a Christian, because that which essentially distinguished the Christian dispensation from that of the Jews, was, that its Author baptized all his followers with the Holy Ghost.

Though baptism by water into the Christian faith, was necessary to every Jew and Gentile that entered into the kingdom of the Messiah, it is not necessary that by water and the Spirit, (in this place,) we should understand two different things: it is probably only an elliptical form of speech, for the Holy Spirit under the similitude of water; as in Matt. iii. 3. the Holy Ghost and fire, do not mean two things, but one, viz. the Holy Ghost under the similitude of fire—pervading every part, refining and purifying the whole.

6. That which is born of the flesh is flesh? This is the answer to the objection made by Nicodemus in ver. 4. Can a man enter the second time into his mother's womb, and be born? Our Lord here intimates, that were even this possible, it would not answer the end: for the plant will ever be of the nature of the seed that produces it—like will beget its like. The kingdom of God is spiritual and holy; and that which is 9 Nicodemus answered and said unto him, How can these things be?

10 Jesus answered and said unto him, Art thou a master of Israel, and knowest not these things?

11 Verily, verily, I say unto thee, We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen; and ye receive not our witness.

12 If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe, if I tell you of heavenly things?

13 And no man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that is in the Son.—Prov. 20. 4. Ch. 6.23, 25, 51, 62. & 16. 22. Acts 2. 34. 1 Cor. 15. 6. Eph. 4. 9, 10.

born of the Spirit, resembles the Spirit; for as he is who beget, so he is he who is begotten of him. Therefore the spiritual regeneration is essentially necessary, to prepare the soul for a holy and spiritual kingdom.

8. The wind bloweth? Though the manner in which this new birth is effected by the Divine Spirit be incomprehensible to us; yet, we must not on this ground, suppose it to be impossible. The wind blows in a variety of directions; we hear its sound, perceive its operation in the motion of the trees, &c. and feel it on ourselves—but we cannot discern the air itself. we only know that it exists by the effects which it produces; so is every one who is born of the Spirit; the effects are as discernible, and as sensible as those of the wind: but itself we cannot see. But he who is born of God, knows that he is thus born: the Spirit itself, the grand agent in this new birth, beareth witness with his spirit, that he is born of God, Rom. vii. 16. for, he that believeth hath the witness in himself, 1 John iv. 13. and v. 10. Gal. iv. 6. And so does this Spirit work in, and by him, that others, though they see not the principle, can easily discern the change produced; for whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world, 1 John v. 4.

9. How can these things be? Our Lord had very plainly told him how these things could be; and illustrated the new birth by one of the most proper similes that could be chosen: but so intent was this great man on making every thing submit to the testimony of his senses, that he appears unwilling to believe any thing, unless he can comprehend it. This is the case with many—they profess to believe because they comprehend—but they are impostors who speak thus: there is not a man in the universe that can fully comprehend one operation, either of God, or his instrument, nature: and yet they must believe, and do believe, though they never did, nor ever can fully comprehend, or account for, the objects of their faith.

10. Art thou a master of Israel, &c.] Hast thou taken upon thee to guide the blind into the way of truth; and yet knowest not that truth thyself? Dost thou command proselytes to be baptized with water as an emblem of a new birth: and art thou unacquainted with the cause, necessity, nature, and effects, of that new birth? How many masters are there still in Israel, who are in this respect deplorably ignorant; and strange to tell, publish their ignorance and folly in the sight of the sun, by writing and speaking against the thing itself. It is strange that such people cannot keep their own secret.

"But water baptism is this new birth." No, Jesus tells you a man must be born of water and the Spirit: and the water and its effects upon the body, differ as much from this Spirit, which it is intended to represent, and the effects produced in the soul, as real fire does from painted flame.

"But I am taught to believe that this baptism is regeneration." Then you are taught to believe a falsity. The Church of England, in which perhaps you are a teacher or a member asks the following questions, and returns the subjoined answers.

"Q. How many sacraments hath Christ ordained in his church?" "A. Two only, as generally necessary to salvation; that is to say, Baptism and the Supper of the Lord." "Q. How many parts are there in a sacrament?" "A. Two. The outward visible sign, and the inward spiritual grace." "Q. What is the outward visible sign, or form, in baptism?" "A. Water, wherein the person is baptized, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." "Q. What is the inward and spiritual grace?" "A. A death unto sin, and a new birth unto righteousness; for being by nature born in sin, and the children of wrath, we are hereby made the children of grace."

Now I ask, Whereby are such persons made the children of grace? Not by the water, but by the death unto sin, and the new birth unto righteousness: i. e. through the agency of the Holy Ghost, sin is destroyed, and the soul filled with holiness.

11. We speak that we do know? I and my disciples do not profess to teach a religion which we do not understand, nor exemplify in our conduct. A strong but delicate reproach to Nicodemus, who, though a master of Israel, did not understand the very rudiments of the doctrine of salvation. He was ignorant of the nature of the new birth. How wretched is the lot of that minister, who, while he professes to recommend the salvation of God to others, is all the while dealing in the meagre, unfruitful traffic of an unfeigned truth! Let each either acquire the knowledge of the grace of God themselves, or cease to proclaim it.

Ye receive not our witness? It was deemed criminal among the Jews, to question or depart from the authority of their teachers. Nicodemus grants that our Lord is a teacher come from God; and yet scruples to receive his testimony relative to the new birth, and the spiritual nature of the Messiah's kingdom.

came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven

14 * And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up ;

15 That whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life.

16 * For God so loved the world, that he gave his only-begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

17 * For God sent not his son into the world to condemn the world ; but that the world through him might be saved.

• Numb. 21. 9.—Ch. 8. 28 & 35.—q. Ver. 38. Chap. 6. 47.—Rom. 8. 5. 1 John 4.— Luke 9. 56. Ch. 8. 48. & 8. 19 & 12. 47. 1 John 4. 14.

12. [If I have told you earthly things] If, after I have illustrated this new birth by a most expressive metaphor, taken from earthly things, and after all you believe not ; how can you believe, should I tell you of heavenly things, in such language as angels use, where earthly images and illustrations can have no place ? Or, if you, a teacher in Israel, do not understand the nature of such an earthly thing or custom of the kingdom, established over the Jewish nation, as being born of baptism, practised every day in the initiation of proselytes : how will you understand such heavenly things, as the initiation of my disciples by the baptism of the Holy Ghost and fire from heaven, if I should proceed further on the subject ?

13. No man hath ascended] This seems a figurative expression for, No man hath known the mysteries of the kingdom of God : as in Dent. xxx. 12. Psal. lxxlii. 17. Prov. xxx. 4. Eccl. xi. 34. And the expression is founded upon this generally received maxim : That to be perfectly acquainted with the concerns of a place, it is necessary for a person to be on the spot. But our Lord probably spoke to correct a false notion among the Jews, viz. that Moses had ascended to heaven, in order to get the Law. It is not Moses who is to be heard now, but Jesus ; Moses did not ascend to heaven : but the Son of man is come down from heaven to reveal the divine will.

That came down] The incarnation of Christ is represented under the notion of his coming down from heaven to dwell upon earth.

Which is in heaven.] Least a wrong meaning should be taken from the foregoing expression, and it should be imagined that in order to manifest himself upon earth, he must necessarily leave heaven ; our blessed Lord qualifies it by adding, the Son of man who is in heaven : pointing out by this, the ubiquity or omnipresence of his nature : a character essentially belonging to God ; for no being can possibly exist in more places than one at a time, but He who fills the heavens and the earth.

14. As Moses lifted up] He shows the reason why he descended from heaven, that he might be lifted up, i. e. crucified for the salvation of mankind ; and be, by the appointment of God, as certain a remedy for sinful souls, as the brazen serpent elevated on a pole. Numb. xxi. 9. was for the bodies of the Israelites which had been bitten by the fiery serpents in the wilderness. It does not appear to me, that the brazen serpent was ever intended to be considered as a type of Christ. It is possible to draw likenesses and resemblances out of any thing : but in such matters as these, we should take heed that we go no further than we can say, Thus it is written. Among the Jews, the brazen serpent was considered a type of the resurrection—through it the dying lived : and so by the voice of God, they that were dead shall be raised to life. As the serpent was raised up, so shall Christ be lifted up : as they who were stung by the fiery serpents, were restored by looking up to the brazen serpent : so those who are infected with, and dying through sin, are healed and saved by looking up to, and believing in Christ crucified. These are all the analogies which we can legitimately trace, between the lifting up of the brazen serpent, and the crucifixion of Jesus Christ.

The lifting up of the Son of man may refer to his mediatorial office at the right hand of God. See the note on Numb. xxi. 9.

15. That whosoever believeth] Bp. Pearce supposes that this verse is only the conclusion of the 16th, and that it has been inserted in this place by mistake. The words contain the reason of the subject in the following verse, and seem to break in upon our Lord's argument, before he has fully stated it. The words ανωθεν αληθως, may not perish but, are omitted by some very ancient MSS. and Versions.

16. For God so loved the world] Such a love as that which induced God to give his only-begotten Son to die for the world, could not be described :—Jesus Christ does not attempt it. He has put an eternity of meaning in the particle οωρα, and left a subject for everlasting contemplation, wonder, and praise, to angels and to men. The same evangelist uses a similar mode of expression, 1 Epist. iii. 1. Behold what manner of love, τον αγαπη αυαυτου, the Father hath bestowed upon us.

From the subject before him, let the reader attend to the following particulars : First. The world was in a ruinous, condemned state, about to perish everlastingly ; and was utterly without power to rescue itself from destruction. Secondly. That God, through the impulse of his eternal love, provided for its rescue and salvation, by giving his Son to die for it. Thirdly. That the sacrifice of Jesus was the only mean by which the redemption of man could be effected, and that it is absolutely sufficient to accomplish this gracious design : for I would have been inconsistent with the wisdom of God to have appointed a sacrifice, greater in itself, or less in its 18 * He that believeth on him is not condemned : but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only-begotten Son of God.

19 And this is the condemnation, * that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil.

20 For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be re proved.

21 But he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God.

22 * After these things came Jesus and his disciples into the 1 Ch. 5. 94. & 6. 47. & 20. 21.—u. Ch. 1. 4, 5, 10, 11. & 8. 12.—v. Job 34. 13, 17. Eph. 3. 13.—w. Or, discovered.

merit, than what the urgent necessities of the case required. Fourthly. That sin must be an indescribable evil, when it required no less a sacrifice to make atonement for it, than God manifested in the flesh. Fifthly. That no man is saved through this sacrifice, but he that believes, i. e. who credits what God has spoken concerning Christ, his sacrifice, the end for which it was offered, and the way in which it is to be applied, in order to become effectual. Sixthly. That those who believe, receive a double benefit. 1. They are exempted from eternal perdition—that they may not perish. 2. They are brought to eternal glory—that they may have everlasting life. These two benefits point out tacitly the state of man ; he is guilty, and therefore exposed to punishment : he is impure, and therefore unfit for glory.

They point out also the two grand operations of grace, by which the salvation of man is effected. 1. Justification, by which the guilt of sin is removed, and consequently the person is no longer obnoxious to perdition. 2. Sanctification, or the purification of his nature, by which he is properly fitted for the kingdom of glory.

17. For God sent not, &c.] It was the opinion of the Jews, that the Gentiles, whom they often term the world, τον ουναν, were to be destroyed in the days of the Messiah. Christ corrects this false opinion ; and teaches here a contrary doctrine. God, by giving his Son, and publishing his design in giving him, shows that he purposes the salvation, not the destruction of the world—the Gentile people : nevertheless, those who will not receive the salvation he has provided for them, whether Jews or Gentiles, must necessarily perish ; for this plain reason. There is but one remedy, and they refuse to apply it.

18. He that believeth] As stated before on verse 16. Is not condemned] For past sin, that being forgiven on his believing in Christ.

But he that believeth not] When the Gospel is preached to him, and the way of salvation made plain.

Is condemned already] Continues under the condemnation which divine justice has passed upon all sinners : and has this superadded, he hath not believed on the name of the only-begotten Son of God, and therefore is guilty of the grossest insult to the divine majesty, in neglecting, slighting, and despising the salvation which the infinite mercy of God had provided for him.

19. This is the condemnation] That is, this is the reason why any shall be found finally to perish, not that they came into the world with a perverted and corrupt nature, which is true ; nor that they lived many years in the practice of sin, which is also true ; but because they refused to receive the salvation which God sent to them.

Light is come] That is, Jesus, the Sun of righteousness, the fountain of light and life ; diffusing his benign influences every where, and favouring men with a clear and full revelation of the divine will.

Men loved darkness] Have preferred sin to holiness, Bellal to Christ, and hell to heaven. των εσχασιων, darkness, is frequently used by the Jewish writers, for the angel of death and for the devil. See many examples in Schoetigen.

Because their deeds were evil.] An allusion to robbers and cut-throats, who practise their abominations in the night season, for fear of being detected. The sun is a common blessing to the human race—it shines to all, envies none, and calls all to necessary labour. If any one chooses rather to sleep by day, than to be busy and murder in the night season, he does this to his own peril, and has no excuse :—his punishment is the necessary consequence of his own unconstrained actions. So will the punishment of ungodly men be. There was light—they refused to walk in it. They chose to walk in darkness, that they might do the works of darkness—they broke the divine law, refused the mercy offered to them, are arrested by divine justice, convicted, condemned, and punished. Whence then does their damnation proceed ? From των εσχασιων.

20. For every one that doeth evil hateth the light] He who doth vile or abominable things ; alluding to the subject mentioned in the preceding verse. The word φαυλος, evil or vile, is supposed by some to come from the Hebrew פחלאל, to roll, and so cover oneself in dust or ashes, which was practised in token of humiliation and grief, not only by the more eastern nations, see Job xlii. 6. but also by the Greeks and Trojans, as appears from Homer, Iliad xviii. l. 28. xvii. l. 414. xiv. v. 640. compare Virgil, Æn. x. l. 844. and Ovid, Metam. lib. viii. l. 628. From the above Hebrew word, it is likely that the Saxon ful, the English foul, the Latin vitis, and the English vile, are derived. See Parkhurst under φαυλος.

Let his deeds should be reprov'd] Or, discovered. To land of Jude; and these he carried with them, and baptised.

22 And John also was baptizing in AEnon, near to Salim, because there was much water there; and they came and were baptised.

24 For John was not yet cast into prison.

25 Then there arose a question between some of John's disciples and the Jews about purifying.

26 And they came unto John, and said unto him, Rabbi, he that was with thee beyond Jordan, to whom thou barest witness, behold the same baptizeth, and all men come to him.

27 John answered and said, A man can receive nothing, except it be given him from heaven.

28 Ye yourselves bear me witness, that I said, I am not the Christ, but that I am sent before him.

29 He that hath the bride is the bridegroom: but the friend of the bridegroom, which standeth and heareth him, re-

Ch. 4. 2.—1 Sam. 9. 4.—Matt. 3. 5, 6.—Matt. 14. 3.—Ch. 1. 7, 15, 27, 34.—1 Cor. 1. 7. Heb. 3. 4. James 1. 17.—Or, take unto himself.—Ch. 1. 20, 27.—Mat. 5. 29, 32, 33, 34, 37, 38, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100.

manifest or discover, is one sense of the original word ἀλεγεινός, in the best Greek writers; and it is evidently its meaning in this place.

21. Wrought in God] In his presence, and through his assistance. This is the end of our Lord's discourse to Nicodemus: and though we are not informed here of any good effects produced by it; yet we learn from other scriptures, that it had produced the most blessed effects in his mind, and that from this time he became a disciple of Christ. He publicly defended our Lord in the sanhedrin, of which he was probably a member, chap. vii. 50, and with Joseph of Arimathea, gave him an honourable funeral, chap. xix. 39, when all his bosom friends had deserted him. See Dodd.

22. Came—into the land of Judaea] Jerusalem itself, where Christ held the preceding discourse with Nicodemus, was in Judaea: but the evangelist means, that our Lord quitted the city and its suburbs, and went into the country parts. The same distinction between Jerusalem and Judaea is made, Acts i. 8. x. 39, and in 1 Macc. iii. 34, and in 2 Macc. i. 1, 16. See Bishop Pearce.

And baptised] It is not clear that Christ did baptize any with water: but his disciples did; chap. iv. 2, and what they did by his authority and command, is attributed to himself. It is a common custom in all countries and in all languages, to attribute the operations of those who are under the government and direction of another, to him by whom they are directed and governed. Some however suppose, that Christ at first did baptize; but when he got disciples, he left this work to them; and thus these two places are to be understood:—1. This place, of Christ's baptizing before he called the twelve disciples; and, 2. chap. iv. 2, of the baptism administered by the disciples after they had been called to the work by Christ.

23. In AEnon] This place was eight miles southward from Scythopolis, between Salim and Jordan.

There was much water] And this was equally necessary, where such multitudes were baptized, whether the ceremony were performed either by dipping or sprinkling. But as the Jewish custom required the person to stand in the water, and having been instructed, and entered into a covenant to renounce all idolatry, and take the God of Israel for their God, then plunge themselves under the water; it is probable that the rite was thus performed at AEnon. The consideration that they dipped themselves, tends to remove the difficulty expressed in the note on Matt. iii. 6. See the observations at the end of Mark.

25. John's disciples and the Jews] Instead of Ioudaion, Jews, ABELS. M. BV. nearly 100 others, some Versions and Fathers, read Ioudaion, a Jew, which Griesbach has admitted into the text. The person here spoken of, was probably one who had been baptized by the disciples of our Lord; and the subject of debate seems to have been, whether the baptism of John or that of Christ was the most efficacious towards purifying.

26. And they came unto John] That he might decide the question.

27. A man can receive nothing, &c.] Or, a man can receive nothing from heaven, unless it be given him. I have received not only my commission, but the power also by which I have executed it, from above. As I took it up at God's command, so I am ready to lay it down when he pleases. I have told you from the beginning, that I was only the forerunner of the Messiah; and was sent, not to form a separate party, but to point out to men that Lamb of God which takes away the sin of the world: ver. 23.

29. He that hath the bride] The congregation of believers. In the bridegroom] The Lord Jesus—the Head of the church. See Matt. xii. 2, &c. where the parable of the marriage feast is explained.

The friend of the bridegroom] The person whom the Greeks called the paranymph—there were two at each wedding; one waited on the bride, the other on the bridegroom: their business was to serve them, to inspect the concerns of the bride-chamber, and afterward to reconcile differences between husband and wife, when any took place. John considers himself as standing in this relation to the Lord Jesus while espousing human nature, and converting souls to himself; this is the eloquent greatly because of the bridegroom's voice: this my joy therefore is fulfilled.

30 He must increase, but I must decrease.

31 He that cometh from above is above all: he that is of the earth is earthly; and speaketh of the earth: he that cometh from heaven is above all.

32 And what he hath seen and heard, that he testifieth: and no man receiveth his testimony

33 He that hath received his testimony hath set to his seal that God is true.

34 For he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God: for God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him.

35 The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand.

36 He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him.

16. 47.—Ch. 6. 53. 1 Cor. 15. 47. Eph. 1. 41. Phil. 2. 9.—Ver. 11. Ch. 6. 53. & 16. 16.—1 John 3. 4. 1 John 5. 10.—Ch. 1. 14.—1 Tim. 11. 27. & 28. 14. Luke 10. 22. Ch. 5. 22. & 13. 2. & 17. 2. Heb. 2. 6.—Hab. 2. 4. Ch. 1. 12 & 4. 7. Ver. 13, 14. Rom. 1. 17. 1 John 5. 10.

meaning of standeth by, i. e. ready to serve. See the observations at the end of the chapter.

30. He must increase] His present success is but the beginning of a most glorious and universal spread of righteousness, peace, truth, and good will among men.

I must decrease] My baptism and teaching, as pointing out the coming Messiah, must cease; because the Messiah is now come, and has entered publicly on the work of his glorious ministry.

31. Is above all] This blessed bridegroom who has descended from heaven, ver. 13, is above all, superior to Moses, the prophets, and me.

He that is of the earth] John himself, who was born in the common way of man.

Speaketh of the earth] Cannot speak of heavenly things as Christ can do; and only represents divine matters by these earthly ordinances; for the spirit and meaning of which, you must all go to the Messiah himself.

32. And no man receiveth his testimony] Or, And this his testimony no man taketh up. That is, the testimony which John had borne to the Jews, that Jesus was the promised Messiah. No man taketh up—No person is found to tread in my steps, and to publish to the Jews that this is the Christ, the Saviour of the world. See this sense of the original fully proved and vindicated by Kypke in loc.

33. Hath set to his seal] That is, hath hereby confirmed the truth of the testimony which he has borne; as a testator sets his seal to an instrument in order to confirm it, and such instrument is considered as fully confirmed by having the testator's seal affixed to it; so I, by taking up this testimony of Christ, and proclaiming it to the Jews, have fully confirmed it, as I know it to be a truth: which knowledge I have from the immediate inspiration of the Holy Spirit. See ch. i. 32, 34.

34. For God giveth not the Spirit by measure] He is the most perfect of all teachers, as having received the Holy Spirit, as none before him ever did. Without measure—not for a particular time, people, purpose, &c. but for the whole compass of time, and in reference to all eternity. Former dispensations of the Holy Spirit made partial discoveries of infinite justice and mercy; but now the sum of justice, in requiring such a sacrifice, and the plenitude of mercy, in providing it, shall, by that Spirit with which he baptizes, be made manifest to all the children of men. It is worthy of remark, that this was fully done after the out-pouring of the Spirit on the day of Pentecost, Acts ii. 1, &c. as may be clearly seen in all the apostolic epistles. The Jews observe, that the Holy Spirit was given only in certain measures to the prophets; some writing only one book, others two. So Rab. Aoba.

35. All things into his hand.] See on Matt. xi. 27. A principal design of John is, to show that Christ was infinitely above every teacher, prophet, and divine messenger, that had ever yet appeared. The prophets had various gifts; some had visions, others dreams; some had the gift of teaching, others of comforting, &c. but none possessed all these gifts; Christ alone possessed their plenitude, and is all things in all.

36. Hath everlasting life] He has already the seed of this life in his soul, having been made a partaker of the grace and spirit of him, in whom he has believed. See on ver. 8.

He that believeth not] Or, obeyeth not—πειθόμενος: from a, negative, and πείθομαι, to persuade, or πείθωμαι, to obey—the want of the obedience of faith. The person who will not be persuaded, in consequence does not believe; and not having believed, he cannot obey.

Shall never enjoy it: there being no way to the kingdom of God, but through Christ Jesus, Acts iv. 12. And none can expect to enter into this kingdom, but those who obey him; for to such only he is the Author of eternal salvation. Heb. v. 9.

But the wrath of God abideth on him] Οργη, the displeasure of God. I should prefer displeasure to wrath, because the common acceptance of the latter, (fury, rage,) is not properly applicable here. Perhaps the original word is used in the same sense here, as in Rom. ii. 5. iii. 4, 5. Eph. v. 6. 1 Thess. i. 10. v. 9 where it evidently means punishment, which is the effect of irritated justice. Taken in this sense, we may consider the phrase as a Hebraism: πωτισμένος ἐστίν

God, 1. a. the most heavy and awful of all punishments: to inflict. And this abideth on him—endures as long as his unbelief and disobedience remain! and how shall these be removed in a hell of fire! Render! pray God that thou mayest never know what this continuing punishment means.

There are many very important topics brought forward in this chapter; the principal of which have been already illustrated in the notes: the subject in the 29th verse is of great consequence, and requires some further explanation.

The friend of the bridegroom, is the person called among the Jews צַדִּיק שֶׁחֵבֵן; and παραμυθός, paranymp, among the Greeks. Several matters are found in the Jewish writings relative to these, which may serve to throw light, not only on the discourse of John, but also on other passages of Scripture.

1. There were generally two sheehabim; one for the bride, another for the bridegroom: though in many instances we find the sheehabin of the bride only mentioned. 2. These officers were chosen out of the most intimate and particular friends of the parties:—a brother might be sheehabin or paranymp to his brother. 3. Though it is probable that such persons were not always found in ordinary weddings; yet they were never absent from the marriages of kings, princes, and persons of distinction. 4. The Jews believe that this was an ordinance appointed by God; and that he himself was sheehabin to Adam. But in Bereshith Rabba it is said, that God took the cup of blessing, and blessed the first pair: and that Michael and Gabriel were sheehabim to Adam. 5. So important was this office esteemed among them, that it was reckoned one of the indispensable works of charity: much depending on the proper discharge of it, as we shall afterward find. 6. Those who were engaged in this office, were excused, for the time, from some of the severer duties of religion: because they had so much to do about the new married pair, especially during the seven days of the marriage feast.

These sheehabim had a threefold office to fulfil: viz. before, at, and after the marriage: of each of these in order.

I. Before the marriage: it was the business of the sheehabin, 1. To procure a husband for the virgin, to guard her, and to bear testimony to her corporeal and mental endowments: and it was upon this testimony of this friend that the bridegroom chose his bride. 2. He was the intermedium between her and her spouse elect; carrying all messages from her to him, and from him to her: for before marriage, young women were very strictly guarded at home with their parents or friends.

II. At the wedding; it was the business of the sheehabin, if necessary, 1. To vindicate the character of the bride. 2. To sleep in an apartment contiguous to the new married pair, to prevent the bride from receiving injury. 3. It was his office to see that neither the bride nor bridegroom should be imposed on by each other: and therefore it was his business to examine and exhibit the tokens of the bride's purity, according to the law, Deut. xiii. 13—21. Of their office in this case, the rabbins thus speak: Olum in Judæa paranympum porservati cum locum (sectum) sponsæ et sponsæ—ad servandum et officium observandum: ea, quæ sponsæ illa nocte fecerint: ne scilicet alteri dolo damnum inferat: ne sponsæ, amissionem virginitalis agnoscat, illum celat aut tollat: et ne sponsæ sanguine tinctum, serum inferat. 4. When they found that their friend had got a pure and chaste virgin, they exulted greatly: as their own character, and the happiness of their friend, were at stake. To this the Baptist alludes, ver. 29. This my joy is fulfilled. 5. They distributed gifts to the new married couple, which, on their marriage, were repaid either by their friend, or by his father. 6. They continued with the bride and bridegroom the seven days of the marriage, and contributed variously to the festivity and hilarity of the occasion.

III. After marriage. 1. The sheehabin was considered the patron and advocate of the wife, and, in some sort, her guardian, to which the apostle alludes, 2 Cor. xi. 2. He was generally called in to compose any differences which might happen between her and her husband, and reconcile them when they had been at variance. 2. They appeared to have had the keeping of the marriage contract, which in certain cases they bore, when they had reason to suspect infidelity on the part of the woman, by which the marriage was dissolved; and thus the suspected person was prevented from suffering capitally. Schoettgen produces a case like this from E. Bechai, in legem, fol. 114. "A king visited foreign parts, and left his queen with her maids: they raised an evil report on her, and the king purposed to put her to death. The sheehabin hearing of it, tore the matrimonial contract, that he might have it to say, the marriage is dissolved. The king having investigated the case, found the queen innocent: she was immediately reconciled to her husband, and the sheehabin was directed to write another contract." 3. Schoettgen very modestly hazards a conjecture that if the husband had either abandoned or divorced his wife, the sheehabin took her, and acted to her as a brother-in-law; which is probable from the place to which he refers, Judg. xiv. 20. But Samson's wife was given to his companion whom he had used as his friend; or, as both the Syriac and the Targum have it, she was given to his sheehaberneyah, to his paranymp; which is agreeable to the Alexandrian copy of the Septuagint, Kai oswmpov h yvni Samwons to Neupawony avrov, es ny traipos avrov. And Samson's wife dwelt (or cohabited) with his paranymp, who had been his companion. The same reading is found in the Complutensian Polyglot.

From the preceding particulars collated with the speech of John in ver. 29. and with the words of St. Paul, 2 Cor. xi. 2. it is plain that Christ is represented as the ανδρισμοος: the church, or his genuine disciples, the κληρον: the ministers of the Gospel, the σωτηριας σπουδασματα, whose great and important duty it is, to present to the bridegroom a pure uncontaminated virgin, i. e. a church without spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing, Eph. v. 27. alluding evidently to the office of the paranymp, on whom the bridegroom depended to procure him, for wife, a chaste and pure virgin. Hence that saying of St. Paul, who considered himself the paranymp to Jesus Christ: I am jealous over you with godly jealousy; for I have espoused you to one husband, that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ, 2 Cor. xi. 2.

From all these particulars, we see that the office of the sheehabin, or paranymp, was a very important one among the Jews: and that to it, some interesting references are made in the New Testament, the force and true meaning of which passages cannot be discerned, without considering the character and office of the Jewish paranymp. See several good observations on this, in Lightfoot's notes on John ii. 1. and Schoettgen, on chap. iii. 29.

As the Christian church was now to take place of the Jewish, and the latter was about to be cast off because it was polluted; John, by using the simile of the bride, bridegroom, and paranymp, or friend of the bridegrooms, points out as it were prophetically, of what kind the Christian Church must be: it must be as holy and pure as an uncontaminated virgin, because it is to be the bride or spouse of our Lord Jesus Christ: and God honours the Baptist by making him the paranymp: and indeed his whole preaching and baptism were excellently calculated to produce this great effect, as he strongly proclaimed the necessity of a total reformation of heart and manners, among all classes of the people. See the notes on Matt. iii. 8—12. and on Luke iii. 10—14. He heard the bridegroom's voice—he faithfully communicated what he had received from heaven, ver. 27. and he rejoiced exceedingly to find that he had got a people prepared for the Lord. The success of John's preaching greatly contributed to the success of that of Christ and his disciples. For this purpose he was endued with power from on high, and chosen to be the paranymp of the heavenly Bridegroom.

CHAPTER IV.

Jesus, finding that the Pharisees took offence at his making many disciples, leaves Judæa to pass into Galilee, 1—3. And passing through Samaria comes to Sychar, and rests at Jacob's well, 4—6. While his disciples were gone to the city to buy meat, a woman of Samaria comes to draw water, with whom our Lord discourses at large on the spiritual nature of his religion, the perfection of the divine nature, and the purity of his worship, 7—24. On his informing her that he was the Messiah, she leaves her picher, and goes to inform her townsmen, 25—30. His discourse with his disciples in her absence, 31—36. Many of the Samaritans believe on him, 36—42. He stays two days with them, and goes into Galilee, 43—46. He comes to Cana, and heals the son of a nobleman, in consequence of which he believes on him, with his whole family, 46—54. [A. M. 4031. A. D. 27. An. Olymp. CCI. 3.]

WHEN therefore the Lord knew how the Pharisees had heard that Jesus made and baptized more disciples than John,

2 (Though Jesus himself baptized * not, but his disciples, 3 He left Judæa, * and departed again into Galilee. 4 And he must needs go through Samaria.

* Ch. 2. 22, 25.—A. C. 10. 42.

* Mat. 4. 12.

NOTES.—Verse 1. Jesus made and baptized, &c.] These seem to be quoted as the very words which were brought to the Pharisees: and from our Lord's conduct after this information, we may take it for granted, that they were so irritated, that they were determined to seek an occasion to take away his life; in consequence of which, leaving Judæa, he withdrew into Galilee.

2. Jesus himself baptized not See chap. iii. 22. 4. And he must needs go through Samaria] Or, It was necessary for him to pass through Samaria: for this plain reason, and no other, because it was the only proper road. Samaria lay northward of Judæa, and between the great sea, Galilee, and Jordan; and there was, therefore, no going from Galilee to Jerusalem, but through this province. See the note on Luke xvii. 11. From Jerusalem to Galilee through Samaria, according to Josephus, was three days' journey. See his own life.

5. A city—called Sychar] This city was anciently called Shechem. It seems to have been situated at the foot of Mount Gerizim, in the province of Samaria, on which the temple of the 6 Then cometh he to a city of Samaria, which is called Sychar, near to the parcel of ground <sup>a</sup> that Jacob gave to his son Joseph.

6 Now Jacob's well was there. Jesus therefore, being wearied with his journey, <sup>b</sup> sat thus on the well : and it was about the sixth hour.

7 There cometh a woman of Samaria to draw water : Jesus saith unto her, Give me to drink.

8 (For his disciples were gone away unto the city to buy meat.)
9 (For his disciples were gone away unto him, How is it that thou, being a Jew, askest drink of me, which am a woman of Samaria?) for (the Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans.)

10 Jesus answered and said unto her, If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink; thou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given thee <sup>c</sup> living water.

11 The woman saith unto him, Sir, thou hast nothing to draw with, and the well is deep: from whence then hast thou that living water?

<sup>a</sup> Gen. 33. 19. & 49. 27. Josh. 24. 22. — <sup>b</sup> Exod. 2. 16. Hab. 4. 16. — <sup>c</sup> Kings 17. 24. Luke 8. 52. Acts 10. 28. — <sup>d</sup> Isa. 12. 3. & 44. 3. Jer. 2. 13. Zech. 13. 1. & 14. 8.

Samaritans was built. After the ruin of Samaria by Salmanser, Sychar, or Shechem, became the capital of the Samaritans, and it continued so, according to Josephus, Ant. i. xli. c. 8. in the time of Alexander the Great. It was about ten miles from Shiloh, forty from Jerusalem, and fifty-two from Jericho. It probably got the name of Sychar, which signifies drunken, from the drunkenness of its inhabitants. With this crime the prophet Isaiah (ch. xxviii. 1, 3, 7, 8.) solemnly charges the Ephraimites, within whose limits this city stood. This place is remarkable in the Scriptures, 1. As being that where Abram first stopped, on his coming from Haran to Canaan. 2. Where God first appeared to that patriarch, and promised to give the land to his seed. 3. The place where Abram first built an altar to the Lord, and called upon his name, Gen. xii. 7. The present name of this city is Neapolis, or Naplosae. See Calmet.

That Jacob gave to his son Joseph] Jacob had bought this field from the children of Hamor, the father of Shechem, for a hundred pieces of silver, or lambs, Gen. xxxiii. 19. and in it he built an altar, which he dedicated to Eli Elohey Yisrael, the strong God, the covenant God of Israel, ver. 19. This Jacob left as a private or overplus inheritance to Joseph and his children. See Gen. xlviii. 21, 22. and Josh. xxiv. 32.

6. Jacob's well was there] Of this well, Mr. Maundrell gives the following account. "About one third of an hour from Naplosa, the ancient Sychar and Sychem, stood Jacob's well. If it be inquired, whether this be the very place, seeing it may be suspected to stand too remote from Sychar, for the woman to come and draw water, we may answer: that in all probability, the city extended further in former times than it does now, as may be conjectured from some pieces of a very thick wall, the remains, perhaps, of the ancient Sychem, still to be seen not far from hence. Over it stood formerly a large church, erected by the empress Irene; but of this the voracity of time, assisted by the hands of the Turks, has left nothing but a few foundations remaining. The well is covered at present with an old stone vault, into which you are led down by a very strait hole; and then removing a broad flat stone, you discover the well itself. It is dug in a firm rock, is about three yards in diameter, and thirty-five in depth, five of which we found full of water. This confutes a story frequently told to travellers, 'That it is dry all the year round, except on the anniversary of that day on which our blessed Saviour sat upon it; but then bubbles up with abundance of water.' At this well the narrow valley of Sychem ends, opening itself into a wide field, which probably is part of the ground given by Jacob to his son Joseph. It is watered by a fresh stream, running between it and Sychem, which makes it exceedingly verdant and fruitful." See Maundrell's Travels, 6th edit. p. 62.

Sat [thus] Chrysostom inquires what the particle thus, en hoc, means here? and answers, that it simply signifies, he sat not upon a throne, seat, or cushion; but (as the circumstances of the case required) upon the ground. This is a sense which is given to the word in the ancient Greek writers. See Rapheus, Wetstein, and Pearce. It is probably a mere expletive, and is often so used by Josephus. See several examples in Rosenmüller.

The sixth hour] About twelve o'clock: see the note on chap. i. 39. The time is noted here, 1. To account for Christ's fatigue—he had already travelled several hours. 2. To account for his thirst—the sun had at this time waxed hot. 3. To account for the disciples going to buy food, ver. 8. because this was the ordinary time of dinner among the Jews. See the note referred to above. Dr. Macknight thinks the sixth hour to be the Roman six o'clock in the afternoon. See on chap. i. 29.

7. There cometh a woman of Samaria to draw water] That this was the employment of the females, we see in different parts of the Sacred Writings. See Gen. xxiv. 11, &c. Exod. ii. 16. and the note at the end of that chapter. The Jews say, that those who wished to get wives, went to the wells, where young women were accustomed to come and draw water; and it is supposed that women of ill fame frequented such places also. See several proofs in Schoettgen.

9. That thou, being a Jew] Probably the inhabitants of Judea distinguished themselves from those of Samaria by some peculiar mode of dress; and by this the Samaritan woman 12 Art thou greater than our father Jacob, which gave us the well, and drank thereof himself, and his children, and his cattle?

13 Jesus answered and said unto her, Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again:

14 But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life.

15 <sup>b</sup> The woman saith unto him, Sir, give me this water, that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw.

16 Jesus saith unto her, Go, call thy husband, and come hither.

17 The woman answered and said, I have no husband. Jesus said unto her, Thou hast well said, I have no husband:

18 For thou hast had five husbands; and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband: in that saidst thou truly.

19 The woman saith unto him, Sir, I perceive that thou art a prophet.

<sup>b</sup> Ch. 6. 26. 59. — <sup>c</sup> Ch. 7. 38. — <sup>d</sup> See Ch. 6. 31. & 17. 2, 3. Rom. 6. 6. 21. — <sup>e</sup> John 5. 38. — <sup>f</sup> Luke 7. 16. & 24. 19. Ch. 6. 14. & 7. 40.

might have known Christ: but it is likely that our Lord spoke the Galilean dialect, by which we find, from Mark xiv. 70. a Jew of that district might easily be known.

The Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans.] Perhaps better, Jews have no communion with Samaritans. These words appear to be added by the evangelist himself, in explanation of the woman's question. The original word, συγγνωστὰς has been variously translated and understood. It comes from syn, together, and gnosis, I use, or borrow: hence it has been understood to mean, the Jews will be under no kind of obligation to the Samaritans—they borrow nothing from them—they will not drink out of the same cup or well with them—they will not sit down to meals with them, nor eat out of the same vessel—they will have no religious connexion, no commercial dealings with them. The word communio, I think, fully expresses the sense of the original; and being as extensive in its meaning as our word dealings, is capable of as general an interpretation. The deadly hatred that subsisted between these two nations is known to all. The Jews cursed them, and believed them to be accursed. Their most merciful wish to the Samaritans was, that they might have no part in the resurrection; or, in other words, that they might be annihilated.

10. If thou knowest the gift of God] Δωρεάν signifies a free gift. A gift is any thing that is given, for which no equivalent has been, or is to be returned; a free gift, is that which has been given without asking or entreaty. Such a gift of kindness was Jesus Christ to the world, chap. iii. 16. and through him comes the gift of the Spirit, which those who believe on his name were to receive. Christ was not an object of desire to the world—no man asked for him: and God, moved thereto by his own eternal mercy, freely gave him. Through this great gift, comes the Holy Spirit, and all other gifts which are necessary to the salvation of a lost world.

Living water.] By this expression, which was common to the inhabitants both of the East and of the West, is always meant spring water, in opposition to dead, stagnant water, contained in ponds, pools, and cisterns: and what our Lord means by it, is evidently the Holy Spirit, as may be seen chap. vii. 33, 39.

As water quenches the thirst, refreshes and invigorates the body, purifies things defiled, and renders the earth fruitful: so it is an apt emblem of the gift of the Holy Ghost, which satisfies the souls that receive it, that they thirst no more for earthly good: it purifies also from all spiritual defilement, on which account it is emphatically styled the Holy Spirit; and it makes those who receive it, fruitful in every good word and work.

11. Thou hast nothing to draw with] Οὐκ ἔχεις κύβητον, thou hast no bucket. Good water is not plenty in the East; and travellers are often obliged to carry leathern bottles or buckets with them, and a line also, to let them down into the deep wells, in order to draw up water. If the well was, in our Lord's time, as it was found by Mr. Maundrell, thirty-five yards deep, it would require a considerable line to reach it; and with such, it is not likely that even the disciples of our Lord were provided. The woman might well say, The well is deep, and thou hast nothing to draw with; whereas thou hast thou that living water?

12. Our father Jacob] The ancient Samaritans were undoubtedly the descendants of Jacob; for they were the ten tribes that revolted in the reign of Rehobam; but those in our Lord's time were not genuine Israelites, but a corrupted race, sprung from a mixture of different nations, sent thither by Salmanser, king of the Assyrians. See 2 Kings xvii.

14. Springing up into everlasting life.] On this account he can never thirst: for how can he lack water, who has in himself a living eternal spring? By this water our Lord means also his doctrine, explaining and promising the gifts and graces of the Holy Ghost, which proceed from Jesus Christ their fountain, dwelling in a believing heart. There is no eternal life without the Spirit; no Spirit without Christ, and no Christ to give the Spirit, without dwelling in the heart: this, his whole doctrine proclaims.

16. Give me this water] She did not as yet comprehend our Lord's meaning; but her curiosity was much excited, and 20 Our fathers worshipped in <sup>20</sup> this mountain ; and ye say, that in <sup>21</sup> Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship.

21 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, believe me, the hour cometh, <sup>22</sup> when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father.

22 Ye worship <sup>23</sup> ye know not what : we know what we worship : for <sup>24</sup> salvation is of the Jews.

23 But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in <sup>24</sup> spirit <sup>25</sup> and in truth : for the Father seeketh such to worship him.

24 God is a Spirit : and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth.

in John. 9. 7.—in Deut. 12. 5. 11. 1 Kings 9. 3. 2 Chr. 7. 12.—in Mat. 1. 11. 1 Tim. 2. 8.—in 2 Kings 17. 39.—in 1m. 2. 3. Luke 24. 47. Rom. 9. 4, 5.

16. Call thy husband) Our Lord appears to have spoken these words for two purposes: 1. To make the woman consider her own state. 2. To show her that he knew her heart, and the secret actions of her life; and was therefore well qualified to teach her heavenly truths.

18. Thou hast had five husbands) It is not clear that this woman was a prostitute—she might have been legally married to those five, and might have been divorced through some misbehaviour of her own, not amounting to adultery; for the adulteress was to be put to death, both by the Jewish and Samaritan law, not divorced; or she might have been cast off through some caprice of her husband: for in the time of our Lord, divorces were very common among the Jews; so that a man put away his wife for any fault. See the note on Matt. v. 31. Some are so very fond of exaggerating, that nothing can pass through their hands without an increase: hence Heracleon says, she had six husbands; and Jerom modestly gives her twenty-two! Virginit duo habuisti maritus, et ille a quo sepelietis non est tuus. "Thou hast had twenty-two husbands, and he by whom thou shalt be buried is not thine." Epist. xl.

He whom thou now hast is not thy husband) Nov ov exist, ov ov ov ov ov ov. Bishop Pearce would translate this clause in the following manner: There is no husband whom thou now hast—or less literally, Thou hast no husband now: probably the meaning is, Thou art contracted to another, but not yet brought home; therefore he is not yet thy husband. See Rosenmuller. Bishop Pearce contends, that our Lord did not speak these words to her by way of reproof. 1. Because it is not likely that a woman so far advanced in years, as to have had five husbands, should have now been found living in adultery with a sixth person. 2. Because it is not likely, that our Lord would not, in some part of his discourse, have reproofed her for her fornication, especially if guilty of it, under such gross circumstances. 3. Nor is it likely that a woman of so bad a life, should have had so much influence with the people of her city, that they should, on her testimony, ver. 39.—42. believe Jesus to be the Messiah. 4. Nor is it at all likely, that when a discovery of her guilt was made to her, by one whom she acknowledged to be a prophet, ver. 19. that the first thing which came into her thoughts, should be the important question in religion, about the place appointed by God for his worship, so warmly contested between the Jews and Samaritans. 5. Nor is it at all probable, that a person of such a bad life, without any mentioned sign of repentance, should have been the first, (perhaps the only private person) to whom Jesus is recorded as declaring himself to be the Christ, as he does to her, ver. 26.

19. I perceive that thou art a prophet.) And therefore thought him well qualified to decide the grand question in dispute between the Jews and the Samaritans; but she did not perceive him to be the Messiah.

20. Worshipped in this mountain) Probably pointing to Mount Gerizim, at the foot of which Sychar was situated. The patriarchs had worshipped here—Jacob builded an altar on this mountain, and worshipped the true God: see Gen. xxii. 2. xxxiii. 20. Thus she could say, Our Fathers worshipped in this mountain. On this mountain Sanballat had built him a temple, about 332 years before our Lord's incarnation. See Joseph. Antiq. xl. c. viii. a. 4. and 2 Macc. vi. 2.

In the Hebrew Pentateuch, Deut. xxvii. 4, &c. where the Israelites are commanded to build an altar on Mount Ebal, and offer sacrifices, &c. the Samaritan Pentateuch has Gazizim instead of Ebal; and Dr. Kennicott strongly contends, Dissert. vol. ii. p. 20. &c. that Gerizim is the genuine reading; but our blessed Lord by the following answer, shows that the place was a matter of little importance, as the divine worship was no longer to be confined to either: ver. 21. See the note on Deut. xxvii. 4.

21. The hour cometh, &c.) The time was now at hand, in which the spiritual worship of God was about to be established in the earth; and all the Jewish rites and ceremonies entirely abolished.

Worship the Father.) This epithet shows the mild, benignant, and tender nature of the Gospel dispensation. Men are called to worship their heavenly Father, and to consider themselves as his children. In reference to this, our Lord's prayer begins, Our Father, who art in heaven, &c. See Ver. 29.

22. Ye worship ye know not what) The Samaritans believed in the same God with the Jews; but as they rejected all the 25 The woman saith unto him, I know that Messiah cometh, which is called Christ: when he is come, <sup>26</sup> he will tell us all things.

26 Jesus saith unto her, <sup>27</sup> I that speak unto thee am he.

27 And upon this came his disciples, and marvelled that he talked with the woman: yet no man said, What seekest thou? or, Why talkest thou with her?

28 The woman then left her waterpot, and went her way into the city, and saith to the men, 29 Come, see a man <sup>30</sup> which told me all things that ever I did: is not this the Christ?

30 Then they went out of the city, and came unto him.

Phil. 3. 3.—in Ch. 1. 17.—in 2 Cor. 3. 17.—in Ver. 39. 26.—in Chapter 9. 37. Mat. 25. 63, 64. Mark 14. 61. 62.—in Ver. 25.

prophetic writings, they had but an imperfect knowledge of the Deity: besides, as they incorporated the worship of idols with his worship, they might be justly said to worship him whom they did not properly know. See the account of their motley worship, 2 Kings xvii. 25—34. But after Sanballat had built the temple on Mount Gerizim, the idolatrous worship of the Cutheans and Sepharvites, &c. was entirely laid aside; the same religious service being performed in the Samaritan temple, which was performed in that at Jerusalem.

We know what we worship) We Jews acknowledge all the attributes of his nature, and offer to him only, the sacrifices prescribed in the Law.

Salvation is of the Jews.) Ex tunc leudeorum totis, salvation is from the Jews. Salvation seems here to mean the Saviour, the Messiah, as it does Luke ii. 30. Acts iv. 12. and so the woman appears to have understood it, ver. 26. The Messiah was to spring from the Jews—from them, the preaching of the Gospel, and the knowledge of the truth, were to go to all the nations of the world. It was to the Jews that the promises were made; and it was in their prophetic Scriptures, which the Samaritans rejected, that Jesus Christ was proclaimed and described. See Isa. xl. 3.

23. The true worshippers shall worship—in spirit) The worship of the Samaritans was a defective worship—they did not receive the prophetic writings: that of the Jews was a carnal worship, dealing only in the letter, and referring to the spirit and design, which were at a distance, by types and ceremonies. The Gospel of Christ showed the meaning of all these carnal ordinances, and the legal sacrifices, which had all their consummation in his offering of himself: thus a spiritual dispensation took place of the carnal one, which prefigured it. 2. The preaching of the Gospel discovered the true nature of God, of salvation, of the human soul, of earthly and of heavenly things; and because of this, it is put in opposition to the defective Samaritan worship.

24. God is a Spirit) This is one of the first, the greatest, the most sublime, and necessary truths in the compass of nature! There is a God, the cause of all things—the fountain of all perfection—without parts or dimensions, for he is πνευματικός—filling the heavens and the earth—περανδίζων, governing, and upholding all things: for he is an infinite spirit! This God can be pleased only with that which resembles himself: therefore he must hate sin and sinfulness; and can delight in those only who are made partakers of his own divine nature. As all creatures were made by him, so all owe him obedience and reverence—but to be acceptable to this infinite Spirit, the worship must be of a spiritual nature; must spring from the heart, through the influence of the Holy Ghost: and it must be in truth, not only in sincerity, but performed according to that divine revelation, which he has given men of himself. A man worships God in spirit, when, under the influence of the Holy Ghost, he brings all his affections, appetites, and desires, to the throne of God: and he worships him in truth, when every purpose and passion of his heart, and when every act of his religious worship, is guided and regulated by the word of God. "The enlightened part of mankind," says Abu'l Fazel, "knows that true righteousness is an upright heart; and believe that God can only be worshipped in holiness of spirit." Ayren Akbery, vol. iii. p. 264.

"Of all worshippers," says Creecham, "I respect him as the most devout, who hath faith in me, and who serveth me with a soul possessed of my Spirit." Goets, p. 68.

25. I know that Messiah cometh) Instead of oide, I know, several excellent MSS. and Versions read oidas, we know; as if she had said, that all the Samaritans expected the advent of the Messiah. Though they did not receive the prophetic writings, yet the tradition of the advent of the Messiah, which was common among the Jews, and founded on promises contained even in the books of Moses, was generally received among the Samaritans also.

Which is called Christ) This appears to be the evangelist's explanation of the Hebrew word, according to his custom; chap. i. 38, 41, 42. ix. 7, &c. for we cannot suppose that the woman understood Greek, so as to translate the Hebrew word to our Lord; or that she should suppose that a person who was a Jew, ver. 9. and a prophet, ver. 19. could stand in need of this interpretation.

He will tell us all things.) Relative to the nature of God, the nature of his worship, and the proper place to adore him in. In a word, he will settle the great national question between Gerizim, and Ebal; and we shall then know certainly where we ought to worship.

26. Jesus saith unto her, I—am he.) Our Lord never spoke 31 * In the mean while his disciples prayed him, saying, Master, eat.

32 But he said unto them, I have meat to eat that ye know not of.

33 Therefore said the disciples one to another, Hath any man brought him aught to eat?

34 Jesus saith unto them, * My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work.

35 Say not ye, There are yet four months, and then cometh

John 12:12. Ch. 6:38 & 17:4. & 19:30.—y Matt. 9:37. Luke 10:2

in such direct terms concerning himself to his own countrymen; nor even to his own disciples, till a little before his death. The reason given by Bishop Pearce is the following: The woman being alone when Jesus said it, and being a Samaritan, he had no reason to apprehend that the Samaritans, if they knew his claim, would disturb his ministry before the time of his suffering came; which seems to have been the reason why he concealed it so long from his own countrymen.

27. Came his disciples] From the town whither they went to buy food, ver. 8.

Marvelled that he talked with the woman] Because it was contrary to the custom of the Eastern countries; and there are many canons among the rabbins against it. To the present time, if a man meet even his own wife in the street, he does not speak to her; and this is done to keep up the appearance of a chastity and temperance, of which the Eastern world knows nothing. They might wonder how a Samaritan, in whom they could expect no spirituality, could listen to the conversation of their Master, who never spoke but about heavenly things.

Yet no man said, &c.] They were awed by his majesty, and knew that he must have sufficient reasons to induce him to act a part to which he was not at all accustomed. A great man has said, "Converse sparingly, if at all, with women; and never alone." Every minister of the Gospel will do well to attend to this advice.

28. Left her waterpot] She was so penetrated with the great truths which Jesus had announced, that she forgot her errand to the well, and returned to the city without the water for which she came out!

29. All things that ever I did] The Jews believed that one essential characteristic of the Messiah would be, that he should be able to tell the secrets of all hearts. This they believed was predicted, Isa. xl. 2, 3.

When the famous impostor Barchochab, who rose up under the empire of Adrian, about a hundred years after the incarnation, professed himself to be the Messiah; after having been deceived by him for two years, they at last thought of putting his divinity to proof on this ground: they brought before him persons whom he did not know, some of whom were very vicious, and others of a different character; they desired him to point out who were the righteous, and who were the wicked? which, when he could not do, they rose up and put him to death. La Bible de Martin.

30. They went out of the city] Such effect had the simple testimony of the woman on their minds.

And came unto him.] Or, Were come to him; for they did not reach him immediately; all that discourse between him and his disciples, mentioned ver. 31 to 39, inclusive, having taken place before the people of Sychar got to the well. See ver. 40.

31. Master, eat.] They knew that he was greatly spent both with hunger and fatigue.

32. I have meat to eat that ye know not of.] Our blessed Lord seizes every opportunity to raise the minds of his apostles to heavenly things, through the medium of earthly matters. Nor does he force these things into such service. Properly understood, earthly substances are the types, representatives, and shadows of heavenly things.

33. Hath any man brought him aught to eat?] Has he got food in any preternatural way? They could not help remembering the miraculous interventions of Divine Providence in feeding Elijah, by the ravens, at the brook Cherith, 1 Kings xvii. 4-6, and by the ministry of an angel, chap. xix. 5-8, and our Lord's preternatural repast in the wilderness, after his victory over Satan, Matt. iv. 11.

34. My meat is to do the will of him that sent me] In these words our blessed Lord teaches a lesson of zeal and earnestness to his apostles, and to all their successors in the Christian ministry. Let the salvation of souls lie nearer your heart than life itself. Let eating and drinking, labour and rest, reading, thinking, study, prayer, and all things, be directed to the accomplishment of this great work. Ministers of Jesus! imitate your Lord! Souls are perishing for lack of knowledge—God has given you the key of the kingdom, the knowledge of his word—O open unto them the gate of life! They are dropping by thousands into hell! O pluck the brands out of the burning!

35. There are yet four months, and then cometh harvest]—In Palestine, the harvest did not begin till after the pass-over, which was fixed on the 14th of the month Nisan, which answers to our March, and sometimes extends into April. The barley harvest was the first; after that the wheat; and both were finished by pentecost. For, in the feast of pentecost, the first-fruits of all the harvest were carried to the temple, and waved before the Lord. See Lev. xxiii. 11. The four months of which our Lord speaks here, must be computed, according harvest? behold, I say unto you, Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest.

36 * And he that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth froth unto life eternal: * that both he that soweth, and he that reapeth, may rejoice together.

37 And herein is that saying true, One soweth, and another reapeth.

38 I sent you to reap that whereon ye bestowed no labour: other men laboured, and ye are entered into their labours.

Jan. 12. 3.—a Ch. 15. 16. Amos 9. 13. Heb. 9. 40.

to M. Toynard, from Sebat, which was the eleventh month of the sacred year, and which commenced that year on the 14th of January; from that, till the beginning of the wheat harvest, which began about a month after the pass-over, there were exactly four months. The pass-over was that year on the 15th of Nisan, or March 23; and pentecost took place on the 17th of May. We may therefore suppose, that it was about the 13th of January, or beginning of the month Sebat, that John the Baptist was cast into prison, and that Christ retired into Galilee. The fixing of this epoch is of considerable importance. See Calmet's Com. on this place.

The following method of dividing the seasons among the Jews, is thus stated in Buwa Meleia, fol. 106. "Half Tiari, all Marsheshan, and half Cisleu, is yvi zera, sowing-time. Half Cisleu, whole Shebat, and half Shebat, is yvri chareph, winter. Half Shebat, whole Adar, and half Nisan, is yvii kor, the wheat sowing. Half Nisan, all Ijar, and half Sivan, is yvix katar, harvest. Half Sivan, all Tammuz, and half Ab, is yvix kyta, sowing. Half Ab, all Elsul, and half Tiari, is ym chum, the great heat." The Jews sowed wheat and spelt in Tiari and Marsheshan, and barley in Shebat and Adar. Now let us reckon zera, sowing, the four months, backwards, from the beginning of the barley harvest, or the middle of the month Nisan, and we shall go back to the middle of the month Cisleu, which will fall in with the beginning of our December, whence it will be easy to conjecture what sebat that was, mentioned chap. v. 1. viz. the pass-over. See Lightsfoot; and see the note on chap. v. 1.

After all that learned men have said on this passage, it does not appear that our Lord meant any thing by it, more than an illustration of his present subject. Though there were ordinarily four months from seed-time to harvest, and that a man, after he had sowed his seed, must wait patiently till the regular and natural harvest came; yet it was not the case now;—the seed of life which he had sown but a few hours ago, had already brought forth much fruit; and therefore he says, Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields, over which it is likely the Samaritans were then coming in troops, guided by the woman who had already received the light of the Gospel of peace.

The fields—are white already to harvest.] Multitudes of Samaritans are coming to believe on me, and to be saved unto eternal life. Probably they had a kind of white raiment.

36. And he that reapeth receiveth wages] Or, And already the reaper receiveth wages. By making the word ym, already, the beginning of this verse, on the authority of some excellent MSS. and Versions, a more consistent sense is obtained than from the common arrangement, where ym terminates the preceding verse.

Already the heavenly sower, Jesus Christ, becomes the reaper of the produce of the seed which he had so lately sown, and receives the wages which he desired, the high gratification of saving immortal souls, and gathering in his fruit unto eternal life. So the sower and the reaper, who are here one and the same person, rejoiced together, having seen the seed time and the harvest take place on the same day. The sower had not time to leave the field which he had sown, till it was full time to gather in the harvest!

37. Herein is that saying true, One soweth and another reapeth] Or, One is the sower, and another is the reaper. In what respects you of this business, this proverb is true—One is the sower, &c. for I have sent you to reap, to preach my Gospel, and gain converts, where ye have not laboured—have not sown the first seeds of eternal life; others have laboured—the patriarchs and prophets, and ye are entered into the fruits of their labours. They announced the Messiah, who was to come, and the expectation of the people was excited, and they longed for his appearance; but they were gathered to their fathers before they could see the fruit of their labour. You are come to tell the people that the kingdom of God is among them, and that God has visited his people.

The proverb which our Lord mentions above, was taken from what ordinarily happens in the course of the Divine Providence, where one takes a great deal of pains to procure that, of which another reaps the benefit. See instances of this proverb, Lev. xxvi. 16. Ye shall sow your seed in rain, for your enemies shall eat it. Micah vi. 15. Thou shalt sow, but thou shalt not reap; thou shalt tread the olives, but not anoint thee with the oil. See also Hos. vii. 9. The Greeks had the same proverb: Αλλοι μιν σπέρνουν, άλλοι θάψσονται. So had the Latins: Alit, leporem escitatis. You have beat the bush, and another has found the hare. See the famous verse of Virgil, beginning with Sic vos non vobis, in which the fowls, the sheep, the bees, and the oxen, are elegantly brought in as illustrations of the propriety of the proverb.

Sic vos non vobis nificatio usus.
Sic vos non vobis velleris fertis oves.

39 And many of the Samaritans of that city believed on him, for the saying of the woman, which testified, He told us all that ever I did.

40 So when the Samaritans were come unto him, they abode with him that he would tarry with them: and he abode there two days.

41 And many more believed because of his own word;

42 And said unto the woman, Now we believe, not because of thy saying: for we have heard him ourselves, and know that this is indeed the Christ, the Saviour of the world.

43 Now after two days he departed thence, and went into Galilee.

44 For 4 Jesus himself testified, that a prophet hath no honour in his own country.

45 Then when he was come into Galilee, the Galileans received him, having seen all the things that he did at Jerusalem at the feast: for they also went unto the feast.

46 So Jesus came again unto Cana of Galilee, where he made the water wine. And there was a certain nobleman, whose son was sick at Capernaum.

47 When he heard that Jesus was come out of Judea into Galilee, he went down unto him, and besought him that he would come down, and heal his son: for he was at the point of death.

48 Then said Jesus unto him, Except ye see signs and wonders, ye will not believe.

49 The nobleman saith unto him, Sir, come down ere my child die.

50 Jesus saith unto him, Go thy way; thy son liveth. And the man believed the word that Jesus had spoken unto him, and he went his way.

51 And as he was now going down, his servants met him, and told him, saying, Thy son liveth.

52 Then inquired he of them the hour when he began to amend. And they said unto him, Yesterday at the seventh hour the fever left him.

53 So the father knew that it was at the same hour in which Jesus said unto him, Thy son liveth: and himself believed, and his whole house.

54 This is again the second miracle that Jesus did, when he was come out of Judea into Galilee.

55 Sic vos non vobis mellificatis apes. Sic vos non vobis fertis aratra boves. So you, ye birds, of wondrous skill possess, Not for yourselves construct the curious nest. So you, ye sheep, who roam the verdant field, Not for yourselves your snowy fleeces yield. So you, ye bees, who ev'ry flow'r explore, Not for yourselves amass the honied store. So you, ye patient hie, inur'd to toil, Not for yourselves subdue the stubborn soil.—T. GREEN.

Bishop Pearce gives this text a remarkable turn. The verse he translates thus: I sent you away, that ye might reap that which ye bestow'd no labour; i. e. I did not send you to the city, (ver. 3) for this purpose only, that ye might buy meat; but I sent you away chiefly with this intent, that there might be a harvest for you to reap upon your return; though you sowed no seed, and bestow'd no labour for that purpose. While you were gone, I sowed spiritual seed in the heart of a Samaritan woman; and she is gone, and is about to return with many of her city, whom she has brought to believe, (ver. 39—42) These, and the many more which will believe upon hearing my doctrine, (ver. 41) will all be a harvest arising out of the seed which I sowed in your absence, and on which therefore ye bestow'd no labour. He further adds, that the Greek ἀποσταλείτε, stands for ἀποσταλείτε, and such expressions are often used to signify, not the end and design, but the event only. Pearce's Comment.

39. Many of the Samaritans—believed on him for the saying of the woman.] This woman was the first apostle of Christ in Samaria! She went and told her fellow-citizens that the Messiah was come: and gave for proof that he had told her the most secret things she had ever done: see on ver. 29. This word, which is twice repeated, in ver. 29, and here, strongly intimates that a more particular conversation had taken place between our Lord and the Samaritan woman than what is here related.

40. He abode there two days.] We are not told that he wrought any miracles among them; this does not appear to have been necessary: they were a simple-hearted, teachable people, and they credited him on the evidence of his own eternal truth. Why are not miracles wrought now? Miracles were only for the establishment of the doctrine of Christianity, where they were first preached: to profess to believe these doctrines; therefore, to us, miracles would be useless. Where the doctrine is credited, no miracle is necessary: the Samaritans believed, and no miracle was wrought among them; for the simple reason—it was not necessary.

42. We have heard him ourselves.] On seeing and hearing our Lord, the faith of those who had already believed on the woman's testimony, was abundantly confirmed: and besides those, many others believed who had not heard the woman speak.

This is indeed the Christ.] The promised Messiah. The Saviour of the world. ] Not of the Jews only, but of the Samaritans, and of the whole Gentile world.

43. Went into Galilee.] Bishop Pearce thinks that some words have been lost from the end of this verse, which may be supplied thus: Went into Galilee, but not to Nazareth; for Jesus himself had declared, &c. in Matt. xiii. 57. Mark vi. 4. and Luke iv. 24. which are the only texts where Jesus is said to have declared this, he always speaks of Nazareth only, and not of Galilee in general, a country where he lived for the most part, and wrought the greatest number of his miracles, and made the most converts.

44. Jesus himself testified.] He bore testimony to the general truth of the following proverb. See on Matt. xiii. 57.

45. The Galileans received him.] They received him as the promised Messiah, because of the miracles which they had seen him perform at Jerusalem, at the pass-over. See chap. ii. 23.

46. Where he made the water wine.] See the notes on chap. ii. 1, &c. Cana was on the road from Nazareth to Capernaum, and the sea of Tiberias.

A certain nobleman.] An officer of the king's court: for this is the meaning of the original word βασιλικός, which the Vulgate translates regulus, a little king. This officer belonged 47 When he heard that Jesus was come out of Judea into Galilee, he went down unto him, and besought him that he would come down, and heal his son: for he was at the point of death.

48 Then said Jesus unto him, Except ye see signs and wonders, ye will not believe.

49 The nobleman saith unto him, Sir, come down ere my child die.

50 Jesus saith unto him, Go thy way; thy son liveth. And the man believed the word that Jesus had spoken unto him, and he went his way.

51 And as he was now going down, his servants met him, and told him, saying, Thy son liveth.

52 Then inquired he of them the hour when he began to amend. And they said unto him, Yesterday at the seventh hour the fever left him.

53 So the father knew that it was at the same hour in which Jesus said unto him, Thy son liveth: and himself believed, and his whole house.

54 This is again the second miracle that Jesus did, when he was come out of Judea into Galilee.

to Herod Antipas, who was then tetrarch of Galilee. Jerom calls him Palatius, and says he was an officer of the king's palace. Others think it was Chusa, mentioned Luke viii. 3. and others think it was Manan, spoken of Acts xiii. 1. One of these opinions may be true, but all solid proof is wanting. This officer, whoever he was, appears to have had his ordinary abode at Capernaum, and hearing that Christ was at Cana, he came express from Capernaum thither, to entreat him to heal his child.

48. Except ye see signs and wonders, &c.] Our Lord does not tell this man that he had no faith, but that he had not enough. If he had had none, he would not have come from Capernaum to Cana, to beg him to heal his son. If he had had enough, he would have been contented with recommending his son to our Lord, without entreating him to go to Capernaum to heal him; which intimates that he did not believe our Lord could do it at a distance. But the words are not addressed to the nobleman alone, but to all the Galilean Jews in general; for our Lord uses the plural number, which he never does when addressing an individual. These people differed widely from the people of Sychar: they had neither a love of truth, nor simplicity of heart; and would not believe any thing from heaven, unless forced on their minds by the most striking miracles. They were favoured with the ministry of John Baptist; but as that was not accompanied with miracles, it was not generally credited. They require the miracles of Christ, in order that they may credit the advent of the Messiah. There are many like these Galileans still in the world: they deny that God can have any influence among men; and as to the operations of the Holy Spirit, they in the genuine Galilean spirit, boldly assert, that they will not credit any man who professes to be made a partaker of them, unless he work a miracle in proof of his pretensions! These people should know, that the grace of working miracles was very different from that by which a man is saved; and that the former might exist even in the most astonishing measure, where the latter did not. See 1 Cor. xiii. 2.

49. Sir, come down, &c.] He did not think our Lord could cure him without being present: and seems here to feel himself hurt, because our Lord did not come at his first entreaty. It is difficult for a proud man, or a man in office, to humble himself, or to trust even God Almighty with proper respect. The spirit of this man seems not much unlike to that of Naaman the Syrian, 2 Kings v. 11.

50. Go thy way; thy son liveth.] Had our Lord gone with him as he wished, his unbelief could not have been fully removed; as he would have still thought that our Lord's power could not reach from Cana to Capernaum: in order to destroy his unbelief at once, and bring him into the fulness of the faith of his supreme power, he cures him, being apparently absent, by that energy, through which he fills both the heavens and the earth. Here it may be observed, our blessed Lord did what this man requested him to do, but not in the way in which he wished it to be done. God will save all to the uttermost who call upon him, but not in the way in which they may desire. Eternal life is the free gift of God, and he has a right to give it as he pleases: and he always gives his gifts in that way, in which his glory is best promoted, and our eternal interest secured.

The man believed the word.] And yet it appears that he had suspended his faith upon a certain condition; "If I find on my return that my son is healed, I will believe that Jesus is the Messiah."

52. Then inquired he of them the hour.] The servants, overjoyed to find their master's son so suddenly restored, set off to meet him, that they might impart to him tidings which they knew would be so very agreeable: and he, intent on having his faith settled, began immediately to inquire what time it was when the fever left him, to see whether his cure was the effect of some natural cause, or whether it was done by the power of Christ.

Yesterday at the seventh hour.] At the time we would call one o'clock. Dr. Macknight thinks the Roman hour is intended, i. e. seven o'clock in the evening; and this he thinks is the reason why our Lord did not accompany the nobleman; for as Cana was a day's journey from Capernaum, had our Lord gone at that hour, he must have travelled in the night, from which it might have been inferred, that he could not cure the child without being personally present. Harmony, vol. 1. p. 82.

63. So the father knew] He had the fullest proof that his son's cure was supernatural, and that it was wrought by the Lord Jesus.

Himself believed, and his whole house.] He and his whole family became true converts to the doctrine of the manifested Messiah. The whole family, impressed with the great kindness of God, in sending health to the child, were the more easily led to believe in the Lord Jesus. The sickness of the child became the mean of salvation to all the household. They no doubt thought, at first, that God was dealing hardly with them, when threatening to remove the child; but now they see that in very faithfulness God had afflicted them. Let us learn never to murmur against God, or think that he does not act kindly towards us. His wisdom cannot permit him to err; his goodness will not suffer him to do any thing to his creatures, but what may be subservient to their best interests. By providential occurrences, apparently the most adverse, he may be securing our eternal salvation.

There is an account in Beracoth, fol. 34. very similar to this of the evangelist; and very possibly stolen from this holy source. "When the son of Rab. Gamaliel fell sick, he sent two of his disciples to R. Chanina, that he would pray to God for him. And when he had seen them, he went on the roof of his house and prayed for him. He then came down and said to them, His fever has departed from him. They said unto him, Art thou a prophet? He answered, I am neither a prophet, nor the son of a prophet; but when I can recite my prayers readily, I know I shall be heard. They then wrote down the hour, and when they returned to R. Gamaliel, he said unto them, Ye have fulfilled your ministry—in respect to my son, all is complete. In that hour the fever, (מִן חֹמָה, וְרֹפֵאָה), left him, and he desired water to drink." Schoettgen very properly remarks, ovum ovo non majus simile est, alique hæc fabula narrationi evangelicæ, "one egg is not more like to another, than this fable to the evangelical narration."

54. This—second miracle] The first miracle which Christ performed was in this same city of Cana, just after his baptism: and this second took place after his arrival here from Jerusalem; whence we have seen he was driven by the persecution raised against him by the scribes and Pharisees. By construing the word καὶ, again, with ἐλθὼν, he came, that confusion which is evident in the common version is entirely removed. Bishop Pearce says, "It seems probable to me, that John, when he wrote this verse, either joined the word καὶ to ἐλθὼν, as he had done in verse 46, or meant that it should be so joined in the construction." John does not mention here the miracles which our Lord did at Capernaum on his first journey, chap. ii. 11. nor those which he did at Jerusalem on the feast of the pass-over. See chap. ii. 12. Luke iv. 23.

There are several particulars in the preceding history of the Samaritan woman, which confirm the doctrine of a particular providence, and show how God manages the most common occurrences, in order to accomplish the designs of his mercy and love.

The Gospel must be preached to the Samaritans: this is God's purpose; and in this case, the wrath of man is caused to praise him.

1. Christ finds it necessary to quit Judea because of the persecution raised up against him by the scribes and Pharisees, ver. 1—3. How worthy of admiration is that divine providence that presses every thing into the accomplishment of its own designs!—The doctors of Jerusalem oblige the Saviour to leave their city; and a simple woman persuades all the inhabitants of a Samaritan city to open their gates and their hearts, and entreat the Redeemer of the world to enter in.

2. Christ must pass through Samaria, ver. 4. He was so situated in Judea, that he could not reach Galilee, except through Samaria, without taking a large circuit, which the necessities of the present case could not admit. Thus, while he appears to fly only from the fury of his persecutors, he is in reality seeking the lost, and fully accomplishing the work he came into the world to perform.

3. Christ being weary, finds it necessary to sit down to rest himself by Jacob's well, ver. 5, 6. spent with fatigue and hunger. How energetic was this fatigue! how active was this rest! Nothing can happen to Christ in vain—nothing can turn him out of the way of his mercy—his great work he continues to carry on without the smallest interruption, where we would have thought it must have been necessarily suspended.

4. The disciples are obliged to go to the city to buy victuals, ver. 8. and Jesus was left alone—even this circumstance was not only favourable to the conversion of the Samaritan woman, but even essentially necessary, as without it she could not have had that opportunity of conversing freely with our Lord; nor would it have been proper for him to have made that discovery of himself in their presence, which we find he did, during their absence. See the note of ver. 26.

5. The Samaritan woman is induced at that very time to go and draw water. Even so small a circumstance as this, becomes a necessary part in the economy of her salvation. There is not a circumstance in our life—not an occurrence in our business, but God will make subservient to our salvation, if we have a simple heart and a teachable spirit. The steps of a good man especially, are ordered of the Lord: and while he acknowledges his Maker in all his ways, he will direct all his steps. A proper consideration of this great truth, will produce both confidence and humility.

6. But this blessed doctrine may be abused; for some may suppose that God always acts according to a fixed necessity, through which, whatsoever was, is, or will be, has had its existence, mode of being, operation, and direction, according to predetermined irrevocable laws. This system makes God himself the necessary agent of eternal fate, as it supposes him to be constantly employed in doing what eternal necessity obliges him to perform; and thus his infinite freedom is bounded or acted upon by uncontrollable necessity. Perdition is not further from glory, than necessitating decrees are from a particular and gracious providence, by which the means of salvation are placed within the reach of every human being.

CHAPTER V.

The man who had been diseased thirty-eight years, healed on the Sabbath day, 1—9. The Jews cavil, persecute Christ, and seek to kill him because he had done this cure on the Sabbath, 10—16. Our Lord vindicates his conduct, and shows, from the testimony of the Father, the Scriptures, John the Baptist, and his own works, that he came from God, to be the light and salvation of the world, 17—39. He reproves the Jews for their obstinacy, 40. hatred to God, 41, 42, pride, 43, 44, and disbelief of their own law, 45—47. [A. M. 4031. A. D. 27. An. Olymp. CCL. 3.]

AFTER this there was a feast of the Jews; and Jesus went up to Jerusalem.

2 Now there is at Jerusalem <sup>b</sup> by the sheep <sup>a</sup> market, a pool, which is called in the Hebrew tongue Bethesda, having five porches.

3 In these lay a great multitude of impotent folk, of blind, halt, withered, waiting for the moving of the water.

<sup>a</sup> Lev. 23. 2. Deut. 16. 1. Ch. 2. 12.—<sup>b</sup> Neh. 3. 1. & 12. 38.—<sup>c</sup> Or, gate.

NOTES.—Verse 1. A feast] This is generally supposed, by the best critics, to have been the feast of the pass-over, which was the most eminent feast among the Jews. In several excellent MSS. the article is added, ἡ τῶν, the feast, the grand, the principal festival. Petavius supposes that the feast of Purim, or lots, is here meant; and one MS. reads ἡ ἐκπορεύουσα, the feast of Tabernacles. Several of the primitive fathers believe pentecost to be intended; and they are followed by many of the moderns, because in ch. vii. 2 mention is made of the feast of Tabernacles, which followed pentecost, and was about the latter end of our September; and in chap. x. 22 mention is made of the feast of Dedication, which was held about the latter end of November. See Bishop Pearce. See chap. x. 22.

Calmet however argues, that there is no other feast with which all the circumstances marked here so well agree, as with the pass-over: and Bp. Newcome, who is of Calmet's opinion, thinks Bp. Pearce's argument concerning the succession of the feasts, to be inconclusive; because it is assumed, not proved, that the three feasts which he mentions above must have happened in the same year. See much on 4 For an angel went down at a certain season into the pool, and troubled the water: whosoever then first after the troubling of the water, stepped in, was made whole of whatsoever disease he had.

5 And a certain man was there, which had an infirmity thirty and eight years.

6 When Jesus saw him lie, and knew that he had been now the same subject in Bp. Newcome's notes to his harmony, p. 15, &c.

<sup>a</sup> Matt. 28. 2. 1 Cor. 9. 24.—<sup>b</sup> Lam. 3. 39. Hab. 2. 3. Luke 8. 43.

Lightfoot has observed, that the other evangelists speak very sparingly of our Lord's acts in Judea. They mention nothing of the pass-overs from our Lord's baptism till his death, excepting the very last: but John points at them all. The first he speaks of, chap. ii. 13. the third, chap. vi. 4. the fourth, chap. xiii. 1. and the second in this place: for although he does not call it the pass-over, but a feast in general; yet the circumstances agree best with this feast: and our Lord's words, chap. iv. 35. seem to cast light on this subject. See the note there.

2. There is] This is thought by some to be a proof that John wrote his Gospel before the destruction of Jerusalem; and that the pool and its porticoes were still remaining. Though there can be little doubt, that Jerusalem was destroyed many years before John wrote, yet this does not necessarily imply, that the pool and its porticoes must have been destroyed too. It, or something in its place, is shown to travellers to the present day. See Maundrell's Jour. p. 103. But instead of est, is, both the Syriac, all the Arabic, Persic, Armenian, and a long time in that case, he saith unto him, Wilt thou be made whole ?

7 The impotent man answered him, Sir, I have no man, when the water is troubled, to put me into the pool : but while I am coming, another steppeth down before me.

8 Jesus saith unto him, Rise, take up thy bed, and walk.

[Mat. 9. 6. Mark 2. 11. Luke 5. 24. — Ch. 8. 14. — H. Ps. 10. 19. Neh. 13. 19. Jer.

Nonsensu, read en was : which is to me some proof that it did not exist when these versions were made ; and that the pool which is shown now is not the original.

By the sheep market] Rather gate ; see Neh. iii. 1, 32. xii. 39. This was in all probability the gate through which the sheep were brought, which were offered in sacrifice in the temple.

A pool] Bp. Pearce thinks the word κολυμβήθρα should be translated bath, and that this place was built for the purpose of washing and circumcising in. He observes that κολυβήθρα signifies basin, in Acts xxvii. 43. In proof of this, he cites three of the old Italia, which have nataatoria, a bathing or circumcising place.

Bethesda] This word is variously written in the MSS. and Versions: Besatha—Bethsatha—Betsatha—Bizetha—Belsatha—Berseta : and many have Bethaida. But the former reading is the genuine one. Bethaida, or according to the Hebrew ביתחיים Bethesda, signifies literally the house of mercy. It got this name probably from the cures which God mercifully performed there. It is likely the porticoes were built for the more convenient reception of the poor and distressed, who came thither to be healed. It does not appear that any person was obliged to pay man, for what the mercy of God freely gave. Wicked as the Jewish people were, they never thought of levying a tax off the poor and afflicted, for the cures they received in these healing waters. How is it that a well-regulated state, such as that of Great Britain, can ever permit individuals or corporations, to enrich themselves at the expense of God's mercy, manifested in the sanative waters of Bristol, Bath, Buxton, &c. ? Should not the accommodations be raised at the expense of the public, that the poor might enjoy without cost, which they are incapable of defraying, the great blessing which the God of nature has bestowed on such waters ? In most of those places there is a profession that the poor may drink and bathe gratis : but it is little better than a pretence, and the regulations relative to this point, render the whole nearly inefficient. However, some good is done.

3. Bkith, halt, withered.] To these the Codex Bezae, three copies of the Italia, and both the Persic, add καρπαλιτικόν, paralytic ; but they are probably included among the withered.

Waiting for the moving of the water.] This clause, with the whole of the fourth verse, are wanting in some MSS. and Versions, but I think there is no sufficient evidence against their authenticity. Griesbach seems to be of the same opinion ; for though he has marked the whole passage with the notes of doubtfulness, yet he has left it in the text. Some have imagined that the sanative virtue was communicated to the waters by washing in them the entrails of the beasts which were offered in sacrifice ; and that the angel meant no more, than merely a man sent to stir up from the bottom this corrupt sediment, which being distributed through the water, the pores of the person who bathed in it, were penetrated by this matter, and his disorder repelled ! But this is a miserable shift to get rid of the power and goodness of God, built on the merest conjecture, self-contradictions, and every way as unlikely as it is insupportable. It has never yet been satisfactorily proved that the sacrifices were ever washed ; and could even this be proved, who can show that they were washed in the pool of Bethesda ? These waters healed a man in a moment, of what disorder disease he had. Now there is no one cause under heaven that can do this. Had only one kind of disorders been cured here, there might have been some countenance for this deistical conjecture—but this is not the case ; and we are obliged to believe the relation just as it stands, and thus acknowledge the sovereign power and mercy of God ; or take the desperate flight of an infidel, and thus get rid of the passage altogether.

4. Angel] "Of the Lord," is added by AEL, about twenty others, the Ethiopic, Armenian, Slavonic, Valgate, Anglo-Saxon, and six copies of the Italia : Cyri and Ambrose have also this reading. If this reading be genuine, and the authorities which support it are both ancient and respectable, it destroys Dr. Hammond's conjecture, that by the angel, a messenger only, sent from the sanhedrim, is meant, and that these cures were all performed in a natural way.

Those who feel little or none of the work of God in their own hearts, are not willing to allow that he works in others. Many deny the influences of God's Spirit, merely because they never felt them. This is to make any man's experience the rule by which the whole word of God is to be interpreted, and consequently to leave no more divinity in the Bible, than is found in the heart of him who professes to explain it.

Went down.] Καταβαιων, descended. This word seems to imply, that the angel had ceased to descend when John wrote. In the second verse, he spoke of the pool as being still in existence ; and in this verse he intimates that the divine influence ceased from these waters. When it began, we know not ; but it is likely that it continued no longer than till the crucifixion of our Lord. Some think that this never took place be-

9 And immediately the man was made whole, and took up his bed, and walked : and on the same day was the sabbath.

10 The Jews therefore said unto him that was cured, It is the sabbath day : it is not lawful for thee to carry thy bed.

11 He answered them, He that made me whole, the same said unto me, Take up thy bed, and walk.

[Mat. 12. 2. Mark 2. 24. & 3. 4. Luke 6. 2. & 13. 14.

fore, nor after this time. Neither Josephus, Philo, nor any of the Jewish authors, mention this pool ; so that it is very likely that it had not been long celebrated for its healing virtue ; and that nothing of it remained when those authors wrote.

Certain season] This probably refers to the time of the feast, during which only this miraculous virtue lasted. It is not likely that the angel appeared to the people—his descent might be only known by the ebullition caused in the waters. Was not the whole a type of Christ ? See Zech. xiii. 1. He is the true Bethesda, of house of mercy, the fountain opened to the house of David, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, for sin and for uncleanness ; unto which all the diseased may come and find health and life eternal.

5. Had an infirmity thirty and eight years.] St. Chrysostom conjectured that blindness was the infirmity of this person : what it was, the inspired writer does not say—probably it was a palsy : his case was deplorable—he was not able to go into the pool himself, and he had no one to help him ; so that poverty and disease were here connected. The length of the time he had been afflicted, makes the miracle of his cure the greater. There could have been no collusion in this case ; as his affliction had lasted thirty-eight years, it must have been known to multitudes ; therefore he could not be a person prepared for the occasion. All Christ's miracles have been wrought in such a way, and on such persons and occasions, as absolutely to preclude all possibility of the suspicion of imposture.

6. Wilt thou be made whole ?] Christ, by asking this question, designed to excite in this person, faith, hope, and a greater desire of being healed. He wished him to reflect on his miserable state, that he might be the better prepared to receive a cure, and to value it when it came. Addresses of this kind are always proper from the preachers of the Gospel, that the hearts, as well of hardened, as of desponding sinners, may be stirred up to desire and expect salvation. Do you wish to be healed ? Do you know that you are under the power of a most inveterate and dangerous disease ? If so, there is a remedy—have immediate recourse to the Physician. Questions of this kind are frequently asked in the secret of our souls, by the inspirations of God's Spirit. Happy those who pay attention to them, and give right answers.

7. Sir, I have no man] Nai, Kopia—"Yes, Sir ; but I have no man :"—this is the reading of C'GH, fourteen others, both the Syriac, later Persic, Arabic, and Chrysostom. Reader, be thankful to God for health and outward comforts. When long affliction has been allied to deep poverty, how deplorable is the state !

8. Rise, take up thy bed, and walk.] Jesus speaks here as God. He speaks in no name but his own, and with an authority which belongs to God alone. And what is the consequence ? the man became whole immediately ;—and this sudden restoration to health and strength, was an incontestable proof of the omnipotence of Christ. It has been remarked that our Lord, after having performed a miracle, was accustomed to connect some circumstance with it, which attested its truth. After the miracle of the five loaves, he ordered the fragments to be collected, which were more in quantity than the loaves themselves, though several thousands had been fed. When he changed the water into wine, he ordered some to be taken first to the steward of the feast, that he might taste and bear testimony to its genuineness and excellency. When he cured the lepers, he commanded them to show themselves to the priests, whose business it was to judge of the cure. So here, he judged it necessary, after having cured this infirm man, to order him not only to arise, but to take up his bed, and walk, which sufficiently attested the miracle which he had wrought. God's work is ever known by its excellence and good effects.

9. The same day was the Sabbath.] Mr. Toynard supposes that this miracle was wrought on the 11th of Nisan, the Sabbath before the pass-over, which was celebrated the 14th of Nisan, or 28th of March. But why did our Lord command this man to carry his bed on the Sabbath, as the law prohibited all servile work, and especially the carrying of burthens ? See Exod. xx. 8. Jer. xvii. 21. Neh. xiii. 15. To this it may be answered, 1. The man was a poor man, and if he had left his bed, he might have lost it ; and he could not have conveniently watched it till the next morning. 2. Christ showed by this that he was Lord of the Sabbath : see Matt. xii. 8. 3. This was not contrary to the spirit of the law : the Sabbath was made to honour God in, and this was a public monument of his power and goodness. 4. It was consistent with the wisdom of Christ to do his miracles so, that they might be seen and known by a multitude of people ; and especially in Jerusalem, which was the capital of the country, and the centre of the Jewish religion : and this very circumstance of the healed man carrying his bed on the Sabbath day, must call the attention of many to this matter, and cause the miracle to be more generally known.

12 Then asked they him, What man is that which said unto thee, Take up thy bed, and walk?

13 And he that was healed wist not who it was: for Jesus had conveyed himself away, a multitude being in that place.

14 Afterward Jesus findeth him in the temple, and said unto him, Behold, thou art made whole: sin no more, lest a worse thing come unto thee.

15 The man departed, and told the Jews that it was Jesus which had made him whole.

16 And therefore did the Jews persecute Jesus, and sought to slay him, because he had done these things on the sabbath day.

17 But Jesus answered them, My Father worketh hitherto, and I work.

18 Therefore the Jews sought the more to kill him, because he not only had broken the sabbath, but said also that God was his Father, making himself equal with God.

19 Then answered Jesus, and said unto them, Verily, verily,

11. He that made me whole, &c.] The poor man reasoned conclusively.—He who could work such a miracle, must be at least the best of men: now a good man will neither do evil himself, nor command others to do it: but he who cured me, ordered me to carry my bed, therefore there can be no evil in it.

13. Jesus had conveyed himself away] Or, had withdrawn himself. And this he might easily do, as there was a crowd in the place. Some think the words indicate, that Jesus withdrew on seeing a multitude in the place, i. e. raising a tumult, because of the man's carrying his bed. See the margin. He had not yet finished his work, and would not expose himself to the envy and malice of the Jewish rulers.

14. Jesus findeth him in the temple] The man being restored, (though he did not as yet know distinctly who Christ was) went to the temple to return thanks to God for his cure. Whether this was on the same day, or some other, does not distinctly appear: It was probably the same day, after he had carried home his couch. How many, when they are made well, forget the hand that has healed them! and instead of gratitude and obedience to God, use their renewed health and strength in the service of sin! Those who make this use of God's mercies, may consider their restoration as a respite only from perdition.

Sin no more, lest a worse thing come unto thee.] Our Lord, intending to discover to this man who he was, gave him two proofs of the perfection of his knowledge. 1. He showed him that he knew the secret of the past—sin no more: thereby intimating, that his former sins were the cause of his long affliction. 2. He showed him that he knew the future—lest a worse thing come unto thee: if thy iniquity be repeated, thy punishment will be increased.

15. The man departed, and told the Jews] He did not say it was Jesus who had ordered him to carry his bed; but it was Jesus who had cured him: and he left them to draw the inference, viz. That this Jesus must be the miraculous power of God.

16. And sought to slay him] This clause is omitted by BCDL, some others, and several ancient Versions. Griesbach has left it out of the text; and Professor White says certissimè delenda: but it does not appear to me that it should be omitted. However, it was true of the Jews, whether the words were originally in the evangelist, or not. For what cause did these persons seek to destroy our Lord? Because he had healed a poor man, who had been diseased thirty-eight years, and ordered him to carry home the couch on which he lay! How implacable must their malice have been! the spirit of religious persecution has always been the most fell and dangerous of all on this side perdition. Every other disposition appears to have its moderator; but this is wholly abandoned to the guidance of Satan, and has for its objects the men who know the truth, and who live to the glory of their God, and for the benefit of mankind. How strange, that such should ever be objects of malice and hatred! But the Satanic nature in fallen man is ever opposed to whatever comes from God.

17. My Father worketh hitherto, and I work] Or, As my Father worketh until now, &c. &c.; being understood, God created the world in six days—on the seventh he rested from all creating acts; and set it apart to be an everlasting memorial of his work. But though he rested from creating, he never ceased from preserving and governing that which he had formed—in this respect, he can keep no Sabbath: for nothing can continue to exist, or answer the end proposed by the divine wisdom and goodness, without the continual energy of God. So I work—I am constantly employed in the same way, governing and supporting all things, comforting the wretched, and saving the lost; and to me, in this respect, there is no Sabbath.

18. Making himself equal with God.] This the Jews understood from the preceding verse: nor did they take a wrong meaning out of our Lord's words: for he plainly stated, that whatever was the Father's work, his was the same: thus showing that He and the Father were ONE. They had now found out two pretences to take away his life: one was that he had broken the Sabbath—plus, dissolved, as they pretended, the obligation of keeping it holy. The other was, that he

I say unto you, The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise.

20 For the Father loveth the Son, and showeth him all things that himself doeth; and he will show him greater works than these, that ye may marvel.

21 For as the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them: so even so the Son quickeneth whom he will.

22 For the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son:

23 That all men should honour the Son, even as they honour the Father. He that honoureth not the Son, honoureth not the Father which hath sent him.

24 Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life.

25 Greater works than these] Two of these he immediately mentions: Raising the dead, ver. 21. and judging the world, ver. 22.

That ye may marvel] Or, So as to make you wonder. Our Lord sometimes speaks of himself as God, and sometimes as the Ambassador of God. As he had a human and divine nature, this distinction was essentially necessary. Many errors have originated from want of attention to this circumstance.

21. As the father raiseth up the dead] This he did in the case of the widow's son at Nain, 1 Kings xviii. 22. by the ministry of the prophet Elijah. And again, in the case of the Shunammite's son, 2 Kings iv. 32—35. by the ministry of the prophet Elisha.

The Son quickeneth whom he will.] He raiseth from death to life whomsoever he pleases. So he did, for he raised the ruler's daughter, Mark v. 35—42. the widow's son at Nain, Luke vii. 11—15. and Lazarus, at Bethany, John xi. 14—44. Whom he will. Here our Lord points out his sovereign power and independence; he gives life according to his own will, not being obliged to supplicate for the power by which it was done, as the prophets did; his own will being absolute and sufficient in every case.

22. The Father judgeth no man] This confirms what he had said before, ver. 17, 19, that the Father acts not without the Son, nor the Son without the Father; their acts are common, their power equal.

23. That all men should honour the Son, &c.] If then the Son is to be honoured, even as the Father is honoured, then the Son must be God, as receiving that worship which belongs to God alone. To worship any creature is idolatry; Christ is to be honoured even as the Father is honoured, therefore Christ is not a creature; and if not a creature, consequently the Creator. See chap. i. 3.

He that honoureth not the Son] God will not receive that man's adoration who refuses to honour Jesus, even as he honours him. The Jews expected the Messiah as a great and powerful Prince, but they never thought of a person coming in that character, enrobed with all the attributes of Godhead. To lead them off from this error, our Lord spoke the words recorded in these verses.

24. He that heareth my word] My doctrine—and believeth on him that sent me—he who credits my divine mission, that I am come to give light and life to the world by my doctrine and death—hath eternal life—the seed of this life is sown in his heart the moment he believes; and shall not come into condemnation: is again, into judgment—that which will speedily come on this unbelieving race; and that which shall overwhelm the wicked in the great day.

But is passed from death unto life.] Μεταβίβωσκ, has changed his country, or place of abode. Death is the country where every Christless soul lives. The man who knows not God, lives a dying life, or a living death—but he who believes in the Son of God, passes over from the empire of death to the empire of life. Reader! thou wast born in death: hast thou yet changed the place of thy natural residence? Remember, that to live in sin, is to live in death; and those who live and die thus, shall die eternally.

25. The dead shall hear the voice] Three kinds of death are mentioned in the Scriptures: natural, spiritual, and eternal. The first consists in a separation of the body and soul. The

Or from the multitude that was—k Mat. 12:25 Ch. 9:11—14 Ch. 9:4 & 14: 10—17 Ch. 7: 19—21 Ch. 9:23 Ch. 10:25—26—27 Ver. 30. Ch. 8:29 & 9:4 & 12: 20 & 14. 7.—p Mat. 3: 17 Ch. 3: 32 Pat. 1: 17.

q Luke 7: 14 & 2: 51. Ch. 11: 25. 43.—r Mat. 11:27. & 28: 18. Ver. 27 Ch. 3: 22 & 17: 2. Acts 17: 31. 1 Pet. 4: 1.—s 1 John 2: 23.—t Ch. 2: 16, 18. & 4: 40. G. & S. R. & 20: 31.—u 1 John 3: 14.

25 Verily, verily, I say unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear shall live.

26 For as the Father hath life in himself; so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself; and the Father hath given him authority to execute judgment also, because he is the Son of man.

27 Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice.

28 And shall come forth: they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation.

29 I can of mine own self do nothing: as I hear, I judge: and my judgment is just; because I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me.

30 If I bear witness of myself, my witness is not true.

31 There is another that beareth witness of me; and I know that the witness which he beareth of me is true.

32 Ye sent unto John, and he bare witness unto the truth.

33 For all that received his testimony, they bore witness that the Son of God was come in the flesh. And they that did not receive his testimony, they were accounted blasphemers against God, because they had not received John's testimony.

second in separation of God and the soul. The third in the separation of body and soul from God, in the other world. Answerable to these three kinds of death, there is a threefold life: natural life, which consists in the union of the soul and body; Spiritual life, which consists in the union of God and the soul, by faith and love. Eternal life, which consists in the communion of the body and soul with God, by holiness, in the realms of bliss. Of the dead, our Lord says, the hour is coming, and now is, when they shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and live. The hour is coming, when all that sleep in the dust shall awake at the voice of the Son of man, and come to judgment: for he giveth life to the dead, ver. 21, 28, 29. Again, the hour is coming, when some of those who have died a natural death, shall hear the voice of the Son of God and live again here. It is likely that our Lord had not as yet raised any from the dead; and he refers to those whom he intended to raise: see on ver. 21. Lastly, the hour now is, when many who are dead in trespasses and sins, shall hear the voice (the word) of the Son of God, believe and receive spiritual life, through him.

26. Hath he given to the Son to have life, &c.] Here our Lord speaks of himself in his character of Messiah or saviour of God.

27. Because he is the Son of man.] Because he is the Messiah; for in this sense the phrase, the Son of man, is often to be understood. But some join this to the next verse, thus:—Marvel not at this, because he is the Son of man.

28. Marvel not at this] I think it quite necessary to follow here, as noted above, the punctuation of both the Syriac, the Armenian, Chrysostom, Damascenus, Theophylact, Euthymius, and others; which is found also in some very good MSS. Theophylact says that the common method of reading this, which he highly objects to, was the invention of Paul of Samosata. In ver. 26 and 27, our Lord, speaking of himself as an envoy of God, said, the Father had given him to have life in himself; so that like any of the ancient prophets, he could vivify others; and that he had given him authority to execute judgment, probably referring to that judgment which he was shortly to execute on this unbelieving nation; and apparently, in direct reference to Dan. vii. 13. Behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds, &c. a place which the Jews expound of the promised Messiah. In this verse, he anticipates an objection, as if they had said: "This cannot be: thou art a man—thou wast born among us." Our Lord answers: Don't marvel at this, because I am a man—for greater things than these shall be done by me: he who now addresses you, though disguised under the form of a man, shall appear in the great day, to be the Judge of quick and dead; by his almighty power, he shall raise all the dead; and by his unerring wisdom and justice, shall adjudge the wicked to hell, and the righteous to heaven. The first sense, however, of this passage, appears to seem the most probable; though they both amount nearly to the same meaning.

29. I can of mine own self do nothing.] Because of my intimate union with God. See on ver. 19.

I seek not mine own will] I do not, I cannot attempt to do any thing without God. This, that is, the Son of man, the human nature which is the temple of my divinity, chap. i. 14, is perfectly subject to the Deity that dwells in it. In this respect our blessed Lord is the perfect pattern of all his followers. In every thing their wills should submit to the will of their heavenly Father. Nothing is more common than to hear people say, I will do it because I choose. He who has no better reason to give for his conduct than his own will, shall in the end have the same reason to give for his eternal destruction. "I followed my own will, in opposition to the will of God, and now I am plunged in the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone."

Reader, God hath sent thee also to do his will.—his will is, that thou shouldst abandon thy sins, and believe on the Lord Jesus. Hast thou yet done it?

31. If I bear witness] If I had no proof to bring of my being the Messiah, and equal to God, common sense would direct you to reject my testimony: but the mighty power of God, by which I work my miracles, sufficiently attest that my pretensions are well founded.

34 But I receive not testimony from man: but these things I say, that ye might be saved.

35 He was a burning and a shining light: and ye were willing for a season to rejoice in his light.

36 But I have greater witness than that of John: for the works which the Father hath given me to finish, the same works that I do, bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me.

37 And the Father himself, which hath sent me, hath borne witness of me. I have neither heard his voice at any time, nor seen his shape.

38 And ye have not his word abiding in you: for whom he hath sent, him ye believe not.

39 Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me.

40 And ye will not come to me, that ye might have life.

41 For I receive not honour from men.

42 But I know you, that ye have not the love of God in you.

43 I am come in my Father's name, and ye receive me not: if another shall come in his own name, him ye will receive.

17:20 Gen. 36. Mark 6:30.—1 John 9:9.—1 Ch. 22 & 10:25.—1 K. 22:17 & 17: Ch. 5:21.—1 Tim. 4:12. Ch. 1:16. 1 Tim. 1:7. John 1:14. Gal. 3:20. & 4:16. Luke 16:29. Ver. 40. Acts 17:11.—on Deut. 15:15, 16. Luke 24:27. Ch. 1:45.—o Ch. 1:11 & 3:15.—p Ver. 24. 1 Thess. 2:6.

Bishop Pearce gives a different turn to this verse, by translating it interrogatively, thus: "If I only bear witness of myself, is not my witness true? I do, in it, on that account, not true? In chap. vii. 14, he says, Though I bear record of myself, yet my record is true. And in ver. 18, he says, I am one that bear witness of myself?"

32. There is another.] God the Father, who, by his Spirit in your prophets, described my person, office, and miracles. You read these Scriptures, and you cannot help seeing that they testify of me;—no person ever did answer the description there given, but myself; and I answer to that description in the fullest sense of the word. See ver. 39.

And I know.] Instead of oida, I know, oida, ye know, in the reading of the Codex Bezae, Armenian, and two of the Bala. Ye believe the Scriptures to be of God, and that he cannot lie: and yet ye will not believe in me, though these Scriptures have so clearly foretold and described me! It is not one of the least evils attending unbelief, that it acts not only in opposition to God, but it also acts inconsistently with itself. It receives the Scriptures in bulk, and acknowledges them to have come through divine inspiration; and yet believes no part separately. With it the whole is true, but no part is true! The very unreasonableness of this conduct, shows the principle to have come from beneath, were there no other evidences against it.

33. Ye sent unto John.] I am not without human testimony of the most respectable kind.—Ye sent to John, and he bare witness. There are several circumstances in John's character which render his testimony unexceptionable. 1. He is consulted by the very enemies of Christ, as a very holy and extraordinary man. 2. He is perfectly free from all self-interest, having declined making the least advantage by his own reputation. 3. He is sincere, undaunted, and so averse from all kinds of flattery, that he reproves Herod at the hazard of his liberty and life. 4. He was so far from being solicited by Christ to give his testimony, that he had not even seen him, when he gave it. See chap. i. 19—24.

34. But I receive not testimony from man [only.] I have no need of John's testimony: the works that I do, bear sufficient testimony to me, ver. 36.

But these things I say, &c.] You believe John to be a prophet—a prophet cannot lie: he bore testimony that I am the lamb of God, that beareth away the sin of the world, chap. i. 29, therefore that ye may be saved by believing in me as such, I have appealed to John's testimony.

35. He was a burning and a shining light.] Ησ δ λυχνος ε αυτοματος και φαεινος, should be translated, He was a burning and a shining lamp. He was not ε φαεινος, nor κοσμος, the light of the world, i. e. the sun: but he was ο λυχνος, a lamp, to give a clear and steady light till the sun should arise. It is supposed that John had been cast into prison about four months before this time. See the note on chap. iv. 25. As his light continued no longer to shine, our Lord says, he was.

The expression of lamp, our Lord took from the ordinary custom of the Jews, who termed their eminent doctors, the lamps of Israel. A lighted candle is a proper emblem of a minister of God; and alteri serviens consumor.—"In serving others, I myself destroy:"—a proper motto. There are few who preach the Gospel faithfully that do not lose their lives by it. Burning may refer to the zeal with which John executed his message; and shining may refer to the clearness of the testimony which he bore concerning Christ. Only to shine, is but vanity; and to burn without shining, will never edify the church of God. Some shine, and some burn, but few both shine and burn; and many there are who are denominated pastors, who neither shine nor burn. He who wishes to save souls, must both burn and shine: the clear light of the knowledge of the sacred records must fill his understanding; and the holy flame of loving zeal must occupy his heart. Zeal without knowledge is continually blundering; and knowledge without zeal makes no converts to Christ.

For a season.] The time between his beginning to preach and his being cast into prison.

To rejoice] Αγαλλισθησαι, to jump for joy, as we would 44 How can ye believe, which receive honour one of another, and seek not the honour that cometh from God only?

 45 Do not think that I will accuse you to the Father: there is one that accuseth you, even Moses, in whom ye trust.

q Ch. 12. 63.—r Rom. 2. 29.—s Rom. 2. 12.—t Gen. 3. 15 & 12. 3. & 18. 18.

express it. They were exceedingly rejoiced to hear that the Messiah was come, because they expected him to deliver them out of the hands of the Romans: but when spiritual deliverance, of infinitely greater moment, was preached to them, they rejected both it, and the light which made it manifest.

36. But I have greater witness] However deplete the judgment of such a man as John may be, who was the lamp of Israel, a miracle of grace, filled with the spirit of Elijah, and more than any prophet, because he pointed out, not the Messiah who was to come, but the Messiah who was already come; nevertheless, I am not obliged to depend on his testimony alone; for I have a greater one; that of Him whom you acknowledge to be your God. And how do I prove that this God bears testimony to me? By my works: these miracles, which attest my mission, and prove by themselves, that nothing less than unlimited power and boundless love could ever produce them. By my word only, I have perfectly and instantly healed a man who was diseased thirty and eight years. Ye see the miracle—the man is before you whole and sound. Why then do ye not believe in my mission, that ye may embrace my doctrine, and be saved?

37. The Father himself—hath borne witness] That is, by his prophets.

Ye have neither heard his voice] I make these words, with Bp. Pearce, a parenthesis: the sense is—"Not that my Father ever appeared visibly or spake audibly to any of you; but he did it by the mouths of his prophets." Lately, however, he had added to their testimony his own voice from heaven, on the day of Christ's baptism. See Matt. iii. 17.

38. Ye have not his word abiding in you] Though ye believe the Scriptures to be of God, yet ye do not let them take hold of your hearts—his word is in your mouth, but not in your mind. What a miserable lot! to read the Scriptures as the true sayings of God, and yet to get no salvation from them! Thy word, says David, (Psal. cxix. 11.) have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee. This, these Jews had not done. Reader, hast thou?

39. Search the Scriptures] Eperwars ras yrafas. This should be translated, not in the imperative, but in the indicative mood—Thus, Ye search the Scriptures diligently. That these words are commonly read in the imperative mood is sufficiently known; but this reading can never accord well with the following verse, nor can the force and energy of the words be perceived by this version. The rabbins strongly recommend the study of the Scriptures. The Talmud, Tract Shabbath, fol. 30. brings in God thus addressing David: "I am better pleased with one day in which thou sittest and studiest the Law, than I shall be with a thousand sacrifices which thy son Solomon shall offer upon my altar." Perhaps the Scriptures were never more diligently searched than at that very time: first, because they were in expectation of the immediate appearing of the Messiah; secondly, because they wished to find out allegories in them, (see Philo); and thirdly, because they found these Scriptures to contain the promise of an eternal life. He, said they, who studies daily in the Law, is worthy to have a portion in the world to come, Sohar. Genes. fol. 31. Hence we may infer, 1st. That the Jews had the knowledge of a future state before the coming of Christ: and, 2dly. That they got that knowledge from the Old Testament Scriptures.

The word eperwars, which might be translated, Ye search diligently, is very expressive. Homar, li. xviii. l. 321. applies it to a lion deprived of his whelps, who "scours the plains, and traces the footsteps of the man." And in Ovs. xix. l. 436. in dogs tracing their game by the scent of the foot. In the Septuagint, the verb eperwars answers to the Hebrew עָרַפְתָּ חַפְצָאֵךְ to search by uncovering; to עָרַפְתָּ חַפְצָאֵךְ to search minutely, to explore; to עָרַפְתָּ חַפְצָאֵךְ to strip, make bare: and to עָרַפְתָּ חַפְצָאֵךְ to feel, search by feeling. It is compounded of עָרַפְתָּ, I seek, and עָרַפְתָּ, a bed; "and is," says St. Chrysostom, "a metaphor taken from those who dig deep, and search for metals in the bowels of the earth. They look for the bed where the metal lies, and break every clod, and sift and examine the whole, in order to discover the ore." Those who read the verse in the imperative mood, consider it an exhortation to the diligent study of the Sacred Writings. Search; that is, shake and sift them, as the word also signifies; search narrowly, till the true force and meaning of every sentence, yea, of every word and syllable, nay, of every letter and yod therein, be known and understood. Confer place with place; the scope of one place with that of another; things going before with things coming after: compare word with word, letter with letter, and search the whole thoroughly. See Parshuraf, Mintert, and Leigh. Leaving every translation of the present passage out of the question, this is the proper method of reading and examining the Scriptures, so as to become wise unto salvation through them.

40. And ye will not come to me] Though ye thus search the Scriptures, in hopes of finding the Messiah and eternal life in them, yet ye will not come unto me, believe in me, and be my disciples, though so clearly pointed out by them, that 46 For had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed me: for he wrote of me.

 47 But if ye believe not his writings, how shall ye believe my words?

& 32. 18. & 40. 10. Deut. 13. 15, 18. Ch. 1. 63. Acts 22. 22 ye may have that eternal life which can only come through me.

41. I receive not honour from men] I do not stand in need of you or your testimony. I act neither through self-interest, nor vanity. Your salvation can add nothing to me, nor can your destruction injure me: I speak only through my love for your souls, that ye may be saved.

42. But I know you, that ye have not, &c.] Don't say that you oppose me through zeal for God's honour, and love for his name, because I make myself equal to him: no, this is not the case. I know the dispositions of your souls; and I know ye have neither love for his name, nor zeal for his glory. Incurrible ignorance and malicious jealousy actuate your hearts. Ye read the Scriptures, but ye do not enter into their meaning. Had you been as diligent to find out the truth as you have been to find out allegories, false glosses, and something to countenance you in your crimes, you would have known that the Messiah, who is equal with God, must be the Son of man also, and the inheritor of David's throne; and that the very works which I do, are those which the prophets have foretold the Messiah should perform. See Dan vii. 13, 14. Isa. ix. 6, 7. xi. 1—5, 10. xxxv. 4—6.

43. I am come in my Father's name] With all his influence and authority. Among the rabbins, it was essential to a teacher's credit that he should be able to support his doctrine by the authority of some eminent persons who had gone before. Hence the form, Coming in the name of another.

If another shall come in his own name] Having no divine influence, and no other authority than his own, him ye will receive. That this was notoriously the case, may appear from Josephus, Antiq. b. xviii. c. 14. Acts v. 36, 37. Eusebius, Eccl. Hist. b. iv. c. 6. It is by the just judgment of God, that those, who will not believe the truth of God, shall be so given up as to believe the most absurd of lies. For an account of these false Christs, see the notes on Matt. xxiv. 5.

44. How can ye believe which receive honour, &c.] The grand obstacle to the salvation of the scribes and Pharisees, was their pride, vanity, and self-love. They lived on each other's praise. If they had acknowledged Christ as the only teacher, they must have given up the good opinion of the multitude: and they chose rather to lose their souls than to forfeit their reputation among men! This is the ruin of millions. They would be religious, if religion and worldly honour were connected: but as the kingdom of Christ is not of this world, and their hearts and souls are wedded to the earth, they will not accept the salvation which is offered to them on these terms—Deny thyself; take up thy cross, and follow ME. It is no wonder that we never find persons making any progress in religion, who mix with the world, and in any respect regulate their conduct by its anti-christian customs, maxims, and fashions.

From God only?] Or, from the only God—Иако вы не веровате. Two of the ancient Slavonic Versions read, From the only-begotten Son of God.

45. Do not think that I will accuse you] You have accused me with a breach of the Sabbath, which accusation I have demonstrated to be false: I could, in return, accuse you, and substantiate the accusation, with the breach of the whole law; but this I need not do, for Moses, in whom ye trust, accuses you. You read his law, acknowledge you should obey it, and yet break it both in the letter and in the spirit. This Law, therefore, accuses and condemns you. It was a maxim among the Jews, that none could accuse them but Moses; the spirit of which seems to be, that only so pure and enlightened a legislator could find fault with such a noble and excellent people! For notwithstanding their abominations, they supposed themselves the most excellent of mankind!

46. He wrote of me.] For instance, in reciting the prophecy of Jacob, Gen. xlix. 10. The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the gathering of the people be. And in Deut. xviii. 18. I will raise them up a Prophet from among their brethren like unto thee; and I will put my words in his mouth, &c. Confer this with Acts iii. 22. and vii. 37. Besides, Moses pointed out the Messiah in a multitude of symbols and figures, which are found in the history of the patriarchs, the ceremonial laws, and especially in the whole sacrificial system. All these were well defined, though shadowy representations of the birth, life, sufferings, death, and resurrection of the Saviour of the world. Add to this, Moses has given you certain marks to distinguish the false from the true prophet. Deut. xiii. 1—3. xviii. 22. which, if you apply to me, you will find that I am not a false, but a true Prophet of the Most High God.

47. But if ye believe not his writings, &c.] If you say that you do not believe his writings, you draw not those conclusions from them which their very letters, as well as their spirit, authorizes you to draw, how shall ye believe my words, against which ye have taken up the most ungrounded prejudice! It is no wonder that we find the Jews still in the gall of bitterness, and bond of iniquity: as they believe not Moses and the Prophecy in reference to the Messiah, it is no marvel that they reject Christ and the apostles. Till they see and acknowledge from the law and the prophets that Christ must have come, they will never believe the Gospel. St. Paul says, 2 Cor. iii. 15. that even until this day, when Moses (i. e. the law) is read, the veil is upon their hearts;—so that they see not to the end of that which is abolished: ver. 13. Nor will this veil be taken away, till they turn from worldly gain and atheism (which appears to be their general system) to the Lord; ver. 16. and then the light of the glory of God shall shine on them in the face (through the mediation and merits) of Jesus Christ.

It appears that this discourse of our Lord had effectually confounded these Jews, for they went away without replying—a manifest proof they had nothing to say.

1. In all periods of their history, the Jews were both an incredulous and disobedient people: perhaps it was on this ground that God first chose them to be keepers of his testimonies; for had they not had the most incontrovertible proofs that God did speak, they would neither have credited, nor preserved his oracles. Their incredulity is, therefore, no mean proof of the divine authority of the law and the prophets. The apostles, who were all Jews, partook deeply of the same spirit, as various places in the Gospel prove; and had not they had the fullest evidence of the divinity of their Master, they would not have believed, much less have sealed the truth with their blood. Thus their incredulity is a strong proof of the authenticity of the Gospel.

2. When a man, through prejudice, bigotry, or malevolence, is determined to disbelieve, both evidence and demonstration are lost upon him; he is incapable of conviction, because he is determined not to yield. This was, this is the case with the Jews—there are facts before their eyes sufficient to convince and confound them; but they have made a covenant with unbelief, and therefore they continue blind, ignorant, and wicked; obstinately closing their eyes against the light, and thus the wrath of God is coming upon them to the very utmost. But shall not a rebellious and wicked Christian be judged worthy of more punishment? certainly: for he professes to believe that truth which is able to make him wise unto salvation, by faith in Jesus Christ. Reader, it is an awful thing to trifle with the Gospel; the God of it is pure, jealous, and holy. Come unto him, and implore forgiveness of thy past sins, that thou mayest have eternal life.

CHAPTER VI.

Jesus passes the sea of Tiberias, and a great multitude follow him, 1—4. He feeds five thousand with five loaves and two fishes, 5—13. They acknowledge him to be the prophet that should come into the world, 14. They purpose to force him to become their king; and he withdraws from the multitude, 15. The disciples take ship and go towards Capernaum, and are overtaken with a storm, 17, 18. Christ comes to them walking upon the water, 19—21. The people take boats and follow him, 22—24. He reproves their fleshly motives, 25—27. They profess a desire to be instructed, 28. Christ preaches to them, and shows them that he is the bread of life, and that they who reject him are without excuse, 29—40. They are offended, and cavil, 41, 42. He asserts and illustrates his foregoing discourse, 43—61. They again cavil, and Christ gives further explanations, 62—69. Several of the disciples are stumbled at his assertion, that unless they ate his flesh and drank his blood they could not have life, 60. He shows them that his words are to be spiritually understood, 61—66. Several of them withdraw from him, 66. He questions the twelve, whether they also were disposed to forsake him, and Peter answers for the whole, 67—69. Christ exposes the perfidy of Judas, 70, 71. [A. M. 4032. A. D. 28. An. Olymp. CCL. 4.]

AFTER these things Jesus went over the sea of Galilee, which is the sea of Tiberias.

2 And a great multitude followed him, because they saw his miracles which he did on them that were diseased.

3 And Jesus went up into a mountain, and there he sat with his disciples.

4 And the pass-over, a feast of the Jews, was nigh.

5 And when Jesus then lifted up his eyes, and saw a great company come unto him, he saith unto Philip, Whence shall we buy bread, that these may eat?

6 And this he said to prove him: for he himself knew what he would do.

a. Mat. 14. 15. Mark 6. 35. Luke 9. 10, 12.—b. Luke 6. 17, 23. 11.—c. Rev. 22. 5, 7. Dent. 16. 1. Ch. 2. 13. & 5. 1.

NOTES.—Verse 1. After these things] This is a sort of indefinite expression, from which we can gather nothing relative to the time in which these things happened. It refers, no doubt, to transactions in the preceding year.

Jesus went over the sea of Galilee] Or, as some translate the words, by the side of the sea of Galilee. From Luke, chap. ix. 10. we learn that this was a desert place in the vicinity of Bethsaida. The sea of Galilee, Gennesaret, and Tiberias, are the same in the New Testament with the sea of Cynareth in the Old. Tiberias was a city in Galilee, situated on the western side of the lake. See on ver. 22.

2. They saw his miracles which he did] John does not mention these miracles: but Matthew details them from chap. xii. 2. to chap. xiv. 13. John seems more intent on supplying the deficiencies of the other evangelists, than in writing a connected history himself.

3. Went up into a mountain] This mountain must have been in the desert of Betsaida, in the territories of Philip, tetrarch of Galilee. Our Lord withdrew to this place for a little rest; for he and the disciples had been so thronged with the multitudes continually coming and going, that they had not time to take necessary food. See Mark vi. 31.

4. And the pass-over—was nigh] This happened about ten or twelve days before the third pass-over which Christ celebrated after his baptism. Calmet. For a particular account of our Lord's four pass-overs, see the note on chap. ii. 13.

For thirty days before the pass-over there were great preparations made by the Jews, but especially in the last nineteen days, in order to celebrate the feast with due solemnity. Lightfoot supposes that what is here related happened within the last fifteen days. See Calmet's opinion above.

5. Saw a great company] See this miracle explained at large on Matt. xiv. 13. &c. Mark vi. 31, &c. Luke ix. 10, &c.

In speaking of the pass-over, and various other matters, it does not appear that John follows any strict chronological order. From ver. 15. it appears that our Lord had come down from the mountain, and fed the multitudes in a plain at the foot of it.

Saith unto Philip] This, with what follows to the end of the seventh verse, are not mentioned by any of the other evangelists. Philip was probably the provider for the disciples, as Judas was the treasurer.

Whence shall we buy bread? Instead of αγορασωμεν, shall we buy, I should read αγορασωμεν, may we buy, which is the reading of ABDEHLS. M. BV. and many others. As Philip was of Bethsaida, chap. i. 44. xi. 21. he must have been much better acquainted with the country in which they then were, than any other of the disciples.

7 Philip answered him, Two hundred pennyworth of bread is not sufficient for them, that every one of them may take a little.

8 One of his disciples, Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, saith unto him, 9 There is a lad here which hath five barley loaves, and two small fishes: but what are they among so many?

10 And Jesus said, Make the men sit down. (Now there was much grass in the place.) So the men sat down, in number about five thousand.

11 And Jesus took the loaves; and when he had given thanks he distributed to the disciples, and the disciples to them that were a. Matthew 14. 16. Mark 6. 35. Luke 9. 12.—b. See Num. 11. 21, 22.—f. 2 Kings 4. 42.

6. This he said to prove him] To try his faith, and to see whether he and the other apostles had paid proper attention to the miracles which they had already seen him work; and to draw their attention more particularly to that which he was now about to perform. This is an observation of the evangelist himself, who often interweaves his own judgment with the facts he relates, which St. Matthew rarely ever does. The other evangelists say, that previously to this miracle, he continued to instruct and heal the multitudes till it was near the close of the day. Matt. xiv. 14, 15. Mark vi. 34, 35. Luke ix. 11, 12.

7. Two hundred pennyworth] This sum, rating the denarius at 7 3/4 d. would amount to 6l. 9s. 2d. of our money, and appears to have been more than our Lord and all his disciples were worth of this world's goods. See the notes on Matt. xviii. 28.

8. Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, saith] The other evangelists attribute this answer to the apostles in general. See the passages referred to above.

9. There is a lad here] Ματαθωμ, a little boy, or servant, probably one who carried the apostles' provisions, or who came on purpose to sell his bread and fish.

Five barley loaves] Barley scarcely bore one-third of the value of wheat in the East: see Rev. vi. 6. That it was a very mean fare, appears from Ezek. xiii. 19. where the false prophetesses are said to pollute the name of God for handfuls of barley, i. e. for the meanest reward. And Plutarch, in Apoph. p. 174. speaking concerning the flight of Artaxerxes Mnemon, says, he was reduced to such distress as to be obliged to eat barley bread. See Kypke. From this and other circumstances, we may plainly perceive that the self-denying doctrine preached by Christ and his apostles, was fully exemplified in their own manner of living.

Two small fishes] Δωο ψαρια. The word ψαριον, signifies whatever is eaten with bread, to perfect the meal, or to make it easy of deglutition, or to help the digestion. There is no word in the English language for it, which is a great defect. The inhabitants of Scotland, and of the north and northwest of Ireland, use the word lyshen, by which they express whatever is eaten with bread or potatoes, as flesh, fish, butter, milk, eggs, &c. no satisfactory etymology of which word I am able to offer. In the parallel places in the other three evangelists, instead of ψαρια, ιχθυα is used; so that the word evidently means fish in the text of St. John: see on chap. xvi. 5. 10. There was much grass in the place] Perhaps newly mown grass, or hay, is meant, (so the Vulgate Janium), and this circumstance marks out more particularly that the pass-over was at hand. In Palestine, the grass is ready for mowing set down; and likewise of the fishes as much as they would.

12 When they were filled, he said unto his disciples, Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost.

13 Therefore they gathered them together, and filled twelve baskets with the fragments of the five barley loaves, which remained over and above unto them that had eaten.

14 Then those men, when they had seen the miracle that Jesus did, said, This is of a truth<sup>6</sup> that prophet that should come into the world.

15 ¶ When Jesus therefore perceived that they would come and take him by force, to make him a king, he departed again into a mountain himself alone.

16<sup>b</sup> And when even was now come, his disciples went down unto the sea, 17 And entered into a ship, and went over the sea towards Capernaum. ¶ And it was now dark, and Jesus was not come to them.

18 And the sea arose by reason of a great wind that blew.

19 So when they had rowed about five and twenty or thirty furlongs, they see Jesus walking on the sea, and drawing nigh unto the ship: and they were afraid.

<sup>a</sup> Gen. 49. 10. Deut. 18. 15, 18. Matt. 11. 3. Ch. 1. 21. & 4. 14, 25. & 7. 40.—<sup>b</sup> Matt. 14. 22. Mark 6. 47.

In March; and this miracle seems to have been wrought only a few days before the commencement of that festival: see ver. 4.

11. Jesus took the loaves] See the notes on Matt. xiv. 19—21. As there were five loaves and five thousand people, so there was one loaf to every thousand men, independently of the women and children.

12. Gather up the fragments] "Great will be the punishment of those who waste the crumbs of food, scatter seed, and neglect the law." Synops. Schar. Among the Jews the מנוּשׁ peah, or residue after a meal, was the property of the servants.

13. This is of a truth that prophet] Spoken of Deut. xviii. 15. viz. the Messiah. How near were these people at this time to the kingdom of heaven!

14. Take him by force, to make him a king] The Jews had often suffered by famine in those times in which their enemies were permitted to prevail over them: but finding that Jesus had such power as to multiply a few loaves to feed thousands, they took it for granted that while he was at their head, no evil could possibly happen to them; and therefore were determined immediately to proclaim him king, and rid themselves at once of Herod and the Romans. Our Lord perceiving this, either by some words which they had dropped, or by his penetration of their hearts, retired before the project had been fully formed, or could be put into execution. It was not till a considerable time afterward, that even the disciples fully understood that his kingdom was not of this world.

15. Into a mountain] That on which he was with his disciples previously to his working this miracle: see ver. 3. St. Matthew, chap. xiv. 22, 23. and Mark vi. 45, 46. say, that before this, Jesus constrained his disciples to embark in the vessel, and go along the sea-coast towards Capernaum, or Bethsaida: see here ver. 17. and the note on Mark vi. 45. and, that after they were gone, he dismissed the multitudes, having, no doubt, given them such advices as the nature of the case required; after which he went into the mountain to pray. Worldly wisdom would have said, "Declare thyself king: yield to the desires of the people: this will be the readiest way of converting the Jews." No. Jesus must die for the sin of the world. No man's heart can be turned to God by outward pomp or splendour—no saving change can be brought about by any might or any power, but by the Spirit of the Lord of hosts. Zech. iv. 6.

17. Towards Capernaum] St. Mark says, chap. vi. 45. that our Lord commanded them to go along to Bethsaida; and in the course of the history we find they got neither to Bethsaida nor Capernaum, but landed in the country of Gennesaret: Matt. xiv. 34. Our Lord seems to have desired them to go either to Bethsaida or Capernaum, which were only a very few miles distant, and on the same side of the sea. The reason why they could reach neither, was the storm, which the evangelists say rose at the time, and the wind being contrary: the storm being probably excited by the prince of the power of the air. Capernaum lay at the northern part of this sea, and they went along the Galilean or western coast, probably expecting Christ to come to them, on which account they might keep in close by the land. But there are great difficulties in fixing the places mentioned by the evangelists. By some writers, Bethsaida and Capernaum are placed on opposite sides of this lake; by others, on the same side. Sometimes when our translation speaks of passing over the sea, &c. a coasting voyage only is meant, as we find the disciples landing on the same side from which they had departed: see the note on verse 22.

19. Had rowed] Their vessel was a small one only, something of the boat kind: as to sails, if they had any, they could not now venture to carry them, because of the storm.

Five and twenty or thirty furlongs] Between three and four miles. The sea of Tiberias, on which they now were, was, according to Josephus, War, book iii. chap. 25. forty furlongs, or five miles in breadth; and one hundred and forty furlongs, or eighteen miles in length. Pliny, lib. v. chap. 15. makes it about six miles broad, and sixteen long.

20 But he saith unto them, It is I; be not afraid.

21 Then they willingly received him into the ship: <sup>a</sup> and immediately the ship was at the land whither they went.

22 ¶ The day following, when the people which stood on the other side of the sea saw that there was none other boat there, save that one wherinto his disciples were entered, and that Jesus went not with his disciples into the boat, but that his disciples were gone away alone;

23 (Howbeit there came other boats from Tiberias nigh unto the place where they did eat bread, after that the Lord had given thanks:)

24 When the people therefore saw that Jesus was not there, neither his disciples, they also took shipping, and came to Capernaum, seeking for Jesus.

25 And when they had found him on the other side of the sea, they said unto him, Rabbi, when camest thou hither?

26 Jesus answered them and said, Verily, verily, I say unto you. Ye seek me, not because ye saw the miracles, but because ye did eat of the loaves, and were filled.

27 I Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but<sup>b</sup> for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of I [Matt. 14. 22. Mark 6. 47.—<sup>b</sup> Matt. 14. 22. Mark 6. 51.—I Or, Work not.—see Ver 54. Ch. 4. 14.]

They see Jesus] See the notes on Matt. xiv. 25, &c.

21. Immediately the ship was at the land] How far they were from the place at which they landed when our Lord came to them, we know not. But the evangelist seems to speak of their sudden arrival there as extraordinary and miraculous.

22. The people which stood on the other side] Ἐπέναντι παραρτῆ; θάλασσης, standing by the sea-side. The people were not on the other side, i. e. in Perea, as our version states; but on that side where Bethsaida lay: see the notes on Matt. xiv. 25 and 34. and on Mark vi. 45. The Greek word παραρτῆ; says Be shop Pearce, seems to signify in Scripture sometimes on the side of, and sometimes on this side of: see Jos. v. 1. and I Macc. ix. 34. The Hebrew word כּוּן aby, signifies by the side: Exod. xviii. 26. and is translated on this side in Deut. iv. 29. It has the same meaning in the Septuagint, Deut. i. 5. iii. 8. iv. 46. Ἰσραὴλ, says Vorstius, is the same with para, near to. This is evidently the meaning of the word in Matt. iv. 15. as it appears from what is said of the land of Zabulon and Nephtalim, that by para is not meant beyond, but by the side of; because those two tribes inhabited the western side of Jordan, which was the side lying nearest to Judea and Galilee: see on Matt. xix. 1.

23. There came other boats] After Jesus and his disciples had departed.

From Tiberias] Herod Antipas built this city near the lake of Gennesaret, in the best parts of Galilee, and called it Tiberias, in honour of Tiberius, the Roman emperor: see Jos. Ant. book xviii. chap. 2. sect. 3.

24. They also took shipping] That is, as many of them as could get accommodated with boats took them, and thus got to Capernaum; but many others doubtless went thither on foot; as it is not at all likely that five or six thousand persons could get boats enow to carry them.

25. On the other side of the sea] That is, on the sea-coast to the northward of it, where Capernaum lay in the land of Gennesaret: but see the note on ver. 17, 22. It was in one of the synagogues of Capernaum that he delivered the following discourse: see ver. 69.

26. Ye seek me, not because ye saw, &c.] Though the miracle of the loaves was one of the most astonishing that ever was wrought upon earth; and though this people had, by the testimony of all their senses, and the most convincing proof of its reality; yet we find many of them paid little attention to it, and regarded the omnipotent hand of God in it, no further than it went to satisfy the demands of their appetite! Most men are willing to receive temporal good from the hands of God; but there are few, very few, who are willing to receive spiritual blessings.

27. Labour not for the meat] That is, for that only, but also for the bread, &c. Our Lord wills every man to be active and diligent in that employment, in which Providence has placed him: but it is his will also, that that employment, and all the concerns of life, should be subservient to the interest of his soul.

But for that meat, &c.] He who labours not in the work of his salvation, is never likely to enter into the kingdom of God. Though our labour cannot purchase it, either in whole, or in part, yet it is the way in which God chooses to give salvation; and he that will have heaven must strive for it. Every thing that can be possessed, except the salvation of God, is a perishing thing: this is its essential character: it can last to us no longer than the body lasts. But when the earth and its produce are burnt up, this bread of Christ, his grace and salvation, will be found remaining unto eternal life. This is the portion, after which an immortal spirit should seek.

His hath God the Father sealed] By this expression, our Lord points out the commission, which, as the Messiah, he received from the Father, to be prophet and priest to an ignorant, sinful world. As a person who wishes to communicate his mind to another who is at a distance, writes a letter, seals it with his own seal, and sends it directed to the person for whom it was written; so Christ, who lay in the bosom of the Father, came to interpret the divine will to man. bearing the men shall give unto you: * for him hath God the Father sealed. 28 Then said they unto him, What shall we do, that we might work the works of God ?

29 Jesus answered and said unto them, * This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent.

30 * They said therefore unto him, * What sign shewest thou then, that we may see, and believe thee ? what dost thou work ?

31 * Our fathers did eat manna in the desert; as it is written, * He gave them bread from heaven to eat.

32 Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Moses gave you not that bread from heaven; but my Father giveth you the true bread from heaven.

33 For the bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world.

a Matt. 1. 17. & 17. 5. Mark. 1. 11. & 9. 7. Luke. 3. 22. & 9. 20. Ch. 1. 33. & 5. 37. & 9. 15. Acts. 9. 22. c. 17. 1. John. 1. 9. 1. p. Matt. 12. 38. & 16. 1. Mark. 8. 11. 1 Cor. 1. 22. & 2. 15. 10. Numb. 11. 7. Neh. 9. 15. Wisd. 16. 20. 1 Cor. 10. 3.

image, superscription, and seal of God, in the immaculate holiness of his nature, unassailed truth of his doctrine, and in the astonishing evidence of his miracles. But he came also as a priest to make an atonement for sin; and the bread which nourishes unto eternal life, he tells us, ver. 51. in his body, which he gives for the life of the world: and to this sacrifice of himself, the words him hath God the Father sealed, seem especially to relate. It certainly was a custom among nations contiguous to Judea, to set a seal upon the victim which was deemed proper for sacrifice. The following account of the method of providing white bulls among the Egyptians, for sacrifices to their god Apis, taken from Hærodotus, Euterpe, or b. ii. p. 117. casts much light upon this place. "They sacrifice white bulls to Apis; and for that reason make the following trial. If they find one black hair upon him, they consider him as unclean: that they may know this with certainty, the priest appointed for this purpose, views every part of the animal, both standing and lying on the ground. After this, he draws out his tongue, to see if he be clean by certain signs: in the last place, he looks upon the hairs of his tail, that he may be sure they are as by nature they should be. If after this search the bull is found unblemished, he signifies it by tying a label to his horns; then, having applied wax, he seals it with his ring, and they lead him away: for it is death to sacrifice one of these animals, unless he have been marked with such a seal."

The Jews could not be unacquainted with the rites and ceremonies of the Egyptian worship; and it is possible, that such precautions as these were in use among themselves; especially as they were so strictly enjoined, to have their sacrifices without spot, and without blemish. Infinite justice found Jesus Christ to be without spot or blemish, and therefore sealed, pointed out, and accepted him, as a proper sacrifice and atonement for the sin of the whole world. Collate with this passage, Heb. vii. 26, 27, 28. Eph. v. 27. 2 Pet. iii. 14. and especially Heb. ix. 13, 14. For if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of a heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifyeth—how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your consciences from dead works? The rabbins talk much of the seal of God, which they suppose to be נֶמֶךְ emeth, or truth; and that this is a representation of the unoriginated and endless perfections of God. This doctrine is just; but their method of proving it is not so satisfactory. Alph מ, say they, is the first letter of the alphabet; mem מ in the middle; and lame ל the last; these three letters make נֶמֶךְ, emeth, truth, because God is the first—there was none before him; he is the middle—none mingles with him; and he is the last—there can be none after him. Hærocl. Sanchid. fol. 18. See also 1 Pet. i. 18, 19.

34. That we might work the works of God? That is, divine works, or such as God can approve.

35. This is the work of God, that ye believe] There is nothing you can be employed in, more acceptable to God, than in yielding to the evidence set before you, and acknowledging me as your Messiah, and the Saviour of a lost world.

36. What sign? Te enquis, what miracle; so the word is evidently used 2 John ii. 11, 23. and in many other places.

That we may see, and believe thee] That having seen the miracles, we may believe thee to be the promised Messiah. They had already seen the miracle of the five loaves, and did not believe: and it was impossible for them to see any thing more descriptive of unlimited power and goodness. Even miracles themselves, are lost on persons whose hearts are fixed on the perishing things of the world, and whose minds are filled with prejudice against the truth.

31. Our fathers did eat manna in the desert? Their argument seems to run thus: Thou hast, we grant, fed five thousand men with five loaves and two small fishes; but what is this in comparison of what Moses did in the desert, who for forty years fed more than a million of persons with bread from heaven: do something like this, and then we will believe in thee, as we have believed in Moses.

32. Moses gave you not that bread from heaven? Our Lord refutes the argument of the Jews, by proving, 1. That it was not Moses, but God, who gave the manna. 2. That this bread was not the true bread, but was merely a type of it. 3. That God had given them now a bread infinitely more excellent. 4. That himself is that heavenly nourishment of which he spake, and who was typified by the manna in the desert.

34 * Then said they unto him, Lord, evermore give us this bread.

35 And Jesus said unto them, * I am the bread of life: * he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst.

36 * But I said unto you, That ye also have seen me, and believe not.

37 * All that the Father giveth me * all come to me; and * him that cometh to me I will in nowise cast out.

38 For I came down from heaven, * not to do mine own will, * but the will of him that sent me.

39 And this is the Father's will which hath sent me, * that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day.

r Ps. 78. 24. 25. See Ch. 4. 15. — 1 Ver. 66. 68. — Ch. 4. 14. & 7. 37. — Ver. 26. 61. — w Ver. 46. — 1 Matt. 24. 24. Ch. 10. 24. 25. 27. Tim. 2. 18. 1 John 2. 15. — Matt. 26. 39. Ch. 5. 20. — Ch. 4. 34. — Ch. 10. 29. & 17. 12. & 18. 2.

To show that himself was the true bread from heaven, he proves two things. 1. That his doctrine was the true nourishment of the soul, and that those who were to be put in possession of the blessings promised in it, must come to God by faith. 2. That he would give his body for the life of the world: that as bread is the staff that supports the natural life of man; so the salvation procured by his death, should be that by which the bodies and souls of believers should be preserved unto life eternal.

34. Lord, evermore give us this bread.] Either meaning, "Let the miracle of the manna be renewed, and continue among us for ever;" or, "Let that bread, of which thou hast spoken, become our constant nourishment." The Jews expected, that when the Messiah should come, he would give them all manner of delicacies, and among the rest, manna, wine, and spicy oil. From the following extract, we may see where Mohammed got his Paradise. "Many affirm, says Rab. Mayemon, that the hope of Israel is this, That the Messiah shall come and raise the dead; and they shall be gathered together in the garden of Eden, and shall eat and drink and satiate themselves all the days of the world. There the houses shall be all builded with precious stones; the beds shall be made of silk, and the rivers shall flow with wine and spicy oil. He made manna to descend for them, in which was all manner of tastes; and every Israelite found in it, what his palate was chiefly pleased with. If he desired fat in it, he had it. In it the young man tasted bread, the old man honey, and the children oil. So shall it be in the world to come, (i. e. the days of the Messiah.) He shall give Israel peace, and they shall sit down in the garden of Eden, and all nations shall behold their condition; as it is said, My servants shall eat, but ye shall be hungry, &c. Isa. lxx. 13." See Lightfoot.

35. I am the bread of life] That is, the bread which gives life, and preserves from death.

He that cometh to me] The person who receives my doctrine, and believes in me as the great atoning sacrifice, shall be perfectly satisfied, and never more feel misery of mind. All the guilt of his sins shall be blotted out, and his soul shall be purified unto God; and being enabled to love him with all his heart, he shall rest fully, supremely, and finally happy, in his God.

37. All that the Father giveth me] The neuter gender res, is probably used here for the masculine res.

Shall come to me] All that are drawn by the Father, ver. 44. i. e. all those who are influenced by his Spirit, and yield to those influences; for as many as are læo (not driven or dragged) by the Spirit of God, they are the children of God, Rom. viii. 14. God sent his prophets to proclaim his salvation to this people; and he accompanied their preaching with the influence of his Spirit. Those who yielded were saved: those who did not yield to these drawings, were lost. This Spirit still continued to work and to allure, but the people being uncircumcised both in heart and ears, they always resisted the Holy Ghost; as their fathers did, so did they: Acts vii. 51. And though Christ would have gathered them together, as a hen would her chickens under her wings, yet they would not. See the note on Matt. xxiii. 37. Those who come at the call of God, he is represented here as giving to Christ, because it is through his blood alone that they can be saved. God, by his Spirit, convinces of sin, righteousness, and judgment; those who acknowledge their iniquity, and their need of salvation, he gives to Christ, i. e. points out unto them the Lamb of God, who takes away the sin of the world. Our Lord may here also refer to the calling of the Gentiles; for these, according to the ancient promise, Psal. ii. were given to Christ; and they, on the preaching of the Gospel, gladly came unto him. See ample proofs of this in the Acts of the Apostles.

I will in no wise cast out.] The words are exceedingly emphatical—οὐ μὴ ἀρῶ αὐτοῦ, I will by no means thrust out of doors; excellently rendered by Matthew of Erberg, in his Italian Bible—Io non cacciarò fuori, I will not chase him out of the house. Our blessed Lord alludes to the case of a person in deep distress and poverty who comes to a nobleman's house, in order to get relief: the person appears; and the owner, far from treating the poor man with asperity, welcomes, receives him kindly, and supplies his wants. So does Jesus. Never did he reject the suit of a penitent, however grievous his crimes might have been. He is come to the house of mercy; he is lying at the threshold: the servants 40 And this is the will of him that sent me, <sup>b</sup> that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life: and I will raise him up at the last day.

41 The Jews then murmured at him, because he said, I am the bread which came down from heaven.

42 And they said, <sup>a</sup> Is not this Jesus, the son of Joseph, whose father and mother we know? how is it then that he saith, I came down from heaven?

43 Jesus therefore answered and said unto them, Murmur not among yourselves.

44 No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day.

45 <sup>c</sup> It is written in the prophets, And they shall be all taught of God. Every man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me.

<sup>b</sup> Ver. 47, 48. Ch. 3. 15, 16. & 4. 14.—Mat. 13. 53. Mark 6. 3. Luke 6. 2.—<sup>c</sup> Cant. 1. 4. Ver. 25.—Isa. 54. 13. Jer. 31. 34. Mic. 4. 2. Heb. 8. 10. & 10. 16.—1 Ver. 37.—Ch. 1. 13. & 6. 37.

did him come in—<sup>a</sup> he obeys, and stands trembling, waiting for the appearing of the Master; doubtful whether he is to be received or rejected: the Master appears, and not only grants his suit, but receives him into the number of his family: he alleges his unfitness, his unworthiness, his guilt, his crimes, his ingratitude: no matter, all shall be blotted out through the blood of the Lamb, and he be put among the children; and on none of these accounts shall he be put out of the house. The Gentiles shall be as welcome as the Jews; and the invitation to them, be as free, as full, and as hearty: they shall become his adopted children, and never be cast out, as the Jews have been. O thou God of love! how able and willing art thou, to save the vilest of the vile, who come unto thee! Thou art not the God of the Jews only: thou art also the God of the Gentiles; Rejoice, therefore, ye Gentiles, with his people.

38. Not to do mine own will I am come, not to act according to human motives, passions, or prejudices; but according to infinite wisdom, goodness, and mercy. Jewish passions and prejudices would reject publicans and sinners as those alluded to, and shut the gate of heaven against the Gentiles; but God's mercy receives them, and I am come to manifest that mercy to men.

39. I should lose nothing] It is the will of God, that every soul who believes should continue in the faith, and have a resurrection unto life eternal. But he wills this continuance in salvation, without purposing to force the persons so to continue. God may will a thing to be, without willing that it shall be. Judas was given to Christ by the Father, chap. xvii. 12.

The Father willed that this Judas should continue in the faith, and have a resurrection unto life eternal, but Judas sinned and perished. Now it is evident, that God willed that Judas might be saved, without willing that he must be saved infallibly and unconditionally. When a man is a worker together with the grace of God, he is saved: when he receives that grace of God in vain, he is lost; not through a lack of will or mercy in God, but through lack of his co-operation with divine grace. God saves no man as a stock or a stone, but as a reasonable being and free agent. "That which thou hast heard, thou mayest hold fast, and persevere in it, if thou wilt," says St. Augustin. In eo quod audieras, et tenueris, perseveras, si velles. De correct. et Grat. c. 7. See Calmet.

Raise it up again at the last day.] The Jews believed that the wicked should have no resurrection; and that the principle that led to the resurrection of the body in the righteous, was the indwelling Spirit of God. This is positively asserted in the Shir Hashirim Rabba. See Schoettgen.

40. This is the will of him that sent me] Last they should take a wrong meaning out of his words, as many have done since, he tells them, that far from any person being excluded from his mercy, it was the will of God, that every one who saw him, might believe and be saved. The power, without which they could not believe, he freely gave them; but the use of that power was their own. God gives the grace of repentance and faith to every man; but he neither repents nor believes for any man. Each must repent for his own sins, and believe in the Lord Jesus, through the grace given, or perish.

41. The Jews then murmured] Because the whole of his discourse went to prove, that he was infinitely greater than Moses; and that he alone could give present peace and eternal glory to men.

44. Except the Father—draw him] But how is a man drawn? St. Augustin answers from the poet, Trahit sua quemque voluptas; a man is attracted by that which he delights in. Show green herbage to a sheep, he is drawn by it: show nuts to a child, and he is drawn by them. They run wherever the person runs, who shows these things: they run after him, but they are not told to follow: they run, through the desire they feel to get the things they delight in. So God draws man: he shows him his wants, he shows the Saviour whom he has provided for him: the man feels himself a lost sinner, and through the desire which he feels to escape hell and get to heaven, he comes unto Christ, that he may be justified by his blood. Unless God thus draw, no man will ever come to Christ; because none could, without this drawing, ever feel the need of a Saviour. See August. Tract. 26. in Joan and Calmet.

Drawing or alluring, not dragging, is here to be understood. "He," say the rabbins, "who desires to cleave to the 46 <sup>f</sup> Not that any man hath seen the Father, <sup>h</sup> save he which is of God, he hath seen the Father.

47 Verily, verily, I say unto you, <sup>i</sup> He that believeth on me hath everlasting life.

48 I am that bread of life.

49 Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness, and are dead.

50 <sup>m</sup> This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that I am may eat thereof, and not die.

51 I am the living bread <sup>n</sup> which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever: and <sup>o</sup> the bread that I will give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world.

52 The Jews therefore <sup>p</sup> strove among themselves, saying, <sup>q</sup> How can this man give us his flesh to eat?

53 Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you,

<sup>r</sup> Man liveth, 27. Luke 10. 22. Ch. 1. 18 & 7. 29 & 8. 19.—Ch. 3. 16, 15, 36. Ver. 50.—<sup>s</sup> Ver. 7. 5.—1 Ver. 51.—Ch. 6. 51. 52.—Ch. 13.—Hob. 10. 5, 10.—Ch. 7. 2 & 9. 16 & 10. 19.—Ch. 3. 9.

holily and blessed God, God lays hold of him, and will not cast him off." Synop. Sahar. p. 87. The best Greek writers use the verb in the same sense of alluring, inciting, &c.

45. It is written in the prophets] Isa. liv. 13. Jer. xxxi. 34. They shall be all taught of God] This explains the preceding verse. God teaches a man to know himself, that, finding his need of salvation, he may flee to lay hold on the hope which his heavenly Father has set before him in the Gospel. God draws men by his love, and by showing them what his love has done for them. Fear repels, but love attracts. He who is ever preaching the terrors of the law, and representing God as a vindictive judge, will never bring sinners to him. They are afraid of this terrible God: but they love him, who so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him, might not perish, but have everlasting life.

46. Not that any man hath seen the Father] He does not teach men by appearing personally before them, or by any other outward voice, than that of his word and messengers: but he teaches by his Spirit. This teaching from God implies, 1. That they shall have proper instruction. 2. That they shall comprehend it: for when God teaches, there is no delay in learning. And 3. That this teaching should be by the influence of the Holy Ghost upon their minds.

He which is of God] That is, Christ alone: neither Moses, nor any of the prophets, had ever seen God: Jesus, who lay in the bosom of the Father, saw and revealed him, chap. i. 18.

47. Hath everlasting life.] He is entitled to this, on his believing me to be the Messiah, and trusting in me alone for salvation. Our blessed Lord recapitulates here, what he had said in the preceding discourse. The person who is saved is, 1. Drawn by the Father: 2. Hears his instructions: 3. Accepts the salvation offered: 4. Is given to Christ Jesus, that he may be justified by faith: 5. Is nourished by the bread of life: 6. Perseveres in the faith: 7. Is not lost, but is raised up at the last day: and, 8. Is made a partaker of eternal life.

48. I am that bread of life.] I alone afford, by my doctrine and Spirit, that nourishment by which the soul is saved unto life eternal.

49. Your fathers did eat manna—and are dead.] That bread neither preserved their bodies alive, nor entitled them to life eternal: but those who receive my salvation, shall not only be raised again in the last day, but shall inherit eternal life. It was an opinion of the Jews themselves, that their fathers who perished in the wilderness, should never have a resurrection. Our Lord takes them on their own ground: Ye acknowledge that your fathers who fell in the wilderness, shall never have a resurrection; and yet they ate of the manna: therefore that manna is not the bread that preserves to everlasting life, according even to your own concession.

This is the bread, &c.] I am come for this very purpose, that men may believe in me, and have eternal life.

51. In my flesh, which I will give, &c.] Our Lord explains his meaning more fully in these words, than he had done before. Having spoken so much of the bread which feeds and nourishes the soul, and preserves from death; the attention of his hearers was fixed upon his words, which to them appeared inexplicable: and they desired to know what their meaning was. He then told them, that the bread meant his flesh (his life,) which he was about to give up, to save the life of the world. Here our Lord plainly declares, that his death was to be a vicarious sacrifice and atonement for the sin of the world: and that, as no human life could be preserved, unless there was bread (proper nourishment) received; so no soul could be saved, but by the merit of his death. Reader, remember this: it is one of the weightiest, and one of the truest and most important sayings in the book of God.

52. How can this man give us his flesh to eat?] Our Lord removes this difficulty, and answers the question, in ver. 63.

53. Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man] Unless ye be made partakers of the blessings about to be purchased by my blood, passion, and violent death, ye cannot be saved. As a man must eat bread and flesh, in order to be nourished by them, so a man must receive the grace and Spirit of Christ, in order to his salvation. As food in a rich man's store does not nourish the poor man that needs it, unless it be given him, and he receives it into his stomach: so the whole fountain of mercy existing in the bosom of God, and uncommunicated does not save a soul: he who is saved by it, must be made a

Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you.

64 * Who so eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day.

65 For my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed.

66 He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him.

67 As the living Father hath sent me, and I live by the Father: so he that eateth me, even he shall live by me.

68 * This is that bread which came down from heaven: not as your fathers did eat manna, and are dead: he that eateth of this bread shall live for ever.

69 These things said he in the synagogue, as he taught in Capernaum.

70 * Many therefore of his disciples, when they had heard this, said, This is a hard saying; who can hear it?

71 When Jesus knew in himself that his disciples murmured at it, he said unto them, Doth this offend you?

72 * What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before?

73 * It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life.

74 But * there are some of you that believe not. For * Jesus knew from the beginning who they were that believed not, and who should betray him.

75 And he said, Therefore * said I unto you that no man can come unto me except it were given unto him of my Father.

76 * From that time many of his disciples went back, and walked no more with him.

77 Then said Jesus unto the twelve, Will ye also go away?

78 Then Simon Peter answered him, Lord, to whom shall we go? thou hast * the words of eternal life.

79 * And we believe and are sure that thou art that Christ, the Son of the living God.

80 Jesus answered them, * Have not I chosen you twelve, and one of you is a devil?

81 He spake of Judas Iscariot the son of Simon: for he it was that should betray him, being one of the twelve.

82 * If ye shall see the Son of man ascend] Ye need not be stumbled at what I say concerning eating my flesh and drinking my blood, for ye shall soon have the fullest proof that this is figuratively spoken, for I shall ascend with the same body with which I shall arise from the dead; therefore my flesh and blood, far from being eaten by men, shall not even be found among them.

83 * It is the spirit that quickeneth] It is the spiritual sense only of my words that is to be attended to, and through which life is to be attained: 2 Cor. iii. 6. Such only as eat and drink what I have mentioned in a spiritual sense, are to expect eternal life.

84 * The flesh profiteth nothing] As my words are to be spiritually understood, so the life they promise is of a spiritual nature. See Bp. Pearce.

85 * But there are some of you that believe not] This is addressed to Judas, and to those disciples who left him: ver. 66.

86 * And who should betray him.] Or, who would deliver him up. Because he knew all things; he knew from the first, from Judas's call to the apostleship, and from eternity, (if the reader please,) who it was who would (not should) deliver him up into the hands of the Jews. Should, in the apprehension of most, implies necessity and compulsion; would, implies that he was under the influence of his own free will, without necessity or constraint. The former takes away his guilt; for what a man is irresistibly compelled to do by the supreme authority of God, he cannot avoid; and therefore to him no blame can attach: but Judas having acted through his own free will, abusing his power, and the grace he had received, he was guilty of the murder of an innocent man, and deserved the perdition to which he went.

87 * Therefore, said I unto you] Ver. 44. see the note there.

88 * Except it were given unto him] None can come at first, unless he be drawn by the Father; and none can continue, unless he continue under these sacred influences, which God gives only to those who do not receive his first graces in vain. St. Augustin himself grants, that it was the sole fault of these disciples that they did not believe, and he saved. Quare non potuerunt credere, si me queratur, cito responderes, quia noluerant. If I be asked why these could not believe, I immediately answer, because they would not. Aug. Tract. 53. in Joan.

89 * Many of his disciples went back] They no longer associated with him; nor professed to acknowledge him as the Messiah. None of these were of the twelve. Christ had many others who generally attended his ministry, and acknowledged him for the Messiah.

90 * Will ye also go away?] Or, do ye also desire, &c. These words are very emphatical. Will you abandon me? you, whom I have distinguished with innumerable marks of my affection—you, whom I have chosen out of the world to be my companions—yes, to whom I have revealed the secrets of the

91 * What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before?] By giving them this proof that

92 * It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life.] As my words are to be spiritually understood, so the life they promise is of a spiritual nature. See Bp. Pearce.

93 * But there are some of you that believe not] This is addressed to Judas, and to those disciples who left him: ver. 66.

94 * And who should betray him.] Or, who would deliver him up. Because he knew all things; he knew from the first, from Judas's call to the apostleship, and from eternity, (if the reader please,) who it was who would (not should) deliver him up into the hands of the Jews. Should, in the apprehension of most, implies necessity and compulsion; would, implies that he was under the influence of his own free will, without necessity or constraint. The former takes away his guilt; for what a man is irresistibly compelled to do by the supreme authority of God, he cannot avoid; and therefore to him no blame can attach: but Judas having acted through his own free will, abusing his power, and the grace he had received, he was guilty of the murder of an innocent man, and deserved the perdition to which he went.

95 * Therefore, said I unto you] Ver. 44. see the note there.

96 * Except it were given unto him] None can come at first, unless he be drawn by the Father; and none can continue, unless he continue under these sacred influences, which God gives only to those who do not receive his first graces in vain. St. Augustin himself grants, that it was the sole fault of these disciples that they did not believe, and he saved. Quare non potuerunt credere, si me queratur, cito responderes, quia noluerant. If I be asked why these could not believe, I immediately answer, because they would not. Aug. Tract. 53. in Joan.

97 * Many of his disciples went back] They no longer associated with him; nor professed to acknowledge him as the Messiah. None of these were of the twelve. Christ had many others who generally attended his ministry, and acknowledged him for the Messiah.

98 * Will ye also go away?] Or, do ye also desire, &c. These words are very emphatical. Will you abandon me? you, whom I have distinguished with innumerable marks of my affection—you, whom I have chosen out of the world to be my companions—yes, to whom I have revealed the secrets of the

99 * What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before?] By giving them this proof that

100 * It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life.] As my words are to be spiritually understood, so the life they promise is of a spiritual nature. See Bp. Pearce.

101 * But there are some of you that believe not] This is addressed to Judas, and to those disciples who left him: ver. 66.

102 * And who should betray him.] Or, who would deliver him up. Because he knew all things; he knew from the first, from Judas's call to the apostleship, and from eternity, (if the reader please,) who it was who would (not should) deliver him up into the hands of the Jews. Should, in the apprehension of most, implies necessity and compulsion; would, implies that he was under the influence of his own free will, without necessity or constraint. The former takes away his guilt; for what a man is irresistibly compelled to do by the supreme authority of God, he cannot avoid; and therefore to him no blame can attach: but Judas having acted through his own free will, abusing his power, and the grace he had received, he was guilty of the murder of an innocent man, and deserved the perdition to which he went.

103 * Therefore, said I unto you] Ver. 44. see the note there.

104 * Except it were given unto him] None can come at first, unless he be drawn by the Father; and none can continue, unless he continue under these sacred influences, which God gives only to those who do not receive his first graces in vain. St. Augustin himself grants, that it was the sole fault of these disciples that they did not believe, and he saved. Quare non potuerunt credere, si me queratur, cito responderes, quia noluerant. If I be asked why these could not believe, I immediately answer, because they would not. Aug. Tract. 53. in Joan.

105 * Many of his disciples went back] They no longer associated with him; nor professed to acknowledge him as the Messiah. None of these were of the twelve. Christ had many others who generally attended his ministry, and acknowledged him for the Messiah.

106 * Will ye also go away?] Or, do ye also desire, &c. These words are very emphatical. Will you abandon me? you, whom I have distinguished with innumerable marks of my affection—you, whom I have chosen out of the world to be my companions—yes, to whom I have revealed the secrets of the

107 * What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before?] By giving them this proof that

108 * It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life.] As my words are to be spiritually understood, so the life they promise is of a spiritual nature. See Bp. Pearce.

109 * But there are some of you that believe not] This is addressed to Judas, and to those disciples who left him: ver. 66.

110 * And who should betray him.] Or, who would deliver him up. Because he knew all things; he knew from the first, from Judas's call to the apostleship, and from eternity, (if the reader please,) who it was who would (not should) deliver him up into the hands of the Jews. Should, in the apprehension of most, implies necessity and compulsion; would, implies that he was under the influence of his own free will, without necessity or constraint. The former takes away his guilt; for what a man is irresistibly compelled to do by the supreme authority of God, he cannot avoid; and therefore to him no blame can attach: but Judas having acted through his own free will, abusing his power, and the grace he had received, he was guilty of the murder of an innocent man, and deserved the perdition to which he went.

111 * Therefore, said I unto you] Ver. 44. see the note there.

112 * Except it were given unto him] None can come at first, unless he be drawn by the Father; and none can continue, unless he continue under these sacred influences, which God gives only to those who do not receive his first graces in vain. St. Augustin himself grants, that it was the sole fault of these disciples that they did not believe, and he saved. Quare non potuerunt credere, si me queratur, cito responderes, quia noluerant. If I be asked why these could not believe, I immediately answer, because they would not. Aug. Tract. 53. in Joan.

113 * Many of his disciples went back] They no longer associated with him; nor professed to acknowledge him as the Messiah. None of these were of the twelve. Christ had many others who generally attended his ministry, and acknowledged him for the Messiah.

114 * Will ye also go away?] Or, do ye also desire, &c. These words are very emphatical. Will you abandon me? you, whom I have distinguished with innumerable marks of my affection—you, whom I have chosen out of the world to be my companions—yes, to whom I have revealed the secrets of the

115 * What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before?] By giving them this proof that partaker of it. Our Lord's meaning appears to be, that unless they were made partakers of the grace of that atonement which he was about to make by his death, they could not possibly be saved. Bishop Pearce justly observes, that the idea of eating and drinking is here borrowed to express partaking of, and sharing in. Thus spiritual happiness on earth, and even in heaven, is expressed by eating and drinking; instances of which may be seen, Matt. viii. 11. xxvi. 29. Luke xiv. 15. xxii. 30. and Rev. ii. 17. Those who were made partakers of the Holy Spirit, are said by St. Paul, 1 Cor. xii. 13. to be made to drink into (or of) one spirit. This, indeed, was a very common mode of expression among the Jews.

116 * It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life.] As my words are to be spiritually understood, so the life they promise is of a spiritual nature. See Bp. Pearce.

64. Flesh eternal life] This can never be understood of the sacrament of the Lord's supper. 1. Because this was not instituted till a year after; at the last pass-over. 2. It cannot be said that those who do not receive that sacrament must perish everlastingly. 3. Nor can it be supposed that all those who do receive it are necessarily and eternally saved. On the contrary, St. Paul intimates that many who received it at Corinth perished, because they received it unworthily, not discrediting the Lord's body; not distinguishing between it and a common meal; and not properly considering that sacrifice for sin, of which the sacrament of the Lord's supper was a type: See 1 Cor. xii. 30.

65. My flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed.] Or rather, my flesh is the true meat, &c. In both clauses of this verse, instead of αληθως, the adverb, I read αληθως, the adjective, agreeing with σπρωσις. This reading is supported by BCKIT. and twenty-one others: both the Arabic, Coptic, Syriac, Armenian, two copies of the Itala, Clement, Origen, Cyril, Chrysostom, and Damascenus. Our Lord terms his flesh the true meat, and his blood the true drink; because those who received the grace merited by his death, would be really nourished and supported thereby unto eternal life. He calls himself the true vine, ch. xv. 1. in exactly the same sense in which he calls himself the true bread: ver. 32. and the true meat and drink in this verse.

66. Dwelleth in me, and I in him.] Of all connexions and unions, none is so intimate and complete as that which is effected by the digestion of aliments; because they are changed into the very substances of him who eats them; and this our Lord makes the model of that union which subsists between himself and genuine believers. He lives in them and they in him; for they are made partakers of the divine nature: 2 Pet. i. 4. To this verse the following addition is made in the Codex Bezae, three copies of the Itala, and Victorinus. After these words, dwellth in me, and I in him; they add, as the Father in me, and I in the Father. Verily, verily, I say unto you, that unless ye receive the body of the Son of man, as the bread of life, ye have not life in him. This is a very remarkable addition, and is between thirteen and fourteen hundred years old.

67. So he that eateth me, even he shall live by me.] From which we learn that the union between Christ and his followers shall be similar to that which subsists between God and Christ.

69. In the synagogue—in Capernaum.] From ver. 26. to this verse, the evangelist gives us the discourse which our Lord preached in the synagogue; in which he was repeatedly interrupted by the Jews; but this gave him the fuller opportunity to proclaim the whole truth relative to his passion and death; to edify the disciples, and confute these gainsayers.

70. Many therefore of his disciples] So it appears that he had many more than the twelve, who constantly accompanied him.

This is a hard saying; who can hear it?] Who can digest such doctrine as this? It is intolerable—it is impracticable. There is a similar saying in Euripides, to the ακρος λογος of the evangelist. Πορτα θελεις σοι μαλακα φρονει λεγει, η αυληρη αυτην, φραζει; Tell me whether thou wouldst that I should speak unto thee a soft LIE, or the HARSH TRUTH? The wicked word of a lying world, is in general better received than the holy word of the G<sup>o</sup>d of truth!

71. Jesus knew in himself] By giving them this proof that

72. It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life.

73. But there are some of you that believe not. For Jesus knew from the beginning who they were that believed not, and who should betray him.

74. And he said, Therefore said I unto you that no man can come unto me except it were given unto him of my Father.

75. From that time many of his disciples went back, and walked no more with him.

76. Then said Jesus unto the twelve, Will ye also go away?

77. Then Simon Peter answered him, Lord, to whom shall we go? thou hast the words of eternal life.

78. And we believe and are sure that thou art that Christ, the Son of the living God.

79. Jesus answered them, Have not I chosen you twelve, and one of you is a devil?

80. He spake of Judas Iscariot the son of Simon: for he it was that should betray him, being one of the twelve.

81. If ye shall see the Son of man ascend]

82. Ye need not be stumbled at what I say concerning eating my flesh and drinking my blood, for ye shall soon have the fullest proof that this is figuratively spoken, for I shall ascend with the same body with which I shall arise from the dead; therefore my flesh and blood, far from being eaten by men, shall not even be found among them.

83. It is the spirit that quickeneth] It is the spiritual sense only of my words that is to be attended to, and through which life is to be attained: 2 Cor. iii. 6. Such only as eat and drink what I have mentioned in a spiritual sense, are to expect eternal life.

84. The flesh profiteth nothing] As my words are to be spiritually understood, so the life they promise is of a spiritual nature. See Bp. Pearce.

85. But there are some of you that believe not] This is addressed to Judas, and to those disciples who left him: ver. 66.

86. And who should betray him.] Or, who would deliver him up. Because he knew all things; he knew from the first, from Judas's call to the apostleship, and from eternity, (if the reader please,) who it was who would (not should) deliver him up into the hands of the Jews. Should, in the apprehension of most, implies necessity and compulsion; would, implies that he was under the influence of his own free will, without necessity or constraint. The former takes away his guilt; for what a man is irresistibly compelled to do by the supreme authority of God, he cannot avoid; and therefore to him no blame can attach: but Judas having acted through his own free will, abusing his power, and the grace he had received, he was guilty of the murder of an innocent man, and deserved the perdition to which he went.

87. Therefore, said I unto you] Ver. 44. see the note there.

88. Except it were given unto him] None can come at first, unless he be drawn by the Father; and none can continue, unless he continue under these sacred influences, which God gives only to those who do not receive his first graces in vain. St. Augustin himself grants, that it was the sole fault of these disciples that they did not believe, and he saved. Quare non potuerunt credere, si me queratur, cito responderes, quia noluerant. If I be asked why these could not believe, I immediately answer, because they would not. Aug. Tract. 53. in Joan.

89. Many of his disciples went back] They no longer associated with him; nor professed to acknowledge him as the Messiah. None of these were of the twelve. Christ had many others who generally attended his ministry, and acknowledged him for the Messiah.

90. Will ye also go away?] Or, do ye also desire, &c. These words are very emphatical. Will you abandon me? you, whom I have distinguished with innumerable marks of my affection—you, whom I have chosen out of the world to be my companions—yes, to whom I have revealed the secrets of the

91. What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before?] By giving them this proof that

92. It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life.] As my words are to be spiritually understood, so the life they promise is of a spiritual nature. See Bp. Pearce.

93. But there are some of you that believe not] This is addressed to Judas, and to those disciples who left him: ver. 66.

94. And who should betray him.] Or, who would deliver him up. Because he knew all things; he knew from the first, from Judas's call to the apostleship, and from eternity, (if the reader please,) who it was who would (not should) deliver him up into the hands of the Jews. Should, in the apprehension of most, implies necessity and compulsion; would, implies that he was under the influence of his own free will, without necessity or constraint. The former takes away his guilt; for what a man is irresistibly compelled to do by the supreme authority of God, he cannot avoid; and therefore to him no blame can attach: but Judas having acted through his own free will, abusing his power, and the grace he had received, he was guilty of the murder of an innocent man, and deserved the perdition to which he went.

95. Therefore, said I unto you] Ver. 44. see the note there.

96. Except it were given unto him] None can come at first, unless he be drawn by the Father; and none can continue, unless he continue under these sacred influences, which God gives only to those who do not receive his first graces in vain. St. Augustin himself grants, that it was the sole fault of these disciples that they did not believe, and he saved. Quare non potuerunt credere, si me queratur, cito responderes, quia noluerant. If I be asked why these could not believe, I immediately answer, because they would not. Aug. Tract. 53. in Joan.

97. Many of his disciples went back] They no longer associated with him; nor professed to acknowledge him as the Messiah. None of these were of the twelve. Christ had many others who generally attended his ministry, and acknowledged him for the Messiah.

98. Will ye also go away?] Or, do ye also desire, &c. These words are very emphatical. Will you abandon me? you, whom I have distinguished with innumerable marks of my affection—you, whom I have chosen out of the world to be my companions—yes, to whom I have revealed the secrets of the eternal world—you, who have been witnesses of all my miracles—you, whom I intend to seat with me on my throne in glory; will you go away? Reader, in what state art thou? Hast thou gone back from Christ, or art thou going back? Will thou go? Thou, whom he has redeemed by his blood—thou, whom he has upheld by his power, and fed by his providence—thou, into whose wounded soul he has poured the balm of pardoning mercy—thou, whom he has adopted into the heavenly family—thou, whom he has comforted in so many tribulations and adversities—thou, whose multiplied offences he has freely and fully pardoned; will thou go away?

63. Simon Peter answered) With his usual zeal and readiness, speaking in behalf of the whole, to whom shall we go? Where shall we find a more gracious master—a more powerful Redeemer—a more suitable Saviour? Thou alone hast the words of eternal life. None can teach the doctrine of salvation but thyself; and none can confer the gift of eternal life but thou alone. Reader, let me ask, whither art thou going? Has the world—the devil—the flesh—the words of mortal life? Art thou turning thy back upon God and Christ? For thy zealous services, what has Satan to give thee? Death! hell! and eternal misery! O stop! cleave to Jesus; he will give thee that happiness which, in vain, thou seekest in the pleasures of sin.

63. We believe) On the authority of thy word: and are sure—As we know, &c.—by the evidence of thy miracles, that thou art the Christ, the promised Messiah. And we glory in it, and pity thee that thou art Egypt: Irober Senu. And we bely'ish and witen that thou art Christ God's Son. Anglo-Saxon. How near is the mother to the daughter tongue!

Instead of Christ the Son of the living God, some excellent MSS. BCDL. and others, read a ayios rov Oson, the Holy one of God; and this reading Griesbach has received into the text, leaving out rov ayios, the living. Xpistos and ayios convey nearly the same meaning; but the Ethiopic, as usual, retains both. Tov ayios is omitted by BCDL. H. the Coptic, Sahidic, Armenian, latter Persian, Vulgate, all the Itala but one, and by the Anglo-Saxon; which last, Griesbach has not noticed.

70. Have not I chosen you twelve) Have I not, in an especial manner, called you to believe in my name, and chosen you to be my disciples, and the propagators of my doctrine? nevertheless one of you is a devil, or accuser, enlisted on the side of Satan, who was a murderer from the beginning.

71. He spoke of Judas—for he it was that should betray him) Ovos yap ημελλεν αυτον παραδοειν, he who was about to deliver him up. By referring to this matter so often, did not our blessed Lord intend to warn Judas? Was not the evil fully exposed to his view? and who dare say that it was impossible for him to avoid what he had so often been warned against? When the temptation did take place, and his heart, in purpose, had brought forth the sin, might he not have recoiled, fallen at his injured Master's feet, acknowledged his black offence, and implored forgiveness? And surely his most merciful Lord would have freely pardoned him.

1. On the subject of the disciples' sailing off without Christ, and the storm that overtook them, it may be necessary to make a few observations, chiefly for the encouragement of the labourers in God's vineyard. It was the duty of the disciples to depart at the commandment of the Lord, though the storm was great, and the wind contrary. It was their duty to tug at the oar, expecting the appearing of their Lord and Master. So it is the duty of the ministers of Christ to embark, and sail even into the sea of persecution and temptation, in order to save souls. There may be darkness for a time—they must row. The waves may rise high—they must row on. The wind may be contrary—still they must tug at the oar. Jesus will appear, lay the storm, and calm the sea, and they shall have souls for their hire. The vessel will get to land, and speedily too. There are particular times in which the Lord pours out his Spirit, and multitudes are quickly convinced and converted. "Alas," says one, "I see no fruit of my labour; no return of my prayers and tears." Take courage, man; tug on; thou shalt not labour in vain, nor speed thy strength for nought. What does thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter. Great grace, and great peace await thee: take courage, and tug on!

2. When a man forsakes the living God, and gives way to avarice, which appears to have been the case with Judas, he is fit for any thing in which Satan may choose to employ him. Beware of the love of money! The cursed lust of gold induced a disciple of Christ to betray his God: and has it not been the ruin of millions since? Few people love money merely for its own sake: they love it because it can provide them with the necessaries, conveniences, and comforts of life: those who have not God for their portion, incessantly long after these things, and therefore are covetous. While a man watches unto prayer, and abides in the love of Christ Jesus the Lord, so long he is safe, for he is contented with the lot which God has given him in life. Reader, art thou like Judas (in his best state) put in trust for the poor, or for the church of Christ? Do not covet: and take heed that thou grudge not; nor permit thy heart to be hardened by repeated sights and tales of woe. Thou art but a steward; act faithfully, and act affectionately. Because the ointment that prefigured the death of our Lord was not applied just as Judas would have it, he took offence, betrayed and sold his Master; saw and wished to remedy his transgression; despaired and hanged himself. Behold the fruit of covetousness! To what excesses and miseries the love of money may lead, God alone can comprehend. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him.

CHAPTER VII.

Jesus continues in Galilee. 1. He is desired to go to the feast of Tabernacles. 2—5. His answer. 6—9. He goes up, and the Jews seek him at the feast. 10—13. He teaches in the temple. 14—24. The Jews are confounded by his preaching. 25—27. He continues to teach; they wish to slay him. 28—30. Many of the people believe on him. 31. The Pharisees murmur, and our Lord reasons with them. 32—36. His preaching on the last day of the feast. 37—39. The people are greatly divided in their opinions concerning him. 40—44. The officers who were sent by the Pharisees to take him, return, and because they did not bring him, their employers are offended. 45—49. Nicodemus reasons with them. 50—53. [A. M. 4068. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. COL 1.]

AFTER these things Jesus walked in Galilee: for he would not walk in Jewry, because the Jews sought to kill him. 2 Now the Jews' feast of tabernacles was at hand.

a Chap. 5. 16, 18.—b Lev. 24. 34.

NOTES.—Verse 1. After these things) St. John passes from the preceding discourse of our Lord, which he delivered a little before the pass-over, chap. vi. 4. to the Feast of Tabernacles, which happened six months after, and thus omits many things mentioned by the other evangelists, which our blessed Lord said and did during that time. He had already gone over Galilee four or five times; and he continued there because he found that the hatred of the Jews was such, that they would kill him if they could meet with him in Judea; and his time to suffer was not yet come.

For he would not walk in Jewry) Instead of this, some MSS., Versions, and Fathers, read ο yap ημελλεν αυτον παραδοειν, he had not authority, or liberty to walk, &c. That is, he was no longer tolerated, and could not preach publicly in Judea, but at the risk of his life. He found greater scope for the exercise of his important ministry in Galilee than in Judea, as the chief priests, &c. were continually plotting his death.

2. Feast of Tabernacles) This feast was celebrated on the fifteenth day of the month Tisri, answering to the last half of our September, and the first half of October. This month was the seventh of the ecclesiastical, and first of the civil year. The feast took its name from the tents which were erected about the temple, in public places, in courts, and on the flat roofs of their houses, and in gardens; in which the Jews dwelt for eight days, in commemoration of the forty years during which their fathers dwelt in tents in the wilderness. It was one of the three solemn annual feasts in which all the males were obliged by the law to appear at Jerusalem.

This feast was celebrated in the following manner. All the people cut down branches of palm-trees, willows, and myrtles, (and tied them together with gold and silver cords, or with ribbands) which they carried with them all day, took them into 3 His brethren therefore said unto him, Depart hence, and go into Judea, that thy disciples also may see the works that thou doest.

c Matt. 12. 46. Mark 3. 31. Act. 1. 14.

their synagogues, and kept them by them while at prayers. On the other days of the feast they carried them with them into the temple, and walked round the altar with them in their hands, singing Hosanna! i. e. Save, see beseech thee; the trumpets sounding on all sides. To this feast St. John seems to refer, Rev. vii. 9, 10, where he represents the saints standing before the throne, with palm branches in their hands, singing, Salvation is to God, &c. On the seventh day of the feast, they went seven times round the altar, and this was called Hosanna rabba, the great Hosanna. See the notes on Matt. xxi. 9. But the ceremony at which the Jews testified most joy, was that of pouring out the water, which was done on the eighth day of the feast. A priest drew some water out of the pool Siloam, in a golden vessel, and brought it into the temple: and at the time of the morning sacrifice, while the members of the sacrifice were on the altar, he went up and poured this water mingled with wine upon it, the people all the while singing with transports of joy, i. e. xii. especially ver. 6. With joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation. To this part of the ceremony, our Lord appears to allude in ver. 37. of this chapter.

During this feast many sacrifices were offered. On the first day, besides the ordinary sacrifices, they offered as a burnt-offering, thirteen calves, two rams, and fourteen lambs, with the offerings of flour and the libations of wine, that were to accompany them. They offered also a goat for a sin-offering. On all the succeeding days they offered the same sacrifices, only abating one of the calves each day, so that when the seventh day came, they had but seven calves to offer. On the eighth day, which was kept with greater solemnity than the rest, they offered but one calf, one ram, and seven lambs for a burnt-offering, and one goat for a sin-offering, with the usual

4 For there is no man that doeth any thing in secret, and he himself seeketh to be known openly. If thou do these things, show thyself to the world.

5 (For neither did his brethren believe in him.)

6 Then Jesus said unto them, My time is not yet come: but your time is always ready.

7 The world cannot hate you; but me it hateth, because I testify of it, that the works thereof are evil.

8 Go ye up unto this feast: I go not up yet unto this feast; for my time is not yet full come.

9 When he had said these words unto them, he abode still in Galilee.

10 But when his brethren were gone up, then went he also up unto the feast, not openly, but as it were in secret.

11 Then the Jews sought him at the feast, and said, Where is he?

12 And there was much murmuring among the people concerning him: for some said, He is a good man; others said, Nay; but he deceiveth the people.

13 Howbeit no man spake openly of him for fear of the Jews. 14 Now about the midst of the feast Jesus went up into the temple, and taught.

15 And the Jews marvelled, saying, How knoweth this man letters, having never learned? 16 Jesus answered them, and said, My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me. 17 If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself. 18 He that speaketh of himself seeketh his own glory: but he that seeketh his glory that sent him, the same is true, and no unrighteousness is in him. 19 Did not Moses give you the law, and yet none of you keepeth the law? Why go ye about to kill me? 20 The people answered and said, Thou hast a devil: who goeth about to kill thee? 21 Jesus answered and said unto them, I have done one work, and ye all marvel. 22 Wherefore gave unto you circumcision; (not because offerings and libations. On this day, they also offered in the temple the first fruits of their latter corn, or of those things which come latest to maturity. During the feast, the 113th, 114th, 115th, 116th, 117th, 118th, and 119th Psalms were sung, Lea of Modena says, that though Moses appointed but eight days, yet custom, and the devotion of the people, have added a month to it, which is called the joy of the law, because that on it they complete the reading of the Pentateuch. See Calmet's Com. and Dict. and Father Lamy. For the law relative to this institution, see Lev. xxiii. 33, 40, &c. and the notes there; and Num. xxix. 16, &c.

3. His brethren—said) It is generally supposed, that these were the children of the sisters of his mother Mary: but some of the ancients have stated that Joseph had several children by a former wife. See the account of the evangelist prefixed to this Gospel. No solid proof can be alleged against this: for we can well pretend to say, that these were not the children of Joseph and Mary. Our blessed Lord, it is true, was her first-born, while she was yet a virgin; but no man can prove that he was her last. It is an article of faith in the popish church, to believe in the perpetual virginity of Mary; and in this respect, without any reason, several Protestants seem to be Papists. However this may be, it is certain that the Hebrews gave the name of brethren to all the relatives of a particular family. See Gen. xxxi. 32, 46.

That thy disciples also may see) That is, the disciples which he had made two years and six months before, at the pass-over: chap. ii. 23.

4. No man that doeth any thing in secret, &c.) They took it for granted, that Christ was influenced by the same spirit which themselves felt; and that therefore he should use every opportunity of exhibiting himself to the public, that he might get into repute: and they hoped that a part of his honour would be reflected back upon themselves, as being his near relations. They seem to have said, "It is too little to employ thyself in working miracles in Galilee, in the country, and in small villages, among an ignorant and credulous people, from whom thou canst not get much credit: go to Jerusalem, the capital, and among the learned doctors, in the presence of the whole nation, assembled at this feast, work thy miracles, and get thyself a name."

5. Neither did his brethren believe in him.) They did not receive him as the promised Messiah: but having seen so many of his miracles, they could not but consider him as an eminent prophet. They supposed that if he were the Messiah, he would wish to manifest himself as such to the world; and because he did not do so, they did not believe that he was the salvation of Israel.

6. My time is not yet come) It is probable our Lord meant no more than this, that he had some business to transact before he could go to Jerusalem: but his brethren having nothing to hinder them, might set off immediately. Others think he speaks of his passion: My time of suffering is not yet come: as ye are still in friendship with the world, ye need not be under any apprehension of danger: ye may go when ye please. The true sense I think is the best.

7. The world cannot hate you) The Jews will not persecute you, because ye are in their sentiments and interests. Ye also expect a worldly Messiah.

But me it hateth) Because I condemn its injustice, its pride, its ambition, and its maxims, by my life and doctrine. It is very likely that the term world, means here the Jewish people only: this is an acceptance, in which kosmos frequently occurs in this Gospel. See on chap. xvii.

8. I go not up yet unto this feast) Porphyry accuses our blessed Lord of falsehood, because he said here, I will not go to this feast, and yet afterward he went: and some interpreters have made more ado than was necessary, in order to reconcile this seeming contradiction. To me the whole seems very simple and plain. Our Lord did not say, I will not go to this feast; but merely, I go not yet, over, or am not going, i. e. at present; because, as he said, ver. 6. and repeats here, My time was not yet come—he had other business to transact before he could go. And it is very likely, that his business de-

13 Howbeit no man spake openly of him for fear of the Jews. 14 Now about the midst of the feast Jesus went up into the temple, and taught.

15 And the Jews marvelled, saying, How knoweth this man letters, having never learned?

16 Jesus answered them, and said, My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me.

17 If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself.

18 He that speaketh of himself seeketh his own glory: but he that seeketh his glory that sent him, the same is true, and no unrighteousness is in him.

19 Did not Moses give you the law, and yet none of you keepeth the law? Why go ye about to kill me?

20 The people answered and said, Thou hast a devil: who goeth about to kill thee?

21 Jesus answered and said unto them, I have done one work, and ye all marvel.

22 Wherefore gave unto you circumcision; (not because of Or, learning—Ch. 3. 11. & 8. 82. & 12. 40. & 14. 10, 84.—Ezech. 27. 11. Ch. 6. 62.—Chap. 6. 41. & 8. 82.—Exod. 24. 3. Deut. 33. 4. John 1. 7. Act. 7. 38.—1 Matt. 12. 14. Mark 3. 6. Ch. 3. 16, 18. & 19. 31, 32. & 11. 52.—Ch. 8. 45, 52. & 12. 30.—Lev. 12. 2.

tained him in Galilee, till the feast was half over; for we do not find him at Jerusalem till the middle of the feast, ver. 14. I. e. till the feast had begun four days. He might also be unwilling to go at that time, there being such a great concourse of people on the road to Jerusalem, and his enemies might say, that he had availed himself of this time and multitude, in order to excite sedition.

10. But when his brethren were gone up) Having dispatched his business, and the concourse of people being now past, he went up alone.

11. Then the Jews sought him) By Jews here are to be understood the scribes, Pharisees, and rulers of the people, and not the inhabitants of the province of Judea. It appears from the following verses, that many of the people were prejudiced in his favour, but they dared not to own it publicly for fear of the Jews, i. e. for fear of the rulers of the people.

12. Some said, He is a good man) The multitude were divided in their opinions concerning him: those who knew him best, said, He is a good man. Those who spoke according to the character given him by the priests, &c. said, Nay; but he deceiveth the people. Those who spoke evil of him spoke out, because they had the rulers on their side: but those who spoke good of him were obliged to do it in private, because they feared these rulers. Calumny and slander are among the privileged orders; they stalk abroad with their thousand brazen mouths, and blast the reputation of the followers of God. Benevolence and candour are only on sufferance; and a schispar in secret, is the most they are permitted to give in behalf of Christ and his followers, whose laws and maxims condemn a vicious world, and call it to revenge.

14. The midst of the feast) Though the canons required him to be there on the first day, for the performance of a great variety of rites; yet as these were in general the invention of their doctors, he might think it very proper neither to attend nor perform them.

15. How knoweth this man letters, having never learned?) The Jewish learning consisted in the knowledge of their own Scriptures, and the traditions of their elders. In this learning our blessed Lord excelled. No person ever spoke with more grace and dignity, nor knew better how to make a more proper use, or a happier application of Jewish allegories and parables: because none ever penetrated the sense of the Scriptures as he did; none ever cited them more successfully, nor ever showed their accomplishment in so complete and satisfactory a manner. As these branches of learning were taught at the Jewish schools, and our Lord had never attended there, they were astonished to find him excelling in that sort of learning, of which they themselves professed to be the sole teachers.

16. My doctrine is not mine) Our blessed Lord, in the character of Messiah, might as well say, My doctrine is not mine, as an ambassador might say, I speak not my own words, but his who sent me: and he speaks these words, to draw the attention of the Jews from the teaching of man to the teaching of God; and to show them, that he was the promised Messiah; the very person on whom, according to the prophet, (Isa. xi. 2.) the Spirit of Jehovah—the Spirit of wisdom, counsel, understanding, might, and knowledge, should rest.

17. If any man will do his will, &c.) I will give you a sure rule by which ye may judge of my doctrine: if you really wish to do the will of God, begin the practice of it; and take my doctrine, and apply it to all that you know God requires of man; and if you find one of my precepts contrary to the nature, perfection, and glory of God; or to the present or eternal welfare of men; then ye shall be at liberty to assert, that my doctrine is human and erroneous, and God has not sent me. But if, on the contrary, ye find that the sum and substance of my preaching is, that men shall love God with all their heart, soul, mind, and strength, and their neighbour as themselves; and that this doctrine must bring glory to God in the highest, while it produces peace and good will among men: then acknowledge that God has visited you, and receive me as the Messiah promised to your fathers.

18. He that speaketh of himself, &c.) I will give you another rule, whereby you shall know whether I am from God or not:

It is of Moses, & but of the fathers;) and ye on the sabbath day circumsise a man.

23 If a man on the sabbath day receive circumcision, & that the law of Moses should not be broken; are ye angry at me, because I have made a man every whit whole on the sabbath day?

24 Judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgment.

Gen. 17. 10.—Or, without breaking the law of Moses.—Chap. 5. 8, 9, 16.—Deu. 1. 16, 17. Prov. 24. 21. Ch. 8. 15. James 1. 1.

If I speak so as to procure my own glory, to gratify vanity, or to secure and promote my secular interests, then reject me as a deceiver and as a false prophet. But if I act only to promote the glory of God, to induce all men to love and obey him; if I propose nothing, but what leads to the perfection of his law, and the accomplishment of its ordinances, you cannot help acknowledging me at least for a true prophet: and if you add to this, the proofs which I have given of my mission and power, you must acknowledge me as the mighty power of God, and the promised Messiah.

And no unrighteousness is in him.] Or, there is no falsehood in him. So the word adikia should be translated here; and it is frequently used by the Septuagint for ψεσδερ, a lie, falsehood, &c. See in Psal. lii. 3. cxix. 29, 69, 104, 163, cxlv. 8. This is its meaning in Rom. ii. 8. where adikia, falsehood, is put in opposition to αληθεια, truth.

19. Did not Moses give you the law, &c.] The scribes and Pharisees announced our Lord to the multitude as a deceiver, and they grounded their calumny on this, that he was not an exact observer of the law, for he had healed a man on the Sabbath day, chap. v. 9, 10, and consequently must be a false prophet. Now they insinuated, that the interests of religion required him to be put to death, 1. As a violator of the law; and, 2. As a false prophet and deceiver of the people. To destroy this evil reasoning, our Lord speaks in this wise: if I deserve death for curing a man on the Sabbath, and desiring him to carry home his bed, which you consider a violation of the law; you are more culpable than I am, for you circumsise a child on the Sabbath, which requires much more bustle, and is of much less use than what I have done to the infirm man. But if you think you do not violate the law by circumsising a child on the Sabbath; how can you condemn me for having cured one of yourselves, who has been afflicted thirty and eight years? If you consider my conduct with the same eye with which you view your own, far from finding any thing criminal in it, you will see much reason to give glory to God. Why therefore go ye about to kill me, as a transgressor of the law, when not one of yourselves keep it?

20. Thou hast a devil! The crowd who made this answer, were not in the secret of the chief priests. They could not suppose that any person desired to put him to death, for healing a diseased man; and therefore, in their brutish manner, they say, Thou hast a demon—thou art beside thyself, and slanderest the people, for none of them desires to put thee to death. The Codex Cyprius (K.) four others, and the margin of the later Syriac, attribute this answer to the Jews, i. e. those who were seeking his life. If the reading, therefore, of oi Ioudaioi, the Jews, be received instead of δ' οχλος, the multitude, it serves to show the malice of his enemies in a still stronger light: for, fearing lest their wish to put him to death might not be gratified, and that his teaching should prevail among the common people; to ruin his credit, and prevent his usefulness, they give out that he was possessed by a demon: and that though he might be pitied as a miserable man, yet he must not be attended to as a teacher of righteousness. Malice and envy are ever active and indefatigable, leaving no stone unturned, no mean unused, that they may ruin the object of their resentment. See the note on ver. 26.

21. I have done one work! That of curing the impotent man, already referred to. See chap. v. 9.

And ye all marvel.] Or, ye all marvel because of this. Some have δρα νεωρα, in connexion with δυναμεις, which the common pointing makes the beginning of the next verse, and which, in our common version, is translated therefore; but this word conveys no meaning at all, in the connexion in which it is thus placed. Proofs of this construction, Kypke gives from Themistius, Strabo, and Elfan. All the eminent critics are on the side of this arrangement of the words.

22. But of the fathers! That is, it came from the patriarchs. Circumcision was not, properly speaking, one of the laws of the Mosaic institution, it having been given at first to Abraham, and continued among his posterity till the giving of the law: Gen. xvii. 9, 10, &c.

Ye—circumsise a man.] That is, a male child; for every male child was circumcised when eight days old; and if the eighth day after its birth happened to be a Sabbath, it was nevertheless circumcised, that the law might not be broken, which had enjoined the circumcision to take place at that time, Lev. xii. 3. From this and several other circumstances, it is evident, that the keeping of the Sabbath, even in the strictest sense of the word, ever admitted of the works of necessity and mercy to be done on it: and that those who did not perform such works on that day, when they had opportunity, were properly violators of every law, founded on the principles of mercy and justice. If the Jews had said, Why didst thou not defer the healing of the sick man till the ensuing day? He might have well answered, Why do ye not defer 25 Then said some of them of Jerusalem, Is not this he whom they seek to kill?

26 But, lo, he speaketh boldly, and they say nothing unto him. Do the rulers know indeed that this is the very Christ?

27 Howbeit we know this man whence he is: but when Christ cometh, no man knoweth whence he is.

28 Then cried Jesus in the temple as he taught, saying, Ye both know me, and ye know whence I am; and I am not come in a Verse 48.—Matt. 13. 56. Mark 6. 3. Luke 4. 22.—See Chap. 3. 14. & 6. 42 to 14.—Ch. 5. 6, 7 & 8, 9.

the circumcising of your children to the ensuing day, when the eighth day happens to be a Sabbath; which is a matter of infinitely less consequence, than the restoration of this long-afflicted man.

23. Every whit whole! The law of circumcision required the removal of a small portion of flesh, which was considered a blot and reproach among the Hebrews, because it confounded them with the nations who were not in covenant with God. Christ to this, opposes the complete cure of the infirm man, who was diseased throughout his whole body: if the one was permitted on the Sabbath day, for the reason already alleged, surely the other had stronger reasons to recommend it.

Some think that the original words, ολον ανθρωπον, should be translated, the whole man; and that the meaning is, that the blessed Saviour made him whole both in body and soul. This makes the miracle the greater, and shows still more forcibly the necessity of doing it without delay.

Battier ap Wets. supposes, that instead of ολον, χωλον should be read, I have made a MADDED man whole: but there is no countenance for this reading in any of the MSS., Versions, or Fathers.

24. Judge not according to the appearance.] Attend to the law, not merely in the letter, but in its spirit and design. Learn that the law which commands men to rest on the Sabbath day, is subordinate to the law of mercy and love, which requires them to be ever active to promote God's glory in the comfort and salvation of their fellow-creatures; and endeavour to judge of the merit or demerit of an action, not from the first impression it may make upon your prejudices, but from its tendency, and the motives of the person, as far as it is possible for you to acquaint yourselves with them; still believing the best, where you have no certain proof to the contrary.

25. That this is the very Christ! In most of the common printed editions, αληθος, is found, the very Christ; but the word is wanting in BDKLTX. twenty-two others, several editions; all the Arabic, Wheelock's Persic, the Coptic, Sahidic, Armenian, Slavonic, Vulgate, and all the Itala but one; Origen, Epiphanius, Cyril, Isidore, Pelusian, and Nonsus. Grotius, Müll, Bengel, and Griesbach, decide against it. Bishop Pearce says, I am of opinion that this second αληθος, in this verse should be omitted, it seeming quite unnecessary, if not inaccurate, when the words αληθος, γινωσκω had just preceded it.

Calmet observes, that the multitude which heard our Lord at this time, was composed of three different classes of persons. 1. The rulers, priests, and Pharisees, declared enemies of Christ. 2. The inhabitants of Jerusalem, who knew the sentiments of their rulers concerning him. 3. The strangers, who from different quarters had come up to Jerusalem to the feast, and who heard Christ attentively, being ignorant of the designs of the rulers, &c. against him.

Our Lord addresses himself in this discourse principally to his enemies. The strange Jews were those who were astonished when Christ said, ver. 20. that they sought to kill him, having no such design themselves, and not knowing that others had. And the Jews of Jerusalem were those, who knowing the disposition of the rulers, and seeing Christ speak openly, no man attempting to seize him, addressed each other in the foregoing words: Do the rulers know indeed that this is the Christ? imagining that the chief priests, &c. had at last been convinced that Jesus was the Messiah.

27. No man knoweth whence he is.] The generality of the people knew very well that the Messiah was to be born in Bethlehem, in the city, and of the family of David; see ver. 42. But from Isaiah lii. 8. Who shall declare his generation? they probably thought that there should be something so peculiarly mysterious in his birth, or in the manner of his appearing, that no person could fully understand. Had they considered his miraculous conception, they would have felt their minds relieved on this point. The Jews thought that the Messiah, after his birth, would hide himself for some considerable time; and that when he began to preach, no man should know where he had been hidden, and whence he had come. The rabbins have the following proverb: three things come unexpected: 1. A thing found by chance, 2. The sting of a scorpion, and, 3. The Messiah. It was probably in reference to the above that the people said, no man knoweth whence he is. However, they might have spoken this of his parents. We know that the Messiah is to be born in Bethlehem, of the family of David: but no man can know his parents; therefore they rejected him: chap. vi. 42. Is not this Jesus, the son of Joseph, whose father and mother we know?

28. Ye both know me and ye know whence I am! Perhaps they should be read interrogatively; do ye both know me, and know whence I am? Our Lord takes them up on their own profession, and argues from it. Since you have got so much information concerning me, add this to it, to make it complete; viz: that I am not come of myself; am no self-created or self-authored prophet; I came from God—the testiof myself, but he that sent me is true, ( whom ye know not, for I know him: for I am from him, and he hath sent me. ) 27 These things they sought to take him: but no man laid hands on him, because his hour was not yet come.

 28 And many of the people believed on him, and said, When Christ cometh, will he do more miracles than these which this man hath done?
 29 The Pharisees heard that the people murmured such things concerning him; and the Pharisees and the chief priests sent officers to take him.
 30 Then said Jesus unto them, I yet a little while am I with you, and then I go unto him that sent me.
 31 Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me: and where I am, thither ye cannot come.
 32 These said the Jews among themselves, Whither will he go, that we shall not find him? will he go unto the dispersed among the Gentiles, and teach the Gentiles?
 33 What manner of saying is this that he said, Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me: and where I am, thither ye cannot come?

34 In the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood up, and said, Behold, now I am sending you the Spirit of truth, which the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him, neither will he receive him: who seeth and knoweth him, whom the Father hath sent, the Son, and the Father, who hath sent the Spirit, he receiveth him: and all things which the Father hath, these shall the Son also manifest unto the world, because the Father loveth the Son, and all things which he will, he sheweth unto him. But the world knoweth him not, because it seeth him not, neither hath known him, neither will he receive him: who receiveth him, he receiveth the Father also, which the Father hath sent to dwell in him, and to be with him, and to glorify with him. Who receiveth him, he receiveth life: who receiveth not him, he receiveth judgment: because he hath not believed in the Son whom the Father hath sent to dwell in him, and to be with him, and to glorify with him. Who receiveth him, he receiveth the Father also, which the Father hath sent to dwell in him, and to be with him, and to glorify with him. Who receiveth him, he receiveth life: who receiveth not him, he receiveth judgment: because he hath not believed in the Son whom the Father hath sent to dwell in him, and to be with him, and to glorify with him.

mony of John the Baptist, the descent of the Holy Ghost, the voice from heaven, the purity and excellence of my doctrine, and the multitude of my miracles, sufficiently attest this. Now God is true who has borne testimony to me; but ye know him not, therefore it is that this testimony is disregarded.
 35 But I know him: for I am from him.] Instead of ἐκ, I am, some editions, the Syriac, Hieros. read ἐκ, I came, according to the Attic. Nonnus confirms this reading by paraphrasing the word by ἐκ. As the difference between the two words lies only in the accents, and as these are not found in ancient MSS., it is uncertain which way the word was understood by them: nor is the matter of much moment; both words amount nearly to the same meaning, and do not seem to be refined.
 36 Will he do more miracles? It was the belief of the Jews, and they founded it upon Isa. xxv. 5. that when the Messiah came, he would do all kinds of miracles: and in order that they might have the fullest proof of the divine mission of Christ, he had pleased God to cause miracles to cease for between four and five hundred years, and that John the Baptist himself had not wrought any. His miracles, therefore, were a full proof of his divine mission.

37 The people murmured such things.] The people began to be convinced that he was the Messiah, and this being generally whispered about, the Pharisees, &c. thought it high time to put him to death, lest the people should believe on him: therefore they sent officers to take him.

38 Yet a little while am I with you.] As he knew that the Pharisees had designed to take and put him to death; and that in about six months from this time, as some conjecture, he should be crucified; he took the present opportunity of giving this information to the common people, who were best disposed towards him, that they might lay their hearts to his teaching, and profit by it, while they had the privilege of enjoying it.

The word ἀπο, to them, in the beginning of this verse, is wanting in EDEGHIMS, more than eighty others, both the Syriac, later Persic, Coptic, Sahidic, Armenian, Gothic, Slavonic, Saxon, most copies of the Vulgate, and Itala. It is omitted also by Euthymius, Theophylact, Augustin, and Beza. Our Lord did not speak these words to the officers who came to apprehend him, as arrest; here implies, but to the common people, merely to show that he was not ignorant of the designs of the Pharisees, though they had not yet been able to put them into practice.

39 Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me.] When the Roman armies came against you, you will vainly seek for a deliverer. But ye shall be cut off in your sins, because ye did not believe in me, and where I am—in the kingdom of glory, ye cannot come; for nothing that is unholy shall enter into the new Jerusalem. In this, and the thirty-sixth verse, ἐκ, I am, is read by several, ἐκ, I come, as in the twenty-ninth verse, and in these two last places the Ethiopic, Arabic, three copies of the Itala, Nonnus, and Theophylact, agree. See note on ver. 23. The dispersed among the Gentiles? Or, Greeks. By the dispersed, are meant here the Jews, who were scattered through various parts of that empire which Alexander the Great had founded in Greece, Syria, Egypt, and Asia Minor, where the Greek language was used, and where the Jewish scriptures in the Greek version of the Septuagint were read. Others suppose that the Gentiles themselves are meant—others that the few tribes which had been long lost are here intended.

40 In the last day, that great day of the feast.] This was the eighth day, and was called the great day, because of certain traditional observances, and not on account of any excellence which it derived from the original institution. On the seven days they presented to offer sacrifices for the seventy nations of the earth, but on the eighth day they offered sacrifices for Israel; therefore the eighth day was more highly esteemed than any of the others. It is probably to this that the evangelist refers when he calls the last day the great day of the feast. See the account of the feast of tabernacles in the note on ver. 2. It was probably when they went to draw water from and cried, saying, If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink.

 38 Who that believeth on me, as the Scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water.

39 But this spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given; because that Jesus was not yet glorified.

40 Many of the people therefore, when they heard this saying, said, Of a truth this is the Prophet.

41 Others said, This is the Christ. But some said, Shall Christ come out of Galilee?

42 Hath not the Scripture said, That Christ cometh of the seed of David, and out of the town of Bethlehem, where David was?

43 So there was a division among the people because of him.

44 And some of them would have taken him; but no man laid hands on him.

45 Then came the officers to the chief priests and Pharisees: and they said unto them, Why have ye not brought him?

46 The officers answered, Never man spake like this man.

47 Then answered them the Pharisees, Are ye also deceived?

the pool of Sion, and while they were pouring it out at the foot of the altar, that our Lord spoke these words: for as that ceremony pointed out the glorious influences of the Holy Spirit; our Lord, who was the fountain whence it was to proceed, called the people to himself: that by believing on him, they might be made partakers of that inestimable benefit.

38 He that believeth on me, as the Scripture hath said.] He who receives me as the Messiah, according to what the Scripture has said concerning me; my person, birth, conduct, preaching, and miracles, being compared with what is written there, as ascertaining the true Messiah. Out of his belly—from his heart and soul; for in his soul shall this Spirit dwell.

Living water.] As a tree spring is ever supplied with water from the great deep, with which it has communication; so shall the soul of the genuine believer be supplied with light, life, love, and liberty, and all the other graces of the indwelling Spirit from the indwelling Christ. The Jews frequently compare the gifts and influences of the Holy Spirit to water in general—to rain, fountains, wells, rivers, &c. &c. The Scriptures abound in this metaphor. Psal. xxvi. 9, 10. Isa. xlv. 3, 4. Joel iii. 23.

39 Was not yet given.] Ardeus, given, is added by the Codex Vaticanus, (B,) the Syriac, all the Persic, latter Syriac with an asterisk, three copies of the Slavonic, Vulgate, and all the Itala but three; and several of the primitive Fathers. This word is necessary to the completion of the sense.

Certain measures of the Holy Spirit had been vouchsafed from the beginning of the world to believers and unbelievers: but that abundant effusion of his graces, spoken of by Joel, chap. ii. 28, which peculiarly characterised the Gospel times, was not granted till after the ascension of Christ. 1. Because this Spirit in its plenitude was to come in consequence of his atonement; and therefore could not come till after his crucifixion. 2. It was to supply the place of Christ to his disciples, and to all true believers; and therefore it was not necessary till after the removal of his bodily presence from among them. See our Lord's own words; John xiv. 16-18, 26. xv. 26. xvi. 7-15.

40 Of a truth this is the Prophet.] The great prophet or teacher, spoken of by Moses; Deut. xviii. 15. which they improperly distinguished from the Messiah, ver. 41. Some, no doubt, knew that by the prophet the Messiah was meant; but others seem to have thought that one of the ancient prophets should be raised from the dead, and precede the appearing of the Messiah.

41 Shall Christ come out of Galilee?] As the prophets had declared that the Messiah was to come from the tribe of Judah, and from the family of David, and should be born in the city of Bethlehem: these Jews, imagining that Christ had been born in Galilee, concluded that he could not be the Messiah. Had they examined the matter a little further, they would have found that he had his birth exactly as the prophets had foretold: but for lack of this necessary examination they continued in unbelief, and rejected the Lord that brought them. Many still lose their souls nearly in the same way. They suffer themselves to be led away by common report, and getting prejudiced against the truth, refuse to give it a fair hearing, or to examine for themselves. It is on this ground that deism and irreligion have established themselves, and will still maintain their post.

42 Where David was?] that is, where he was born: 1 Sam. xvi. 1, 4. and where he was before he became king in Israel.

43 There was a division.] Εξουα, a schism, they were divided in sentiment, and separated into parties. This is the true notion of schism.

44 Would have taken him.] Or, they wished to seize him. And this they would have done, and destroyed him too at that time, had they been unanimous; but their being divided in opinion, ver. 43 was the cause, under God, why his life was at that time preserved. How true are the words of the prophet; the wrath of man shall praise thee: and the remainder thereof thou wilt restrain. Psal. lxxvi. 10.

46 Then came the officers.] They had followed him for several days seeking for a proper opportunity to seize on him, 48 Have any of the rulers or of the Pharisees believed on him?

49 But this people who knoweth not the law are cursed.
50 Nicodemus saith unto them, (he that came to Jesus by night, being one of them,)
4 Ch. 12. 42. Acts 6. 7. 1 Cor. 10. 22. &c. Ch. 3. 2.—Gr. to him.

51 'Soth our law judge any man, before it hear him, and know what he doeth?
52 They answered and said unto him, Art thou also of Galilee? Search, and look: for out of Galilee ariseth no prophet.
53 And every man went unto his own house.
g Dom. 1. 17. & 17A. &c. & 19. 16.—h Im. 9. 1, 2. Met. 4. 15. Ch. 1. 64. Ver. 41 when they might fix some charge of sedition, &c. upon him; but the more they listened, the more they were convinced of his innocence, purity, and consummate wisdom.

46. Never man spoke like this man.] Though these officers had gone on the errand of their masters, they had not entered into their spirit. They were sent to apprehend a seditious man, and a false prophet. They came where Jesus taught; they found him to be a different person to the description they received from their masters, and therefore did not attempt to touch or molest him. No doubt they expected, when they told their employers the truth, that they would have commended them, and acknowledged their own mistake; but these simple people were not in the secret of their masters' malice. They heard, they felt, that no man ever spoke with so much grace, power, majesty, and eloquence. They had never heard a discourse so affecting and persuasive. So Jesus still speaks to all who are simple of heart. He speaks pardon—he speaks holiness—he speaks salvation, to all who have ears to hear. No man ever did, or can speak as he does. He teaches the whole truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

48. Have any of the rulers—believed on him?] Very few. But is this a proof that he is not of God? No, truly. If he were of the world, the world would love its own. The religion of Christ has been in general rejected by the rulers of this world. A life of mortification, self-denial, and humility, does not comport with the views of those who will have their portion in this life. It has ever been a mark of the truth of God, that the great, the mighty, and the wise, have in general rejected it. They are too much occupied with this world, to attend to the concerns of the next.

49. This people! O oχλος, this rabble. The common people were treated by the Pharisees with the most sovereign contempt, they were termed φαρισαιοι ήμ ηα-αρετι, people of the earth; and were not thought worthy to have a resurrection to eternal life. Wagenseil and Schoetigen have given many proofs of the contempt in which the common people were held by the Pharisees. Those who were disciples of any of the rabbins, were considered as being in a much better state. When they paid well, they purchased their masters' good opinion.

50. Nicodemus being one of them] That is, a Pharisee, and a ruler of the Jews: see on ch. iii. 1.
51. Doth our law judge any man? Τοσ αρθρωται, the man, i. e. who is accused. Perhaps Nicodemus did not refer so much to any thing in the law of Moses, as to what was commonly practised among them. Josephus says, Ant. b. xiv. c. 9. s. 3. That the law has forbidden any man to be put to death, though wicked, unless he be first condemned to die by the sanhedrim. It was probably in this law, which is not expressly mentioned in the five books of Moses, that Nicodemus here alludes. See laws relative to this point, Deut. xvii. 8, &c. xix. 15.

52. Art thou also of Galilee?] They knew very well that he was not; but they spoke this by way of reproach. As if they had said, thou art no better than he is, as thou takest his part. Many of the Galileans had believed on him, which the Jews considered to be a reproach. Art thou his disciple, as the Galileans are?

Search, and look] Examine the Scriptures, search the public registers, and thou wilt see that out of Galilee there ariseth no prophet. Neither the Messiah, nor any other prophet, has ever proceeded from Galilee, nor ever can. This conclusion, says Calmet, was false and impertinent: false, because Jonah was of Gathheper, in Galilee: see 2 Kings xiv. 25. compared with Josh. xix. 13. The prophet Nahum was also a Galilean, for he was of the tribe of Simeon: and some suppose that Malachi was of the same place. The conclusion, was false, because there not having been a prophet from any particular place, was no argument that there never could be one; as the place had not been proscribed.

53. And every man went, &c.] The authority and influence of Nicodemus in this case was so great, that the sanhedrim broke up without being able to conclude any thing. As the feast was now ended, they were not obliged to continue any longer in or about Jerusalem; and therefore all returned to their respective dwellings. This verse, and the first eleven verses of the following chapter, are wanting in several MSS. Some of those which retain the paragraph mark it with obelisks, as a proof of spuriousness. These which do retain it, have it with such a variety of reading as is no where else found in the Sacred Writings. Professor Griesbach leaves the whole paragraph in the text, with notes of doubtfulness. Most of the modern critics consider it as resting on no solid authority.

The following, in the left-hand column, is a literal translation of the whole as it stands in the Codex Bezae. That on the right, is a connected view of it from other manuscripts.

John, chap. vii. 53. viii. 1.—11.
From the Codex Bezae. From other MSS.
Chap. vii. 53 And every one 53 And every one went away to his own house. to his own people (κα ιδια αυτου) At place.

Chap. viii. 1 And Jesus went to the mount of Olives. 1 And Jesus went out to the mount of Olives.
2 But he came again early into the temple, and all the people came unto him. 2 But very early in the morning Jesus came again into the temple, and all the people came; and having sat down he taught them.

3 And the scribes and Pharisees brought a woman taken in adultery; and her in the midst, 3 And the chief priests and the Pharisees bring unto him a woman, taken in sin; and setting man taken in adultery; and her in the midst, having set her in the midst,
4 The priests say unto him, 4 They spoke, tempting him, tempting him, that they might Teacher, we found this one com- have an accusation against mitting adultery, in the very him, Teacher, this woman was act. taken committing adultery, in the very act:

5 Now Moses, in the law, 5 And in the law, Moses com- gave orders to stone such; manded us to stone such; What but what dost thou say now? dost thou say concerning her?
6 But Jesus having stooped 6 But this they spoke tempting down, wrote with his finger down, wrote with his finger him, that they might find an accusation against him: but he, knowing it, stooped down, (At bowed down) and wrote with his finger upon the ground, seeming as if he did not hear. (At pretending.)

7 But as they continued asking, he lifted up himself, and he said, said unto them, Let him who is without sin be without sin among you, first among you, first cast a stone at cast a stone at her.
8 And stooping down again, 8 And stooping down again, he he wrote with his finger upon wrote with his finger upon the ground. (the sins of every one of them.)

9 And each of the Jews went out, beginning from the oldest, 9 And each one of them went out, beginning from the oldest, (At and hearing these things est, so that all went out: and they departed one by one,) be- he was left alone, the woman ginning from the oldest: and being in the midst. Jesus was left alone, and the woman in the midst of them.

10 And Jesus lifting up him- self, said to the woman, Where are they? Hath no one con- demned thee? 10 Jesus therefore looking up, saw her, and said, Woman, are they? Hath no one con- where are thy accusers? Hath demned thee? no one condemn'd thee?

11 Then she said unto him, No one, sir. Then he said, And Jesus said, Neither will I Neither do I condemn thee; judge thee; go away, and hence- go, and from this time sin no more. See the notes on this account in the following chapter.

CHAPTER VIII.

The story of the woman taken in adultery, 1—11. Jesus declares himself the light of the world, 12. The Pharisees cavil, 13. Jesus answers, and shows his authority, 14—20. He delivers a second discourse, in which he convicts them of sin, and foretels their dying in it, because of their unbelief, 21—24. They question him; he answers and foretels his own death, 25—29. Many believe on him, in consequence of his last discourse, 30. To whom he gives suitable advice, 31, 32. The Jews again cavil, and plead the nobility and advantages of their birth, 33. Jesus shows the vanity of their pretensions, and the wickedness of their hearts, 34—37. They blaspheme, and Christ convicts and reproves them, and asserts his divine nature, 48—53. They attempt to stone him, 59. [A. M. 4088. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCH. 1.]

JESUS went unto the mount of Olives.
2 And early in the morning he came again into the temple, a Met. 21. 1. &

and all the people came unto him; and he sat down, and taught them.
21. 2. Mark II. 1.

NOTES.—Verse 3. A woman taken in adultery] Some of the popish writers say that her name was Susanna; that she was espoused to an old decrepid man, named Marassek; that she died a saint in Spain, whither she had followed St.

James. These accounts the judicious Calmet properly terms fables. It is allowed that adultery was exceedingly common at this time, so common that they had ceased to put the law in force

3 And the scribes and Pharisees brought unto him a woman taken in adultery; and when they had set her in the midst, 4 They say unto him, Master, this woman was taken in adultery, in the very act.

5 Now Moses in the law commanded us, that such should be stoned: but what sayest thou?

6 This they said, tempting him, that they might have to accuse him. But Jesus stooped down, and with his finger wrote on the ground, as though he heard them not.

7 So when they continued asking him, he lifted up himself, and said unto them, He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her.

8 And again he stooped down, and wrote on the ground.

9 And they which heard it, being convicted by their own hearts, went out one by one, beginning at the eldest, even unto the last: and Jesus was left alone, and the woman standing in the midst.

10 When Jesus had lifted up himself, and saw none but the woman, he said unto her, Woman, where are those thine accusers? hath no man condemned thee?

11 She said, No man, Lord. And Jesus said unto her, Neither do I condemn thee: go, and sin no more.

12 Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life.

13 The Pharisees therefore said unto him, Thou bearest record of thyself; thy record is not true.

14 Jesus answered and said unto them, Though I bear record of myself, yet my record is true. For I know whom I have sent, and he beareth record of me, and his record is true. For I know whom I have sent, and he beareth record of me, and his record is true. For I know whom I have sent, and he beareth record of me, and his record is true.

against it. The waters of jealousy were no longer drunk, the calprits, or those suspected of this crime, being so very numerous; and the men, who were guilty themselves, dared not try their suspected wives, as it was believed the waters would have no evil effect upon the wife, if the husband himself had been criminal. See the whole of the process on the waters of jealousy, in the notes on Num. v. 14, &c. and see end of ch. xviii.

5. That such should be stoned? It is not strictly true that Moses ordered adultery in general to be punished by stoning. The law simply says, that the adulterer and adulteress shall be put to death. Lev. xx. 10. Deut. xxii. 22. The rabbins say they were strangled. This they affirm was the ordinary mode of punishment, where the species of death was not marked in the law. If the person guilty of an act of this kind, had been betrothed, but not married, she was to be stoned: Deut. xxii. 23. But if she was the daughter of a priest, she was to be burned alive: Lev. xxi. 9. It appears from Ezek. xvi. 33, 40, that adulteresses in the time of that prophet were stoned, and pierced with a sword.

Selden and Fagius suppose that this woman's case was the same with that mentioned Deut. xxii. 93. If a damsel that is a virgin be betrothed unto a husband, and a man find her in the city, and lie with her, then ye shall stone them with stones that they die, the damsel because she cried not, and the man because he hath humbled his neighbour's wife. As the Pharisees spoke of stoning the woman, it is possible this was her case; and some suppose that the apparent indulgence with which our Lord treated her, insinuates that she had suffered some sort of violence, though not entirely innocent. Therefore, he said, I do not condemn thee, i. e. to death, because violence had been used. Sin no more. Nevertheless, thou art in certain respects guilty: thou mightest have made more resistance.

6. That they might have to accuse him? Had our Lord condemned the woman to death, they might have accused him to Pilate, as arrogating to himself the power of life and death, which the Romans had taken away from the Jews; besides, the Roman laws did not condemn an adulteress to be put to death. On the other hand, if he had said she should not be put to death, they might have represented him to the people as one who decided contrary to the law, and favoured the crime of which the woman was accused.

With his finger wrote? Several MSS. add, their sins who accused her, and the sins of all men. There are many idle conjectures concerning what our Lord wrote on the ground, several of which may be seen in Calmet. We never find that Christ wrote any thing before or after this: and what he wrote at this time, we know not. On this the pious Quersnel makes the following reflections:—"1. Since Jesus Christ never wrote but once that we hear of, in his whole life. 2. Since he did it only in the dust. 3. Since it was only to avoid condemning a sinner: and, 4. Since he would not have that which he wrote so much as known; let men learn from hence never to write but when it is necessary or useful; to do it with humility and modesty; and to do it on a principle of charity. How widely does Christ differ from men! He writes his divine thoughts in the dust: they wish to have theirs cut in marble, and engraved on brass."

7. He that is without sin? Ἀναπαύστος, meaning the same kind of sin; adultery, fornication, &c. Kypke has largely proved that the verb ἀναπαύστος is used in this sense by the best Greek writers.

Let him first cast a stone at her? Or, upon her, ἐπ' αὐτήν. The Jewish method of stoning, according to the rabbins, was as follows:—The culprit, half naked, the hands tied behind the back, was placed on a scaffold, ten or twelve feet high; the witnesses who stood with her, pushed her off with great force: if she was killed by the fall there was nothing further done: but if she was not, one of the witnesses took up a very large stone, and dashed it upon her breast, which generally was the coup de grace, or finishing stroke. This mode of punishment seems referred to, Matt. xxi. 44. However, this procedure does not appear to have been always attended to. See Lev. xxiv. 16, and verse 69. of this chapter.

8. Being convicted by their own consciences? So it is likely they were all guilty of similar crimes.

Beginning at the eldest, even unto the last? Ἀπὸ τοῦ πρεσβυτέρου καὶ ἕως τοῦ νεώτερου, from the most honourable to those of the least repute. In this sense the words are undoubtedly to be understood.

The woman standing in the midst? But if they all went out, how could she be in the midst? It is not said that all the people, whom our Lord had been instructing, went out, but only her accusers: see ver. 11. The rest undoubtedly continued with their Teacher.

11. Neither do I condemn thee? Bishop Pearce says, "It would have been strange if Jesus, when he was not a magistrate, and had not the witnesses before him to examine them; and when she had not been tried and condemned by the law and legal judges, should have taken upon him to condemn her. This being the case, it appears why Jesus avoided giving an answer to the question of the scribes and Pharisees; and also how little reason there is to conclude from hence, that Christ seems in this case not enough to have discouraged adultery, though he called it a sin. And yet this opinion took place so early among the Christians, that the reading of this story was industriously avoided in the lessons recited out of the Gospels, in the public service of the churches: as if Jesus's saying, I do not condemn thee, had given too much countenance to women guilty of that crime. In consequence of this, as it was never read in the churches, and as it was probably marked in the MSS. as a portion not to be read there: this whole story, from ver. 1. to ver. 11. inclusive, came, in length of time, to be left out in some MSS. though in the greater part it is still remaining." Thus far the judicious and learned Bishop. How the passage stands in all the MSS. hitherto collected, may be seen in Wetstein and Griesbach. After weighing what has been adduced in favour of its authenticity, and seriously considering its state in the MSS. as exhibited in the Var. Lect. of Griesbach, I must confess the evidence in its favour does not appear to me to be striking. Yet I by no means would have it expunged from the text. Its absence from many MSS. and the confused manner in which it appears in others, may be readily accounted for on the principles laid down by Bishop Pearce above. It may however be necessary to observe, that a very perfect connexion subsists between ver. 62. of chap. vii. and ver. 12. of this chapter—all the intermediate verses having been omitted by MSS. of the first antiquity and authority. In some MSS. it is found at the end of this Gospel; in others a vacant place is left in this chapter; and in others it is placed after the 21st chapter of Luke. See at the end of this chapter.

12. Then spake Jesus again unto them? Allowing the story about the woman taken in adultery to be authentic, and to stand here in its proper place; we may consider that our Lord having begun to teach the people in the temple, was interrupted by the introduction of this woman by the scribes and Pharisees; and now having dismissed them and the woman also, he resumes his discourse.

I am the light of the world? The fountain, whence all intellectual light and spiritual understanding proceed: without me all is darkness, misery, and death. The Divine Being was by the rabbins denominated the light of the world. So in Bamidbar Rabba. "The Israelites said to God, O Lord of the universe, thou commandest us to light lamps to thee, yet thou art the light of the world; and with thee the light dwelleth." Our Lord therefore assumes here a well known character of the Supreme Being; and with this we find the Jews were greatly offended.

Shall not walk in darkness? He shall be saved from ignorance, infidelity, and sin. If he follow me, become my disciple, and believe on my name, he shall have my Spirit to bear witness with his, that he is a child of God. He shall have the light of life—such a light as brings and supports life. The sun, the fountain of light, is also the fountain of life: by his vivifying influences, all things live—neither animal nor vegetable life could exist, were it not for his influence. Jesus, the Sun of righteousness, Mal. iv. 2. is the fountain of all spiritual and eternal life. His light brings life with it, and they who walk in his light, live in his life. This sentiment is beautifully expressed and illustrated in the following Latinable verse (all monosyllables except two words) of that second Spenser, Phineas Fletcher: speaking of the conversion of a soul to God, he says:

"Now LOVES new LOVE, new LOVE new LIFE hath bred:

A LOVE that LIVES by LOVE, and LOVES by LIGHT;

A LOVE to him, to whom all LOVES are wed;

A LIGHT, to whom the SUN is DARKEST NIGHT;

EYE'S LIGHT, heart'S LOVE, soul'S ONLY LIFE he is:

LIFE, soul, love, heart, LIGHT, eye, and all are his.

He eye, LIGHT heart, LOVE, soul; He all my joy and bliss!

PURCELL ISLAND, CAN. l. v. 7.

Digitized by Google

30 As he speaks these words, many believed on him.
 31 Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, there are ye my disciples indeed ;
 32 And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.
 33 They answered him, We be Abraham's seed, and were never in bondage to any man : how sayest thou, Ye shall be made free ?
 34 Jesus answered them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Who-soever committeth sin is the servant of sin.
 35 And the servant abideth not in the house for ever : but the Son abideth ever.
 36 If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed.
 37 I know that ye are Abraham's seed ; but ye seek to kill me, because my word hath no place in you.
 38 I speak that which I have seen with my Father : and ye do that which ye have seen with your father.

1 Chp. 3. & 10. & 11. 6. — 1 Rom. 6. 14, 18, 22. & 8. 2. James 1. 25. & 2. 12. — 2 a. L. & C. Mar. 3. 19. Ver. 30. — Rom. 6. 16, 20. 2 Pet. 2. 19. — Gal. 4. 30. — R. 1. Gal. 1. — Ch. 7. 19. Ver. 40. — Ch. 3. 32. & 8. 19, 30. & 14. 19.

have power to put me to death, yet this shall not be because he hath abandoned me. No—he is ever with me, because I do that which pleaseth him : and it is his pleasure, that I should lay down my life for the salvation of the world. Does not our Lord allude to the following Scriptures? Sacrifice and offering thou didst not desire : my ears hast thou opened, (or, a body hast thou prepared me : Heb. x. 5.) then said I, Lo, I come; this is written in the volume of the book concerning me. I delight to do thy will, O my God! thy law is in my heart. Psal. xl. 6, 7, 8.

30. As he speaks these words, many believed on him.] The same sun that hardens the clay, softens the wax. This discourse, which proved the savour of death unto death to the obstinate Pharisees, became the savour of life unto life to many of the simple-hearted people.

31. If ye continue in my word] Or, in this doctrine of mine. It is not enough to receive God's truth—we must retain, and walk in it. And it is only when we receive the truth, love it, keep it, and walk in it, that we are the genuine disciples of Christ.

32. Ye shall know the truth] Shall have a constant experiential knowledge of its power and efficacy.

And the truth shall make you free] It was a maxim of the Jews, "that no man was free, but he who exercised himself in the meditation of the Law." No man is truly free, but he in whose heart the power of sin is destroyed, and who has received the spirit of adoption through which he cries Abba! Father! See Rom. viii. 15. The bondage of sin is the most grievous bondage : and freedom from its guilt and influence, is the greatest liberty.

33. They answered] That is, the other Jews who had not believed—the carping, cavilling Pharisees, already mentioned : for the words cannot be spoken of the simple people who had already believed. See ver. 30.

We were never in bondage to any man] This assertion was not only false, but it was ridiculous in the extreme ; seeing that their whole history, sacred and profane, is full of recitals of their servitude in Egypt, in Chaldea, under the Persians, under the Macedonians, and under the Romans. But those who are not under the influence of the truth of God, will speak and act according to the influence of the spirit of falsehood and error. If the words are to be restrained to themselves alone, they may be understood thus : We are Abraham's seed : and we were never in bondage. Both these propositions had a faint shadow of truth.

34. Who-soever committeth sin, is the servant of sin.] Or, indolent, &c. is the slave of sin. This was the slavery of which Christ spoke : and deliverance from it was the liberty which he proclaimed.

35. And the servant abideth not in the house] Or rather, Now the slave abideth not in the family. As if Jesus had said : And now that I am speaking of a slave, I will add one thing more, viz. a slave has no right to any part of the inheritance in the family to which he belongs : but the son, the legitimate son, has a right. He can make any servant of the family free, though no slave can. He can divide or bestow the inheritance as he pleases. Our Lord seems here to refer to the sending away of Ishmael, mentioned Gen. xxi. 10—14. Only those who are genuine children can inherit the estate. If sons, then heirs : heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ : Gal. iv. 21—31. Rom. viii. 17. and see Bishop Pearce's paraphrase.

37. My word hath no place in you] Or, this doctrine of mine hath no place in you. Ye hear the truths of God, but ye do not heed them : the word of life has no influence over you : and how can it, when ye seek to kill me, because I proclaim this truth to you.

It is a dismal omen, when a person is regardless of the truth of God : it is more so to be provoked against it : but to persecute and endeavour to destroy those who preach it, is the last degree of perverseness and obduracy. The word of God requires a heart which is empty. A heart filled with earthly projects, carnal interests, ambition, thoughts of raising a fortune, and with the love of the superfluities and pleasures of life, is not fit to receive the seed of the kingdom. When a man shuts his heart against it by his passions, he at the same time opens it to all sorts of crimes. Queen's.

39 They answered and said unto him, Abraham is our father. Jesus saith unto them, If ye were Abraham's children, ye would do the works of Abraham.

40 But now ye seek to kill me, a man that hath told you the truth, which I have heard of God : this did not Abraham.

41 Ye do the deeds of your father. Then said they to him, We be not born of fornication ; we have one Father, even God.

42 Jesus said unto them, If God were your Father, ye would love me : for I proceeded forth and came from God ; neither came I of myself, but he sent me.

43 Why do ye not understand my speech? even because ye cannot bear my word.

44 Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own : for he is a liar, and the father of it.

45 And because I tell you the truth, ye believe me not.

1 Mat. 3. 9. Ver. 33. — 1 Rom. 2. 29. & 9. 7. Gal. 3. 7, 29. — 1 Ver. 35. — 2 1. Jn. 8. 16. & 18. Mal. 1. 1. — 1 John 5. 1. — Ch. 16. 12. & 17. 8, 25. — Ch. 8. 43. & 7. 23, 29. — Ch. 7. 17. — 1 Mat. 13. 35. 1 John 3. 8. — Jude 6.

From this whole period, says Dr. Lightfoot, it is manifest that the whole tendency of our Saviour's discourse, is to show the Jews, that they are the seed of that serpent, which was to bruise the heel of the Messiah : else what could that mean, ver. 44. Ye are of your father the devil, i. e. ye are the seed of the serpent.

38. I speak that which I have seen] I speak nothing but that unchangeable, eternal truth, which I have received from the bosom of God.

Ye do that which ye have seen] Instead of twoparts, ye have seen, I think we should read nowhere, ye have heard, on the authority of BCKL, fifteen others ; Coptic, Æthiopic, Armenian, latter Syriac in the margin : Gothic, one copy of the Itala : Origen, Cyril, and Chrysostom. This reading, says Bishop Pearce, (who has adopted it) seems preferable to the other, because it could not be said with the same propriety, that the Jews had seen any thing with their father the devil, as it could that Jesus had seen with his.

Jesus saw the Father, for he was the word that was with God from eternity. The Jews did not see, they only felt and heard their father the devil. It is the interest of Satan to keep himself out of sight, and to work in the dark.

39. If ye were Abraham's children] Griesbach reads eye, ye are, instead of ye, ye were, on the authority of BDL, Vulgate, four copies of the Itala : Origen, and Augustin.

Ye would do the works of Abraham.] As the son has the nature of his father in him, and naturally imitates him ; so if ye were the children of Abraham, ye would imitate him in his faith, obedience, and uprightness : but this ye do not, for ye seek to kill me—ye are watching for an opportunity to destroy me, merely because I tell you the truth : Abraham never did any thing like this ; therefore, you have no spiritual relationship to him.

41. Ye do the deeds of your father] You have certainly another father than Abraham ; one who has instilled his own malignant nature into you : and as ye seek to murder me for telling you the truth, ye must be the offspring of him who was a murderer from the beginning, and stood not in the truth, ver. 44.

We be not born of fornication] We are not a mixed spurious breed—our tribes and families have been kept distinct—we are descended from Abraham by his legal wife Sarah : and we are no idolaters.

We have one Father, even God.] In the spiritual sense of father and son, we are not a spurious, that is, an idolatrous race ; because we acknowledge none as our spiritual father, and worship none as such, but the true God. See Bp. Pearce.

42. If God were your Father, ye would love me] I came from God, and it would be absurd to suppose that you would persecute me if you were under the influence of God. The children of the same Father should not murder each other.

43. Why do ye not understand my speech?] Τὴν ἑλπίαν τὴν ἡμῶν, this my mode of speaking—when illustrating spiritual by natural things : λαλία refers to the manner of speaking ; λογος to the matter or subject on which he spoke. For λαλιαν, the Codex Bezae had originally ἀληθειαν ; why do ye not acknowledge this truth of mine? A few other MSS. agree in this reading.

Because ye cannot hear my word.] That is, ye cannot bear my doctrine : it comes too close to you ; it searches your hearts, detects your hypocrisy, and exposes your iniquitous intentions and designs : and as ye are determined not to leave your sins, so ye are purposed not to hear my doctrine.

44. Ye are of your father the devil] Ye are the seed of the old serpent. See on ver. 37.

The lusts of your father] Like father like son—What Satan desires, ye desire ; because ye are filled with his nature. Awful state of unregenerate men ! They have the nearest alliance to Satan—they partake of his nature, and have in them the same principles and propensities which characterise the very nature and essence of the devil ! Reader, canst thou rest in this state ? Apply to God, through Christ, that thou mayest be born again.

He was a murderer from the beginning] It was through him that Adam transgressed ; in consequence of which death entered into the world, and slew him and all his posterity. This 46 Which of you convinceth me of sin? And if I say the truth, why do ye not believe me?

47 He that is of God heareth God's words: ye therefore hear them not, because ye are not of God.

48 V Then answered the Jews, and said unto him, Say we not well that thou art a Samaritan, and hast a devil?

49 Jesus answered, I have not a devil; but I honour my Father, and ye do dishonour me.

50 And I seek not mine own glory: there is one that seeketh and judgeth.

51 Verily, verily, I say unto you, If a man keep my saying, he shall never see death.

52 Then said the Jews unto him, Now we know that thou hast a devil. Abraham is dead, and the prophets; and thou sayest, If a man keep my saying, he shall never taste of death.

53 Art thou greater than our father Abraham, which is d Ch. 10. 26. 27. 1 John 4. 6.—Ch. 7. 50. & 10. 20. Verse 52.—(Ch. 8. 41. & 7. 18.—Ch. 8. 54. & 11. 25.—2 Zech. 1. 6. Heb. 11. 13.—1 Ch. 8. 2.—2 Ch. 8. 41. & 12. 14. & 17. 1.)

was the sentiment of the Jews themselves. In Sokar Cadash, the wicked are called "The children of the old serpent, who slew Adam and all his descendants." See Schoettgen.
Abde not in the truth He stood not in the truth—was once in a state of glorious felicity, but fell from it: and being deprived of all good himself, he could not endure that others should enjoy any; therefore by his lies he deceived Eve, and brought her, her husband, and through them, their posterity, into his own condemnation.

He speaketh of his own—Εκ τῶν ιδίων λέγει, he speaketh of his own offering, or from his own disposition, for he is the father and fountain of all error and falsity; and all who are deceived by him, and partake of his disposition, falsity and cruelty, are his offspring, for he is a liar and the father of it—καὶ ὁ πατὴρ αὐτοῦ—literally, his father also. There is considerable difficulty in this verse. The Cainites, and the Archontites, mentioned by Epiphanius, read it thus: "Ye are the children of your father the devil, because he is a liar, and his father was a liar. He was a man-slayer, and he did not remain in the truth. When he speaketh, he speaketh a lie of his own, (progenitors, understood) because his father also was a liar." The consequences which the above heretics drew from this verse, were the following. They said that the father of the Jews was a demon; that he also had a demon for his father; and that he had a demon for his father, &c. The Archontites maintained that Cain had a demon for his father, the spirit which our Lord speaks of here; and that the Jews proceeded from the race of Cain.

Grotius, supposing that the devil who tempted Eve was not the prince of devils, but rather a subordinate one, seems to think he may be understood here, he is a liar, and his father also, which is the literal translation of the latter clause of the text, καὶ ὁ πατὴρ αὐτοῦ, as it has been read by many of the primitive Fathers.

Mr. Wakefield, by changing ro before ῥωδες, into ric, gives the text the following translation:—"The devil is your father, and ye willingly perform the lusts of your father. He was a man-slayer from the first, and continued not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When any one speaketh a lie, he speaketh according to his own kindred: for his father also is a liar." Our own translation, that refers ῥωδες αὐτοῦ, to ῥωδες, a lie, and not to ῥωδες, a liar, is probably the most correct.

46. Which of you convinceth me of sin? Do you pretend to reject the truths which I announce, because my life does not correspond to the doctrines I have taught? But can any of you prove me guilty of any fault? You have maliciously watched all my steps: have you seen the smallest matter to reprove, in any part of my conduct?

But it is probable that ἀπαρτία, sin, is put here in opposition to ἀλβητία, truth, in the same sense, and then it should be rendered falsehood. The very best Greek writers use the word in the same sense: this Kypke proves by quotations from Polybius, Lucian, Dionysius Halicarnassensis, Plutarch, Thucydides, and Hippocrates. Raphelius adds a pertinent quotation from Herodotus, and shows that the purest Latin writers have used the word peccatum, sin, in the sense of error or falsehood. See the note on Gen. xiii. 13.

47. He that is of God? Meaning probably himself: he who came from God, or was born of God—heareth the words of God—has the constant inspiration of his Spirit, speaks nothing but truth, and cannot possibly err.

48. Thou art a Samaritan? This was the same among them as heretic or schismatic among us. This is the only time in which the Jews gave our Lord this title of reproach; and they probably grounded it on his having preached among them, and lodged in their villages. See the account in chap. iv. but Samaritan, among them, meant a person unworthy of any credit.

Hast a devil? Art possessed by an evil spirit; and art, in consequence, deranged.

49. I have not a devil? The first part of the charge was too subtle: if taken literally, it was both absurd and impossible; they did not believe it themselves, and therefore our Lord does not stop a moment to refute it: but he answers to the second with the utmost meekness and conclusiveness: I honour God. This is what no demon can do, nor any man who is under such influence.

50. I seek not mine own glory? Another proof that I am dead? and the prophets are dead: whom makest thou thyself? 54 Jesus answered, If I honour myself, my honour is nothing: it is in my Father that honoureth me; of whom ye say that he is your God:

55 Yet I ye have not known him; but I know him: and if I should say, I know him not, I shall be a liar like unto you: but I know him, and keep his saying.

56 Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day: and he saw it, and was glad.

57 Then said the Jews unto him, Thou art not yet fifty years old, and hast thou seen Abraham?

58 Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Before Abraham was, I am.

59 V Then took they up stones to cast at him: but Jesus hid himself, and went out of the temple, going through the midst of them, and so passed by.

Acts 2. 13.—1 Ch. 7. 29. 29.—in Luke 10. 24.—in Heb. 11. 13.—in Exod. 3. 14. Isa. 43. 12. Ch. 17. 5. Gal. 1. 17. Rev. 1. 1.—in Ch. 18. 20. 22. & 11. 2.—in Luke 4. 22.

not influenced by any spirit but that which proceeds from God. But there is one who seeketh—i. e. my glory—and judgment—will punish you for your determined obinacity and iniquity.

51. Shall never see death? As Moses promised a long life, with abundance of temporal blessings, to those who should keep his statutes and ordinances: so he who keeps my doctrine shall not only have a long life, but shall never see death, he shall never come under the power of the death of the soul; but shall live eternally with me in my glory.

54. Your God? Many MSS. and most of the Versions, read ἑαυτοῦ, our, instead of αὐτοῦ. The variation is of very little consequence. They called God their God, while enemies to him both in their spirit and conduct.

56. Abraham rejoiced to see my day? Or, he earnestly desired to see my day; ἠγάπησεν, from ἀγαπᾶ, very much, and ἀλλοπαί, I leap—his soul leaped forward in earnest hope and strong expectation, that he might see the incarnation of Jesus Christ. The metaphor appears to be taken from a person, who, desiring to see a long expected friend who is coming, runs forward, now and then jumping up to see if he can discover him. There is a saying very like this in Sokar Nomer, fol. 61. "Abraham rejoiced because he could know, and perceive, and cleave to the divine name." The divine name is יהוה יהוה; and by this they simply mean God himself.

And he saw it? Not only in the first promise, Gen. xi. 18. for the other patriarchs saw this as well as he: and not only in that promise which was made particularly to himself, Gen. xii. 7. xxii. 18. (compared with Gal. iii. 16.) that the Messiah should spring from this family: but he saw this day especially when Jehovah appeared to him in a human form, Gen. xviii. 2, 17, which many suppose to have been a manifestation of the Lord Jesus.

57. Thou art not yet fifty years old? Some MSS. read forty. The age of our blessed Lord has never been properly determined. Some of the primitive fathers believed that he was fifty years old when he was crucified; but their foundation, which is no other than these words of the Jews, is but a very uncertain one. Calmet thinks that our Lord was at this time about thirty-four years and ten months old: and that he was crucified about the middle of his thirty-sixth year: and asserts that the vulgar era is three years too late. On the other hand, some allow him to have been but thirty-one years old; and that his ministry had lasted but one year. Many opinions on this subject, which are scarcely worthy of being copied, may be found in Calmet.

58. Before Abraham was, I am. The following is a literal translation of Calmet's note on this passage:—"I am from all eternity. I have existed before all ages. You consider in me only the person who speaks to you, and who has appeared to you within a particular time. But besides this human nature, which ye think ye know, there is in me a divine and eternal nature. Both united, subsist together in my person. Abraham knew how to distinguish them. He adored me as his God; and desired me as his Saviour. He has seen me in my eternity, and he predicted my coming into the world."

On the same verse Blaheo speaks as follows—"What Jesus here says, relates (I think) to his existence antecedent to Abraham's days, and not to his having been the Christ appointed and foretold before that time: for if Jesus had meant this, the answer, I apprehend, would not have been a pertinent one. He might have been appointed and foretold for the Christ; but if he had not had an existence before Abraham's days, neither could he have seen Abraham, (as, according to our English translation, the Jews suppose him to have said) nor could Abraham have seen him, as I suppose the Jews understood him to have said in the preceding verse: to which words of the Jews, the words of Jesus here are intended as an answer.

59. Then took they up stones, &c. It appears that the Jews understood him as asserting his Godhead; and supposing him to be a blasphemer, they proceeded to stone him, according to the law: Lev. xxiv. 16.

But Jesus hid himself? In all probability he rendered himself invisible—though some will have it that he conveyed himself away from those Jews who were his enemies, by mixing himself with the many who believed on him, (ver. 30, 31.) and who, we may suppose, favoured his escape. Pearce.

But where did they lay the stones, Christ and they being in the temple? It is answered, 1st. It is probable, as the buildings of the temple had not been yet completed, there might have been many stones near the place: or, 2dly. They might have gone out to the outer courts for them; and before their return our Lord had escaped. See Lightfoot and Calmet.

Going through the midst of them, and so passed by. These words are wanting in the Codex Beza, and in several editions and versions. Erasmus, Grotius, Beza, Pearce, and Griesbach, think them not genuine. The latter has left them out of the text. But notwithstanding what these critics have said, the words seem necessary to explain the manner of our Lord's escape. 1st. Et hid himself, by becoming invisible; and then, 2dly. Et passed through the midst of them, and thus got clear away from the place. See a similar escape mentioned, Luke iv. 30. and the note there.

The subjects of this chapter are both uncommon and of vast importance.

1. The case of the woman taken in adultery, when properly and candidly considered, is both intelligible and edifying. It is likely that the accusation was well founded; and that the scribes and Pharisees endeavoured maliciously to serve themselves of the fact, to embroil our Lord with the civil power, or ruin his moral reputation. Our Lord was no magistrate, and therefore could not, with any propriety, give judgment in the case—had he done it, it must have been considered an invasion of the rights and office of the civil magistrate, and would have afforded them ground for a process against him. On the other hand, had he acquitted the woman, he might have been considered not only as setting aside the law of Moses, but as being indulgent to a crime of great moral turpitude; and the report of this must have ruined his moral character. He disappointed this malice by refusing to enter into the case; and overwhelmed his adversaries with confusion by unmasking their hearts, and pointing out their private abominations. It is generally supposed that our Lord acquitted the woman: this is incorrect: he neither acquitted nor condemned her: he did not enter at all juridically into the business. His saying, neither do I condemn thee, was no more than a simple declaration that he would not concern himself with the matter:

that being the office of the civil magistrate; but as a preacher of righteousness, he exhorted her to abandon her evil practice, lest the punishment, which she was now likely to escape, should be inflicted on her, for a repetition of her transgression.

2. In several places in this chapter, our Lord shows his intimate union with the Father, both in will, doctrine, and deed: and though he never speaks so as to confound the persons, yet he evidently shows that such was the indivisible unity subsisting between the Father and the Son, that what the one witnessed, the other witnessed: what the one did, the other did; and that he who saw the one, necessarily saw the other.

3. The original state of Satan is here pointed out—he abode not in the truth, ver. 44. Therefore he was once in the truth, in righteousness, and true holiness—and he fell from that truth into sin and falsehood, so that he became the father of lies, and the first murderer. Our Lord confirms here the Mosaic account of the fall of man; and shows that this fall was brought about by his lies, and that these lies issued in the murder or destruction both of the body and soul of man.

4. The patience and meekness exercised by our Lord towards his most fell and unrelenting enemies, are worthy the especial regard of all those who are persecuted for righteousness.—When he was reviled, he reviled not again. As the Searcher of hearts, he simply declared their state, ver. 44. in order to their conviction and conversion: not to have done so, would have been to betray their souls. In this part of his conduct we find two grand virtues united, which are rarely associated in man, MEAGRNESS and VINDICTIVE—patience to bear all insults and personal injuries; and boldness, in the face of persecution and death, to declare the truth. The meek man generally leaves the sinner unproved: the bold and zealous man, often betrays a want of due self-management, and reproves sin in a spirit which prevents the reproof from reaching the heart. In this respect, also, our blessed Lord has left us an example that we should follow his steps. Let him that readeth understand.

CHAPTER IX.

Account of the man who was born blind, 1-5. Christ heals him, 6, 7. The man is questioned by his neighbours, 8-12. He is brought to the Pharisees, who question him, 13-17, and then his parents, 18-23. They again interrogate the man, who, vindicating the conduct of Christ, is excommunicated by them, 24-34. Jesus hearing of the conduct of the Pharisees, afterward finds the man, and reveals himself to him, 35-39. He passes sentence on the obduracy and blindness of the Pharisees, 39-41. [A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp.

AND as Jesus passed by, he saw a man which was blind from his birth. 2 And his disciples asked him, saying, Master, b who did sin, this man, or his parents, that he was born blind? 3 Jesus answered, Neither hath this man sinned, nor his parents: but that the works of God should be made manifest in him. 4 I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work. 5 As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world.

rents: but that the works of God should be made manifest in him. 4 I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work. 5 As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world.

NOTES.—Verse 1. And as Jesus passed by] This chapter is a continuation of the preceding, and therefore the word Jesus is not in the Greek text; it begins simply thus—And passing along, and repaying, &c. Having left the temple where the Jews were going to stone him, (chap. viii. 59.) it is probable our Lord went, according to his custom, to the mount of Olives. The next day, which was the Sabbath, ver. 14. he met a man who had been born blind, sitting in some public place, and asking alms from those who passed by, ver. 8.

2. Who did sin, this man, or his parents] The doctrine of the transmigration of souls, appears to have been an article in the creed of the Pharisees, and it was pretty general both among the Greeks and the Asiatics. The Pythagoreans believed the souls of men were sent into other bodies, for the punishment of some sin which they had committed in a previous state. This seems to have been the foundation of the disciples' question to our Lord. Did this man sin in a previous state, that he is punished in this body with blindness? Or did his parents commit some sin, for which they are thus plagued in their offspring?

Most of the Asiatic nations have believed in the doctrine of transmigration. The Hindoes still hold it; and profess to tell precisely the sin which the person committed in another body, by the afflictions which he endures in this: they profess also to tell the cures for these. For instance, they say the head-ach is a punishment for having, in a former state, spoken irreverently to father or mother. Madness, is a punishment for having been disobedient to father or mother, or to their spiritual guides. The epilepsy, is a punishment for having, in a former state, administered poison to any one at the command of his master. Pain in the eyes, is a punishment for having, in another body, coveted another man's wife. Blindness, is a punishment for having killed his mother: but this person, they say, before his new birth, will suffer many years torment in hell. See many curious particulars relative to this in the Armenian Annals, vol. iii. p. 168-175. and in the Institutes of Simon, chap. xi. sect. 48 to 53.

The Jewish Rabbins have had the same belief from the very remotest antiquity. Origen cites an apocryphal book of the Mishnah, in which the patriarch Jacob is made to speak thus: I am an angel of God: of the first order of spirits. Men call me Jacob, but my true name, which God has given me, is Israel.—Orat. Joseph. and Orat. 1. Many of the Jewish doctors have believed that the souls of Adam, Abraham, and Pharaoh, have successively animated the great men of their nation. Philo says, that the air is full of spirits, and that some, through their natural propensity, join themselves to bodies; and that others have an aversion from such a union. See several other things relative to this point, in his treatises De plant. Noe—De gigantibus—De Confus. Ling.—De Somniis, &c.; and see Calmet, where he is pretty largely quoted.

Josephus, Ant. b. xviii. c. 1. s. 3. and War. b. ii. c. 8. s. 14. gives an account of the doctrine of the Pharisees on this subject. He intimates that the souls of those only who were pious, were permitted to reanimate human bodies, and this was rather by way of reward than punishment; and that the souls of the vicious are put into eternal prisons, where they are continually tormented, and out of which they can never escape. But it is very likely that Josephus has not told the whole truth here; and that the doctrine of the Pharisees on this subject, was nearly the same with that of the Papists on purgatory. Those who are very wicked go irrecoverably to hell; but those who are not so, have the privilege of expiating their venial sins in purgatory. Thus, probably, is the Pharisean doctrine of the transmigration to be understood. Those who were comparatively pious, went into other bodies for the expiation of any remaining guilt which had not been removed previously to a sudden, or premature death; after which, they were fully prepared for paradise; but others, who had been incorrigibly wicked, were sent at once into hell, without ever being offered the privilege of amendment or escape. For the reasons which may be collected above, much as I reverence Bishop Pearce, I cannot agree with his note on this passage, where he says, that the words of his disciples should be thus understood: Who did sin? This man, that he is blind? or his parents, that he was born so? He thinks it probable that the disciples did not know that the man was born blind: if he was, then it was for some sin of his parents—if he was not born so, then this blindness came unto him as a punishment for some crime of his own. It may be just necessary to say, that some of the rabbins believed, that it was possible for an infant to sin in the womb, and to be punished with some bodily infirmity in consequence. See several examples in Lightfoot on this place.

3. Neither hath this man sinned, nor his parents] That is, the blindness of this person is not occasioned by any sin of his own, nor of his parents; but has happened in the ordinary course of divine Providence; and shall now become the instrument of salvation to his soul, edification to others, and glory to God. Many of the Jews thought that marks on the

¶ When he had thus spoken, he spat on the ground, and made clay of the spittle, and he anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay,

7 And said unto him, Go wash in the pool of Siloam, (which is by interpretation, Sent.) He went his way therefore, and washed, and came seeing.

8 ¶ The neighbours, therefore, and they which before had seen him that he was blind, said, Is not this he that sat and begged?

9 Some said, This is he: others said, He is like him: but he said, I am he.

10 Therefore said they unto him, How were thine eyes opened? 11 He answered and said, A man that is called Jesus made clay, and anointed mine eyes, and said unto me, Go to the pool of Siloam, and wash: and I went and washed, and I received sight.

12 Then said they unto him, Where is he? He said, I know not.

13 ¶ They brought to the Pharisees him that aforetime was blind.

[Mark 7. 33. & c. 23.—Or, spread the clay upon the eyes of the blind man.—a. Neh. 2. 15.]

body were proofs of sin in the soul. From a like persuasion, probably, arose that proverb among our northern neighbours—Mark him, whom God marks.

4. While it is dry) Though I plainly perceive that the cure of this man will draw down upon me the malice of the Jewish rulers, yet I must accomplish the work for which I came into the world while it is day; while the term of this life of mine shall last. It was about six months after this that our Lord was crucified. It is very likely that the day was now declining, and night coming on; and he took occasion from this circumstance to introduce the elegant metaphor immediately following. By this we are taught that no opportunity for doing good should be omitted—day representing the opportunity: more the loss of that opportunity.

5. I am the light of the world) Like the sun, it is my business to dispense light and heat every where; and to neglect no opportunity that may offer to enlighten and save the bodies and souls of men. See chap. viii. 12.

6. Anointed the eyes of the blind man) It would be difficult to find out the reason which induced our Lord to act thus. It is certain this procedure can never be supposed to have been any likely medical means to restore sight to a man who was born blind—this action, therefore, had no tendency to assist the miracle. If his eyelids had been only so gunned together, that they needed nothing but to be smudged and well washed, it is not likely that this could possibly have been omitted from his birth until now. The Jews believed that there was some virtue in spittle to cure the diseases of the eye; but they always accompanied this with some charm. Our Lord might make clay with the spittle, to show that no charms or spells were used; and to draw their attention more particularly to the miracle which he was about to work. Perhaps the best lesson we can learn from this is: that God will do his own work in his own way; and to hide pride from man, will often accomplish the most beneficial ends by means not only simple or despicable in themselves, but by such also as appear entirely contrary, in their nature and operation, to the end proposed to be effected by them.

7. Siloam) Called also Shiloah, Silos, or Siloa, was a fountain under the walls of Jerusalem, towards the east, between the city and the brook Kidron. Caimet thinks that this was the same with En-rogel, or the Fuller's fountain, which is mentioned in Josh. xv. 7. in Lam. v. 17. and in 1 Kings 1. 9. Its waters were collected in a great reservoir for the use of the city; and a stream from it supplied the pool of Bethesda.

By interpretation, Sent) From the Hebrew שֶׁנֶּה שְׁלֹחַ, he sent; either because it was looked upon as a gift sent from God, for the use of the city; or because its waters were directed or sent by canals or pipes into different quarters, for the same purpose. Some think there is an allusion here to Gen. xlix. 10. that this fountain was a type of Shiloah, the Christ, the smear of God; and that it was to direct the man's mind to the accomplishment of the above prophecy, that our Lord sent him to this fountain. This supposition does not appear very solid. The Turks have this fountain still in great veneration; and think the waters of it are good for the diseases of the eyes. Lightfoot says, that the spring of Siloam discharged itself by a double stream into a twofold pool—the upper was called שֶׁנֶּה שְׁלֹחַ, the lower שְׁלֹחַ; the one signifying אֵשׁ אֶלְמֵנוּי, sent, the latter אֵשׁ אֶלְמֵנוּי, Necess; and that our Lord marked this point so particularly, to inform the blind man that it was not to Shelah, but to Shiloach, that he must go to wash his eyes. These two pools seem to be referred to in Isa. vii. 23. xlii. 9.

8. That he was blind) Ὀτι τυφλὸς ἦν; but instead of this, σπρωγνὸν, whom he begged, or was a beggar, is the reading of ABD'PKL. sever others, both the Syriac, both the Arabic, latter Perseic, Coptic, Ethiopic, Armenian, Sahidic, Gothic, Slavonic, Vulgate, eight copies of the Itala, and some of the primitive Fathers. This is in all probability the true reading; and is received by Griesbach into the text.

Beggars in all countries have a language peculiar to themselves. The language of the Jewish beggars was the following: אֵשׁ אֶלְמֵנוּי Deserve something by me—Give me something that God may reward you. אֵשׁ אֶלְמֵנוּי Oh ye tender-hearted, do yourselves good by me. Another form which seems to have 14 And it was the sabbath day, when Jesus made the clay, and opened his eyes.

15 Then again the Pharisees also asked him, how he had received his sight. He said unto them, He put clay upon mine eyes, and I washed, and do see.

16 Therefore said some of the Pharisees, This man is not of God, because he keepeth not the sabbath day. Others said, How can a man that is a sinner do such miracles? And there was a division among them.

17 They say unto the blind man again, What sayest thou of him, that he hath opened thine eyes? He said, He is a prophet.

18 But the Jews did not believe concerning him, that he had been blind, and received his sight, until they called the parents of him that had received his sight.

19 And they asked them, saying, Is this your son, who ye say was born blind? how then doth he now see?

20 His parents answered them and said, We know that this is our son, and that he was born blind:

21 But by what means he now seeth, we know not; or who has opened his eyes? [See 2 Kings 4. 14.—1 Ver. 6, 7.—1 Ver. 33. Ch. 3. 2.—and Ch. 7. 12, 43. & 19.—a. Ch. 4. 2 & 9.]

been used by such as had formerly been in better circumstances, was this: אֵשׁ אֶלְמֵנוּי בי כִּי הָיָה אֶלְמֵנוּי Look back and see what I have been; look upon me now, and see what I am. See Lightfoot.

9. Some said, This is he) This miracle was not wrought in private—nor before a few persons—nor was it lightly credited. Those who knew him before, were divided in their opinion concerning him: not whether the man who sat there begging was blind before; for this was known to all: nor whether the person now before them saw clearly; for this was now notorious: but whether this was the person who was born blind, and who used in a particular place to sit begging.

Others said, He is like him) This was very natural: for certainly the restoration of his sight must have given him a very different appearance to what he had before.

11. A man that is called Jesus) The whole of this relation is simple and artless in the highest degree. The blind man had never seen Jesus, but he had heard of his name—he felt that he had put something on his eyes, which he afterwards found to be clay—but how this was made, he could not tell; because he could not see Jesus when he did it:—therefore he does not say, he made clay of spittle—but simply, he made clay, and spread it upon my eyes. Where a multitude of incidents must necessarily come into review, imposture and falsehood generally commit themselves, as it is termed; but however numerous the circumstances may be in a relation of fact, simple truth is never embarrassed.

12. Where is he?) They had designed to seize and deliver him up to the sanhedrim, as a violator of the law, because he had done this on the Sabbath day.

13. They brought to the Pharisees) These had the chief rule, and determined all controversies among the people: in every case of religion, their judgment was final: the people, now fully convinced that the man had been cured, brought him to the Pharisees, that they might determine how this was done, and whether it had been done legally.

14. It was the Sabbath) Some of the ancient rabbins taught, and they have been followed by some moderns not much better skilled in physic than themselves, that the salvia is a cure for several disorders of the eyes: but the former held this to be contrary to the law, if applied on the Sabbath. See Loarr-roo's Hor. Talin.

15. This man is not of God) He can neither be the Messiah nor a prophet, for he has broken the Sabbath. The Jews always argued falsely on this principle. The law relative to the observation of the Sabbath, never forbade any work but what was of the servile and unnecessary kind. Works of necessity and mercy never could be forbidden on that day, by him whose name is mercy, and whose nature is love: for the Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath.

How can a man that is a sinner, &c.) They knew very well that though magicians and impostors might do things apparently miraculous, yet nothing really good could be performed by them. We might have safely defied all the magicians in Egypt, who are said to have been so successful in imitating some of the miracles of Moses, to have opened the eyes of one blind man, or to have done any essential good either to the body or to the soul.

And there was a division among them) Εἰς τὴν αἰσχίαν, a decided difference of opinion, which caused a separation of the assembly.

17. He is a prophet) They had intended to lay snares for the poor man, that getting him to acknowledge Christ for the Messiah, they might put him out of the synagogue, ver. 23. or put him to death; that such a witness to the divine power of Christ might not appear against them. But as the mercy of God had given him his sight: so the wisdom of God taught him how to escape the snare laid for his ruin. On all thy story there shall be a defence, says the prophet, Isa. lv. 6. When God gives any particular mercy or grace, he sends power to preserve it, and wisdom to improve it. The man said, He is a prophet. Now, according to the Jewish maxim, a prophet might dispense with the observation of the Sabbath. See Grosvenor. If they allow that Jesus was a prophet, then, even in their sense, he might break the law of the Sabbath, and be guiltless: or if they did not allow him to be a prophet, they must account for had opened his eyes, we know not: he is of age; ask him: he shall speak for himself.

22 These words spake his parents, because they feared the Jews, for the Jews had agreed already, that if any man did confess that he was Christ, he should be put out of the synagogue.

23 Therefore said his parents, He is of age; ask him.

24 Then again called they the man that was blind, and said unto him, Give God the praise: we know that this man is a sinner.

25 He answered and said, Whether he be a sinner or no, I know not: one thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see.

26 Then said they to him again, What did he to thee? how opened he thine eyes?

27 He answered them, I have told you already, and ye did not hear: wherefore would ye hear it again? will ye also be his disciples?

28 Then they reviled him, and said, Thou art his disciple; but we are Moses' disciples.

29 We know that God spake unto Moses: as for this fellow, we know not from whence he is.

CH. 9. v. 13. — 13. Act. 5. 13. — Ver. 31. Ch. 14. 2. — Josh. 7. 18. 1 Sam. 4. 8. — Ver. 14. — Ch. 8. 14. — 14. Ch. 2. 10. — 15. Job 27. 8. — 20. 12. — Psal. 18. 41. — 21. 15. — 22. 15. — Prov. 1. 22. — 12. 22. — 13. 1. — 15. 1. — Jer. 11. 11. — 14. 12. — Ezek. 8. 12.

the miracles some other way than by the power of God: as from Satan or his agents no good can proceed:—to do this it was impossible. So the wisdom of God taught the poor man to give them such an answer, as put them into a complete dilemma; from which they could not possibly extricate themselves.

13 But the Jews did not believe.] All the subterfuge they could use, was simply to sin against their conscience, by asserting that the man had not been blind: but out of this subterfuge they were soon driven by the testimony of the parents, who, if tried further on this subject, might have produced as witness, not only the whole neighbourhood, but nearly the whole city: for it appears the man got his bread by publicly begging, ver. 8.

That he had been blind, and received his sight.] This clause is omitted in some MSS. probably because similar words occur immediately after. There is, however, no evidence against it, sufficient to exclude it from the text.

21 He is of age.] Ηλικίας εστι, literally, he has stature, i. e. he is a full-grown man: and in this sense the phrase is used by the best Greek writers. See Kypke and Raphaelius. Maturity age was fixed among the Jews at thirty years.

22 Put out of the synagogue.] That is, excommunicated—separated from all religious connexion with those who worshipped God. This was the lesser kind of excommunication among the Jews, and was termed σιδαί. The cherem or anathema, was not used against the followers of Christ, till after the resurrection.

24 Give God the praise.] Having called the man a second sinner: they proceeded to deal with him in the most solemn manner: and therefore they put him to his oath; for the words above were the form of an oath proposed by the chief magistrate, to those who by any evidence to any particular fact; or to attest any thing, as produced by, or belonging to the Lord. See Josh. vii. 19. 1 Sam. vi. 5. and Luke xvii. 14. But while they solemnly put him to his oath, they endeavoured to put their own words in his mouth, viz. he is a sinner—a pretender to the prophetic character, and a transgressor of the law of God:—assert this or you will not please us.

25 Whereas I was blind, now I see.] He pays no attention to their cavils, nor to their perversion of justice; but in the simplicity of his heart speaks to the fact, of the reality of which he was ready to give them the most substantial evidence.

27 I have told you already.] So he did, ver. 15. And did ye not hear? Ye certainly did. Why then do you wish to hear it again? It is because ye wish to become his disciples? The poor man continued steady in his testimony; and by putting this question to them, he knew he should soon put an end to the debate.

28 Then they reviled him.] Εδοξοσαν. Eustathius derives λωβησα, from λωος, a word, and δοξα, a spear;—they spoke cutting, piercing words. Solomon talks of some who speak like the piercings of a sword, Prov. 12. 18. And the Psalmist speaks of words that are like drawn swords, Psal. lv. 2. words which show that the person who speaks them, has his heart full of murderous intentions; and that if he had the same power with a sword as he has with his tongue, he would destroy him whom he thus reproaches.

They are Moses' disciples.] By this they meant that they were genuine Pharisees: for they did not allow the Sadducees to be disciples of Moses.

29 We know not from whence he is.] As if they had said: We have the fullest assurance that the commission of Moses was divine: but we have no proof that this man has such a commission: and should we leave Moses, and attach ourselves to this stranger? No.

30 Why, herein is a marvellous thing.] As if he had said, This is wonderful indeed! Is it possible that such persons as you are, whose business it is to distinguish good from evil, and who pretend to know a true from a false prophet, cannot decide in a case so plain? Has not the man opened my eyes?

30 The man answered and said unto them, Why, herein is a marvellous thing, that ye know not from whence he is, and yet he hath opened mine eyes!

31 Now we know that God heareth not sinners: but if any man be a worshipper of God, and doeth his will, him he heareth.

32 Since the world began was it not heard that any man opened the eyes of one that was born blind.

33 If this man were not of God, he could do nothing.

34 They answered and said unto him, We Thon wast altogether born in sins, and doest thou teach us? And they cast him out.

35 Jesus heard that they had cast him out; and when he had found him, he said unto him, Doest thou believe on the Son of God?

36 He answered and said, Who is he, Lord, that I might believe on him?

37 And Jesus said unto him, Thou hast both seen him, and it is he that talketh with thee.

38 And he said, Lord, I believe. And he worshipped him.

39 And Jesus said, For judgment I am come into this world, that they which see not might see; and that they which see might be made blind.

Mic. 3. 4. — Zeph. 7. 13. — Ver. 16. — Ver. 2. — Or, excommunicated him, Ver. 22. — Matt. 14. 23. — 23. & 16. Mark 1. 1. — Chap. 10. 34. — 1 John 5. 13. — Chap. 4. 25. — a Chap. 8. 22. — See Chap. 3. 17. — 12. 47. — Matt. 13. 13. — Mark 4. 12.

is not the miracle known to all the town, and could any one do it who was not endued with the power of God?

31. God heareth not sinners.] I believe the word ἀσυνήτως signifies heathens, or persons not procreyoted to the Jewish religion; and therefore it is put in opposition to θεοσεβας, a worshipper of the true God. See the note on Luke vii. 37. But in what sense may it be said, following our common version, that God heareth not sinners? When they regard iniquity in their heart—when they wish to be saved, and yet abide in their sins—when they will not separate themselves from the workers and works of iniquity. In all these cases, God heareth not sinners.

32. Since the world began.] Ex reo aeterno, from the age-probably meaning, from the commencement of time. Neither Moses nor the prophets have ever opened the eyes of a man who was born blind: if this person then were not the best of beings, would God grant him a privilege which he has hitherto denied to his choicest favourites?

Opened the eyes of one that was born blind.] It will readily appear, that our Lord performed no surgical operation in this cure: the man was born blind; and he was restored to sight by the power of God; the simple means used could have had no effect in the cure; the miracle is therefore complete. That there are cases, in which a person who was born blind may be restored to sight by surgical means, we know; but no such means were used by Christ: and it is worthy of remark, that from the foundation of the world, no person born blind has been restored to sight, even by surgical operation, till about the year of our Lord, 1728; when the celebrated Dr. Cheselden, by coating the eyes of a young man, 14 years of age, who had been born blind, restored him to perfect soundness. This was the effect of well-directed surgery; that performed by Christ was a miracle.

33. If this man were not of God, &c.] A very just conclusion: God is the fountain of all good; all good must proceed from him, and no good can be done but through him: if this person were not commissioned by the good God, he could not perform such beneficent miracles as these.

34. Thou wast altogether born in sins.] Thou hast not only been a vile wretch in some other pre-existent state, but thy parents also have been grossly iniquitous, therefore thou and they are punished by this blindness; thou wast altogether born in sin—thou art no other than a sinful lump of deformity, and utterly unfit to have any connexion with those who worship God.

And they cast him out.] They immediately excommunicated him, as the margin properly reads—drove him from their assembly with disdain, and forbade his further appearing in the worship of God. Thus a simple man, guided by the Spirit of truth, and continuing steady in his testimony, utterly confounded the most eminent Jewish doctors. When they had no longer either reason or argument to oppose to him, as a proof of their discomfiture and a monument of their reproach and shame, they had recourse to the secular arm, and thus silenced by political power, a person whom they had neither reason nor religion to withstand. They have had since many followers in their crimes. A false religion, supported by the state, has, by fire and sword, silenced those, whose truth in the end annihilated the system of their opponents.

35. Doest thou believe on the Son of God?] This was the same with, Doest thou believe on the Messiah? for these two characters were inseparable; see chap. i. 34, 49. x. 36. Matt. xvi. 16. Mark 1. 1.

36. Who is he, Lord?] It is very likely that the blind man did not know that it was Jesus the Christ who now spoke to him; for it is evident he had never seen him before this time; and he might now see him without knowing that he was the person by whom he was cured, till our Lord made that discovery of himself, mentioned in the following verse.

38. And he said, Lord, I believe.] That is, I believe thou art the Messiah: and to give the fullest proof of the sincerity of his faith, he fell down before and adored him. Never 40 And sows of the Pharisees which were with him, heard these words, and said unto him, Are we blind also ?

c Rom. 2. 12.

having seen Jesus before, but simply knowing that a person of that name had opened his eyes; he had only considered him as a holy man and a prophet: but now that he sees and hears him, he is convinced of his divinity, and glorifies him as his Saviour. We may hear much of Jesus, but can never know his glories and excellencies, till he has discovered himself to our hearts by his own Spirit; then we believe on him, trust him with our souls, and trust in him for our salvation. The word sees has two meanings: it signifies Lord, or Sovereign Ruler, and Sir, a title of civil respect. In the latter sense it seems evidently used in the 38th verse; because the poor man did not then know that Jesus was the Messiah: in the former sense it is used in this verse; now the healed man knew the quality of his benefactor.

39. For judgment I am come] I am come to manifest and execute the just judgment of God. 1. By giving sight to the blind, and light to the Gentiles, who sit in darkness. 2. By removing the true light from those who, pretending to make a proper use of it, only abuse the mercy of God. In a word, salvation shall be taken away from the Jews, because they reject it; and the Kingdom of God shall be given to the Gentiles.

40. Are we blind also?] These Pharisees understood Christ as speaking of blindness in a spiritual sense; and wished to know if he considered them in that state.

41. If we were blind] If ye had not had sufficient opportunities to have acquainted yourselves with my divine nature, by the unparalleled miracles which I have wrought before you, and the holy doctrine which I have preached; then your rejecting me could not be imputed to you as sin; but because ye say, we see—we are perfectly capable of judging between a true and false prophet, and can from the Scriptures point out the Messiah by his works; on this account you are guilty; and your sin is of no common nature, it remaineth, i. e. it shall not be expiated: as ye have rejected the Lord from being your deliverer, so the Lord has rejected you from being his people. When the Scripture speaks of sin remaining, it is always put 41 Jesus said unto them, If ye were blind, ye should have no sin; but now ye say, We see; therefore your sin remaineth.

d Ch. 18. 22, 24.

in opposition to pardons: for pardons is termed the taking away of sin, chap. 1. 29. Psal. xxxii. 5. And this is the proper import of the phrase, sees; two sees, which occur so frequently in the Sacred Writings.

1. The history of the man who was born blind and cured by our Lord, is in every point of view instructive. His simplicity, his courage, his constancy, and his gratitude, are all so many subjects worthy of attention and emulation. He certainly confessed the truth at the most imminent risk of his life; and therefore, as Stephen was the first martyr for Christianity, this man was the first confessor. The power and influence of truth, in supporting his friends and confounding his adversaries, are well exemplified in him; and not less so, that providence of God by which he was preserved from the malice of these bad men. The whole story is related with inimitable simplicity; and cannot be read by the most cold-hearted without extorting the exclamation, How forcible are right words!

2. It has already been remarked, that since the world began, there is no evidence that any man born blind, was ever restored to sight by surgical means, till the days of Mr. Cheselden, who was a celebrated surgeon at St. Thomas's Hospital, London. For though, even before the Christian era, there is reason to believe that both the Greek and Roman physicians performed operations to remove blindness occasioned by the cataract, yet we know of none of these ever attempted on the eyes of those who had been born blind: much less of any such persons being restored to sight. The cure before us must have been wholly miraculous; no appropriate means were used to effect it. What was done, had rather a tendency to prevent and destroy sight, than to help or restore it. The blindness in question was probably occasioned by a morbid structure of the organs of sight; and our Lord, by his sovereign power, instantaneously restored them to perfect soundness, without the intervention of any healing process. In this case there could be neither deception nor collusion.

CHAPTER X.

Christ speaks the parable of the sheepfold, 1—6. Proclaims himself the door of the sheepfold, 7—10, and the good shepherd who lays down his life for the sheep, 11—18. The Jews are again divided, and some revile and some vindicate our Lord, 19—31. His discourse with the Jews at the temple, on the feast of dedication, 32—39. Having asserted that he was one with the Father, the Jews attempt to stone him, 30, 31. He vindicates his conduct, and appeals to his works, 32—33. They strive to apprehend him; he escapes, and retires beyond Jordan, 39, 40. Many resort to and believe on him there, 41, 42. [A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olym. CCII. 1.]

VERILY, verily, I say unto you, * He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber.

a Jer. 23. 31. Esai. 24. 23. Mic. 2. 12.

NOTE.—Verse 1. Verily, verily, &c.] From ver. 6. we learn that this is a parable, i. e. a representation of heavenly things through the medium of earthly things. Some think our Lord delivered this discourse immediately after that mentioned in the preceding chapter: others think it was spoken not less than three months after. The former, says Bishop Pearce, was spoken at the feast of tabernacles, see chap. vii. or about the end of September, and at the feast of dedication, or in December. See ver. 22.

Christ, says Calmet, having declared himself to be the light of the world, which should blind some while it illuminated others, chap. ix. 41. continues his discourse, and under the similitude of a shepherd and his flock, shows that he was about to form his church of Jews and Gentiles; and that into it he would admit none but those who heard his voice. The unbelieving and presumptuous Jews who despised his doctrine, are the sheep which hear not the voice of the shepherd: the proud and self-sufficient Pharisees are those who imagine they see clearly, while they are blind. The blind who become illuminated are the Gentiles and Jews who turn from their sins and believe in Jesus.

The light of the world, the good Shepherd, and the door which leads into the sheepfold, are all to be understood as meaning Jesus Christ: the hireling shepherds, the willfully blind: the murderers and robbers are the false Christs, false prophets, scribes, Pharisees, wicked hireling priests, and ungodly ministers of all sorts, whether among primitive Jews, or modern Christians.

Our Lord introduces this discourse in a most solemn manner, verily, verily, amen! amen! it is true, it is true! a Hebrewism for, this is a most important and interesting truth; a truth of the utmost concern to mankind. At all times our Lord speaks what is infallibly true; but when he delivers any truth with this particular asseveration, it is either, 1. Because they are of greater importance; or 2. Because the mind of man is more averse from them; or, 3. Because the small number of those who will practise them may render them incredible. Quænam.

He that entereth not by the door] Christ assures us, ver. 7. that he is the door; whoever therefore, enters not by Jesus Christ, into the pastoral office, is no other than a thief and a robber in the sheepfold. And he enters not by Jesus Christ, who enters with a prospect of any other interest besides that 2 But he that entereth in by the door is the shepherd of the sheep.

3 To him the porter openeth; and the sheep hear his voice;

b Psal. 110. 4. Mat. 7. 15. Acta 20. 28.—c Isa. 43. 1. Mat. 26. 34, 41. Acta 28. 31.

of Christ and his people. Ambition, avarice, love of ease, a desire to enjoy the conveniences of life, to be distinguished from the crowd, to promote the interests of one's family, and even the bold design of providing against want; these are all ways by which thieves and robbers enter. And whoever enters by any of these ways, or by simony, craft, solicitation, &c. deserves no better name. Acting through motives of self-interest, and with the desire of providing for himself and his family, are innocent, yet laudable in a secular business; but to enter into the ministerial office through motives of this kind, is highly criminal before God.

2. He that entereth in by the door] Observe here the marks, qualities, and duties of a good pastor: The first mark is, that he has a lawful entrance into the ministry by the internal call of Christ, namely, by an impulse proceeding from his Spirit, upon considerations which respect only his glory; and upon motives which aim at nothing but the good of his church, the salvation of souls, the doing the will of God, and the sacrificing himself entirely to his service, and to that of the weanest of his flock.

3. To him the porter openeth] Sir Isaac Newton observes, that our Lord being near the temple where sheep were kept in folds to be sold for sacrifices, spoke many things parabolically of sheep, of their shepherds, and of the door to the sheepfold; and discovers that he alluded to the sheepfolds which were to be hired in the market-place, by speaking of such folds as a thief could not enter by the door, nor the shepherd himself open, but a porter opened to the shepherd. In the porter opening the door to the true shepherd, we may discover the second mark of a true minister—his labour is crowned with success. The Holy Spirit opens his way into the hearts of his hearers, and he becomes the instrument of their salvation. See Col. iv. 3. 2 Cor. ii. 12. 1 Cor. xvi. 9. Rev. iii. 8.

The sheep hear his voice] A third mark of a good shepherd is, that he speaks so as to instruct the people—the sheep hear his voice: he does not take the fat and the fleece, and leave another hireling on less pay to do the work of the pastoral office. No; himself preaches Christ Jesus the Lord, and in that simplicity too that is best calculated to instruct the common people. A man who preaches in such a language as the people cannot comprehend, may do for a stage-player or a mountebank, but not for a minister of Christ.

He calleth his own sheep by name] A fourth mark of a good and he cañeth his own sheep by name, and leadeth them out. 4 And when he putteth forth his own sheep, he goeth before them, and the sheep follow him: for they know his voice.

5 And a stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him: for they know not the voice of strangers.

6 This parable spake Jesus unto them: but they understood not what things they were which he spake unto them.

7 Then said Jesus unto them again, Verily, verily, I say unto you, I am the door of the sheep.

8 All that ever came before me are thieves and robbers: but the sheep did not hear them.

9 I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture.

10 The thief cometh not, but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy: I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.

11 I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep.

12 But he that is a hireling, and not the shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, seeth the wolf coming, and leaveth the sheep, and fleeth: and the wolf catcheth them, and scattereth the sheep.

13 I am the door: by me if any man enter, &c.] Those who come for salvation to God, through Christ, shall get it: he shall be saved—he shall have his sins blotted out; his soul purified; and himself preserved unto eternal life. This the scribes and Pharisees could neither promise nor impart.

4. He goeth before them.] A sixth mark of a true pastor is, he gives them a good example: he not only preaches, but he lives the truth of the Gospel; he enters into the depths of the salvation of God, and having thus explored the path, he knows how to lead those who are entrusted to his care, into the fullness of the blessings of the Gospel of peace. He who does not endeavour to realize in his own soul the truths which he preaches to others, will soon be a salt without its savour; his preaching cannot be accompanied with thatunction, which alone can make it acceptable and profitable to those whose hearts are right with God. The minister who is in this state of salvation, the sheep, genuine Christians, will follow, for they know his voice. It was the custom in the eastern countries for the shepherd to go at the head of his sheep, and they followed him from pasture to pasture. I have seen many hundreds of sheep; thus following their shepherd on the extensive downs in the western parts of England.

5. And a stranger will they not follow.] That is, a man, who pretending to be a shepherd of the flock of God, is a stranger to that salvation which he professes to preach. His mode of preaching soon proves to those whose hearts are acquainted with the truths of God, that he is a stranger to them: and therefore, knowing him to have got into the fold in an improper way, they consider him a thief, a robber, and a murderer; and who can blame them if they wholly desert his ministry? There are preachers of this kind among all classes.

7. I am the door of the sheep.] It is through me only that a man can have a lawful entrance into the ministry; and it is through me alone that mankind can be saved. Instead of I am the door, the Sahidic version reads, I am the shepherd; but this reading is found in no other version, nor in any MS.

8. All that ever came before me] Or, as some translate, All that came instead of me, ἅπὸ ἐμοῦ, i. e. all that came as the Christ, or Messiah, such as Theudas, and Judas the Galilaean, who are mentioned Acts v. 30, 37, and who were indeed no other than thieves, plundering the country wherever they came; and murderers, not only slaying the simple people who resisted them, but leading the multitudes of their followers to the slaughter.

But our Lord probably refers to the scribes and Pharisees, who pretended to show the way of salvation to the people—who in fact stole into the fold, and clothed themselves with the fleece, and devoured the sheep.

The words ἅπὸ ἐμοῦ, before me, are wanting in EOMS. Mt. B.V. except in others, Syriac, Peshic, Syriac, Bioron, Gothic, Bazarin, Valgrate, eleven copies of the Itala; Basilic, Cyril, Chrysostom, Theophylact, Euthemius, Augustine, and some others. Griesbach has left them in the text with a note of doubtfulness. The reason why these words are wanting in so many respectable MSS., Versions, and Fathers, is probably that given by Theophylact, who says that the Manicheans inferred from these words, that all the Jewish prophets were impostors. But our Lord has borne sufficient testimony to their inspiration in a variety of places.

Κλέψας and λῆρας, the thief and the robber, should be properly distinguished: the one takes by cunning and stealth; the other openly and by violence. It would not be difficult to find bad ministers who answer to both these characters.

The reflection of pious Quessel on this verse is well worth attention. A pastor ought to remember that whoever boasts of being the way of salvation, and the gate of heaven, shows himself to be a thief and an impostor; and though few are arrived at this degree of folly, yet there are many who rely too much upon their own talents, eloquence, and labours; as if the salvation of the sheep depended necessarily thereon; in 9 I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture.

10 The thief cometh not, but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy: I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.

11 I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep.

12 But he that is a hireling, and not the shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, seeth the wolf coming, and leaveth the sheep, and fleeth: and the wolf catcheth them, and scattereth the sheep.

13 I am the door: by me if any man enter, &c.] Those who come for salvation to God, through Christ, shall get it: he shall be saved—he shall have his sins blotted out; his soul purified; and himself preserved unto eternal life. This the scribes and Pharisees could neither promise nor impart.

4. He goeth before them.] A sixth mark of a true pastor is, he gives them a good example: he not only preaches, but he lives the truth of the Gospel; he enters into the depths of the salvation of God, and having thus explored the path, he knows how to lead those who are entrusted to his care, into the fullness of the blessings of the Gospel of peace. He who does not endeavour to realize in his own soul the truths which he preaches to others, will soon be a salt without its savour; his preaching cannot be accompanied with thatunction, which alone can make it acceptable and profitable to those whose hearts are right with God. The minister who is in this state of salvation, the sheep, genuine Christians, will follow, for they know his voice. It was the custom in the eastern countries for the shepherd to go at the head of his sheep, and they followed him from pasture to pasture. I have seen many hundreds of sheep; thus following their shepherd on the extensive downs in the western parts of England.

5. And a stranger will they not follow.] That is, a man, who pretending to be a shepherd of the flock of God, is a stranger to that salvation which he professes to preach. His mode of preaching soon proves to those whose hearts are acquainted with the truths of God, that he is a stranger to them: and therefore, knowing him to have got into the fold in an improper way, they consider him a thief, a robber, and a murderer; and who can blame them if they wholly desert his ministry? There are preachers of this kind among all classes.

7. I am the door of the sheep.] It is through me only that a man can have a lawful entrance into the ministry; and it is through me alone that mankind can be saved. Instead of I am the door, the Sahidic version reads, I am the shepherd; but this reading is found in no other version, nor in any MS.

8. All that ever came before me] Or, as some translate, All that came instead of me, ἅπὸ ἐμοῦ, i. e. all that came as the Christ, or Messiah, such as Theudas, and Judas the Galilaean, who are mentioned Acts v. 30, 37, and who were indeed no other than thieves, plundering the country wherever they came; and murderers, not only slaying the simple people who resisted them, but leading the multitudes of their followers to the slaughter.

But our Lord probably refers to the scribes and Pharisees, who pretended to show the way of salvation to the people—who in fact stole into the fold, and clothed themselves with the fleece, and devoured the sheep.

The words ἅπὸ ἐμοῦ, before me, are wanting in EOMS. Mt. B.V. except in others, Syriac, Peshic, Syriac, Bioron, Gothic, Bazarin, Valgrate, eleven copies of the Itala; Basilic, Cyril, Chrysostom, Theophylact, Euthemius, Augustine, and some others. Griesbach has left them in the text with a note of doubtfulness. The reason why these words are wanting in so many respectable MSS., Versions, and Fathers, is probably that given by Theophylact, who says that the Manicheans inferred from these words, that all the Jewish prophets were impostors. But our Lord has borne sufficient testimony to their inspiration in a variety of places.

Κλέψας and λῆρας, the thief and the robber, should be properly distinguished: the one takes by cunning and stealth; the other openly and by violence. It would not be difficult to find bad ministers who answer to both these characters.

The reflection of pious Quessel on this verse is well worth attention. A pastor ought to remember that whoever boasts of being the way of salvation, and the gate of heaven, shows himself to be a thief and an impostor; and though few are arrived at this degree of folly, yet there are many who rely too much upon their own talents, eloquence, and labours; as if the salvation of the sheep depended necessarily thereon; in which respect they are always robbers, since they rob the grace of Christ of the glory of saving the sheep. God often punishes such pastors to shame, by not opening the hearts of the people to receive their word: while he blesses those who are humble, in causing them to be heard with attention, and accompanying their preaching with an unction which converts and saves souls. Let every man know that in this respect his sufficiency and success are of the Lord.

9. I am the door; by me if any man enter, &c.] Those who come for salvation to God, through Christ, shall get it: he shall be saved—he shall have his sins blotted out; his soul purified; and himself preserved unto eternal life. This the scribes and Pharisees could neither promise nor impart.

10. He goeth before them.] A sixth mark of a true pastor is, he gives them a good example: he not only preaches, but he lives the truth of the Gospel; he enters into the depths of the salvation of God, and having thus explored the path, he knows how to lead those who are entrusted to his care, into the fullness of the blessings of the Gospel of peace. He who does not endeavour to realize in his own soul the truths which he preaches to others, will soon be a salt without its savour; his preaching cannot be accompanied with thatunction, which alone can make it acceptable and profitable to those whose hearts are right with God. The minister who is in this state of salvation, the sheep, genuine Christians, will follow, for they know his voice. It was the custom in the eastern countries for the shepherd to go at the head of his sheep, and they followed him from pasture to pasture. I have seen many hundreds of sheep; thus following their shepherd on the extensive downs in the western parts of England.

11. And a stranger will they not follow.] That is, a man, who pretending to be a shepherd of the flock of God, is a stranger to that salvation which he professes to preach. His mode of preaching soon proves to those whose hearts are acquainted with the truths of God, that he is a stranger to them: and therefore, knowing him to have got into the fold in an improper way, they consider him a thief, a robber, and a murderer; and who can blame them if they wholly desert his ministry? There are preachers of this kind among all classes.

12. I am the door of the sheep.] It is through me only that a man can have a lawful entrance into the ministry; and it is through me alone that mankind can be saved. Instead of I am the door, the Sahidic version reads, I am the shepherd; but this reading is found in no other version, nor in any MS.

13. All that ever came before me] Or, as some translate, All that came instead of me, ἅπὸ ἐμοῦ, i. e. all that came as the Christ, or Messiah, such as Theudas, and Judas the Galilaean, who are mentioned Acts v. 30, 37, and who were indeed no other than thieves, plundering the country wherever they came; and murderers, not only slaying the simple people who resisted them, but leading the multitudes of their followers to the slaughter.

But our Lord probably refers to the scribes and Pharisees, who pretended to show the way of salvation to the people—who in fact stole into the fold, and clothed themselves with the fleece, and devoured the sheep.

The words ἅπὸ ἐμοῦ, before me, are wanting in EOMS. Mt. B.V. except in others, Syriac, Peshic, Syriac, Bioron, Gothic, Bazarin, Valgrate, eleven copies of the Itala; Basilic, Cyril, Chrysostom, Theophylact, Euthemius, Augustine, and some others. Griesbach has left them in the text with a note of doubtfulness. The reason why these words are wanting in so many respectable MSS., Versions, and Fathers, is probably that given by Theophylact, who says that the Manicheans inferred from these words, that all the Jewish prophets were impostors. But our Lord has borne sufficient testimony to their inspiration in a variety of places.

Κλέψας and λῆρας, the thief and the robber, should be properly distinguished: the one takes by cunning and stealth; the other openly and by violence. It would not be difficult to find bad ministers who answer to both these characters.

The reflection of pious Quessel on this verse is well worth attention. A pastor ought to remember that whoever boasts of being the way of salvation, and the gate of heaven, shows himself to be a thief and an impostor; and though few are arrived at this degree of folly, yet there are many who rely too much upon their own talents, eloquence, and labours; as if the salvation of the sheep depended necessarily thereon; in 13 The hireling fleeth, because he is a hireling, and careth not for the sheep.

14 I am the good shepherd, and know my sheep, and am known of mine.

15 As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father: and I lay down my life for the sheep.

16 And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd.

17 Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life that I might take it again.

18 No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I am the good shepherd, and know my sheep, and am known of mine.

19 As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father: and I lay down my life for the sheep.

20 And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd.

21 Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life that I might take it again.

22 No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I am the good shepherd, and know my sheep, and am known of mine.

23 As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father: and I lay down my life for the sheep.

24 And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd.

25 Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life that I might take it again.

26 No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I am the good shepherd, and know my sheep, and am known of mine.

27 As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father: and I lay down my life for the sheep.

28 And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd.

29 Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life that I might take it again.

30 No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I am the good shepherd, and know my sheep, and am known of mine.

31 As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father: and I lay down my life for the sheep.

32 And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd.

33 Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life that I might take it again.

34 No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I am the good shepherd, and know my sheep, and am known of mine.

have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This commandment have I received of my Father.

19 I have a division therefore again among the Jews for these sayings.

20 And many of them said, He hath a devil, and is mad; why hear ye him?

21 Others said, These are not the words of him that hath a devil. Can a devil open the eyes of the blind?

22 And it was at Jerusalem the feast of the dedication, and it was winter.

23 And Jesus walked in the temple, in Solomon's porch.

24 Then came the Jews round about him, and said unto him, Thou sayest that thou art a Jew, and sayest that thou art a Samaritan, and art a Gentile.

25 Jesus answered and said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Jews; and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Samaritans, and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Gentiles.

26 Jesus answered and said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Jews; and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Samaritans, and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Gentiles.

27 Jesus answered and said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Jews; and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Samaritans, and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Gentiles.

28 Jesus answered and said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Jews; and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Samaritans, and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Gentiles.

29 Jesus answered and said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Jews; and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Samaritans, and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Gentiles.

30 Jesus answered and said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Jews; and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Samaritans, and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Gentiles.

31 Jesus answered and said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Jews; and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Samaritans, and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Gentiles.

32 Jesus answered and said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Jews; and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Samaritans, and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Gentiles.

33 Jesus answered and said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Jews; and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Samaritans, and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Gentiles.

34 Jesus answered and said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Jews; and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Samaritans, and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Gentiles.

35 Jesus answered and said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Jews; and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Samaritans, and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Gentiles.

36 Jesus answered and said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Jews; and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Samaritans, and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Gentiles.

37 Jesus answered and said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Jews; and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Samaritans, and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Gentiles.

38 Jesus answered and said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Jews; and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Samaritans, and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Gentiles.

39 Jesus answered and said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Jews; and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Samaritans, and he said unto them, My Father is the Father of the Gentiles.

are not the product of his labour, faith, and prayers: he has no other interest in their welfare, than that which comes from the fleece and the fat. The hireling counts the sheep his own, no longer than they are profitable to him; the good shepherd looks upon them as his, so long as he can be profitable to them.

Among the ancient Jews some kept their own flocks, others hired shepherds to keep them for them. And every owner must naturally have felt more interest in the preservation of his flock, than the hireling could possibly feel.

14. I—know my sheep I know, racis, them that are mine; I know their hearts, their wishes, their purposes, their circumstances, and I approve of them; for in this sense the word to know is often taken in the Scriptures. Homer represents the goatherds as being so well acquainted with their own, though mixed with others, as easily to distinguish them.

Τους δ' οὐκ ἀναγλῆ εὐαρτ' αὐγυροῦ ἀναγλῆς
Ρεῖα διακρίνοισιν, ἐπεὶ κε νομοῦ μίγξουσιν.—Iliad. 2. 474.
"As goatherds separate their numerous flocks
With ease, though fed promiscuous."

And am known of mine.) They know me as their father, protector, and saviour; they acknowledge me and my truth before the world; and they approve of me, my word, my ordinances, and my people; and manifest this by their attachment to me, and their zeal for my glory. The first clause of the 15th verse should be joined to the fourteenth.

16. Other sheep I have] The Gentiles and Samaritans. As if our Lord had said, Do not imagine that I shall lay down my life for the Jews, exclusively of all other people; no, I shall die also for the Gentiles; for by the grace, the merciful design and loving purpose of God, I am to taste death for every man, Hebr. ii. 9. and though they are not of this fold now, those among them that believe shall be united with the believing Jews, and made one fold under one shepherd. Eph. ii. 13—17.

The original word αἰνῶν, which is here translated fold, signifies properly a court. It is probable that our blessed Lord was now standing in what was termed the inner court, or court of the people, in the temple: see ver. 23. and that he referred to the outer court, or court of the Gentiles, because the Gentiles who were proselytes of the gate, were permitted to worship in that place; but only those who were circumcised were permitted to come into the inner court, over the entrance of which were written, in large characters of gold, these words, let no uncircumcised person enter here! Our Lord therefore might at this time have pointed out to the worshippers in that court, when he spoke these words, and the people would at once perceive that he meant the Gentiles.

17. Therefore doth my Father love me] As I shall be shortly crucified by you, do not imagine that I am abandoned by my heavenly Father, and therefore fall thus into your hands. The Father loveth me particularly on this account, because I am going to lay down my life for the life of the world. Again, do not suppose that I shall be put to death by your rulers, because I have not strength to resist them. I lay down my life voluntarily and cheerfully; no one can take it away from me, see ver. 18. and I shall give you the fullest proof of my omnipotent power by raising, in three days, that very crucified wounded body from the grave.

18. I have power] Or, authority, ἐξουσίαν. Our Lord speaks of himself here as a man, or the Messiah, as being God's messenger, and sent upon earth to fulfil the divine will, in dying and rising again for the salvation of men.

This commandment have I received] That is, I act according to the divine commandment, in executing these things, and giving you this information.

19. There was a division] Ἐσχίστα, a schism, a rent. They were divided in their opinions; one part received the light, and the other resisted it.

Again] There was a dissension of this kind before, among the same people; see chap. ix. 16.

20. He hath a devil, and is mad] So then, a demonic and a madman were not exactly the same in the apprehension of the Jews; no more than the effect is the same with the cause which produces it. Some will have it, that when the Jews told our Lord that he had a demon, they meant no more than that he was deranged; but here these matters are evidently distinguished. They believed him to be possessed by a demon, who deranged his faculties, and that he must have been a wicked man and a deceiver, thus to be put under the power of such a spirit.

21. These are not the words of him that hath a devil] If he were deranged by an unclean spirit, his words would bear a similitude to the spirit that produced them; but these are words of deep sense, soberness, and piety; besides, could a demoniac open the eyes of blind men? This is not the work of a demon. Now we have seen that this man has restored a man who was born blind. Therefore it is demonstrably evident that he is neither a madman nor a demoniac.

Behold the usage which the blessed Lord received from his creatures! and behold with what meekness and gentleness he conducts himself; not a word of impudence proceeds from his lips; nor a look of contempt or indignation is seen in his face. And what was he doing to merit all this? Why, he was instructing the ignorant, and telling the wretched that he was just going to die to save their souls! Amazing love of God, and ingratitude and obduracy of men! Let not the disciple suppose, that, in this respect, he shall be above his master. When a minister of Christ has done his utmost to do good to his fellow-creatures, let him not be surprised if he meet with nothing from many but reproaches and persecutions for his pains. The grand point is, to take Jesus for an example of suffering, and to be armed with the same mind.—It appears that the words spoken by the friendly Jews prevailed; and that the others were obliged to abandon the field.

22. The feast of the dedication] This was a feast instituted by Judas Maccabæus, in commemoration of his purifying the temple after it had been defiled by Antiochus Epiphaneus. This feast began on the twenty-fifth of the month Cisleu, (which answers to the eighteenth of our December) and continued for eight days. When Antiochus had heard that the Jews had made great rejoicings, on account of a report that had been spread of his death; he hastened out of Egypt to Jerusalem, took the city by storm, and slew of the inhabitants in three days forty thousand persons; and forty thousand more he sold for slaves to the neighbouring nations. Not contented with this, he sacrificed a great sow on the altar of burnt-offerings; and broth being made by his command, of some of the flesh, he sprinkled it all over the temple, that he might defile it to the uttermost. See Pridemux's Connexion, vol. iii. p. 236. edit. 1725. After this, the whole of the temple service seems to have been suspended for three years, great dilapidations having taken place also in various parts of the buildings; see 1 Macc. iv. 36, &c. As Judas Maccabæus not only restored the temple service, and cleansed it from pollution, &c. but also repaired the ruins of it, the feast was called τελεωσις, the renovation.

It was winter.] Χειμῶν, or it was stormy, or rainy weather. And this is the reason, probably, why our Lord is represented as walking in Solomon's porch, or portico: ver. 23. Though it certainly was in winter when this feast was held, yet it does not appear that the word above refers so much to the time of the year, as to the state of the weather. Indeed there was no occasion to add it was winter, when the feast of the dedication was mentioned, because every body knew that that feast was held on the twenty-fifth of the month Cisleu, and that it was in the winter season.

John has here omitted all that Jesus did from the time when he left Jerusalem, after the feast of Tabernacles in September was ended, until the feast of the Dedication in the December following; and he did it probably because he found that the other evangelists had given an account of what our Lord did in the interval. St. Luke relates what our Lord did on his way from Galilee to Jerusalem, to this feast: chap. xvii. 11—37. xviii. 1—14. Observe likewise, that this time here mentioned was the fourth time (according to John's account) that Jesus went up to the feast at Jerusalem in about a year: for first, he went up to the feast of the Pass-over; chap. ii. 13. next to the feast of Pentecost, as it seems to have been; chap. v. 1. then to the feast of Tabernacles: chap. vii. 2, 10. and lastly to the feast of the Pass-over, in which he was crucified. John seems purposely to have pointed out his presence in Jerusalem at these four feasts, because all the other evangelists have omitted the mention of every one of them. See Bishop Pearce, and see the note on chap. v. 1.

23. Solomon's porch] By what we find in Josephus, Ant. b. xx. c. 8. s. 7. a portico built by Solomon on the east side of the outer court of the temple, was left standing by Herod, when he rebuilt the temple. This portico was four hundred cubits long, and was left standing, probably because of its grandeur and beauty. But when Agrippa came to Jerusalem, a few years before the destruction of the city by the Romans, and about eighty years after Herod had begun his building (the which time that Herod had begun was not completed) the Jews solicited Agrippa to repair this portico at his own expense, using for argument not only that the building was growing ruinous, but that otherwise eighteen thousand workmen,

How long dost thou make us to doubt? If thou be the Christ, tell us plainly.

Jesus answered them, I told you, and ye believed not: the works that I do in my Father's name, they bear witness of me.

But ye believe not, because ye are not of my sheep, as I said unto you.

My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me.

And I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand.

My Father, which gave them me, is greater than all; and no man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand.

I and my Father are one.

Or, hold on to suspension—1. Ver. 35. Ch. 9. 2. & 5. 7. —Ch. 8. 6. 1. Jn. 4. 6. —b. Ver. 14. —Ch. 5. 27 & 17. 11. 12. & 19. 29. —Ch. 14. 28. —Ch. 17. 2. 6. & 4. —Ch. 17. 11. 22 who had all of them, until then, been employed in carrying on the works of the temple, would be all at once deprived of a livelihood.

24. How long dost thou make us to doubt? Or, how long dost thou kill us with suspense. Εως ουρ τιν ψωυγυ αναυσις, literally, how long wilt thou take away our life? Mr. Markland would read ανωσις, for ανισις, which amounts nearly to the same sense with the above. The Jews asked this question through extreme perfidiousness; they wished to get him to declare himself king of the Jews, that they might accuse him to the Roman governor; and they they insolently insinuated that all the proofs he had hitherto given them of his divine mission, were good for nothing.

25. I told you, &c. That is, I told you before what I tell you now again, that the works which I do bear testimony to me. I have told you that I am the light of the world: the Son of God: the good shepherd: that I am come to save: to give life—to give liberty—to redeem you: that in order to this, I must die, and rise again: and that I am absolute master of my life, and of my death. Have you not noticed my omniscience, in searching and discovering the very secrets of your hearts? Have you not seen my omnipotence in the miracles which I have wrought? Have not all these been sufficient to convince you? and yet ye will not believe! See the works which bore testimony to him as the Messiah, enumerated Matt. xi. 5.

26. Ye are not of my sheep] Ye have not the disposition of those who come unto me to be instructed and saved: see what follows.

27. My sheep hear my voice] But ye will not hear; my sheep follow me; but ye will neither follow nor acknowledge me. Any person who reads without prejudice may easily see, that our Lord does not at all insinuate that these persons could not believe, because God had made it impossible to them; but simply because they did not hear and follow Christ, which the whole of our blessed Lord's discourse proves that they might have done. The sheep of Christ are not those who are included in any eternal decree, to the exclusion of others from the yearnings of the bowels of eternal mercy: but they are those who hear, believe in, follow, and obey, the Saviour of the world.

28. They shall never perish] Why? Because they hear my voice, and follow me: therefore I know, I approve of, and love them, and give them eternal life. They who continue to hear Christ's voice, and to follow him, shall never perish. They give themselves up to God—believe so on Jesus that he lives in their hearts: God hath given unto them eternal life, and this life is in his Son, and he that hath the Son hath life, 1 John v. 11, 12. Now it is evident that only those who have Christ living in and governing their souls, so that they possess the mind that was in him, are his sheep; are those that shall never perish, because they have this eternal life abiding in them: therefore to talk of a man's being one of the elect—one that shall never perish—one who shall have eternal life—who shall never be plucked out of the hand of God, &c. while he lives in sin, has no Christ in his heart, has either never received, or fallen away from the grace of God, is as contrary to common sense, as it is to the nature and testimonies of the Most High. Final perseverance implies final faithfulness—he that endures to the end shall be saved—he that is faithful unto death shall have a crown of life. And will any man attempt to say that he who does not endure to the end, and is unfaithful, shall ever enter into life?

29. My Father—is greater than all] More powerful than all the united energies of men and demons. He who loves God must be happy: and he who fears him, need fear nothing on this side eternally.

30. I and my Father are one.] If Jesus Christ were not God, could he have said these words without being guilty of blasphemy? It is worthy of remark that Christ does not say, I and my Father, which my our translation very improperly supplies, and which in this place would have conveyed a widely different meaning: for then it would imply that the human nature of Christ, of which alone, I conceive, God is ever said to be the Father in Scripture, was equal to the Most High: but he says, speaking then as God over all, I and my Father, οτι οτι ε Ιησους ε ουων, the Creator of all things, the Judge of all men, the Father of the spirits of all flesh, are one, one in nature, one in all the attributes of Godhead, and one in all the operations of those attributes: and so it is evident the Jews understood him. See chap. xvii. 11, 22.

31. The Jews took up stones] To stone him as a blasphemer,

21. Then the Jews took up stones again to stone him.

22. Jesus answered them, Many good works have I showed you in my Father; for which of those works do ye stone me?

23. The Jews answered him, saying, For a good work we stone thee not; but for blasphemy; and because that thou, being a man, makest thyself God.

24. Jesus answered them, Is it not written in your law, I said, Ye are gods?

25. If he called them gods, unto whom the word of God came, and the scripture cannot be broken;

26. Say ye of him, whom the Father hath sanctified, and sent into the world, Thou blasphemest; because I said, am the Son of God?

27. If I do not the works of my Father, believe me not.

28. & Ch. 8. 29. —Ch. 5. 13. —1. Pa. 2. 6. —k. Rom. 13. 1. —Ch. 6. 2. —m. Ch. 3. 17. & 25. 27. & 2. —Ch. 8. 17. —l. Ver. 30. —Lake 1. 23. Ch. 9. 2. —p. Ch. 16. 28.

Lev. xxiv. 14—16. because he said he was one with God. The evangelist adds the word again, because they had attempted to do this before, see chap. viii. 59. but it seems they were prevented from doing this now, by the following discourse.

22. Many good works have I showed you] I have healed your sick, delivered those of you who were possessed, from the power of demons; I have fed multitudes of your poor, and I have taught you in all places, at all times, without expense, with patience; and is this my reward?

To show good works, or good things, is a Hebraism, which signifies to do them really, to give good things liberally. The phrase is similar to the following: Who will show us any good? Psal. lv. 6. i. e. who shall give us good things. Show us thy mercy, Gal. ix. 13. i. e. give us to feel the effects of thy mercy. Thou hast showed the people hard things, Psal. lx. 3. i. e. thou hast treated them with rigour. Thou hast showed me great and sore troubles, Psal. lxxl. 20. i. e. thou hast exposed me to terrible hardships.

23. But for blasphemy] I have elsewhere shown that the original word βλασφημις, when applied to men, signifies to speak injuriously of their persons, character, connexions, &c. but when applied to God it signifies to speak impiously, i. e. contrary to his nature, perfections, the wisdom of his providence, or goodness of his works.

Thou, being a man] That is, only a man—makest thyself God. When Christ said before, v. 30. I and the Father are one, had the Jews understood him (as many called Christians profess to do) as only saying he had a unity of sentiments with the Father, they would not have attempted to treat him for this as a blasphemer; because in this sense Abraham, Isaac, Moses, David, and all the prophets, were one with God. But what irritated them so much was, that they understood him as speaking of a unity of nature. Therefore they say here, thou makest thyself God; which word they understood, not in a figurative, metaphorical, or improper sense, but in the most literal meaning of the term.

24. Is it not written in your law] The words which our Lord quotes are taken from Psal. lxxxiii. 6. which shows that under the word tuu, our Lord comprised the Jewish sacred writings in general. See also obs. xii. 24. xv. 25.

Ye are gods?] That is, judges, who are called εδντιν ελοθιν. That judges are here meant, appears from Psal. lxxxiii. 3, &c. and also from what follows here. And this is probably the only place where the word εδντιν is applied to any but the true God: see Parkhurst under the root εδντιν.

25. This was the word of God came] Bishop Pearce thinks that the word λογος here, is not for λογος σπρωτος, the word, or matter of judgment, as in 2 Chron. xix. 6. where Jehoshaphat, settling judges in the land of Judah says, take heed what ye do: judge not for men, but for the Lord, who is with you in judgment—λογος ενσπρωτος, in the words or matters of judgment. But, which is nearly according to the Hebrew εדנן εבדבר מישפט, in the word or matter of judgment. In Deut. i. 17. when a charge is given to the judges, that they should not be afraid of the face of man, this reason is given: for the judgment is God's. Hence it appears probable, that λογος is here used for λογος σπρωτος; and it is called λογος Ουν, because it is the judgment that properly belongs to God, and which they who give it on earth, give only as acting in the stead of God. A way of speaking very like to this is found in Heb. iv. 12. where the writer says, κρις ο ουων ε λογος, with whom we have to do, i. e. by whom we are to be judged.

But the words λογος Ουν may be here understood for the order, commission, or command of God: and so it properly signifies, Luke iii. 2. and in this sense it is found often employed in the Old Testament. When it is there said, that the word of the Lord came, &c. it means, God gave an order, commission, &c. to such a person, to declare or do such and such things.

And the scripture cannot be broken] Ανωυων, dissolved, rendered of none effect, i. e. it cannot be gained or set aside; every man must believe this, because it is the declaration of God. If those were termed gods who were only earthly magistrates, fallible mortals, and had no particular influence of the Divine Spirit, and that they are termed gods, is evident from that Scripture which cannot be gained; what greater reason then have I to say, I am the Son of God, and one with God, when as Messiah, I have been consecrated, sent into the world to instruct and save men; and when as God, I have wrought miracles which could be performed by no power less than that of omnipotence?

35 But if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the works : that ye may know, and believe, that the Father is in me, and I in him.

39 Therefore they sought again to take him : but he escaped out of their hand,

Ch. 9. 28. & 14. 10. 11. & 17. 31. — Ch. 7. 20, 44. & 8. 20.

37. If I do not the works, &c.] I desire you to believe only on the evidence of my works : if I do not do such works as God only can perform, then believe me not.

38. Believe the works] Though ye do not now credit what I have said to you, yet consider my works, and then ye will see, that these works prove that I am in the Father, and the Father in me ; and consequently, that I and the Father are one. This seems to be the force of our Lord's argument ; and every man must see and feel that it is conclusive. There was no possibility of weakening the force of this reasoning, but by asserting that these miracles were not wrought by the power of God : and then they must have proved, that not only a man, but a bad man, such as they said Jesus was, could work these miracles. As this was impossible, then the argument of Christ had a complete triumph.

39. They sought again to take him] They could not reply to his arguments but by stones. The evidence of the truth could not be resisted ; and they endeavoured to destroy the person who spoke it. Truth may confound the obstinately wicked, but it does not convert them : and it is a just judgment of God, to leave those to perish in their gainsayings, who obstinately continue to gainsay and disbelieve.

But he escaped] in such a way as we know not, for the evangelist has not specified the manner of it.

40. Beyond Jordan] Rather to the side of Jordan, not beyond it. See the note on chap. vi. 22. and Matt. xix. 1.

Where John at first baptised] That is, at Bethabara : see chap. l. 23. Afterward, John baptised at Enon : chap. iii. 23.

42. Many believed on him there.] The people believed on him, 1. Because of the testimony of John the Baptist, whom they knew to be a good and a wise man, and a prophet of the Lord ; and they knew he could neither deceive nor be deceived in this matter : and, 2. They believed because of the miracles which they saw Jesus work. These fully proved that all that John had said of him was true. The scribes and Pharisees, with all their science, could not draw a conclusion so just. Truth and common sense are often on the side of the common 40 And went away again beyond Jordan into the place where John at first baptised : and there he abode.

41 And many resorted unto him, and said, John did no miracle : but all things that John spake of this man were true.

42 And many believed on him there.

Ch. 1. 22. — Ch. 3. 22. — Ch. 6. 22. & 11. 6.

people, whom the insolently wise and the unscientifically learned sometimes disingenuously brand with the epithets of mad and swinish multitude.

1. The preceding chapter contain two remarkable discomfitures of the Jewish doctors. In the former they were confounded by the testimony of a plain uneducated man, simply appealing to the various circumstances of a matter of fact, at which they cavilled, and which they endeavoured to deny. In this chapter the wise are taken in their own craftiness : the Pharisees are confounded by that wisdom which is from above, speaking of and manifesting the deep things of God. Sometimes God himself stops the mouths of gainsayers ; at other times he makes the simplest of his followers too mighty for the most learned among the doctors. Ancient and modern martyrologies of the people of God abound with proofs of both these facts. And the persecutions of the Protestants by the Papists in the reign of Queen Mary afford a very large proportion of proofs. In these the mighty power of God and the prevalence of truth were gloriously apparent. Both the word of God and the Protestant cause were nobly illustrated by those transactions. May that abomination that maketh desolate never more sit in the holy place !

2. It must be remarked by every serious reader, that our Lord did frequently speak of himself to the Jews, as being not only sent of God as their Messiah, but as being one with him. And it is as evident that in this sense, the priests and Pharisees understood him : and it was because they would not credit this, that they accused him of blasphemy. Now, if our Lord was not the person they understood him to state himself to be, he had the fairest opportunity, from their strong remonstrances, to correct their misapprehension of his words, if they really had mistaken his meaning—but this he never attempts. He rather strengthens his assertions in his consequent discourses with them ; which, had not his position been true, he could not have done, even as an assess man. He not only asserted himself to be equal with God, but wished them to believe it to be true : and he openly confirmed this heavenly doctrine by the miracles he wrought.

CHAPTER XI.

Account of the sickness of Lazarus, 1. His sisters Martha and Mary send for Christ, 2. Our Lord's discourse with his disciples on this sickness and consequent death, 3—16. He arrives at Bethany four days after the burying of Lazarus, 17, 18. Martha meets Christ—their conversation, 19—27. She returns, and Mary goes out to meet him, in great distress, 28—33. Christ comes to the grave—his conversation there, 34—42. He raises Lazarus from the dead, 43—46. The priests and Pharisees hearing of this, hold a council, and plot his destruction, 47, 48. The remarkable prophecy of Caiaphas and the consequent proceedings of the Jews, 49—53. Jesus withdraws into a city called Ephraim, 54. They lay wait for him at the pass-over, 55—57. [A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCII. 1.]

NOW a certain man was sick, named Lazarus, of Bethany, the town of Mary and her sister Martha.

2 (C) It was that Mary which anointed the Lord with ointment, and wiped his feet with her hair, whose brother Lazarus was sick.)

a Mark 11. 1, 12.—b Luke 10. 39, 40.

NOTES.—Verse 1. Lazarus of Bethany] St. John, who seldom relates any thing but what the other evangelists have omitted, does not tell us what gave rise to that familiar acquaintance and friendship that subsisted between our Lord and this family. It is surprising that the other evangelists have omitted so remarkable an account as this is, in which some of the finest traits in our Lord's character are exhibited. The conjecture of Groenius has a good deal of weight. He thinks that the other three evangelists wrote their histories during the life of Lazarus ; and that they did not mention him for fear of exciting the malice of the Jews against him. And indeed we find from chap. xii. 10. that they sought to put Lazarus to death also, that our Lord might not have one monument of his power and goodness remaining in the land. Probably both Lazarus and his sisters were dead before St. John wrote. Bethany was situated at the foot of the mount of Olives, about two miles from Jerusalem. Bishop Pearce observes that "there is a large gap in John's history of Christ in this place. What is mentioned in the preceding chapter passed at the feast of the dedication, ver. 22. about the middle of our December : and this miracle of raising Lazarus from the dead, seems to have been wrought but a little before the following pass-over, in the end of March, at which time Jesus was crucified, as may (he thinks) be gathered from verses 54 and 55 of this chapter, and from chap. xii. 9." John has therefore, according to the bishop's calculation, omitted to mention the several miracles which our Lord wrought for above three months after the things mentioned in the preceding chapter.

Caius says, Christ left Jerusalem the day after the dedication took place, which was the 18th of December. He went then to Bethabara, where he continued preaching, and his disciples baptising. About the middle of the following January, Lazarus fell sick : Christ did not leave Bethabara till after 3 Therefore his sisters sent unto him, saying, Lord, behold, he whom thou lovest is sick.

4 When Jesus heard that, he said, This sickness is not unto death, but for the glory of God, that the Son of God might be glorified thereby.

a Matt. 26. 7. Mark 14. 2. Ch. 12. 3.—b Ch. 9. 3. Verse 68.

the death of Lazarus, which happened about the 18th of the same month.

Bishop Newcombe supposes that our Lord might have staid about a month at Bethabara.

The harmonists and chronologists differ much in fixing dates and ascertaining times. In cases of this nature, I believe men may innocently guess as well as they can ; but they should assert nothing.

2. It was that Mary which anointed] There is much disagreement between learned men, relative to the two anointings of our Lord, and the persons who performed these acts. The various conjectures concerning these points, the reader will find in the notes on Matt. xxvi. 7, &c. but particularly at the end of that chapter.

Dr. Lightfoot inquires, why should Bethany be called the town of Martha and Mary, and not of Lazarus ? And he thinks the reason is, that Martha and Mary had been well known by that anointing of our Lord, which is mentioned Luke vii. 37. (see the note there,) but the name of Lazarus had not been mentioned till now, there being no transaction by which he could properly be brought into view. He therefore thinks that the αγιωτα, αγιωτα, which we translate anointed, should have its full force, and be translated, who had formerly anointed ; and this he thinks to have been the reason of that familiarity which subsisted between our Lord and this family ; and on this ground, they could confidently send for our Lord when Lazarus fell sick. This seems a very reasonable conjecture ; and it is very likely that the familiarity arose out of the anointing.

Others think that the anointing of which the evangelist speaks, is that mentioned chap. xii. 1, &c. and which happened about six days before the pass-over. St. John, therefore, is supposed to anticipate the account, because it served more particularly to designate the person of whom he was speaking

5 Now Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus.
 6 When he had heard therefore that he was sick, he abode two days still in the same place where he was.
 7 Then after that saith he to his disciples, Let us go into Judea again.
 8 His disciples say unto him, Master, the Jews of late sought to stone thee; and goest thou thither again?
 9 Jesus answered, Are there not twelve hours in the day? If any man walk in the day, he stumbleth not, because he seeth the light of this world.
 10 But if a man walk in the night, he stumbleth, because there is no light in him.
 11 These things said he; and after that he saith unto them, Our friend Lazarus sleepeth: but I go, that I may awake him out of sleep.
 12 Then said his disciples, Lord, if he sleep, he shall do well.
 13 Howbeit Jesus spake of his death: but they thought that he had spoken of taking of rest in sleep.

• Ch. 12. 1.—(Ch. 12. 21.—) Ch. 8. 4.—) Ch. 12. 23.—) See Deut. 31. 16. Dan. 12. 2.

3. He whom they loved is sick] Nothing could be more simple, nor more modest, than this prayer; they do not say, Come and heal him: or, Command the disease to depart even where thou art, and it will obey thee: they content themselves with simply stating the case, and using an indirect, but a most forcible argument, to induce our Lord to show forth his power and goodness:—He is sick, and thou lovest him—therefore thou canst neither abandon him nor us.

4. This sickness is not unto death] Not to final privation of life at this time; but a temporary death shall be now permitted, that the glory of God may appear in the miracle of his resurrection. It is very likely that this verse contains the message which Christ sent back, by the person whom the afflicted sisters had sent to him: and this, no doubt, served much to strengthen their confidence, though their faith must have been greatly exercised by the death of their brother: for when this took place, though they buried him, yet they believed even then, probably on the ground of this message, that Jesus might raise him from the dead. See ver. 22.

5. Now Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus.] Therefore his staying two days longer in Bethabara, was not through lack of affection for this distressed family: but merely that he might have a more favourable opportunity of proving to them how much he loved them. Christ never denies a less favour, but in order to confer a greater. God's delays in answering prayers offered to him by persons in distress, are often proofs of his purpose to confer some great kindness: and they are also proofs, that his wisdom finds it necessary to permit an increase of the affliction that his goodness may be more conspicuous in its removal.

6. The Jews of late sought to stone thee] It was but a few weeks before, that they were going to stone him in the temple, on the day of the feast of the dedication, chap. x. 31.

7. Are there not twelve hours in the day?] The Jews, as well as most other nations, divided the day from sun-rising to sun-setting, into twelve equal parts: but these parts or hours, were longer or shorter, according to the different seasons of the year. See the note on chap. i. 39.

Our Lord alludes to the case of a traveller, who has to walk the whole day: the day points out the time of life—the night, that of death. He had already used the same mode of speech, chap. ix. 4. I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work. Here he refers to what the apostles had just said—The Jews were but just now going to stone thee. Are there not, said he, twelve hours in the day? I have not travelled these twelve hours yet—my last hour is not yet come; and the Jews, with all their malice and hatred, shall not be able to bring it a moment sooner than God has purposed. I am immortal till my work is done; and this that I am now going to Bethany to perform is a part of it. When all is completed, then their hour, and that of the power of darkness, shall commence. See Luke xxii. 53.

If any man walk in the day he stumbleth not] A traveller should use the day to walk in, and not the night. During the day he has the sun, the light of this world: he sees his way, and does not stumble: but if he walk in the night he stumbleth, because there is no light in it, ver. 10. i. e. there is no sun above the horizon. The words o sero, ver. 9. refer not to the sun, but to the world, the sun, its light, not being above the horizon. Life is the time to fulfil the will of God, and to prepare for glory. Jesus is the light of the world: he that walks in his Spirit, and by his direction, cannot stumble—cannot fall into sin, nor be surprised by an unexpected death. But he who walks in the night, in the darkness of his own heart, and according to the maxims of this dark world, he stumbles—falls into sin, and at last falls into hell. Reader! do not dream of walking to heaven in the night of thy death. God has given thee the warning: receive it, and begin to live to him, and for eternity.

11. Lazarus sleepeth] It was very common among the Jews to express death by sleep; and the expressions, falling in a sleep—sleeping with their fathers, &c. were in great use among them. The Hebrews probably used this form of speech, to signify their belief in the immortality of the soul, and the resurrection of the body.

It is certain that our Lord received no intimation of Laza-

14 Then said Jesus unto them plainly, Lazarus is dead.
 15 And I am glad for your sakes that I was not there, to the intent ye may believe; nevertheless let us go unto him.
 16 Then said Thomas, which is called Didymus, unto his fellow-disciples, Let us also go, that we may die with him.
 17 Then when Jesus came, he found that he had lain in the grave four days already.
 18 Now Bethany was nigh unto Jerusalem, about fifteen furlongs off:
 19 And many of the Jews came to Martha and Mary, to comfort them concerning their brother.
 20 Then Martha, as soon as she heard that Jesus was coming, went and met him: but Mary sat still in the house.
 21 Then said Martha unto Jesus, Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.
 22 But I know, that even now, whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it thee.
 23 Jesus saith unto her, Thy brother shall rise again.

Mat. 9. 26. Acts 7. 60. 1 Cor. 15. 18, 21.—) That is, about two miles.—) Ch. 9. 34.

rus's death from any person; and that he knew it through that power by which he knows all things.

12. If he sleep he shall do well] That is, if he sleep only, &c. Though the word sleep frequently meant death, (see Acts vii 60. 1 Cor. xi. 30. xv. 18, 20.) yet as it was an ambiguous term, the disciples appear here to have mistaken its meaning. Because, in certain acute disorders, the composing the patient to rest, was a favourable sign; therefore the words, if he sleep he shall do well, or recover, became a proverbial form of speech among the Jews. In most diseases, sleep is a very favourable prognostic; hence that saying of Menander,

Υπνος δε σωσος εστιν βυτια νοσων.

Sleep is a remedy for every disease. See Grætius here. The meaning of the disciples seems to have been this: There can be no need for thee to go into Judea to awake our friend Lazarus; he will awake time enough, and his very sleep is a presage of his recovery: therefore do not hazard thy life by going.

15. I am glad for your sakes that I was not there] "I tell you plainly, Lazarus is dead; and I am glad I was not there—If I had, I should have been prevailed on to have healed him almost as soon as he fell sick, and I should not have had so striking an occasion to manifest the glory of God to you, and to establish you in the faith." It was a miracle to discover that Lazarus was dead, as no person had come to announce it. It was a greater miracle to raise a dead man, than to cure a sick man. And it was a still greater miracle to raise one that was three or four days buried, and in whose body putrefaction might have begun to take place, than to raise one that was but newly dead. See ver. 39.

16. Thomas, which is called Didymus] Thomas, or Θωμης Thaum, was his Hebrew name, and signifies a twin—one who had a brother or a sister born with him at the same time; Didymus, Διδυμος, is a literal translation of the Hebrew word into Greek. In Gen. xxv. 24. Esaus and Jacob are called επιδυμοι thomem, twins; Septuagint διδυμοι, from διδυμος, a twin; from the Anglo-Saxon twinnan, to double.

Let us also go, that we may die with him.] That is, "Seeing we cannot dissuade our Lord from going, and his death is likely to be the inevitable consequence, let us give him the fullest proof we can of our love, by going and suffering death with him." Some think Thomas spoke these words peevishly, and that they should be translated thus: Must we also go, and expose ourselves to destruction with him? which is as much as to say, "If he will obstinately go and risk his life in so imminent a danger, let us act with more prudence and caution." But I think the first sense is to be preferred. When a matter is spoken which concerns the moral character of a person, and which may be understood in a good and a bad sense, that sense which is most favourable to the person, should certainly be adopted. This is taking things by the best handle, and both justice and mercy require it. The conduct of most men widely differs from this: of such, an old proverb says, "They feed like the flies—pass over all a man's whole parts, to light upon his sores."

17. He had lain in the grave four days already.] Our Lord probably died Bethabara the day, or the day after Lazarus died. He came to Bethany three days after; and it appears that Lazarus had been buried about four days, and consequently that he had been put in the grave the day, or day after he died. Though it was the Jewish custom to embalm their dead, yet we find from ver. 39, that he had not been embalmed; and God wisely ordered this, that the miracle might appear the more striking.

18. Fifteen furlongs] About two miles: for the Jewish miles contained about seven furlongs and a half. So Light-foot, and the margin.

19. Many of the Jews came] Bethany being so nigh to Jerusalem, many of the relatives and friends of the family came, according to the Jewish custom, to mourn with the afflicted sisters. Mourning, among the Jews, lasted about thirty days: the three first days were termed days of weeping; then followed seven of lamentation. During the three days, the mourner did no servile work: and if any one saluted him, he did not return the salutation. During the seven days, he did no servile work, except in private—lay with his bed on the floor—did not put on his sandals—did not wash nor anoint 24 Martha said unto him, "I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day.

25 Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection, and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: 26 And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. Believest thou this?

27 She saith unto him, Yea, Lord: "I believe that thou art the Christ, the Son of God, which should come into the world. 28 And when she had so said, she went her way, and called Mary her sister secretly, saying, The Master is come, and calleth for thee.

29 As soon as she heard that, she arose quickly, and came unto him.

30 Now Jesus was not yet come into the town, but was in that place where Martha met him.

31 The Jews then, which were with her in the house, and himself—had his head covered—and neither read in the Law, the Mishnah, nor the Talmud. All the thirty days he continued unshaven, wore no white or new clothes, and did not sew up the rents which he had made in his garments. See Lightfoot, and see on ver. 31.

32 Martha—went and met him] Some suppose she was the eldest of the two sisters—she seems to have had the management of the house. See Luke x. 40.

Mary sat still in the house.] It is likely that by this circumstance, the evangelist intended to convey the idea of her sorrow and distress; because anciently, afflicted persons were accustomed to put themselves in this posture, as expressive of their distress: their grief having rendered them as it were immovable. See Ezra ix. 3. 4. Neh. l. 4. Psa. cxxxvii. 2. Isai. xlvii. l. Luke i. 79. and Matt. xvii. 61.

21. If thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.] Mary said the same words to him a little after, ver. 32. which proves that these sisters had not a complete knowledge of the omnipotence of Christ—they thought he could cure at hand, but not at a distance; or they thought that it was because he did not know of their brother's indisposition, that he permitted him to die. In either of these cases, it plainly appears they had not a proper notion of his divinity; and indeed the following verse proves, that they considered him in no other light than that of a prophet.—Quere.—Was it not proper that Christ should, in general, as much as might be, hide the knowledge of his divinity from those with whom he ordinarily lodged? Had they known him fully, would not the reverence and awe connected with such a knowledge, have overwhelmed them?

22. I know, that even now] She durst not ask so great a favour in direct terms; she only intimated modestly, that she knew he could do it.

23. Thy brother shall rise again.] That is, directly: for it was by raising him immediately from the dead, that he intended to comfort her.

24. I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection] The doctrine of the resurrection of the dead, was then commonly received: and though it was our Lord who fully exemplified it by his own resurrection; yet the opinion was common, not only among God's people, but among all those who believed in the God of Israel. The Jewish writings, after the captivity, are full of this doctrine. See 2 Macc. vii. 9, 14, 23, 35. xii. 43. xiv. 45. Wisd. vi. 1, 7, 17. vi. 6, 7. See also Josephus, and the Targums, passim.

25. I am the resurrection, and the life] Thou sayest that thy brother shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day; but by whom shall he arise if not by me, who am the author of the resurrection, and the source of life? And is it not as easy for me to raise him now, as to raise him then? Thus our blessed Lord raises her hope, animates her faith, and teaches her that he was not a mere man, but the essential principle and author of existence.

Though he were dead] Every man who has believed or shall believe in me, though his believing shall not prevent him from dying a natural death, yet his body shall be reanimated, and he shall live with me in an eternal glory. And every one who is now dead, dead to God, dead in trespasses and sins; if he believe in me, trust on me as his sole Saviour, he shall live, shall be quickened by my spirit, and live a life of faith, working by love.

26. Shall never die.] Or, shall not die for ever. Though he die a temporal death, he shall not continue under its power for ever; but shall have a resurrection to life eternal.

Believest thou this?] God has determined to work in the behalf of men, only in proportion to their faith in him; it was necessary therefore, that those persons should be well instructed concerning his nature, that they might find no obstacles to their faith. These sisters had considered him only as a prophet hitherto; and it was necessary that they should now be further instructed, that as God was to exert himself, they might believe that God was there.

27. Yea, Lord: I believe] I have believed, I have believed. Either meaning that she had believed this for some time past, or that since he began to teach her, her faith had been considerably increased: but verbs present, in Greek, are often used to signify the present. Martha here acknowledges Christ for the Messiah promised to their fathers, but her faith goes no farther; and having received some hope of her brother's procomfited her, when they saw Mary, that she rose up hastily and went out, followed her, saying, She goeth unto the grave to weep there.

28 When when Mary was come where Jesus was, and saw him, she fell down at his feet, saying unto him, "Lord, if I had but known this, my brother had not died.

29 When Jesus therefore saw her weeping, and the Jews also weeping which came with her, he groaned in the spirit, and said, "Woe is me now.

30 And said, Where have ye laid him? They said unto him, Lord, come and see.

31 Jesus wept.

32 Then said the Jews, Behold how he loved him!

33 And some of them said, Could not this man, which opened the eyes of the blind, have caused that even this man should not have died?

34 Then said Jesus, "This man, which opened the eyes of the blind, had caused that even this man should not have died?"

35 Then said Jesus, "This man, which opened the eyes of the blind, had caused that even this man should not have died?"

36 Then said Jesus, "This man, which opened the eyes of the blind, had caused that even this man should not have died?"

37 Then said Jesus, "This man, which opened the eyes of the blind, had caused that even this man should not have died?"

38 Then said Jesus, "This man, which opened the eyes of the blind, had caused that even this man should not have died?"

39 Then said Jesus, "This man, which opened the eyes of the blind, had caused that even this man should not have died?"

40 Then said Jesus, "This man, which opened the eyes of the blind, had caused that even this man should not have died?"

41 Then said Jesus, "This man, which opened the eyes of the blind, had caused that even this man should not have died?"

42 Then said Jesus, "This man, which opened the eyes of the blind, had caused that even this man should not have died?"

43 Then said Jesus, "This man, which opened the eyes of the blind, had caused that even this man should not have died?"

44 Then said Jesus, "This man, which opened the eyes of the blind, had caused that even this man should not have died?"

45 Then said Jesus, "This man, which opened the eyes of the blind, had caused that even this man should not have died?"

46 Then said Jesus, "This man, which opened the eyes of the blind, had caused that even this man should not have died?"

47 Then said Jesus, "This man, which opened the eyes of the blind, had caused that even this man should not have died?"

48 Then said Jesus, "This man, which opened the eyes of the blind, had caused that even this man should not have died?"

38 Jesus, therefore, again groaning in himself, cometh to the grave. It was a cave, and a stone lay upon it.

39 Jesus said, Take ye away the stone. Martha, the sister of him that was dead, saith unto him, Lord, by this time he stinketh: for he hath been dead four days.

40 Jesus saith unto her, Said I not unto thee, that if thou wouldest believe, thou shouldst see the glory of God?

41 Then they took away the stone from the place where the dead was laid. And Jesus lifted up his eyes, and said, Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me.

42 And I know that thou hearest me always: but because of the people which stand by I said it, that they may believe that thou hast sent me.

43 And when he thus had spoken, he cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth.

1 Verse 4. 21.—Ch. 12. 30.—Ch. 30. 7.—Ch. 2. 62. & 10. 42. & 12. 11. 18.—Psa. 2. 2. Mat. 25. 2. Mark 14. 1. Luke 22. 2.

by his farther miracles of mercy or judgment, he converts or sanctifies them.

38. It was a cave, &c.] It is likely that several of the Jewish burying-places were made in the sides of rocks; some were probably dug down like a well from the upper surface, and then hollowed under into niches, and a flat stone laid down upon the top, would serve for a door. Yet from what the evangelist says, there seems to have been something peculiar in the formation of this tomb. It might have been a natural grotto, or dug in the side of a rock or hill, and the lower part of the door level with the ground, or how could Lazarus have come forth, as he is said to have done, ver. 44?

39. Take ye away the stone.] He desired to convince all those who were at the place, and especially those who took away the stone, that Lazarus was not only dead, but that putrefaction had already taken place, that it might not be afterward said that Lazarus had only fallen into a lethargy: but that the greatness of the miracle might be fully evinced.

He stinketh.] The body is in a state of putrefaction. The Greek word, οἶσμος signifies simply to smell, whether the scent be good or bad: but the circumstances of the case sufficiently show that the latter is its meaning here. Our translators might have omitted the unchristian term in the common text: but they chose literally to follow the Anglo-Saxon, nū he rīcmōð; and it would be now useless to attempt any change, as the common reading would perpetually recur, and cause all attempts at mending, to sound even worse than that in the text.

For he hath been dead four days.] Τετραπαις ἡμερῶν, this is the fourth day, i. e. since his interment. Christ himself was buried on the same day on which he was crucified, see chap. xix. 42. and it is likely that Lazarus was buried also on the same day on which he died. See on ver. 17.

40. If thou wouldest believe, &c.] So it appears that it is faith alone that interests the miraculous and saving power of God in behalf of men. Instead of δοῦναι, the glory, one MSS. reads δυνάμει, the miraculous power.

41. Where the dead was laid.] These words are wanting in B<sup>0</sup> D<sup>l</sup>, three others, Syriac, P<sup>er</sup>sic, Arabic, S<sup>er</sup>bidic, Ethiopic, Armenian, Vulgate, Saxon, and in all the Italic. Greek-text leaves them out of the text.

Father, I thank thee.] As it was a common opinion, that great miracles might be wrought by the power and in the name of the devil, Jesus lifted up his eyes to heaven, and invoked the supreme God before these unbelieving Jews, that they might see that it was by his power, and by his only, that this miracle was done; that every hindrance to this people's faith might be completely taken out of the way, and that their faith might stand not in the wisdom of man, but in the power of the Most High. On this account our Lord says, he speaks because of the multitude, that they might see there was no diabolic influence here; and that God in his mercy had visited this people.

43. He cried with a loud voice.] In chap. v. 25. our Lord had said, that the time was coming in which the dead should hear the voice of the Son of God, and live. He now fulfils that prediction, and cries aloud, that the people may take notice, and see that even death is subject to the sovereign command of Christ.

Jesus Christ, says Queneel, omitted nothing to save this dead person: he underwent the fatigue of a journey, he wept, he prayed, he groaned, he cried with a loud voice, and commended the dead to come forth. What ought not a minister to do in order to raise a soul, and especially a soul long dead in trespasses and sins.

44. Bound hand and foot with grave clothes.] Swathed about with rollers—ἀσπίται, from ἀσπασ, I cut. These were long strips of linen a few inches in breadth, with which the body and limbs of the dead were swathed, and especially those who were embalmed, that the aromatics might be kept in contact with the flesh. But as it is evident that Lazarus had not been embalmed, it is probable that his limbs were not swathed together, as is the constant case with those who are embalmed, but separately; so that he could come out of the tomb at the command of Christ, though he could not walk freely, till the rollers were taken away. But some will have it that he was swathed exactly like a mummy, and that his coming out in that state was another miracle. But there is no need of multiplying miracles in this case: there was one wrought which was a most sovereign proof of the unlimited 44 And he that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with grave-clothes: and his face was bound about with a napkin. Jesus saith unto them, Loose him, and let him go.

45 Then many of the Jews which came to Mary, and had seen the things which Jesus did, believed on him.

46 But some of them went their ways to the Pharisees, and told them what things Jesus had done.

47 ¶ Then gathered the chief priests and the Pharisees a council, and said, What do we? for this man doeth many miracles.

48 If we let him thus alone, all men will believe on him: and the Romans shall come and take away both our place and nation.

49 And one of them, named Caiaphas, being the high-priest that same year, said unto them, Ye know nothing at all, a Chapter 12. 19. Acts 4. 16. Mat. 25. 3. Mark 14. 1. Luke 22. 2.—Luke 22. 2. Ch. 12. 14. Acts 4. 6.

power and goodness of God. Several of the primitive Fathers have adduced this resurrection of Lazarus as the model, type, proof, and pledge, of the general resurrection of the dead.

Loose him, and let him go.] He would have the disciples and those who were at hand take part in this business, that the fullest conviction might rest on every person's mind concerning the reality of what was wrought. He whom the grace of Christ converts and restores to life, comes forth at his call, from the dark dismal grave of sin, in which his soul has long been buried; he walks according to the command of Christ, in newness of life; and gives, by the holiness of his conduct, the fullest proof to all his acquaintance that he is alive from the dead.

45. Many of the Jews—believed on him.] They saw that the miracle was incontestable; and they were determined to resist the truth no longer. Their friendly visit to these distressed sisters, became the means of their conversion. How true is the saying of the wise man, It is better to go to the house of mourning, than to the house of feasting, Eccl. vii. 2. God never permits men to do any thing, through a principle of kindness to others, without making it instrumental of good to themselves. He that watereth shall be watered also himself, Prov. xi. 25. Therefore, let no man withhold good, while it is in the power of his hand to do it. Prov. iii. 27.

46. But some of them went their ways.] Astonishing! some that had seen even this miracle, steeled their hearts against it; and not only so, but conspired the destruction of this most humane, amiable, and glorious Saviour! Those who obstinately resist the truth of God, are capable of every thing that is base, perfidious, and cruel.

47. Then gathered the chief priests and the Pharisees a council;] The Pharisees, as such, had no power to assemble councils; and therefore only those are meant who were scribes or elders of the people, in conjunction with Annas and his son-in-law Caiaphas, who were the high-priests here mentioned. See chap. xviii. 13, 24.

What do we?] This last miracle was so clear, plain, and incontestable, that they were driven now to their wit's end. Their own spies had come and borne testimony of it. They told them what they had seen, and on their word, as being in league with themselves against Jesus, they could confidently rely.

48. All men will believe on him.] If we permit him to work but a few more miracles like these two last, (the cure of the blind man, and the resurrection of Lazarus,) he will be universally acknowledged for the Messiah; the people will proclaim him king, and the Romans, who can suffer no government here but their own, will be so irritated, that they will send their armies against us, destroy our temple, and utterly dissolve our civil and ecclesiastical existence. Thus, under the pretence of the public good, these men of blood hide their hatred against Christ, and resolve to put him to death. To get the people on their side, they must give the alarm of destruction to the nation; if this man be permitted to live, we shall be all destroyed! their former weapons will not now avail. On the subject of keeping the Sabbath, they had been already confounded, and his last miracles were so incontestable, that they could no longer cry out, He is a deceiver.

Both our place and nation.] Literally, this place, rov τόπος; but that the temple only is understood, is clear from Acts vi. 13. 14. 2 Macc. i. 14. 11. 18. 11. 18. v. 16, 17. x. 7. where it is uniformly called the place, or the holy place, because they considered it the most glorious and excellent place in the world. When men act in opposition to God's counsel, the very evils which they expect thereby to avoid, will come upon them. They said, If we do not put Jesus to death, the Romans will destroy both our temple and nation. Now it was because they put him to death, that the Romans burnt and razed their temple to the ground, and put a final period to their political existence. See Matt. xxiii. 7. and the notes on chap. xxiv.

49. Caiaphas, being the high-priest that same year.] By the law of Moses, Exod. xl. 15. the office of high-priest was for life, and the son of Aaron's race always succeeded his father. But at this time the high-priesthood was almost annual: the Romans and Herod put down and raised up whom they pleased, and when they pleased, without attending to any other rule than merely that the person put in this office should be of the sacerdotal race. According to Josephus, Ant. xviii. c. 3. the proper name of this person was Joseph, and Caiaphas was his surname. He possessed the high-priesthood for eight or 50 * Nor consider that it is expedient for us, that one man should die for the people, and that the whole nation perish not.

51 And this spake he not of himself: but being high-priest that year, he prophesied that Jesus should die for that nation; 52 And 4 not for that nation only, * but that also he should gather together in one the children of God that were scattered abroad.

53 Then from that day forth they took counsel together for to put him to death.

54 Jesus 7 therefore walked no more openly among the Jews; 5 Ch. 19. 14.—1 Jm. 4. 6. 1 John 2. 2.—Ch. 12. 10. Eph. 2. 14, 15, 16, 17.—Ch. 4. 1, 2 & 7. 1.—See 2 Chron. 13. 19.

nine years, and was deposited by Vitellius, governor of Judea. See on Luke 11. 2.

Ye know nothing Of the perilous state in which ye stand. 50. Nor consider Ye talk more at random than according to reason, and the exigencies of the case. There is a various reading here in some MSS. that should be noticed. Instead of οὐδὲ διαλογίζεσθε, which we translate, ye do not consider, and which properly conveys the idea of confering, or talking together; οὐδὲ λογίζεσθε, neither do ye reason or consider rightly, is the reading of ABDL, three others, and some of the primitive Fathers. Griesbach, by placing it in his inner margin, shows that he thinks it bids fair to be the true reading. Dr. White thinks that this reading is equal, and probably preferable to that in the text. Lectio equalis, fortassis preferenda recepta.

That one man should die for the people In saying these remarkable words, Calaphas had noother intention than merely to state that it was better to put Jesus to death than to expose the whole nation to ruin on his account. His maxim was, it is better to sacrifice one man, than a whole nation. In politics, nothing could be more just than this, but there are two words to be spoken to it. First, the religion of God says, we must not do evil that good may come: Rom. 11. 8. Secondly, it is not certain that Christ will be acknowledged as King by all the people; nor, that he will make any invasion against the Romans: nor, that the Romans will, on his account, ruin the temple, the city, and the nation. This Calaphas should have considered. A person should be always sure of his premises before he attempts to draw any conclusions from them. See Calmet. This saying was proverbial among the Jews: see several instances of it in Schoetgen.

51. This spake he not of himself Wicked and worthless as he was, God so guided his tongue, that contrary to his intention, he pronounced a prophecy of the death of Jesus Christ. I have already remarked, that the doctrine of a vicarious atonement had gained long before this time, universal credit in the world. Words similar to these of Calaphas are, by the prince of all the Roman poets, put in the mouth of Nepesina, when promising Venus that the fleet of Æneas should be preserved, and his whole crew should be saved, one only excepted, whose death he speaks of in these remarkable words: " Unum pro multis dabitur caput."

"One life shall fall, that many may be saved." Which victim the poet informs us was Palinurus, the pilot of Æneas's own ship, who was precipitated into the deep by a divine influence. See Vna. Æn. v. l. 815, &c.

There was no necessity for the poet to have introduced this account. It was no historic fact, nor indeed does it tend to decorate the poem. It even pains the reader's mind; for after suffering so much in the sufferings of the pious hero and his crew, he is at once relieved by the interposition of a god, who promises to allay the storm, disperse the clouds, preserve the fleet, and the lives of the men;—but one must perish! The reader is again distressed, and the book obscurely closes with the death of the generous Palinurus, who strove to the last to be faithful to his trust, and to preserve the life of his master and his friend. Why then did the poet introduce this? Merely, as it appears to me, to have an opportunity of showing in a few words his religious creed, on one of the most important doctrines in the world; and which the sacrosanct system of Jews and Gentiles proves, that all the nations of the earth credited.

As Calaphas was high-priest, his opinion was of most weight with the council; therefore God put these words in his mouth, rather than into the mouth of any other of its members. It was a maxim among the Jews that no prophet ever knew the purport of his own prophecy, Moses and Isaiah excepted. They were in general organs by which God chose to speak.

52. And not for that nation only, &c.] These, and the preceding words in verse 51. are John's explication of what was prophetic in the words of Calaphas: as if John had said, he is indeed to die for the sins of the Jewish nation, but not for theirs alone, but for the sins of the whole world: see his own words afterward, 1 John 11. 1, 2.

Gather together in one That he should collect into one body; form one church out of the Jewish and Gentile believers.

Children of God that were scattered abroad] Probably John only meant the Jews who were dispersed among all nations since the conquest of Judæa by the Romans; and these are called the dispersed: chap. vii. 35. and James i. 1. and it is because he refers to these only, that he terms them here, the children of God, which was an ancient character of the Jewish people: see Deut. xxxii. 6. Isa. xliii. 6. xlv. 11. Jer. xxxii. 1.

Taking his words in this sense, then his meaning is this—that Christ was to die, not only for the then inhabitants of Ju-but went thence unto a country near to the wilderness, into a city called Ephraim, and there continued with his disciples. 55 * And the Jews pass-over was nigh at hand: and many went out of the country up to Jerusalem before the pass-over, to purify themselves.

56 Then sought they for Jesus, and spake among themselves, as they stood in the temple, What think ye, that he will not come to the feast?

57 Now both the chief priests and the Pharisees had given a commandment, that, if any man knew where he were, he should show it, that they might take him.

h Matt. 26. 17. Mark 14. 12. Luke 22. 1. Ch. 2. 13. & 9. 1 & 6. 4.—Ch. 11. 7.—2 Ch. 7. 11.—Isa. 1. 15. Rom. 3. 15. 2 Tim. 4. 3.

des, but only the Jewish race wherever scattered; and that the consequence would be, that they should be all collected from their various dispersions, and made one body. This comports with the predictions of St. Paul: Rom. xi. 1—32. This probably is the sense of the passage; and though, according to this interpretation, the apostle may seem to confine the benefits of Christ's death to the Jewish people only, yet we find, from the passage already quoted from his first epistle, that his views of this subject were afterward very much extended; and that he saw, that Jesus Christ was not only a propitiation for their sins, (the Jews,) but for the sins of the whole world: see his first epistle, chap. ii. ver. 2. All the truths of the Gospel were not revealed at once, even to the apostles themselves.

53. They took counsel together Συμβουλευσάντα, they were of one accord in the business; and had fully made up their minds on the subject; and they waited only for a proper opportunity to put him to death.

54. Walked no more openly Παρηγοία, he did not go as before through the cities and villages, teaching, preaching, and healing the sick.

Near to the wilderness] Some MSS. add, of Sampheourain, or Sampheourin, or Sapfirin.

A city called Ephraim] Various written in the MSS. Ephraim, Ephrem, Ephram, and Epharath. This was a little village, situated in the neighbourhood of Bethel; for the scripture, 2 Chron. xiii. 19. and Josephus, War. b. iv. c. 8. s. 9. join them both together. Many believe that this city or village was the same with that mentioned, 1 Macc. v. 45. 2 Macc. xii. 27. Joshua gave it to the tribe of Judah: Josh. xv. 2. and Esau-ben-Jerom say it was about twenty miles north of Jerusalem.

And there continued] Calmet says, following Tavernier, that he staid there two months, from the twenty-fourth of January till the twenty-fourth of March.

55. The Jews pass-over was nigh at hand] It is not necessary to suppose that this verse has any particular connection with the preceding. Most chronologists agree that our Lord spent at least two months in Ephraim. This was the last pass-over which our Lord attended; and it was at this one that he suffered death for the salvation of a lost world. As the pass-over was nigh, many of the inhabitants of Ephraim and its neighbourhood, went up to Jerusalem, some time (perhaps seven or eight days, for so much time was required to purify those who had touched the dead) before the feast, that they might purify themselves; and not eat the pass-over otherwise than prescribed by the law. Many of the country people, in the time of Hezekiah, committed a trespass by not attending to this: see 2 Chron. xxx. 18, 19. Those mentioned in the text wished to avoid this inconvencence.

56. Then sought they for Jesus] Probably those of Ephraim, in whose company Christ is supposed to have departed for the feast, but having staid behind, perhaps at Jericho, or its vicinity, the others had not missed him till they came to the temple, and then inquired among each other whether he would not attend the feast. Or, the persons mentioned 6c. in the text might have been the agents of the high-priest, &c. and hearing that Christ had been at Ephraim, came and inquired among the people that came from that quarter, whether Jesus would not attend the festival, knowing that he was punctual in his attendance on all Jewish solemnities.

57. Had given a commandment] Had given order; κυρωσας, positive order, or injunction, and perhaps with a grievous penalty, that no one should keep the place of his residence a secret. This was their hour, and the power of darkness; and now they are fully determined to take away his life. The order here spoken of was given in consequence of the determination of the council, mentioned ver. 43—45.

Christ's sympathy and tenderness, one of the principal subjects in this chapter, has already been particularly noted on ver. 33. His eternal power and godhead are sufficiently manifested in the resurrection of Lazarus. The whole chapter abounds with great and important truths, delivered in language the most impressive and edifying. In the whole of our Lord's conduct in the affair of Lazarus and his sisters, we find majesty, humanity, friendship, and sublime devotion, blended in the most intimate manner, and illustrating each other by their respective splendour and excellence. In every act, in every word, we see God manifested in the flesh—Man in all the ambleness and charities of his nature; God in the plenitude of his power and goodness. How sublime is the lesson of instruction conveyed by the words, Jesus wept! the heart that feels them not, must be in the gall of bitterness and bond of iniquity, and consequently lost to every generous feeling.

21 The same came therefore to Philip, which was of Bethsaida of Galilee, and desired him, saying, Sir, we would see Jesus.

22 Philip cometh and telleth Andrew : and again Andrew and Philip tell Jesus. 23 And Jesus answered them, saying, The hour is come, that the Son of man should be glorified.

24 Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone : but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit.

25 He that loveth his life shall lose it : and he that hateth his life in this world, shall keep it unto life eternal.

26 If any man serve me, let him follow me : and where I am, there shall also my servant be : if any man serve me, him will my Father honour.

1 Ch. 14.—Ch. 13. 32.—17. 1.—1 Cor. 15. 36.—1 Mart. 14. 39 & 16. 87. Mark 8. 25.—Luke 9. 24 & 17. 33.—Chap. 14. 3 & 17. 26. 1 Thoms. 4. 17.—Mat. 25. 23, 29. Luke 12. 50. Ch. 13. 81.

ple, or the miracles of our Lord, came to offer sacrifices to Jehovah, and to worship him according to the manner of the people of that land. This was not an unfrequent case : many of the Gentiles, Romans, and others, were in the habit of sending sacrifices to the temple at Jerusalem. Of these opinions the reader may choose, but the first seems best founded.

21. The same came therefore to Philip) Some suppose that these Gentiles were of Phœnicia or Syria ; or perhaps inhabitants of Decapolis, near to the lake of Gennesareth and Bethsaida : and therefore they addressed themselves to Philip, who was of the latter city, and probably known to them. The latter Syrian calls them Arameans or Syrians. The Vulgate, and several copies of the Itala, call them Gentiles.

(Sir, we would see Jesus.) We have heard much concerning him, and we wish to see the person of whom we have heard such strange things. The final salvation of the soul, often originates, under God, in a principle of simple curiosity. Many have only wished to see or hear a man, who speaks much of Jesus, his miracles, and his mercies ; and in hearing, have felt the powers of the world to come, and have become genuine converts to the truths of the Gospel.

22. Andrew and Philip tell Jesus) How pleasing to God is this union, when the ministers of the Gospel agree and unite together to bring souls to Christ. But where selfishness prevails, and the honour that comes from God is not sought, this union never exists. Bigotry often ruins every generous sentiment among the different denominations of the people of God.

23. The hour is come, that the Son of man, &c.) The time is just at hand, in which the Gospel shall be preached to all nations, the middle wall of partition broken down, and Jews and Gentiles united in one fold. But this could not be till after his death and resurrection, as the succeeding verse teaches. The disciples were the first fruits of the Jews ; those Greeks, the first fruits of the Gentiles.

24. Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die) Our Lord compares himself to a grain of wheat ; his death, to a grain sown and decomposed in the ground ; his resurrection, to the blade which springs up from the dead grain ; which grain, thus dying, brings forth an abundance of fruit. I must die to be glorified ; and unless I am glorified, I cannot establish a glorious church of Jews and Gentiles upon earth. In comparing himself thus to a grain of wheat, our Lord shows us : 1. The cause of his death—the order of God, who had rided the redemption of the world at this price ; as in nature he had attached the multiplication of the corn, to the death, or decomposition of the grain. 2. The end of his death—the redemption of a lost world ; the justification, sanctification, and glorification of men : as the multiplication of the corn is the end for which the grain is sown and dies. 3. The mystery of his death, which we must credit, without being able fully to comprehend ; as we believe the dead grain multiplies itself, and we are nourished by that multiplication, without being able to comprehend how it is done.

The greatest philosopher that ever existed could not tell how one grain became thirty, sixty, a hundred, or a thousand—how it vegetated in the earth—how earth, air, and water, its component parts, could assume such a form and consistence, emit such odours, or produce such tastes. Nor can the wisest man on earth tell how the bodies of animals are nourished by this produce of the ground ; how wheat, for instance, is assimilated to the very nature of the bodies that receive it ; and how it becomes flesh and blood, nerves, sinews, bones, &c. All we can say is, the thing is so ; and it has pleased God that it should be so, and not otherwise. So there are many things in the person, death, and sacrifice of Christ, which we can neither explain nor comprehend. All we should say here is, It is by this means that the world was redeemed—through this sacrifice men are saved : it has pleased God that it should be so, and not otherwise. Some say, "our Lord spoke this according to the philosophy of those days, which was by no means correct." But I would ask, has ever a more correct philosophy on this point appeared ? Is it not a physical truth, that the whole body of the grain dies, is converted into fine earth, which forms the first nourishment of the embryon plant, and prepares it to receive a grosser support from the surrounding soil ; and that nothing lives but the germ, which was included in this body, and which must die also, if it did not receive from the death, or putrefaction of the body of the grain, nourishment, so as to enable it to unfold itself ? Though 27 Now is my soul troubled ; and what shall I say ? Father save me from this hour : but for this cause came I into this hour.

28 Father, glorify thy name. Then came there a voice from heaven, saying, I have both glorified it, and will glorify it again.

29 The people therefore that stood by, and heard it, said that it thundered : others said, An angel spake to him.

30 Jesus answered and said, This voice came not because of me, but for your sakes.

31 Now is the judgment of this world : now shall the prince of this world be cast out.

32 And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me.

33 This he said, signifying what death he should die.

1 Luke 9. 72. Ch. 15. 32.—Mat. 3. 17.—Ch. 11. 42.—Mat. 16. 28. Luke 16. 18. Ch. 11. 6. & 15. 11. Acts 9. 13. & Cor. 4. 4. Eph. 2. 2. & 5. 12.—Chap. 3. 14. & 5. 28.—(Rom. 8. 18. Heb. 2. 9.—Ch. 18. 32.

the body of our Lord died, there was still the germ, the quickening power of the Divinity, which reanimated that body, and stamped the atonement with infinite merit. Thus the merit was multiplied, and through the death of that one person, the man Christ Jesus united to the eternal WORD, salvation was procured for the whole world. Never was a stailre more appropriate, nor an illustration more happy or successful.

25. He that loveth his life) See on Mat. x. 39. Luke xiv. 26. I am about to give up my life for the salvation of men ; but I shall speedily receive it back with everlasting honour, by my resurrection from the dead. In this I should be imitated by my disciples, who should, when called to it, lay down their lives for the truth ; and if they do, they shall receive them again with everlasting honour.

26. If any man serve me) Christ is a master in a twofold sense : 1. To instruct men. 2. To employ and appoint them their work. He who wishes to serve Christ must become, 1. His disciple or scholar, that he may be taught ; 2. His servant, that he may be employed by and obey his master. To such a person a twofold promise is given : 1. He shall be with Christ, in eternal fellowship with him ; and, 2. He shall be honoured by the Lord : he shall have an abundant recompense in glory ; but how great, eye hath not seen, ear heard, nor hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive. How shall rat to this the saying of Crescena, (an incarnation of the supreme God, according to the Hindoo theology) to his disciple Arjoun ! "If one whose ways were ever so evil, serve me alone, he soon becometh of a virtuous spirit, is as respectable as the just man, and obtaineth eternal happiness.—Consider this world as a finite and joyless place, and serve me. Be of my mind, my servant, my adorer, and bow down before me.—Unite thy soul unto me, make me thy asylum, and thou shalt go unto me." And again : "I am extremely dear unto the wise man, and he is dear to me : I esteem the wise man even as myself, because his devout spirit dependeth upon me alone as his ultimate resource." Shagrat Gheta, pp. 71 and 82. The rabbins have an extravagant saying, viz. "God is more concerned for the honour of the just man, than for his own." 27. Now is my soul troubled) Our blessed Lord took upon him our weaknesses, that he might sanctify them to us. As Nature abhors death : God has implanted that abhorrence in nature, that it might become a principle of self-preservation ; and it is to this that we owe all that prudence and caution, by which we avoid danger. When we see Jesus working miracles which demonstrate his omnipotence, we should be led to conclude that he was not man were it not for such passages as these. The reader must ever remember that it was essentially necessary that he should be man ; for without being such, he could not have died for the sin of the world.

And what shall I say ? Father, save me from this hour) Kau r' eruo; Hap' ewoo' at x' r' u' g' opas r' u' r' a' s : which may be paraphrased thus : At why should I say, Father, save me from this hour ? when for this cause I am come to this hour. The common version makes our blessed Lord contradict himself here, by not attending to the proper pronouncement of the passage, and by translating the particle r, when, instead of why or how.—The sense of our Lord's words is this : "When a man feels a fear of a sudden or violent death, it is natural to him to cry out, Father, save me from this death ! for he hopes that the glory of God and his welfare, may be accomplished some other way, less dreadful to his nature : but why should I say so, seeing for this very purpose, that I might die this violent death for the sins of mankind ; I am come into the world, and have almost arrived at the hour of my crucifixion."

28. Father, glorify thy name) By the name of God is to be understood himself in all his attributes ; his wisdom, truth, mercy, justice, holiness, &c. which were all more abundantly glorified by Christ's death and resurrection (i. e. shown forth in their own excellence) than they had ever been before. Christ teaches here a lesson of submission to the Divine will. Do with me what thou wilt, so that glory may redound to thy name. Some MSS. read, Father, glorify my name : others, glorify thy Son.

Then came there a voice from heaven, &c.) The following is a literal translation of Calmet's note on this passage, which he has taken from Chrysostom, Theodoret, Theophylact, and others : "I have accomplished my eternal designs on thee. I 34 The people answered him, We have heard out of the law, that Christ abideth for ever: and how sayest thou, The Son of man must be lifted up? who is the son of man?

35 Then Jesus said unto them, Yet a little while is the light with you. I have yet a few hours to say to you, and then darkness shall come upon you: and ye shall not know where to go.

with you, Walk while ye have the light, lest darkness come upon you: for I he that walketh in darkness knoweth not whither he goeth.

36 While ye have light, believe in the light, that ye may be in the light forever. I have yet a few hours to say to you, and then darkness shall come upon you: and ye shall not know where to go.

have sent thee into the world to make an atonement for the sin of the world, and to satisfy my offended justice. I will finish my work. Thou shalt shed thy blood upon the cross. My glory is interested in the consummation of thy sacrifice. But in procuring my own glory, I shall procure thine. Thy life and thy death glorify me: I have glorified thee by the miracles which have accompanied thy mission: and I will continue to glorify thee at thy death, by unexampled prodigies, and thy resurrection shall be the completion of thy glory and of thy elevation.

Christ was glorified, 1. By the prodigies which happened at his death. 2. In his resurrection.—3. In his ascension, and sitting at the right hand of God. 4. In the descent of the Holy Ghost on the apostles, and, 5. In the astonishing success with which the Gospel was accompanied, and by which the kingdom of Christ has been established in the world. 2 Cor. ii. 14.

29. The people said that it thundered: others—an angel spoke to him.] Bishop Pearce says, probably there was thunder as well as a voice, as in Exod. xix. 16, 17, and some persons who were at a small distance, might hear the thunder without hearing the voice; while others heard the voice too; and these last said, "an angel hath spoken to him." Wetstein supposes that the voice was in the language then in use among the Jews; which the Greeks, not understanding, took for thunder; the others, the Jews, who did understand it, said it was the voice of an angel. In Rev. vi. 1. the voice of one of the living creatures is compared to thunder; and in chap. x. 3. the voice of an angel is compared to seven thunders. The voice mentioned, was probably very loud, which some heard distinctly, others indistinctly; hence the variety of opinion.

30. This voice came not because of me, but for your sakes.] Probably meaning those Greeks, who had been brought to him by Philip and Andrew. The Jews had frequent opportunities of seeing his miracles, and of being convinced that he was the Messiah; but these Greeks, who were to be first-fruits of the Gentiles, had never any such opportunity. For their sakes, therefore, to confirm them in the faith, this miraculous voice appears to have come from heaven.

31. Now is the judgment of this world.] The judgment spoken of in this place, is applied by some to the punishment which was about to fall on the Jewish people for rejecting Christ.—And the ruler or prince, &c. of this world, is understood to be Satan, who had blinded the eyes of the Jews, and hardened their hearts; that they might not believe on the Son of God: but his kingdom, not only among the Jews, but in all the world, was about to be destroyed by the abolition of idolatry, and the vocation of the Gentiles.

The epithet εὐεργετησάτωσιν, prince of this world, is regularly applied to the devil, or to Sammael, who is termed the angel of death. The Jews fabled, that into the hands of this chief, God had delivered all the nations of the earth, except the Israelites. See Lightfoot. The words are understood by others, as addressed to these believing Greeks, and to have the following meaning, which is extremely different from the other. "In a short time, (four or five days afterward,) ye shall see what sort of a judgment this world passes. I, who am its ruler and prince, shall be cast out, shall be condemned by my own creatures, as an impious and wicked person. But do not be discouraged: though I be lifted up on the cross, and die like a malefactor, nevertheless, I will draw all men unto myself. The Gospel of Christ crucified, shall be the grand agent in the hand of the Most High, of the conversion and salvation of a ruined world." But see on chap. xiv. 30. and xv. 11.

32. I will draw all men unto me.] After I shall have died and risen again, by the preaching of my word and the influence of my spirit, I shall attract and illuminate both Jews and Gentiles. It was one of the peculiar characteristics of the Messiah, that unto him should the gathering of the people be, Gen. xlix. 10. And probably our Lord refers to the prophecy, Isa. xi. 10. which peculiarly belonged to the Gentiles. "There shall be a root of Jesse which shall stand for an ensign of the people, to it shall the Gentiles seek, and his rest shall be glorious." There is an allusion here to the ensigns or colours of commanders of regiments, elevated on high places, on long poles, that the people might see where the pavilion of their general was, and so flock to his standard.

Instead of τάρταρ, the Codex Bezae, another, several versions, and many of the Fathers, read τάρτα, all men, or all things; so the Anglo-Saxon, he too calls being to me ψυχοῦ, I will draw all things to myself. But τάρτα may be here the accusative singular, and signify all men.

The ancients fabled that Jupiter had a chain of gold, which he could at any time let down from heaven, and by it draw the earth and all its inhabitants to himself. See a fine passage on this effect in Homer, Iliad. viii. ver. 18—27.

Εἰδὲν αὖτε, κίρην αὐτῶν δεῖν, ἢ εὐεργετησάτωσιν, Στὴν θῆν χροῦσεν ἑνὲν εἰς ὁμοῦν ἡγεμονίας: Πάρεσθ δὲ εἰς τὸν δεῖν, τάρταρ τε δεῖναι. κ. τ. λ. "Now prove me: let ye down the golden chain

From heaven, and pull at its inferior links. Both goddesses and gods: but me your king, Supreme in wisdom, ye shall never draw To earth from heaven, strive with me as ye may. But I, if willing to exert my power, The earth itself, itself the sea, and you Will lift with ease together, and will wind The chain around the spiry summit sharp Of the Olympian, that all things upheav'd Shall hang in the mid-heaven. So much am I Alone, superior both to gods and men."—Cowper.

By this chain, the poets pointed out the union between heaven and earth; or in other words, the government of the universe by the extensive chain of causes and effects. It was termed golden, to point out not only the beneficence of the Divine Providence; but also that infinite philanthropy of God, by which he influences, and by which he attracts all mankind to himself. It was possibly in allusion to this that our Lord spoke the above words. Should it be objected that it is inconsistent with the gravity of the subject, and the dignity of our Lord, to allude to the fable of a heathen poet, I answer: 1. The moral is excellent, and, applied to this purpose, expresses beautifully our Lord's gracious design in dying for the world, viz. That men might be united to himself, and drawn up into heaven. 2. It is no more inconsistent with the gravity of the subject, and his dignity, for our blessed Lord to allude to Homer, than it was for St. Paul to quote Aratus and Cleanthes, Acts xvii. 28. and Epimenides, Tit. i. 12. for he spoke by the same Spirit.

As sometimes justice was represented under the emblem of a golden chain, and in some cases such a chain was constructed, one end attached to the emperor's apartment, and the other hanging within reach; that if any person were oppressed he might come and lay hold on the chain, and, by shaking it, give the king notice that he was oppressed; and thus claimed protection from the fountain of justice and power. In the Jehangheer Nameh, a curious account of this kind is given, which is as follows. The first order which Jehangheer issued on his accession to the throne, (which was A. H. 1014, answering to A. D. 1605.) was for the construction of the GOLDEN CHAIN of Justice. It was made of pure gold, and measured thirty yards in length, consisting of sixty links, and weighing in the whole, four Hindostany mounds, (about four hundred pounds avoirdupois.) One end of the chain was suspended from the royal bastion of the fortress of Agra, and the other fastened in the ground near the side of the river. The intention of this was, that if the officers of the courts of law were partial in their decisions, or dilatory in the administration of justice, the injured parties might come themselves to this chain, and making a noise by shaking the links of it, give notice that they were waiting to represent their grievances to his majesty. Hist. of Hindostan, p. 96. Calcutta, 1788. Such a communication, prayer and faith establish between the most just and most merciful God, and the wretched and oppressed children of men. "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." O how that hearest prayer, unto thee shall all flesh come! Psa. lxxv. 2.

34. We have heard out of the law.] That is, out of the Sacred Writings. The words here are quoted from Psa. cx. 4. but the Jews called every part of the Sacred Writings by the name, The Law, in opposition to the words or sayings of the scribe. See on chap. x. 34.

That Christ abideth for ever.] There was no part of the Law nor of the Scripture that said, the Messiah should not die: but there are several passages that say as expressly as they can, that Christ must die, and die for the sin of the world too. See especially Isa. liiii. 1, &c. Dan. ix. 24, 27. But as there were several passages that spoke of the perpetuity of his reign, as Isa. ix. 7. Ezek. xxxvii. 25. Dan. vii. 14. they probably confounded the one with the other, and thus drew the conclusion. The Messiah cannot die; for the Scripture hath said, his throne, kingdom, and reign, shall be eternal. The prophets, as well as the evangelists and apostles, speak sometimes of the divine, sometimes of the human nature of Christ: when they speak of the former, they show forth his glory, excellence, omnipotence, omniscience, and eternity; when they speak of the latter, they show forth its humiliations, afflictions, sufferings, and death. And those who do not make the proper distinction between the two natures of Christ, the human and the divine, will ever make blunders, as well as the Jews. It is only on the ground of two natures in Christ, that the Scriptures which speak of him, either in the Old or New Testament, can be possibly understood. No position in the Gospel is plainer than this, God was manifest in the flesh.

35. Yet a little while to the light with you.] In answer to their objection, our Lord compares himself to a light, which was about to disappear for a short time, and afterward, to shine forth with more abundant lustre; but not to their comfort, if they continue to reject its present beams. He exhorts them to follow this light while it was among them. The Christ shall abide for ever, it is true; but he will not always be visible. When he shall depart from you, ye shall be left in the thickest the children of light. These things spake Jesus, and departed, and did hide himself from them.

37 But though he had done so many miracles before them, yet they believed not on him :

38 That the saying of Esaias the prophet might be fulfilled, which he spake, " Lord, who hath believed our report ? and to whom hath the arm of the Lord been revealed ?

39 Therefore they could not believe, because that Esaias said again, 40 He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their heart ; that they should not see with their eyes, nor understand with their heart, and be converted, and I should heal them.

41 These things said Esaias, when he saw his glory, and spake of him.

42 Nevertheless among the chief rulers also many believed in Luke 16. 8. Eph. 5. 8. 1 Thess. 5. 5. 1 John 2. 9, 10, 11. — Chap. 5. 38 & 11. 54. — Isa. 53. 1. Rom. 10. 16. — Isa. 6. 9, 10. Matt. 13. 14. — Isa. 6. 1. — Chapter 7. 13. & 23.

darkness ; in impenitence and hardness of heart. Then shall ye wish to see one of the days of the son of man, and shall not see it, Luke xvii. 22. Then shall ye seek me, but shall not find me, John vii. 34. For the kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to the Gentiles, Matt. xxi. 43. If ye believe not in me now, ye shall then wish ye had done it, when wishing shall be for ever fruitless.

Instead of οὐδὲν ἔσται, with you ; εἰς οὐρανὸν, among you, is the reading of BDL. seventeen others : Coptic, Gothic, Slavonic, Vulgate, Itala, Cyril, Nonnus, and Victorinus. Griesbach has received it into the text. The meaning of both is nearly the same.

Let darkness come upon you | Ye have a good part of your journey yet to go : ye cannot travel safely but in the daylight—that light is almost gone—run, that the darkness overtake you, not, or in it ye shall stumble, fall, and perish !

Reader, is thy journey near an end ? There may be but a very little time remaining to thee—Oh run, fly to Christ, lest the darkness of death overtake thee, before thy soul have found redemption in his blood.

36. Children of light | Let the light, the truth of Christ, so dwell in and work by you, that ye may be all light in the Lord. That as truly as a child is the produce of his own parent, and partakes of his nature : so ye may be children of the light, having nothing in you but truth and righteousness.

Did hide himself from them | Either by rendering himself invisible, or by suddenly mingling with the crowd, so that they could not perceive him. See chap. viii. 69. Probably it means no more than that he withdrew from them, and went to Bethany, as was his custom, a little before his crucifixion, and concealed himself there during the night, and taught publicly every day in the temple. It was in the night-season that they endeavoured to seize upon him, in the absence of the multitudes.

37. Yet they believe not on him | Though the miracles were wrought for this very purpose, that they might believe in Christ, and escape the coming wrath, and every evidence given that Jesus was the Messiah, yet they did not believe ; but they were blinded by their passions, and obstinately hardened their hearts against the truth.

38. That the saying of Esaias | Or, Thus the word of Isaiah was fulfilled. So I think εἰς (commonly rendered that), should be translated. For it certainly does not mean the end the Pharisees had in view by not believing ; nor the end which the prophet had in view in predicting the incredulity of the Jews ; but simply, such a thing was spoken by the prophet concerning the Jews of his own time, and it had its literal fulfilment in those of our Lord's time.

Our report | The testimony of the prophets concerning the person, office, sufferings, death, and sacrifice of the Messiah. See Isa. liii. 1, &c.

The arm of the Lord | The power, strength, and miracles of Christ.

39. Therefore they could not believe | Why ? Because they did not believe the report of the prophets concerning Christ ; therefore, they credited not the miracles which he wrought as a proof that he was the person foretold by the prophets, and promised to their fathers. Having thus resisted the report of the prophets, and the evidence of Christ's own miracles ; God gave them up to the darkness and hardness of their own hearts, so that they continued to reject every overture of divine mercy ; and God refused to heal their national wound, but on the contrary, commissioned the Romans against them ; so that their political existence was totally destroyed.

The prophecy of Isaiah was neither the cause nor the motive of their unbelief : it was a simple prediction, which imposed no necessity on them to resist the offers of mercy. They might have believed, notwithstanding the prediction, for such kinds of prophecies always include a tacit condition ; they may believe, if they properly use the light and power which God has given them. Such prophecies also are of a general application—they will always suit somebody, for, in every age, persons will be found who resist the grace and Spirit of God, like these disobedient Jews. However, it appears that this prediction belonged especially to these rejectors and crucifiers of Christ : and if the prophecy was infallible in its execution, with respect to them, it was not because of the prediction that they continued in unbelief, but because of their own voluntary obstinacy ; and God, foreseeing this, foretold it by the prophet. Should I say, that they could not believe, means, they on him ; but ' because of the Pharisees they did not confess him, lest they should be put out of the synagogue :

43 For they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God.

44 Jesus cried and said, He that believeth on me, believeth not on me, but on him that sent me.

45 And he that seeth me, seeth him that sent me.

46 I am come a light into the world, that whosoever believeth on me should not abide in darkness.

47 And if any man hear my words, and believe not, I judge him not : for I came not to judge the world, but to save the world.

48 He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him : the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day.

in Chap. 5. 44. — Mark 9. 7. 1 Pet. 1. 21. — Chap. 14. 9. — Verse 23, 24. Ch. 1. 19 & 2. 12 & 3. 22. — Chap. 5. 43. & 8. 10, 23. — Chap. 8. 17. — Luke 9. 15. — 1. Dev. 19. Mark 16. 16.

would not believe, I should perhaps offend a generation of his children ; and yet I am pretty certain, the words should be so understood. However, that I may put myself under cover from all suspicion of perverting the meaning of a text which seems to some to be spoken in favour of that awful doctrine of unconditional reprobation, the very father of it shall interpret the text for me. Thus then saith St. AUGUSTIN : Quare autem non potuerunt, et a me queratur, cito respondeo : Quis noluerunt : MALLAM quippe eorum voluntatem prævidit Deus et per prophetam præannunciavit. " If I be asked why they could not believe I immediately answer, because THEY would not. And God having foreseen their bad will, foretold it by the prophet." Aug. Tract. 63 in Joan.

46. And I should heal them | This verse is taken from Isa. vi. 9. and perhaps refers more to the judgments that should fall upon them as a nation, which God was determined should not be averted ; than it does to their eternal state. To suppose that the text meant that God was unwilling that they should turn unto him, lest he should be obliged to save them ; is an insupportable blasphemy.

41. When he saw his glory | Isa. vi. 1, &c. *I saw Jehovah, said the prophet, sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and his train filled the temple. Above it stood the seraphim—and one cried unto another, and said, Holy, holy, holy, is Jehovah, God of hosts : the whole earth shall be full of his glory ? It appears evident from this passage, that the glory which the prophet saw, was the glory of Jehovah : John therefore, saying here, that it was the glory of Jesus, shows that he considered Jesus to be Jehovah. See Bp. Pearce. Two MSS. and a few Versions have Osce, and ten Osce avore, the glory of God, or of his God.*

42. Among the chief rulers—many believed on him | We only know the names of two of them, Nicodemus, and Joseph of Arimathea.

But—they did not confess him | Or, it : they were as yet weak in the faith, and could not bear the reproach of the cross of Christ. Besides, the principal rulers had determined to excommunicate every person who acknowledged Christ for the Messiah ; see chap. ix. 22.

43. They loved the praise of men | Δοξάν, the glory, or honour, that cometh from men.

How common are these four obstacles of faith, says Quenel. 1. Too great a regard to men. 2. Riches and temporal advantages. 3. The fear of disgrace. 4. The love of the praise of men. Abundance of persons persuade themselves that they love God more than the world, till some trying occasion fully convinces them of their mistake. It is a very great misfortune for a person not to know himself but by his fall ; but it is the greatest of all not to rise again after he has fallen. This is generally occasioned by the love of the praise of men, because in their account it is more shameful to rise again, than it was to fall at first.

44. Jesus cried and said | This is our Lord's concluding discourse to this wicked people : probably this and the following verses should be understood as a part of the discourse which was left off at the 36th verse.

Jesus cried—he spoke these words aloud, and showed his earnest desire for their salvation.

Believeth not on me (only), but on him that sent me. | Here he asserts again, his indivisible unity with the Father :—he who believes on the Son, believes on the Father : he who hath seen the Son, hath seen the Father : he who honours the Son, honours the Father. Though it was for asserting this (his oneness with God), that they were going to crucify him ; yet he retracts nothing of what he had spoken, but strongly reasserts it, in the very jaws of death !

46. I am come a light into the world | Probably referring to what his forerunner had said, chap. 1. 5. Before the coming of this Saviour, this Sun of righteousness, into the world, all was darkness : as in his rising the darkness is dispersed ; but it only profits those whose eyes are open to receive the rays of this Sun of righteousness. See on chap. 1. 5. iii. 19. viii. 12. and ix. 5.

47. And believe not | Καὶ μὴ πίστευε, And keep them not, is the reading of ABI., seven others, Syriac, Wheelock's Persian, two of the Arabic, Coptic, Sahidic, Ethiopic, Armenian, latter Syriac, Vulgate, six of the Itala, and some of the Fathers. A man must Aar the words of Christ in order to believe them ; and he must believe, in order to keep them ; and he must keep them, in order to his salvation.

47 For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say and what I should speak.

a Ch. 8. 38 & 14. 10.

[I judge him not] I need not do it: the word of Moses and the prophets, judges and condemns him. See the notes on chap. iii. 17. and v. 45.

48 The word that I have spoken—shall judge him] Ye shall be judged according to my doctrine:—the maxims which ye have heard from my mouth, shall be those on which ye shall be tried in the great day: and ye shall be condemned or acquitted, according as ye have believed or obeyed them: or according as ye have despised and violated them. See this proved, Matt. xxv. 35, &c.

49 For I have not spoken of myself] I have not spoken for my secular interest: I have not aimed at making any gain of you:—I have not set up myself, as your teachers in general do, to be supported by my disciples, and to be credited on my own testimony. I have taught you, not the things of men, but the deep everlasting truths of God. As his envoy, I came to you; and his truth only, I proclaim.

Gave me a commandment] Or, commission. So I understand the original word ἐπέταξε. Christ, as the Messiah, received his commission from God: what he should command, every thing that related to the formation and establishment of the Christian institution: and what he should speak, all his private conversations with his disciples or others, he, as man, commanded and spoke through the constant inspiration of the Holy Spirit.

50. I know that his commandment is life everlasting.]—These words of our Lord are similar to that saying in St. John's first epistle, chap. v. 11. This is the record that God hath given unto us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son, hath life. God's commandment or commission is, Preach salvation to a lost world, and give thyself a ransom for all: and whosoever believeth on thee shall not perish but have everlasting life. Every word of Christ, properly

50 And I know that his commandment is life everlasting: whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak.

b Ver. 15, 18.

credited, and carefully applied, leads to peace and happiness here, and to glory hereafter. What an admirable view of the Gospel of the grace of God does this give us! It is a system of eternal life, divinely calculated to answer every important purpose to dying, miserable man. This sacred truth Jesus witnessed with his last breath. He began his public ministry, proclaiming the kingdom of God; and he now finishes it, by asserting, that the whole commission is eternal life; and having attested this, he went out of the temple, and retired to Bethany.

The public work of our Lord was now done; and the remnant of his time previously to his crucifixion, he spent in teaching his disciples, instructing them in the nature of his kingdom; his intercession, and the mission of the Holy Spirit; and in that heavenly life which all true believers live with the Father, through faith in the Son, by the operation of the Holy Ghost. Many persons are liberal in their condemnation of the Jews, because they did not believe on the Son of God; and doubtless their unbelief has merited and received the most signal punishment. But those who condemn them, do not reflect that they are probably committing the same sort of transgression, in circumstances which heighten the iniquity of their sin. Will it avail any man that he has believed that Christ has come in the flesh to destroy the works of the devil, who does not come unto him that he may have life, but continues to live under the power and guilt of sin? Paradoxical as it may seem, it is nevertheless possible, for a man to credit the four evangelists, and yet live and die an infidel, as far as his own salvation is concerned. Reader, it is possible to hold the truth in unrighteousness:—Pray to God that this may not be thy condemnation. For a further improvement of the principal subjects of this chapter, see the notes on ver. 24, 32, and 39.

CHAPTER XIII.

Christ washes the feet of his disciples, and gives them instructions concerning humility and charity, 1—17. He tells them, that one of themselves would betray him, 18—20. The disciples doubting of whom he spoke, Peter desires John to ask him, 21—25. Jesus shows that it is Judas Iscariot, 26. Satan enters into Judas, and he rises up and leaves the company, 27—30. Christ shows his approaching death, and commands his disciples to love one another, 31—35. Peter, professing strong attachment to Christ, is informed of his denial, 36—38. [A. M. 4083. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCII. 1.]

NOW before the feast of the pass-over, when Jesus knew that his hour was come, that he should depart out of this world unto the Father, having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end.

2 And supper being ended, the devil having now put into the heart of Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, to betray him; 3 Jesus knowing that the Father had given all things into a Matt. 26. 2. Mark 14. 1. Luke 22. 1.—b Chap. 12. 31 & 17. 1, 11.—c Luke 22. 2. Ver. 2.—d Matthew 11. 27 & 28. 18. Chapter 3. 21 & 17. 2. Acts 2. 36. 1 Cor.

NOTES—Verse 1. Now before the feast of the pass-over when Jesus knew, &c.] Or, as some translate, Now Jesus knowing known before the feast of the pass-over, that his hour was come, &c. The supper mentioned in ver. 2. is supposed to have been that on the Thursday evening, when the feast of the pass-over began: and though in our common translation, this passage seems to place the supper before that feast; yet, according to the amended translation, what is here said, is consistent with what we read in the other evangelists. See Matt. xxvi. 2. John xii. 1.

Having loved his own] His disciples.

Which were in the world] Who were to continue longer in its troubles and difficulties.

He loved them unto the end] Continued his fervent affection towards them, to his latest breath; and gave them that convincing proof of it, which is mentioned ver. 5. That the disciples alone, are meant here, every man must see.

2. And supper being ended] Rather, τελευτων γενομενον, while supper was preparing. To support this new translation of the words, it may be remarked, that from ver. 26. and 30. it appears that the supper was not then ended: nay, it is probable that it was not then begun; because the washing of feet (ver. 5.) was usually practised by the Jews before they entered upon their meals, as may be gathered from Luke vii. 44. and from the reason of the custom. I think that John wrote not γενομενον, but γενομενο, as in BL. Cant. and Origen, which latter reading is approved by several eminent critics, and should be translated as above. By the supper, I suppose to be meant not only the eating of it, but the preparing and dressing of it, and doing all things necessary, previously to the eating of it. The devil had, before this time of the supper, put it into Judas's heart to betray his Master. See Matt. xxvi. 14, &c. Mark xiv. 10, 11. and Luke xxii. 3, &c. See also Bp. Pearce, from whose judicious commentary the preceding notes are principally taken.

Comment observes, that John, designing only to supply what was omitted by the other evangelists, passes over all the transactions of the Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, before the passion, and at once rises from Monday evening to Thursday evening. It is remarkable that St. John says nothing about the institution of the holy sacrament, which Matt. xxvi. 26, &c. Mark xiv 22, &c. and Luke xxii. 19, &c. describes so particularly. No other reason can be assigned for this, than that he found it completely done by the others, and that he only designed to supply their defects.

The devil having now put into the heart] Judas formed his plot six days before this, on occasion of what happened at the house of Simon the leper: see Matt. xxvi. 14. Calmet.

3. Knowing that the Father had given, &c.] Our Lord seeing himself almost at the end of his race, and being about to leave his apostles, thought it necessary to leave them a lesson of humility exemplified by himself, to deliver them from the bad influence of those false ideas which they formed concerning the nature of his kingdom. On all occasions previously to this, the disciples had shown too much attachment to worldly honours and dignities: if this ambition had not been removed, the consequences of it would have been dreadful in the establishment of the religion of Christ; as, after his death, it would have divided and infallibly dispersed them. It was necessary, therefore, to restrain this dangerous passion; and to confirm by a remarkable example what he had so often told them, that true greatness consisted in the depth of humility; and that those who were the willing servants of all, should be the highest in the account of God.

4. He riseth from supper] Not from eating, as Bishop Pearce has well observed; but from his place at table; probably the diabolical was not as yet laid down, though the guests were seated. According to the custom of the Jews, and other Asiatics, this washing must have taken place before the supper. See on verse 2.

Laid aside his garments] That is, his gown or upper coat, with the girdle wherewith it was girded close to his tunic, or under coat; and instead of this girdle, he tied a towel about him, 1. That he might appear in the character of a servant; and, 2. That he might have it in readiness to dry their feet after he had washed them.

Pourth water into a basin, &c.] This was the office of the meanest slaves. When David sent to Abigail, to inform her that he had chosen her for wife, she arose and said: Behold, let thy handmaid be a servant, to wash the feet of the servants of my lord: 1 Sam. xiv. 41. Some of the ancients have supposed, that our Lord began with washing the feet of Judas, to inspire him with sentiments of compunction and remorse, to melt him down with kindness, and to show all his 6 Then cometh he to Simon Peter: and Peter said unto him, Lord, dost thou wash my feet?

 7 Jesus answered and said unto him, What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter.
 8 Peter saith unto him, Thou shalt never wash my feet. Jesus answered him, If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me.
 9 Simon Peter saith unto him, Lord, not my feet only, but also my hands and my head.
 10 Jesus saith to him, He that is washed, needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit; and I ye are clean, but not all:
 11 For he knew who should betray him; and therefore said he, Ye are not all clean.
 12 So after he had washed their feet, and had taken his garments, and was set down again, he said unto them, Know ye what I have done to you?
 13 Ye call me Master and Lord: and ye say well; for so I am.
 14 If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet; ye also ought to wash one another's feet.

Gr. he.— Fee Matt. 3. 14.—1 Verse 12.— Chap. 2. 5. 1 Cor. 6. 11. Eph. 5. 26. Tit. 2. 14. Heb. 10. 22.—1 Chap. 15. 3.— Chap. 6. 64.—n Matt. 23. 8, 10. Luke 6. 46. 1 Cor. 3. 6. de 18. 3. Phil. 2. 11.—1 Verse 22. 17.— Rom. 12. 10. Gal. 5. 1, 2. 1 Pet. 5. 2.— Matt. 11. 29. Phil. 2. 5. 1 Thos. 2. 5.

disciples how they should act towards their enemies. Dr. Lightfoot supposes he washed the feet of Peter, James, and John, only; but this is not likely: the verb αποχεσθαι, in the Sacred Writings, signifies not only to commence, but to finish an act, Acts i. 1. and in the Septuagint, Gen. ii. 3. There is every reason to believe, that he washed the feet of all the twelve. See on verse 9.

6. Lord, dost thou wash my feet? Every word here is exceedingly emphatic. Peter had often seen the great humility of his Lord, but never saw his condescension so particularly marked as in this instance.

7. What I do thou knowest not now, &c.] As if our Lord had said, Permit me to do it now, and I will shortly explain to you the nature of this action, and my motives for doing it.

Thou shalt know hereafter.] Μετα ραυρα, after this business is finished. And so we find he explained the whole to them, as soon as he had finished the washing; see ver. 12.—17. I cannot think that this refers to any particular instruction received on this head, after the day of Pentecost, as some have conjectured.

8. If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me.] Thou cannot not be my disciple unless I wash thee. It is certain, Christ did not mean to exclude him from the apostolic office, if he should persist, through the deepest reverence for his Master, to refuse to let him wash his feet: this act of his was emblematical of something spiritual; of something that concerned the salvation of Peter; and without which washing, he could neither be an apostle, nor be finally saved; therefore our Lord said, If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me. There is a mystical washing by the blood of Christ, I John i. 7. and by his spirit, I Cor. vi. 11. Tit. iii. 5, 6. It was the common custom of our Lord, to pass from sensible and temporal things, to those which are spiritual and eternal; and to take occasion from every thing that presented itself, to instruct his disciples, and to raise their souls to God. If the discourse was of bread, water, leaven, father, mother, riches, &c. he immediately changed the literal sense, and under the figure of these things, spoke of matters altogether spiritual and divine. I have met with many good persons, who have attempted to imitate our blessed Lord in this, but I never knew one to succeed in it. The reason is, it requires not only very deep piety, but sound sense, together with an accurate knowledge of the nature and properties of the subjects, which in this way the person wishes to illustrate; and very few can be found who have such deep philosophical knowledge, as such cases require. The large folio, which a good-intentioned man printed on the metaphors, is, alas! a standing proof, how little mere piety can do in matters of this kind, where the sciences, and especially practical philosophy, are totally wanting. Jesus Christ was a consummate philosopher: every subject appears grand and noble in his hands. See an ample proof in the preceding chapter, ver. 24.

9. Lord, not my feet only, &c.] It appears that Peter entered into our Lord's meaning, and saw that this was emblematical of a spiritual cleansing; therefore he wishes to be completely washed.

10. He that is washed.] That is, he who has been in the bath, as probably all the apostles had lately been, in order to prepare themselves the better for the paschal solemnity: for on that occasion, it was the custom of the Jews to bethe twice.

Needeth not, save to wash his feet.] To cleanse them from any dirt or dust that might have adhered to them, in consequence of walking from the bath to the place of supper. The washing therefore of the feet of such persons, was all that was necessary, previously to their sitting down to table.

If these last words of our Lord had any spiritual reference, it is not easy to say what it was. A common opinion is the following: He who is washed—who is justified through the blood of the Lamb; needeth only to wash his feet—to regulate all his affections and desires; and to get, by faith, his conscience cleansed from any fresh guilt, which he may have contracted since his justification.

Ye are clean, but not all.] Eleven of you are upright and sincere: the twelfth is a traitor. So it appears he had washed 15 For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you.

16 Verily, verily, I say unto you, The servant is not greater than his Lord; neither he that is sent, greater than he that sent him.

17 If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them.

18 I speak not of you all: I know whom I have chosen: but that the scripture may be fulfilled, He that eateth bread with me hath lifted up his heel against me.

19 Now I tell you before it come, that when it is come to pass, ye may believe that I am he.

20 Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that receiveth whomsoever I send, receiveth me; and he that receiveth me, receiveth him that sent me.

21 When Jesus had thus said, he was troubled in spirit, and testified, and said, Verily, verily, I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me.

22 Then the disciples looked one on another, doubting of whom he spake.

Matt. 10. 21. Mark 9. 34. Luke 6. 40. Ch 15. 20.— James i. 25.—1 Pet. 4. 9. Mat. 26. 21. Verse 21.— Chap. 14. 29. & 16. 4.— Or, From henceforth.— Matt. 10. 40. & 25. 41. Luke 10. 16.— Matt. 26. 21. Mark 14. 18. Luke 22. 21.— y Chap. 12. 27.— Acts i. 17. 1 John 2. 15.

the feet of all the twelve; but as no external ablutions can purify a hypocrite or traitor, therefore a Judas still remained unclean.

12. Know ye what I have done] Our Lord had told Peter, in the presence of the rest, ver. 7. that he should afterward know what was the intent and meaning of this washing: and now he begins to fulfil his promise; therefore I think it more likely that he gives a command here, than asks a question, as he knew himself that they did not comprehend his design. On this account γνωσκετε, might be translated in the imperative mood, consider what I have done.

13. Ye call me Master and Lord] Ο δδδακαλος και ο κυριος, similar to רבי Rabbi, and מר Mar, titles very common among the Jewish doctors, as may be seen in Schoetgen. This double title was not given except to the most accredited teachers, רבי רבי Rabbi remore, my master, my lord!

14. Ye also ought to wash one another's feet.] That is, ye should be ready, after my example, to condescend to all the weakness of your brethren; to be willing to do the meanest offices for them, and to prefer the least of them in honour to yourselves.

15. The servant is not greater than his lord.] Christ has ennobled the acts of humility by practising them himself. The true glory of a Christian consists in being, in his measure, as humble as his Lord.

Neither is he that is sent] Ουδς αποστολος, nor an apostle. As I think these words were intended for the suppression of all worldly ambition and lordly conduct in the apostles and their successors in the ministry; therefore I think the original word αποστολος, should be translated apostle, rather than he that is sent, because the former rendering ascertainment and determines the meaning better.

17. If ye know these things, happy, &c.] True happiness consists in the knowledge of God, and in obedience to him. A man is not happy because he knows much; but because he receives much of the Divine nature, and is, in all his conduct, conformed to the Divine will. "They who have read many books (says Menus) are more exalted than such as have seldom studied; they who retain what they have read, than forgetful readers; they who fully understand, than such as only remember; and they who perform their known duty, than such as barely know it. Sacred knowledge and devotedness to God, are the means by which a man can arrive at beatitude." See Institutes of MENUS, c. xii. Inst. 103, 104. For a heathen, this saying is very remarkable.

18. I speak not of you all.] This is a continuation of that discourse which was left off at the tenth verse. The preceding verses may be read in a parenthesis.

I know whom I have chosen] I am not deceived in my choice: I perfectly foresaw every thing that has happened, or can happen. I have chosen Judas, not as a wicked man, nor that he should become such, but I plainly foresaw that he would abuse my bounty; give way to iniquity; deliver me into the hands of my enemies, and bring ruin upon himself.

That the scripture may be fulfilled.] Or, Thus the scripture is fulfilled. Christ applies to Judas what David had said of his rebellious son Absalom: Psal. xii. 9. who was one of the most express emblems of this traitor: see on chap. xii. 33, 35.

He that eateth bread with me.] That is, he who was in habits of the utmost intimacy with me.

Hath lifted up his heel.] An allusion to a restive ill-natured horse, who sometimes kicks even the person who feeds and takes care of him.

19. That ye may believe.] These frequent predictions of his death, so circumstantial in themselves, had the most direct tendency to confirm the disciples not only in the belief of his being the Messiah; but also in that of his omniscience.

20. He that receiveth whomsoever I send] See similar words, Matt. x. 40, &c. Our Lord spoke this to comfort his disciples: he showed them that although they should be rejected by many, they would be received by several; and that whoever received them, should reap the utmost benefit by it.

21. Was troubled in spirit.] See the note on chap. xi. 33. And testified] Spoke with great earnestness.

23 Now there was leaning on Jesus' bosom one of his disciples, whom Jesus loved.

24 Simon Peter therefore beckoned to him, that he should ask who it should be, of whom he spake.

25 He then lying on Jesus' breast, saith unto him, Lord, who is it?

26 Jesus answered, He it is, to whom I shall give a kiss, when I have dipped it. And when he had dipped the sop, he gave it to Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon.

27 And after the sop Satan entered into him. Then said Jesus unto him, That thou doest, do quickly.

28 Now no man at the table knew for what intent he spake this unto him.

29 For some of them thought, because Judas had the bag; that Jesus had said unto him, Buy those things that we have need of against the feast; or that he should give something to the poor.

30 He then, having received the sop, went immediately out: and it was night.

31 ¶ Ch. 13. 23. & 24. 2. & 17. 30. & 18. 1. & 19. 1. & 20. 1. & 21. 1. & 22. 1. & 23. 1. & 24. 1. & 25. 1. & 26. 1. & 27. 1. & 28. 1. & 29. 1. & 30. 1. & 31. 1. & 32. 1. & 33. 1. & 34. 1. & 35. 1. & 36. 1. & 37. 1. & 38. 1. & 39. 1. & 40. 1. & 41. 1. & 42. 1. & 43. 1. & 44. 1. & 45. 1. & 46. 1. & 47. 1. & 48. 1. & 49. 1. & 50. 1. & 51. 1. & 52. 1. & 53. 1. & 54. 1. & 55. 1. & 56. 1. & 57. 1. & 58. 1. & 59. 1. & 60. 1. & 61. 1. & 62. 1. & 63. 1. & 64. 1. & 65. 1. & 66. 1. & 67. 1. & 68. 1. & 69. 1. & 70. 1. & 71. 1. & 72. 1. & 73. 1. & 74. 1. & 75. 1. & 76. 1. & 77. 1. & 78. 1. & 79. 1. & 80. 1. & 81. 1. & 82. 1. & 83. 1. & 84. 1. & 85. 1. & 86. 1. & 87. 1. & 88. 1. & 89. 1. & 90. 1. & 91. 1. & 92. 1. & 93. 1. & 94. 1. & 95. 1. & 96. 1. & 97. 1. & 98. 1. & 99. 1. & 100. 1.

Shall betray me. Παράδοσι μὲν, will deliver me up. Judas had already betrayed our blessed Lord, and he was now on the point of delivering him up into the hands of the chief priests. By all these warnings, did not our Lord intend that Judas should be benefited? That he should repent of his iniquity, and turn and find mercy?

Loaded one on another, doubting of whom he spake. See the notes on Matt. xvi. 20-25. Every one but Judas, conscious of his own innocence, looked about upon all the rest, wondering who in that company could be such a traitor! Even Judas himself is not suspected. Is not this a proof that his general conduct had been such as to subject him to no suspicion?

Now there was leaning on Jesus' bosom The Jews of those days, at their suppers, reclined, supported by their left arm, on couches placed round the table, as the Greeks and Romans did. On each couch there were two or three persons; and the head of one of them came near to the bosom of him who reclined above him on the same couch. The person here mentioned was John, the writer of this history, who being more tenderly loved by Christ than the rest, had always that place at table which was nearest his Lord.

He then lying on Jesus' breast Evvrosos, lying his head against the breast of Christ, in a loving, respectful manner. As the expressions in the text are different here from those in the preceding verse, it shows that John altered his position at table, in order to ask the question which Peter suggested: which he probably did by whispering to our Lord; for, from ver. 28, we may learn, that the other disciples had not heard what John said; and it is likely that the following words—It is he to whom I shall give the morsel when I have dipped it; were whispered back by Christ to John.

And when he had dipped the sop Dr. Lightfoot observes that it was unusual thing to dip a sop and give it to any person; and it is probable that the rest of the disciples considered it as given to Judas that he might hurry to do some work on which he wished to employ him; and not wait to finish his supper in a regular manner. They did not hear the question that John asked, nor our Lord's answer; but they no doubt heard the words, That thou doest, do quickly—and might understand them as above.

Satan entered into him. He had entered into him before, and now he enters again, to strengthen him in his purpose of delivering up his Master. But the morsel was not the cause of this entering in; the giving of it only marks the time in which the devil confirmed Judas in his traitorous purpose. Hence have thought that this morsel was the sacrament of the Lord's supper: but this is an utter mistake.

That thou doest, do quickly. As if he had said, "Thou art past all counsel; thou hast filled up the measure of thy iniquity, and hast wholly abandoned thyself to Satan: I will not force thee to turn from thy purpose, and without this thou wilt not. Thy designs are all known to me: what thou art determined to do, and I to permit, do directly: delay not, I am ready."

Buy those things that we have need of against the feast Calmet's observation here has weight in it. "The disciples, who thought our Lord had said this to Judas, knew well that on the day of the pass-over there was neither buying nor selling in Jerusalem. This, therefore, did not happen on the paschal evening; for the feast, according to the common opinion, must have begun the preceding evening, and Jesus have eaten the pass-over with his disciples the night before his death:—but it appears to me by the whole text of St. John, that the pass-over did not begin till the time in which our Lord expired upon the cross. It was then that they were sacrificing the paschal lambs in the temple. It is therefore probable that the apostles believed that Judas went to purchase a lamb, and the other necessary things for the evening, and for the day of the pass-over." On this subject, the reader is requested to consult the observations at the end of Matt. xvi. where the subject is considered at large.

Give something to the poor It is well known that our Lord and his disciples lived on public charity; and yet they gave alms out of what they had thus received. From this we learn, 31 ¶ Therefore, when he was gone out, Jesus said, Now is the Son of man glorified, and God is glorified in him.

32 ¶ If God be glorified in him, God shall also glorify him in himself, and shall straightway glorify him.

33 Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me: and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go, ye cannot come; so now I say to you.

34 ¶ A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another.

35 ¶ By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another.

36 ¶ Simon Peter said unto him, Lord, whither goest thou? Jesus answered him, Whither I go, thou canst not follow me now; but thou shalt follow me afterward.

37 Peter said unto him, Lord, why cannot I follow thee now? I will lay down my life for thy sake.

38 Jesus answered him, Will thou lay down thy life for my sake? Verily, verily, I say unto thee, the cock shall not crow, till thou hast denied me thrice.

James 2. 8. 1 Pet. 1. 2. 1 John 2. 7, 8. & 3. 11. & 3. 4. & 4. 19. — 1 John 2. 5. & 4. 20. — 2 Cor. 12. 4. — Chap. 12. 12. — Ch. 13. 12. 1. 1 Pet. 4. 11. — Ch. 17. 1. & 6. 6. — Ch. 18. 1. — Ch. 21. 14. & 21. — 1 Lev. 19. 12. Ch. 13. 12. 17. 1. & 18. 1. & 19. 1. & 20. 1. & 21. 1. & 22. 1. & 23. 1. & 24. 1. & 25. 1. & 26. 1. & 27. 1. & 28. 1. & 29. 1. & 30. 1. & 31. 1. & 32. 1. & 33. 1. & 34. 1. & 35. 1. & 36. 1. & 37. 1. & 38. 1. & 39. 1. & 40. 1. & 41. 1. & 42. 1. & 43. 1. & 44. 1. & 45. 1. & 46. 1. & 47. 1. & 48. 1. & 49. 1. & 50. 1. & 51. 1. & 52. 1. & 53. 1. & 54. 1. & 55. 1. & 56. 1. & 57. 1. & 58. 1. & 59. 1. & 60. 1. & 61. 1. & 62. 1. & 63. 1. & 64. 1. & 65. 1. & 66. 1. & 67. 1. & 68. 1. & 69. 1. & 70. 1. & 71. 1. & 72. 1. & 73. 1. & 74. 1. & 75. 1. & 76. 1. & 77. 1. & 78. 1. & 79. 1. & 80. 1. & 81. 1. & 82. 1. & 83. 1. & 84. 1. & 85. 1. & 86. 1. & 87. 1. & 88. 1. & 89. 1. & 90. 1. & 91. 1. & 92. 1. & 93. 1. & 94. 1. & 95. 1. & 96. 1. & 97. 1. & 98. 1. & 99. 1. & 100. 1.

that even those who live on charity themselves, are expected to divide a little with those who are in deeper distress and want. 30. He—went immediately out: and it was night. He set off to Jerusalem from Bethany, which was but about two miles distant; and under the conduct of the prince of darkness, and in the time of darkness, he did this work of darkness.

31. Now is the Son of man glorified Nun derohaben, hath been glorified. Now it fully appears that I am the person appointed to redeem a lost world by my blood. I have already been glorified by this appointment, and am about to be further glorified by my death, resurrection, and ascension.

32. And shall straightway glorify him Or, glorify him, subo, immediately: as he did, not only in the miracles wrought at his death, but also in that remarkable case mentioned chap. xviii. 6. when the whole crowd that came to seize him, were driven back with a word of his mouth; and fell to the ground.

33. Little children Or, rather, beloved children. Teavia, a word frequently used by this apostle in his epistles. It was an expression which implies great tenderness and affection; and such as a fond mother uses to her most beloved babes. Now that Judas was gone out, he could use this epithet without any restriction of meaning.

Yet a little while The end of my life is at hand; Judas is gone to consummate his treason: I have but a few hours to be with you; and you shall be by and by scattered.

Ye shall seek me For a few days ye shall feel great distress because of my absence.

Whither I go, ye cannot come Your time is not up. The Jews shall die in their sins, martyrs for your Lord's iniquity; but ye shall die in the truth, martyrs for your Lord.

34. A new commandment I give unto you In what sense are we to understand that this was a new commandment? Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself, was a positive precept of the law: Lev. xii. 18. and it is the very same that Christ repeats here; how then was it new? Our Lord answers this question, Even as I have loved you. Now Christ more than fulfilled the Mosaic precept; he not only loved his neighbour, as himself, but he loved him more than himself; for he laid down his life for men. In this, he calls upon the disciples to imitate him; to be ready on all occasions to lay down their lives for each other. This was, strictly, a new commandment: no system of morality ever prescribed any thing so pure and disinterested as this. Our blessed Lord has outdone all the moral systems in the universe in two words: 1. Love your enemies: 2. Lay down your lives for each other.

35. By this shall all men know, &c. From this time forward, this mutual and disinterested love shall become the essential and distinctive mark of all my disciples. When they love one another, with pure hearts, fervently—even unto death; then shall it fully appear that they are disciples of that person who laid down his life for his sheep; and who became, by dying, a ransom for all.

The disciples of different teachers were known by their habits, or some particular creed or rite, or point of austerity, which they had adopted; but the disciples of Christ were known by this love which they bore to each other. The primitive Christians were particularly known by this among the Gentiles: Tertullian, in his Apology, gives us their very words: Vide, inquit, ut se diligant; et pro alterutra, meri parati sunt.—"See, say they, how they love one another; and are ready to lay down their lives for each other."

36. Thou canst not follow me now Thou hast not faith strong enough to die for me; nor is thy work yet done; but hereafter thou shalt suffer for my sake, and die in defence of my truth; see chap. xxi. 18.

37. Why cannot I follow thee now? Peter probably thought that our Lord intended to go some long journey, which would necessarily subject him to many inconveniences and fatigues, and he felt quite disposed to follow him in this supposed journey at all hazards. He saw no reason, because he did not see our Lord's meaning, why he could not follow him now.

I will lay down my life for thy sake Poor Peter, thou wast sincere, but thou didst not know thy own strength: Thou wert at this time willing to die, but when the time came thou wast not able. Christ must first die for Peter, before Peter own die for him. Let no man think he can do any thing good, without the immediate assistance of God. Peter's denial should be an eternal warning to all self-confident persons; though there be sincerity and good-will at the bottom; yet in the trial these cannot perform that office which belongs to the power of God. We should walk, and then look to God for power to execute: without him we can do nothing.

38. The cock shall not crow, &c.] See on Matt. xxvi. 34. Dr. Lightfoot has very properly remarked, that we must not understand these words as if the cock should not crow at all before Peter had thrice denied his Master; but we must understand them thus; "the cock shall not have finished his crowing before thou wilt thrice deny me. When the time was near, the very night in which this was to happen, Christ said, This very night the cock shall not crow his second time, &c. But here, two days before that time, he says, the cock shall not crow; that is, shall have not done his crowing. The Jews, and some other nations, divided the cock-crowing into the first, the second, and the third times."

1. On Peter's denial of our Lord much has been written: by one class he has been incautiously excused, and by another rashly censured. Peter was self-confident, but he was certainly sincere, and had he trusted more in God, and less in himself, he would not have miscarried. He did not look to his Maker for strength, and therefore he fell. He was surprised, and found unarmed. It is a well-known fact, that circumstances have occurred, in which persons of the most bold, intrepid, and adventurous minds, have proved mere cowards, and acted to their own disgrace and ruin. Facts of this kind occur in the naval and military history of this and every other country. No man is inaster of himself at all times; therefore prudence and caution should ever be united to courage. Peter had courage, but he had not caution: he felt a powerful and determined will, but the trial was above his own strength, and he did not look to God for power from on high. He was warned by this miscarriage, but he dearly bought his experience. Let him that readeth understand.

2. A fact which occurs in the English Martyrology will serve to illustrate the history of Peter's denial and fall. In the reign of Queen Mary, when the Papists of this kingdom burned all the Protestants they could convict of denying the doctrine of transubstantiation; a poor man who had received the truth in theory, but had not as yet felt its power, was convicted and sentenced by their bloody tribunal to be burned alive. While they were drawing him to the place of execution, he was very pensive and melancholy, and when he came within sight of the stake, &c. he was overpowered with fear and terror; and exclaimed, "O, I can't burn! I can't burn!" Some of the attending priests, supposing that he wished to recant, spoke to him to that effect. The poor man still believed the truth; felt no disposition to deny it; but did not feel such an evidence of his Maker's approbation in his own soul, as could enable him to burn for it! He continued in great agony, feeling all the bitterness of death, and calling on God to reveal himself through the Son of his love. While thus engaged, God broke in upon his soul, and he was filled with peace and joy in believing. He then clasped his hands, and exclaimed with a powerful voice, I can burn! I can burn! He was bound to the stake, and burned gloriously, triumphing in God through whom he had received the atonement. This was a case in point. The man was convinced of the truth, and was willing to burn for the truth; but had not as yet power because he had not yet received an evidence of his acceptance with God. He pleaded for this with strong crying and tears, and God answered him to the joy of his soul; and then he was as able as he was willing to go to prison and to death. Without the power and consolation of the Spirit of God, who could be a martyr, even for divine truth? We see now plainly, how the case lies; no man is expected to do a supernatural work by his own strength: if left to that, in a case of this kind, his failure must be inevitable. But in all spiritual matters, assistance is to be sought from God: he that seeks shall find, and he that finds divine strength shall be equal to the task he is called to fulfill. Peter was incautious and off his guard: the trial came—he looked not for power from on high, and he fell:—not merely because he was weak;—not because God withheld the necessary assistance, but because he did not depend on and seek it. In no part of this business, can Peter be excused—he is every where blameable; and yet, through the whole, an object of pity.

CHAPTER XIV.

Christ comforts his disciples on the event of his removal from them, by the consideration of his going to prepare a place for them in heaven, 1—4. Thomas questions him concerning the way to the Father, and is answered, 5—7. Philip proposes a difficulty, and Christ shows that he and the Father are one; that he is Mediator between God and man; and that whatsoever is asked in his name, shall be obtained, 8—14. He promises them the Holy Spirit as the comforter and spirit of truth, 15—18. Shows them that he is shortly to leave them, and that those who love him, should be loved of the Father, 19—21. Jude asks a question, how Christ is to manifest himself to the disciples, and not to the Jews? 22. Christ answers, and shows that the manifestation is to be made to those who love God, and to them the Holy Spirit is to be an infallible teacher, 23—26. He bequeaths his peace to them, and fortifies them against discouragements, 27—29. Foretells his approaching death, 30, 31. [A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCLII.]

I ET * not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me.

2 In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you.

3 And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also.

4 And whither I go ye know, and the way ye know.

1 Verse 21. Ch. 16. 3. 22.—b Ch. 13. 33, 35.— Verse 15, 26. Acts 1. 11.—4 Ch. 12. 23. & 17. 24. 1 Thos. 4. 17.

NOTES—Verse 1. Let not your heart be troubled! After having answered St. Peter's question, he addresses himself again to his disciples, and tells them not to be afflicted at his leaving them; nor to lose courage because of what he said concerning Peter's denying him:—that if they reposed their confidence in God, he would protect them; and that howsoever they might see him treated, they should believe in him more firmly, as his sufferings, death, and resurrection, should be to them the most positive proof of his being the Messiah, the Saviour of the world.

Ye believe in God, believe also in me. It is best to read both the verbs in the imperative mood:—Place your confidence in God, and in me as the Mediator between God and man, ver. 12—14. and expect the utmost support from God; but expect it all through me. The disciples began to lose all hope of a secular kingdom, and were discouraged in consequence: Christ promises them a spiritual and heavenly inheritance, and thus lifts up their drooping hearts.

2. In my Father's house, &c. The kingdom of glory. Many mansions! Though I have said before, that whither I am going, ye cannot come now, yet do not think that we shall be for ever separated. I am going to that state of glory where there is not only a place of supreme eminence for myself, but also places for all my disciples;—various degrees of glory, suited to the various capacities and attainments of my followers.

Our Lord alludes here to the temple, which was called the house of God, in the precincts of which there were a great number of chambers, 1 Kings vi. 5. Ezra viii. 29. Jer. xxxv. 2, 4. xxxvi. 10.

If—not—I would have told you! If your places were not prepared in the kingdom of God, I would not have permitted you to indulge a vain hope concerning future blessedness.

3. And if I go! And when I shall have gone and prepared a place for you—opened the kingdom of an eternal glory for 5 I Thomas saith unto him, Lord, we know not whither thou goest; and how can we know the way?

6 Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, and the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me.

7 If ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also: and from henceforth ye know him, and have seen him.

8 I Philip saith unto him, Lord, show us the Father, and it sufficeth us.

1 Hebrews 2. 8.—f Chap. 1. 17. & 2. 32.—g Chap. 1. 4. & 11. 25.—h Chap. 10. 2.—i Chap. 8. 19.

your reception, and for the reception of all that shall die in the faith, I will come again, after my resurrection, and give you the fullest assurances of this state of blessedness: and confirm you in the faith, by my grace and the effusion of my Spirit. Dr. Lightfoot thinks, and with great probability too, that there is an allusion here to Num. x. 33. And the ark of the Lord went before them, to search out a resting place for them.

4. And whither I go ye know! I have told you this so often, and so plainly, that ye must certainly have comprehended what I have said.

5. Lord, ye know not! Thomas, perhaps, thought that our Lord only spoke of his going some distance from the place where he then was.

6. I am the way! That leads to the Father; and the truth that teaches the knowledge of God, and directs in the way:—the life that animates all those who seek and serve him; and which is to be enjoyed eternally at the end of the way.

Christ is the way, 1. By his doctrine, chap. vi. 68. 2. By his example, 1 Pet. ii. 21. 3. By his sacrifice, Heb. ix. 8, & 4. By his Spirit, chap. xvi. 13.

He is the truth, 1. In opposition to all false religions. 2. To the Mosaic law, which was only the shadow, not the truth or substance of the good things which were to come. And, 3. In respect to all the promises of God, 2 Cor. i. 20.

He is the life, both in grace and glory; the life that not only saves from death, but destroys it.

No man cometh unto the Father! By any other doctrine, by any other merit, or by any other intercession, than mine.

7. If ye had known me, ye should have known my Father! Because I and the Father are one, chap. x. 30. Or, if ye had properly examined the intention and design of the law, ye would have been convinced that it referred to me; and that what I have done and instituted, were according to the design and intention of the Father, as expressed in the Law.

8. Show us the Father! As if he had said, We have seen and 9 Jesus saith unto him, Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip? he that hath seen me hath seen the Father? and how sayest thou these things, Show us the Father?

10 Believest thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? the words that I speak unto you I speak not of myself: but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works.

11 Believe me that I am in the Father, and the Father in me: or else believe me for the very works' sake.

12 Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall be do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father.

13 And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son.

14 If ye shall ask any thing in my name, I will do it.

15 If ye love me, keep my commandments.

1 Chap. 12. 45. Col. 1. 24. Heb. 1. 2. Verse 20. Chap. 10. 25. & 17. 21. Verse 22. Chap. 5. 18. & 7. 16. & 8. 19. & 10. 25. & 10. 38. & 11. 27. & 12. 28. & 13. 17. Luke 10. 17. & 11. 20. & 12. 7. & 13. 32. Mark 11. 21. Luke 11. 8. Chap. 12. 17. & 14. & 15. & 23. John 1. 5. 1 John 2. 22. & 2. 14.

adored thee, and our happiness will be complete if thou show us the Father. The demand of Philip was similar to that made by Moses, Exod. xxxiii. 18. He wished to see the glory of God. In Peter, James, or John, this would have been inexcusable; but Philip had not seen the transfiguration on the mount. The Jewish history is full of the manifestations which God made of himself; and especially when he gave the Law. As Christ was introducing a new law, Philip wished to have an additional manifestation of God.

9. He that hath seen me hath seen the Father? Could any creature say these words? Do they not evidently imply that Christ declared himself to his disciples to be the everlasting God?

10. I am in the Father and the Father in me? We are essentially one; and those who have seen me, have seen him who sent me.

He doeth the works. We are not only one in nature, but one also in operation. The works which I have done bear witness of the infinite perfection of my nature. Such miracles as I have wrought, could only be performed by unlimited power.

12. And greater works than these? The miracles which I have wrought could not have been wrought but by the omnipotence of God; but that omnipotence can work greater. And those who believe on my name shall, through my almighty power, be enabled to work greater miracles than those which I have ordinarily wrought. An impostor might seduce the people by false miracles, but he could not make his power and cunning pass to all those who were seduced by him; but I will give you this proof of the divinity of my mission and the truth of my doctrine.

Perhaps the greater works refer to the immense multitudes that were brought to God by the ministry of the apostles. By the apostles was the doctrine of Christ spread far and wide; while Christ confined his ministry chiefly to the precincts of Judea. It is certainly the greatest miracle of divine grace to convert the obstinate wicked heart of man, from sin to holiness. This was done in numberless cases by the disciples, who were endued with power from on high, while proclaiming remission of sins, through faith in his blood.

Some account for the greater works thus: 1. The very shadow of Peter healed the diseased, Acts v. 15. 2. Diseases were cured and demons cast out, by applying to the persons handkerchiefs and aprons that had before touched the body of Paul, Acts xix. 12. 3. By the word of Peter, Ananias and Sapphira were struck dead, Acts v. 5, 9, 10. 4. Elymas the sorcerer was struck blind by the sword of Paul, Acts xiii. 11. 5. Christ only preached in Judea, and in the language only of that country; but the apostles preached through the most of the then known world, and in all the languages of all countries. But let it be remarked that all this was done by the power of Christ; and I think it still more natural to attribute the greater works to the greater number of conversions made under the apostles' ministry. The reason which our Lord gives for this is worthy of deep attention.

Because I go unto my Father. Where I shall be an intercessor for you, that

12. Whosoever ye shall ask in my name? To enable you to perform these miracles, and to convert souls, may be granted you. Besides, by going unto the Father, I shall receive the Holy Spirit, and send down his abundant influences into the hearts of those who believe.

15. If ye love me, keep my commandments. Do not be affected at the thought of my being separated from you; the most solid proof ye can give of your attachment to, and affection for me, is to keep my commandments. This I shall receive as a greater proof of your affection than your tears.

16. I will pray the Father. After having made an atonement for the sin of the world, I will become Mediator between God and man; and through my mediation and intercession shall all the blessings of grace and glory be acquired.

Another Comforter. The word παρακλητος signifies not only a comforter, but also an advocate, a defender of a cause, a counsellor, patron, mediator. Christ is thus termed 1 John ii. 2, where the common translation renders the word advocate. Christ is thus called, because he is represented as transacting the concerns of our souls with God; and for this cause, he sends us; he goes unto the Father, ver. 12. The Holy Spirit is 16 And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever;

17 Even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you.

18 I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you.

19 Yet a little while, and the world seeth me no more; but ye see me: because I live, ye shall live also.

20 At that day ye shall know that I am in my Father, and ye in me, and I in you.

21 He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me; and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him.

22 Judas saith unto him, not Iscariot, Lord, how is it that thou wilt manifest thyself unto us, and not unto the world?

23 Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love me, he

1 Verse 21. 23. Chap. 15. 10, 11. 1 John 5. 2. & Chap. 13. 26. & 16. 7. Rom. 8. 16. Verse 22. Chap. 15. 27. & 16. 13. 1 John 4. 4. & 1 Cor. 2. 11. & 1 John 2. 27. & Matt. 23. 31. & Or. 1. 1. & 2. 1. & 3. 1. & 4. 1. & 5. 1. & 6. 1. & 7. 1. & 8. 1. & 9. 1. & 10. 1. & 11. 1. & 12. 1. & 13. 1. & 14. 1. & 15. 1. & 16. 1. & 17. 1. & 18. 1. & 19. 1. & 20. 1. & 21. 1. & 22. 1. & 23. 1. & 24. 1. & 25. 1. & 26. 1. & 27. 1. & 28. 1. & 29. 1. & 30. 1. & 31. 1. & 32. 1. & 33. 1. & 34. 1. & 35. 1. & 36. 1. & 37. 1. & 38. 1. & 39. 1. & 40. 1. & 41. 1. & 42. 1. & 43. 1. & 44. 1. & 45. 1. & 46. 1. & 47. 1. & 48. 1. & 49. 1. & 50. 1. & 51. 1. & 52. 1. & 53. 1. & 54. 1. & 55. 1. & 56. 1. & 57. 1. & 58. 1. & 59. 1. & 60. 1. & 61. 1. & 62. 1. & 63. 1. & 64. 1. & 65. 1. & 66. 1. & 67. 1. & 68. 1. & 69. 1. & 70. 1. & 71. 1. & 72. 1. & 73. 1. & 74. 1. & 75. 1. & 76. 1. & 77. 1. & 78. 1. & 79. 1. & 80. 1. & 81. 1. & 82. 1. & 83. 1. & 84. 1. & 85. 1. & 86. 1. & 87. 1. & 88. 1. & 89. 1. & 90. 1. & 91. 1. & 92. 1. & 93. 1. & 94. 1. & 95. 1. & 96. 1. & 97. 1. & 98. 1. & 99. 1. & 100. 1.

thus called, because he transacts the cause of God and Christ with us, explains to us the nature and importance of the great atonement, shows the necessity of it, counsels us to receive it, instructs us how to lay hold on it, vindicates our claim to it, and makes intercessions in us with unutterable groanings. As Christ acted with his disciples while he sojourned with them, so the Holy Ghost acts with those who believe in his name.

For ever. As the death and atonement of Christ will be necessary to man till the conclusion of the world; so the office of the Holy Spirit must be continued among men till the end of time; therefore, says Christ, he shall continue with you for ever, teaching, comforting, advising, defending, and interceding for you and for all my followers to the end of time.

17. The Spirit of truth. The Spirit or Holy Ghost, whose essential office is to manifest, vindicate, and apply the truth. The Gospel of Christ may be thus called, because it exposes falsity, removes error, and teaches the knowledge of the true God; shows the way to him, saves from vanity and illusive hopes, and establishes solid happiness in the souls of those who believe.

The world cannot receive. By the world, St. John means those who are influenced only by the desire of the flesh, the desire of the eye, and the pride of life, 1 John ii. 16. Now these cannot receive the Spirit of the truth, because they see him not, have no spiritual discernment, attend to nothing but the dictates of their corrupt passions and affections; and will admit of no influence but what can be an object of their senses. Hence all the deism and irreligion in the world. God, in the operation of his hands, and in the influences of his Spirit, is found every where except in the perverted passions of men. In these alone do men of corrupt minds seek him; here only, he is not to be found; and therefore they become infidels and atheists.

But ye know him. Ye have already received a measure of the truth, and ye believe in this Spirit. Probably our Lord refers to the knowledge which they should afterward attain: in this sense the passage has been understood by the Vulgate, Nonnus, and two copies of the Itala, which read, ye shall know him.

For he dwelleth with you. Or, as the Ethiopic, Vulgate, Nonnus, and six copies of the Itala read, he shall dwell with you, (see above;) and this, it is very evident, is the meaning of the evangelist, who not infrequently uses the present for the future tense. It is certain the Holy Spirit was not yet given to the disciples so as to dwell in them; this St. John himself assures us, chap. vii. 39. And it is evidently of that Spirit and its influences, which was not given till the day of Pentecost, that our Lord here speaks.

18. I will not leave you comfortless. Literally, orphans. The original word, ὀρφανος, is by some derived from ὀρφος, obscure, dark, because, says Mintert, an orphan (one deprived of father and mother) is little esteemed, neglected, and is obliged to wander about in obscurity and darkness. Others derive it from the Hebrew צרפא, to strip, or make bare, despoil, because such a child is destitute of comfort, direction, and support, and is a prey to misery and disease, to sin and to death.

The disciples of a particular teacher among the Hebrews called him father, his scholars were called his children, and, on his death, were considered as orphans. Christ calls his disciples children, beloved children, chap. xiii. 33, and now that he is about to be removed from them by death, he assures them that they shall not be left fatherless, or without a teacher; for in a little time he should come again, (rise from the dead,) and after his ascension, they should be made partakers of that Spirit which should be their comforter, advocate, teacher, and guide, for ever.

19. Because I live. As surely as I shall rise from the dead so shall ye. My resurrection shall be the proof and pledge of yours. And because I live a life of intercession for you at the right hand of God, ye shall live a life of grace and peace here, and a life of glory hereafter.

20. That I am in my Father. After my resurrection, ye shall be more fully convinced of this important truth, that I and the Father are one; for I will live in you by the energy of my Spirit, and ye shall live in me by faith, love, and obedience.

21. He it is that loveth me. See on ver. 15.

will keep my words : and my Father will love him, *and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him.

24 He that loveth me not, keepeth not my sayings : and the word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's which sent me.

25 These things have I spoken unto you, being yet present with you.

26 But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in your name, he shall teach you all things; and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you.

27 Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you : not as the world giveth, give I unto you. * Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.

And will manifest myself to him.] All my faithful disciples shall see me after my resurrection : and I will manifest my power and goodness to all those who believe in and obey me ; even to the end of the world.

22. Judas] The same as Thaddeus and Lebbaeus, the brother of James, and author of what is called the Epistle of Jude. How is it? Or, how can it be—? ye yourselves, what is to happen? on what account is it? Judas, who was probably thinking that the kingdom of Christ should extend over all the earth, wonders how this can be, and yet Christ manifest himself only to his disciples and not to the world, ver. 19. To this our Lord, in a more express manner than he had done before answers : 23. If a man] Not only my present disciples, but all those who shall believe on me through their word, or that of their successors ;

Love me] Receive me as his Saviour, and get the love of God shed abroad in his heart by the Holy Ghost :

He will keep my words] Observe all my sayings, and have his affections and conduct regulated by my Spirit and doctrine :

My Father will love him] Call him his child ; support, defend, and preserve him as such.

And we will come unto him] God the Father, through his Son will continue to pour out his choicest blessings upon his head and upon his heart :

And make our abode with him] Will make his heart our temple, where God, the Father, Son, and Spirit, shall rest, receive homage, and dwell to eternity. Thus will I manifest myself, to the believing, loving, obedient disciple, and not to the unbeliever, who will not receive the Spirit of the truth.

24. He that loveth me not, &c.] Hence we learn, that the man who is not obedient to the testimonies of Christ does not love him : and the Spirit of this truth has said, He who loves not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be accursed, 1 Cor. xvi. 22.

25. He shall teach you all things] If in the things which I have already spoken to you, there appear to you any obscurity ; the Holy Spirit, the Advocate, Counsellor and Instructor, will take away all your doubts, free you from all embarrassment, and give you a perfect understanding in all things : and this Spirit ye shall shortly receive.

And bring all things to your remembrance] Here Christ promises them that inspiration of the Holy Spirit, which enabled them not only to give a true history of his life and death, but also gave them the most perfect recollection of all the words which he had spoken to them, so that they have been able to transmit to posterity the identical words which Jesus uttered in his sermons ; and in his different discourses with them, the Jews, and others.

27. Peace I leave with you] The Jewish form of salutation and benediction. A wish of peace among them is thus to be understood : May you prosper in body and soul, and enjoy every earthly and heavenly good ! For the meaning of this word, see Matt. v. 9.

My peace I give unto you] Such tranquillity of soul, such uninterrupted happiness of mind, such everlasting friendship with God as I enjoy, may ye all enjoy ! and such blessedness I bequeath unto you ; it is my last, my best, my dying legacy.

Not as the world giveth] Not as the Jews, in empty wishes ; not as the people of the world, in empty compliments. Their salutations and benedictions are generally matters of custom and polite ceremony, given without desire or design ;—but I mean what I say ; what I wish you, that I will give you.

To his followers Jesus gives peace, procures it, preserves it, and establishes it. He is the author, prince, promoter, and keeper of peace.

Neither let it be afraid] Μηδὲ δεδιεσθαι, let not your heart shrink back through fear of any approaching evil. This is the proper meaning of the word. In a few hours ye will be most powerfully assaulted : but stand firm :—the evil will only fall upon me ; and this evil will result in your comfort and salvation, and in the redemption of a lost world.

28. I go away] To the Father by my death :

And come again unto you.] By my resurrection.

Ye would rejoice.] Because as the Messiah, I am going to receive a kingdom, and power, and glory, for ever. Therefore as my friends ye should rejoice in my elevation, though for a while it may put you to the pain of being separated from me ; besides, I am going that I may send you the Holy Spirit, as the world giveth, give I unto you. * Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.

28 Ye have heard how I said unto you, I go away, and come again unto you. If ye loved me, ye would rejoice, because I said, I go unto the Father : for the Father is greater than I.

29 And now I have told you before it come to pass, that when it is come to pass, ye might believe.

30 Hereafter I will not talk much with you : for the prince of this world cometh, and hath nothing in me.

31 But that the world may know that I love the Father ; and as the Father gave me commandment, even so I do. Arise, let us go hence.

1 Phil. 4. 7. Col. 3. 15.—1 Ver. 10. Chap. 5. 19, 20. & 7. 16. & 9. 22. & 12. 40.—2 Ver. 16. Luke 9. 42. Chap. 13. 28. & 16. 7.—3 Chap. 2. 22. & 12. 16. & 16. 12. 1 John 2. 27.

which shall fill you with the fullness of God : on your own account, therefore, ye should have rejoiced and not mourned.

My Father is greater than I.] In ver. 24. Christ tells his disciples that the Father had sent him : i. e. in his quality of Messiah, he was sent by the Father to instruct, and to save mankind. Now, as the sender is greater than the sent, chap. xiii. 16. so in this sense is the Father greater than the Son ; and in this sense was the passage understood by Origen, Jerom, Novatian, and Vigilantius, who read the text thus ; The Father, & not I, who sent me is greater than I. It certainly requires very little argument, and no sophistry, to reconcile this saying with the most orthodox notion of the God-head of Christ ; as he is repeatedly speaking of his divine, and of his human nature. Of the former, he says, I and the Father are one : chap. x. 30. and of the latter, he states with the same truth, The Father is greater than I.

29. I have told you before it come to pass] Lest my death should be a stumbling-block to you, I have spoken of it beforehand, and showed you the necessity of it, that when it happens ye may believe, that as I could predict it so clearly, and so circumstantially, so all the good, which I have promised shall be the result, may be confidently expected by you ; and that your sorrow, if not entirely removed, may at least be much mitigated.

30. The prince of this world] Terror, of this, is omitted by ADEPHGHELMUS. Mt. BH. one hundred others ; both the Syriac, later Peshic, all the Arabic, and several of the primitive Fathers. I rather think the omission of the pronoun makes the sense more general ; for had he said this world, the words might have been restrained to the Jewish state, or to the Roman government. But who is the person called here the prince of this world ?

1. Mr. Wakefield thinks that Christ speaks here of himself, as he does in chap. xii. 31. (see the note there) and translates this verse and the following thus : For the ruler of this world is coming ; and I have nothing now to do, but to convince the world that I love the Father, and do as he commanded me. On which he observes, that our Lord speaks of what he shall be, when he comes again, and not of what he then was : compare ver. 18. chap. xvi. 16. xvii. 2. Matt. xxviii. 18. Phil. ii. 9. And how often does he speak of himself as the Son of man, in the third person ? See his vindication of this translation in the 3d vol. of his New Testament.

2. Others think that our Lord refers to the Roman government, the ruler of the world, who, by its deputy, Pilate, was going to judge him, but who should find nothing (supposed order, which is the reading found in some excellent MSS. and Versions, and is followed by almost all the primitive Fathers) as a just cause of death in him—nothing in the whole of his conduct which was in the least reprehensible : and this, indeed, Pilate witnessed in the most solemn manner. See chap. xviii. 38. xix. 4, 12. see also Luke xxiii. 4, &c. and Matt. xxvii. 24.

3. But the most general opinion is, that Satan is meant, who is called the prince of the power of the air, Eph. ii. 2 and who is supposed to be the same that is called the god of this world, 2 Cor. iv. 4. and who, at his last and most desperate trial, the agony in the garden, should be convinced that there was nothing of his nature in Christ, nothing that would coincide with his solicitations, and that he should find himself completely foiled in all his attacks, and plainly foresee the impending ruin of his kingdom. It is very difficult to ascertain the real meaning here : of the different opinions proposed above, the reader must take that which he deems the most likely.

31. Arise, let us go hence.] Calmet supposes that Christ having rendered thanks to God, and sung the usual hymn, Matt. xvi. 30. Mark xiv. 26. rose from the table, left the city, and went towards the garden of Olives, or garden of Gethsemane, on the road to which, a part of the following discourse was delivered. It was now about midnight, and the moon was almost full, it being the 14th day of her age, about the time in which the Jewish pass-over was to be slain.

The reader should carefully note the conduct of our Lord. He goes to die as a sacrifice, out of love to mankind, obedience to the Divine will, and with unshaken courage. All our actions should be formed on this plan. They should have the love of God and man for their principle and motive ; his glory for their end ; and his will for their rule. He who lives and acts thus, shall live for ever. Amen

CHAPTER XV.

The union of Jesus Christ with his followers, represented by the parable of a vine and its branches, 1-11. He exhorts them to mutual love, 12. Calls them his friends, and promises to lay down his life for them, 13-15. Appoints them their work, and promises them success in it, 16. Renews the exhortation to mutual love, 17; and foretells the opposition they would meet with from the world, 18-21. The sin of the Jews in rejecting Christ, 22-25. The Holy Spirit is promised as a witness for Christ, and the Comforter of the disciples, 26, 27. [A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCII. 1.]

- 1 I AM the true vine, and my Father is the husbandman.
- 2 Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away: and every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit.
- 3 Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you.
- 4 Abide in me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me.
- 5 I am the vine, ye are the branches: He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without me ye can do nothing.
- 6 If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and a Gen. 22. 11. Deu. 26. 32. Isa. 61. 2. Jer. 2. 21.—b Matt. 16. 13. In. 1. 95. Eph. 5. 9. 26.—c Chap. 13. 10. & 17. 17. Eph. 5. 26. 1 Peter 1. 22.—d Col. 1. 23. 1 John 2. 8.—e Heb. 14. 18. Phil. 1. 11. & 4. 12.

NOTES.—Verse 1. I am the true vine Perhaps the vines which they met with on their road from Bethany to Getsemane, might have given rise to this discourse. Some of the disciples were probably making remarks on the different kinds of them, and our Lord took the opportunity of improving the conversation, according to his usual manner, of the instruction of their souls. He might here term himself the true vine, or vine of the right sort, in opposition to the wild and barren vine. Some MSS. and several of the Fathers, read the verse thus: I am the true vine, ye are the branches, and my Father is the husbandman. Some think, that as this discourse followed the celebration of the eucharist, that our Lord took occasion from the fruit of the vine, used in that ordinance, to introduce this similitude.

2. Every branch in me I stand in the same relation to my followers, and they to me, as the vine to the branches, and the branches to the vine.

He taketh away As the vine-dresser will remove every unfruitful branch from the vine; so will my Father remove every unfruitful member from my mystical body—such as Judas, the unbelieving Jews, the apostatizing disciples, and all false and merely nominal Christians, who are attached to the vine by faith in the word and divine mission of Christ, while they live not in his life and spirit; and bring forth no fruit to the glory of God; and also every branch which has been in him by true faith; such as have given way to iniquity, and made shipwreck of their faith and of their good conscience; all these he taketh away.

He purgeth it He pruned. The branch which bears not fruit, the husbandman cuts, and taketh it away; but the branch that beareth fruit he purgeth, he taketh away from it, i. e. he prunes away excrescences, and removes every thing that might hinder its increasing fruitfulness. The verb καθαίρω, from κατα, into, and αἶρω, I take away, signifies ordinarily to cleanse, purge, purify; but is certainly to be taken in the sense of pruning or cutting off, in this text, as the verb purgare, is used by HORACE, Epist. lib. 1. ep. vii. v. 51. Culicella proprie purgantem leniter unguens. "Compendiously PRUNES his own nails with a penknife." He who brings forth fruit to God's glory, according to his light and power, will have the hinderances taken away from his heart; for his very thoughts shall be cleansed by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost.

3. Now ye are clean Καθαροί εστε, ye are pruned. As our Lord has not changed the metaphor, it would be wrong to change the expression.

Through the word Διὰ τὸν λόγον, through that word—the doctrine of holiness which I have incessantly preached unto you, and which ye have received. Perhaps our Lord more immediately refers here to the words which he had spoken concerning Judas, chap. xiii. 21—30. In consequence of which, Judas went out and finished his bargain with the chief priests: he being gone off, the body of the apostles was purified; and thus he might say, Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you.

4. Abide in me Hold fast faith and a good conscience; and let no trials turn you aside from the truth. And I will abide in you—ye shall receive every help and influence from me that your souls can require, in order to preserve and save them to eternal life.

These two things are absolutely necessary to our salvation: 1. That we continue closely united to Christ by faith and love; and live in and to him. 2. That we continually receive from him the power to do good; for as the branch, however good in itself, cannot bear fruit from itself, through its own juices, which it has already derived from the tree, and can be no longer supported than it continues in union with the parent stock; neither can ye, unless ye abide in me. As the branch partakes of the nature of the tree, is nourished by its juice, and lives by its life, so ye must be made partakers of my divine nature, be wise in my wisdom, powerful in my might, and pure through my holiness.

5. Without me ye can do nothing Χωρὶς ἐμοῦ οὐ δύνασθε is withered: and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned.

7 If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you.

8 Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; for so shall ye be my disciples.

9 As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you; continue ye in my love.

10 If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love.

11 These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full.

12 Or, severed from me. Acts 4. 12.—b Matt. 3. 10. & 7. 12.—c Verse 16. Ch. 14. 13. 14. & 16. 21.—d Man. 5. 16. Phil. 1. 11.—e Ch. 8. 31. & 13. 31.—f Ch. 14. 15, 21, 23.—g Ch. 16. 24. & 17. 12. 1 John 1. 4.

vous eussent—separated from me, ye can do nothing at all. God can do without man, but man cannot do without God. Following the metaphor of our Lord, it would be just as possible to do any good without him, as for a branch to live, thrive, and bring forth fruit, while cut off from that tree, from which it not only derives its juices, but its very existence also.

Nearly similar to this saying of our Lord, is that of CREESHNA (the incarnate God of the Hindoos) to his disciple ARJOON: "God is the gift of charity; God is the offering; God is the fire of the altar; by God the sacrifice is performed; and God is to be obtained by him, who maketh God alone the object of his works." And again, "I am the sacrifice; I am the worship; I am the spices; I am the invocation; I am the fire; and I am the victim. I am the Father and Mother of this world, and the Preserver. I am the Holy One, worthy to be known; the mystic figure O'M; (see on chap. 1. 14.) I am the journey of the good; the Comforter; the Creator; the Witness; the resting-place; the asylum, and the Friend. I am the place of all things; and the inexhaustible seed of nature: I am sun-shine, and I am rain; I now draw in, and now let forth." See BHAGVAT GEETA, p. 64. and 80. Could such sentiments as these ever come from any other source than divine revelation? There is a saying in THEOPHILUS, very similar to one of those above: Θεός ἐσ χωριστά, ἅλλα αὐτὸς ἐστὶν ὁ τόπος τῶν πάντων—God is not comprehended, but he is the place of all things.

6. If a man abide not in me Our Lord in the plainest manner intimates, that a person may as truly be united to him as the branch cut to the tree that produces it, and yet be afterward cut off and cast into the fire: because he has not brought forth fruit to the glory of his God. No man can cut off a branch from a tree, to which that branch was never united: it is absurd and contrary to the letter and spirit of the metaphor, to talk of being seemingly in Christ—because this means nothing. If there was only a seeming union, there could be only a seeming excision: so the matter is just where it began; nothing is done on either side, and nothing said to any purpose.

He is cast forth Observe, that person who abides not in Christ, in a believing, loving, obedient spirit, is, 1. Cut off from Jesus, having no longer any right or title to him or to his salvation. 2. He is withered—deprived of all the influences of God's grace and Spirit; loses all his heavenly unction; becomes indifferent, cold, and dead, to every holy and spiritual word and work. 3. He is gathered—becomes (through the judgment of God) again united with backsliders like himself, and other workers of iniquity; and being abandoned to his own heart and Satan, he is, 4. Cast into the fire—separated from God's people, from God himself, and from the glory of his power. And, 5. He is burned—is eternally tormented with the devil and his angels, and with all those who have lived and died in their iniquity. Reader! pray God that this may never be thy portion.

7. If ye abide in me, &c. ("Those," says CREESHNA, "whose understandings are in him, (God), whose souls are in him, whose confidence is in him, whose asylum is in him, are, by the inspired wisdom, purified from all their offences, and go from whence they shall never return." GEETA, p. 69.

Observe, in order to have influence with God, we must, 1. Be united to Christ—if ye abide in me. 2. That in order to be preserved in this union, we must have our lives regulated by the doctrine of Christ—and my words abide in you. 3. That to profit by this union and doctrine, we must pray—ye shall ask. 4. That every heavenly blessing shall be given to those who continue in this union, with a loving, obedient, praying spirit:—ye shall ask what ye will, &c.

8. Herein is my Father glorified Or, honoured. It is the honour of the husbandman to have good, strong, vigorous vines, plentifully laden with fruit; so it is the honour of God, to have strong, vigorous, holy children, entirely freed from sin, and perfectly filled with his love.

9. If ye keep my commandments, &c. Hence we learn, that it is impossible to retain a sense of God's pardoning love, without continuing in the obedience of faith.

10. That my joy might remain in you That the joy which

11. That my joy might remain in you That the joy which 12 * This is my commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you.

13 * Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.

14 * Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you.

15 Henceforth I call you not servants; for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth: but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you.

16 * Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain: that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you.

17 * These things I command you, that ye love one another.

In Ch. 13. 24. 1. Thon. 4. 8. 1. Pa. 4. 2. 1. Jn. 3. 11. & 4. 21. — Ch. 10. 11, 15. Rom. 8. 7. 2. 1. Ph. 2. 2. 1. Jn. 3. 16. — Ch. 14. 15. 22. See Matt. 12. 50. — See Gen. 15. 17. Ch. 17. 23. Acts 20. 27. — Ch. 4. 76. & 13. 18. 1. Jn. 4. 10. 12. — Matt. 23. 13. Mk. 16. 18. Ch. 1. 6.

I now feed on account of your steady, affectionate attachment to me, may be lasting; I give you both warnings and directions, that ye may abide in the faith.

That your joy might be full.] Or, complete—ἁπλοῦς, filled up: a metaphor taken from a vessel, into which water or any other thing is poured, till it is full to the brim. The religion of Christ expels all misery from the hearts of those who receive it in its fullness. It was to drive wretchedness out of the world, that Jesus came into it.

Bishop Pearce, by joining ἵνα to ἡγάπα, and not to μὴν, translates the verse thus: These things have I spoken, that my joy in you may remain—which is according to the meaning given to the first clause.

12. That ye love one another.] See on chap. xiii. 34. So Jeoply was this commandment engraven on the heart of this evangelist, that St. Jeron says, lib. iii. c. 6. Com. ad Galat. that in his extreme old age, when he used to be carried to the public assemblies of the believers, his constant saying was, Little children, love one another. His disciples, wearied at last with the constant repetition of the same words, asked him, Why he constantly said the same thing? "Because (said he) it is the commandment of the Lord, and the observation of it alone is sufficient." Quia preceptum Domini est, et ei solum fuit sufficit.

13. That a man lay down his life for his friends.] No man can carry his love for his friend further than this: for when he gives up his life, he gives up all that he has. This proof of my love for you, I shall give in a few hours; and the doctrine which I recommend to you, I am just going to exemplify myself. There are several remarkable cases in heathen antiquity, where one friend offered his life for another. The two following will not stand dishonoured, even in the book of God; because every thing loving and pure, in heathen, Jew, or Christian, must come from the God of love and purity.

When Cyrus had made war on the king of Armenia, and had taken him, his wife, and children, with Tigranes his son, and his wife, prisoners; treating with the old king concerning his ransom, he said, How much money wilt thou give me to have thy wife again? All that I have, replied the king. And how much wilt thou advance to enjoy thy children again? All that I can produce, answered the king. By reckoning thus, said Cyrus, you prize these at twice as much as you possess. Then turning to Tigranes, he said, How much wilt thou give as a ransom, that thou mayest have thy wife? (Now Tigranes had been but lately married, καὶ νεφελίαν ἔρα, γυναῖκα, and loved his wife exceedingly.) He answered, I will, indeed, O Cyrus, καὶ τὰς ψυχὰς ἁρπαγῆν, ransom her even with my life, that she may be no longer in thralldom. See Xenoph. Cyrop. lib. iii. c. 2.

The second example, which is too long to be inserted, is that affecting account of the friendship of Nisus and Euryalus, given by Virgil in the ninth book of the Æneid. These two friends, leagued together, had slain many of the Rutulians in a night attack: at last Euryalus was taken prisoner. Nisus, concealed in a thicket, slew several of the enemy's chiefs with his javelins: Volscians, their general, not seeing the hand by which his officers were slain, determines to wreak his vengeance upon his prisoner. Nisus seeing his friend about to be transfixed with the sword, rushing out of the wood where he lay hidden, he suddenly cries:

Mi mi! adem qui pocii in me convertite ferrum,
O Rutuli! mea, frons omnis— nihil inter— nec ausus,
Nec potui— Cæsum hoc, et conata iura totus!
Tantum infelicem Nisum dilexisti Atrox.

Æn. lib. ix. l. 427 &c.

MI MI! he cried, turn all your swords alone
On me: the fact confess'd, the fault my own.
His neither could, nor durst, the guiltless youth:
Ye moon and stars bear witness to the truth!
His only crime (if friendship can offend)
Is too much less to his unhappy friend." DAVEN.

Those who understand the beautiful original, will at once perceive, that the earnestness, confusion, disorder, impatience, and burning love, of the Rutuli, are poorly imitated in the above Latin translation. The friendship of David and Jonathan is well known: the latter cheerfully gave up his crown to his friend; though himself was every way worthy to wear it. But when all these instances of rare friendship and affection are seen, read, and admired, let the affected reader turn his astonished eyes to Jesus, pouring out his blood, not for his friends, but for his enemies; and in the agonies of death, making supplications 18 * If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you.

19 * If ye were of the world, the world would love his own: but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you.

20 Remember the word that I said unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you: for if they have kept my saying, they will keep yours also.

21 But all these things will they do unto you for my name's sake, because they know not him that sent me.

22 If I had not come and spoken unto them, they had not had sin: but now they have no cloke for their sin.

23 * He that hateth me, hateth my Father also.

1 Verse 7. Ch. 14. 13. — Verse 12. — 1 John 3. 12. — 1 Jn. 4. 5. — Ch. 17. 11. — Matt. 10. 24. Luke 6. 40. Ch. 13. 16. — Euseb. 3. 7. — a Matt. 10. 26. & 24. 9. Ch. 13. 3. — Ch. 9. 41. — Rom. 1. 30. James 4. 17. — 4 Or, exanimate. — 1 John 8. 23.

for his murderers with, Patker forgive them, for they know not what they do and then let him help exclaiming if he can,

"O Lamb of God, was ever pain,
Was ever love like THINE!"

15. Henceforth, I call you not servants.] Which he at least indirectly had done, chap. xiii. 16. Matt. x. 24, 25. Luke xvii. 10. I have called you friends.] I have admitted you into a state of the most intimate fellowship with myself, and have made known unto you whatsoever I have heard from my Father, which, in your present circumstances, it was necessary for you to be instructed in.

16. Ye have not chosen me.] Ye have not elected me as your Teacher: I have called you to be my disciples; witnesses and depositories of the truth. It was customary among the Jews, for every person to choose his own teacher.

And ordained you.] Rather, I have appointed you:—the word is ἔσκη, I have put or placed you, i. e. in the vine. The odorosa Mopuensis, as quoted by Wetstein, observes that ἔσκη is here used for ἐσφραγίσθαι, (I have planted) and in saying this, our Lord still makes use of the metaphor of the vine; as if he had said, I have not only planted you, but I have given you the greatest benefits, causing your branches to extend every where through the habitable world." The first ministers of the Gospel, were the choice of Jesus Christ: no wonder then that they were so successful. Those whom men have since sent, without the appointment of God, have done no good. The choice should still continue with God, who knowing the heart, knows best who is most proper for the Gospel ministry.

To be a genuine preacher of the Gospel, a man must, 1. Be chosen of God to the work. 2. He must be placed in the true vine—united to Christ by faith. 3. He must not think to lead an idle life, but labour. 4. He must not wait till work be brought to him, but he must go and seek it. 5. He must labour so as to bring forth fruit, i. e. to get souls converted to the Lord. 6. He must refer all his fruit to God, who gave him the power to labour, and blessed him in his work. 7. He must take care to water what he has planted, that his fruit may remain—that the souls whom he has gathered in, be not scattered from the flock. 8. He must continue instant in prayer, that his labours may be accompanied with the presence and blessing of God.—Whatever ye shall ask. 9. He must consider Jesus Christ as the great mediator between God and man, proclaim his salvation, and pray in his name.—Whatever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, &c. See Questions.

18. If the world hate you.] As the followers of Christ were to be exposed to the hatred of the world, it was no small consolation to them to know, that that hatred would be only in proportion to their faith and holiness; and that consequently, instead of being troubled at the prospect of persecution, they should rejoice, because that should always be a proof to them, that they were in the very path in which Jesus himself had trod. Dr. Lardner thinks that ἔσκη is a substantive, or at least an adjective used substantively, and this clause of the text should be translated thus: If the world hate you, know that it hated me your curer. It is no wonder that the world should hate you when it hated me, your Lord and Master, whose lips were without guile, and whose conduct was irreproachable. See the Doctor's vindication of this translation, Works, vol. 1. p. 306.

19. Ye are not of this world—therefore, &c.] On this very account, because ye do not join in fellowship with those who know not God, therefore they hate you. How true is that saying,

"The laws of Christ condemn a vicious world,
And call it to revenge." GARDNER.

20. If they have kept my saying.] Or, doctrine. Whosoever acknowledges me for the Christ, will acknowledge you for my ministers.

Some translate the passage thus: If they have watched my sayings, i. e. with an intent to accuse me for something which I have said; they still watch yours also: therefore be on your guard. Παρατηρεῖτε, has this sense, as we have had occasion to observe before; and perhaps ῥησιν, has the same sense here, as it is much more agreeable to the context.

21. Because they know not him that sent me.] This is the foundation of all religious persecution: those who are guilty of it, whether in church or state, know nothing about God. If God tolerates a worship, which professes to have him for its object; and which does not disturb the quiet or peace of society—no man has the smallest right to meddle with it; and he 26 If I had not done among them (the works which none other man did, they had not had sin: but now have they both seen and hated both me and my Father.

27 But this cometh to pass, that the word might be fulfilled that is written in their law, <sup>a</sup> They hated me without a cause.

<sup>a</sup> Ps. 35. 19. & 23. & 24. & 25. & 26. & 27. & 28. & 29. & 30. & 31. & 32. & 33. & 34. & 35. & 36. & 37. & 38. & 39. & 40. & 41. & 42. & 43. & 44. & 45. & 46. & 47. & 48. & 49. & 50. & 51. & 52. & 53. & 54. & 55. & 56. & 57. & 58. & 59. & 60. & 61. & 62. & 63. & 64. & 65. & 66. & 67. & 68. & 69. & 70. & 71. & 72. & 73. & 74. & 75. & 76. & 77. & 78. & 79. & 80. & 81. & 82. & 83. & 84. & 85. & 86. & 87. & 88. & 89. & 90. & 91. & 92. & 93. & 94. & 95. & 96. & 97. & 98. & 99. & 100.

that does, fights against God. His letting it pass, is at least a tacit command, that all should treat it as he has done.

22 But now they have no cloaks for their sin.) They are without excuse. See the margin, and see the notes on chap. ix. 41. Christ had done such works as demonstrated him to be the Messiah—yet they rejected him; here lay their sin: and this sin, and the punishment to which it exposed them, still remain; for they still continue to reject the Lord that bought them.

23. Written in their law) See on chap. x. 34. These words are taken from Psal. lxxix. 4. This Psalm is applied to Christ, chap. ii. 17. xix. 28. to the vengeance of God against Judea, Acts i. 20. The Psalm seems entirely prophetic of Christ. His deep abasement is referred to, ver. 2—5. his prayer for his disciples and followers, ver. 7. that for himself, in the garden of Gethsemane, ver. 15—19. his crucifixion, ver. 20—22. the vengeance of God against the Jews, from ver. 23. to ver. 28. the glorious manner in which he gets out of all his sufferings, ver. 30. the abolition of the Mosaic rites and ceremonies, ver. 32 compared with Isa. lxxvi. 3. and finally, the establishment of the Gospel through the whole world, in the 33d and following verses. The reader will do well to consult the Psalm before he proceeds.

25. But when the comforter is come) See on chap. xiv. 16. 25. 27. He shall testify—and ye also shall bear witness.) He shall bear his testimony in your souls, and ye shall bear this testimony to the world. And so they did, by their miracles, their preaching, their writings, their lives, and by their deaths. Our Lord appears to reason thus: In every respect the unbelief of the Jews, is inexcusable. They believe not my doctrine, notwithstanding its purity and holiness. They believe not in the Father who sent me, notwithstanding I have confirmed my mission by the most astonishing miracles. One thing only remains now to be done, i. e. to send them the Holy Spirit, to convince them of sin, righteousness, and judgment: and this he shall do, not only by his influence upon their hearts, but also by your words: and when they shall have resisted this Spirit, then the cup of their iniquity shall be filled up, and wrath shall come upon them to the uttermost.

But in what sense can it be said, that Christ wrought more 26 1) But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me:

27 And ye also shall bear witness, because I ye have been with me from the beginning.

<sup>1</sup> John 1. 1. & 2. & 3. & 4. & 5. & 6. & 7. & 8. & 9. & 10. & 11. & 12. & 13. & 14. & 15. & 16. & 17. & 18. & 19. & 20. & 21. & 22. & 23. & 24. & 25. & 26. & 27. & 28. & 29. & 30. & 31. & 32. & 33. & 34. & 35. & 36. & 37. & 38. & 39. & 40. & 41. & 42. & 43. & 44. & 45. & 46. & 47. & 48. & 49. & 50. & 51. & 52. & 53. & 54. & 55. & 56. & 57. & 58. & 59. & 60. & 61. & 62. & 63. & 64. & 65. & 66. & 67. & 68. & 69. & 70. & 71. & 72. & 73. & 74. & 75. & 76. & 77. & 78. & 79. & 80. & 81. & 82. & 83. & 84. & 85. & 86. & 87. & 88. & 89. & 90. & 91. & 92. & 93. & 94. & 95. & 96. & 97. & 98. & 99. & 100.

miracles than any other had done, ver. 20. 1 for Elijah and Elisha raised the dead; cured diseases; and made fire to come down from heaven. Did Christ do greater miracles than Moses did in Egypt—at the Red Sea—at the rock of Horeb; and at the rock of Kadesh? Did Christ do greater miracles than Joshua did in the destruction of Jericho—in the passage of Jordan—in causing the sun and moon to stand still? To all this may be answered, Christ's miracles were greater: 1. As to their number. 2. As to their utility—they were wrought to comfort the distressed, and to save the lost. 3. Christ wrought all his miracles by his own power alone; and they wrought theirs through his power only. 4. Christ wrought his numerous miracles in the space of three or four years, and in the presence of the same people; and the others were wrought from time to time in different centuries.

Some critics have confined the whole of this chapter to the apostles of our Lord, and the work of propagating Christianity, to which they had been called. The whole comment of Rosenmuller on this chapter proceeds on this plan; and at once shows how nugatory it is. What learned labour has there been in the world, to banish the spirit of Christianity from the earth, while the letter was professed to be scrupulously regarded! 1. The spiritual union spoken of by Christ, is not merely necessary for his primitive disciples, but also for all who would be Christians on earth, and beatified spirits in heaven. 2. The brotherly love here inculcated, is the duty and interest of every Christian soul on the face of the earth. 3. The necessity of adorning the Christian profession by bringing forth corresponding fruits, is the duty of all who name the name of the Lord Jesus. 4. The appointment to, and preparation for, the work of the sacred ministry, must ever be primarily with Christ: for those who have no higher authority than that which they derive from man, are never likely to be useful in Christianizing the world. 5. The persecution to which the apostles were exposed, has been the common lot of Christians from the foundation of Christianity. 6. The consolations and influences of Christ's Spirit have not been the exclusive privileges of the apostles; they are the birthright of all the sons and daughters of God.

CHAPTER XVI.

Christ warns his disciples, and foretells the persecutions they should receive from the Jews, 1—4. Foretells death, and promises them the Comforter, 5—7. Points out his operations among the Jews, and in the world, 8—11. His peculiar influence on the souls of the disciples, 12—15. Speaks figuratively of his death and resurrection, at which his disciples are grieved, 17, 18. He explains and illustrates the whole by a similitude, 19—22. Shows himself to be the Mediator between God and man, and that all prayers must be put up in his name, 23—25. The disciples clearly comprehend his meaning, and express their strong faith in him, 29, 30. He again foretells their persecution, and promises them his peace and support, 31—33. [A. M. 4063. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCII. 1.]

THESE things have I spoken unto you, that ye should not be offended.

2 That ye shall put you out of the Synagogues: yea, the time cometh, that whosoever killeth you, will think that he doeth God service.

3 And these things will they do unto you, because they have not known the Father nor me.

4 But these things have I told you, that when the time shall come ye may remember that I told you of them. And these things I said unto you at the beginning, because I was with you.

<sup>a</sup> John 1. 1. & 2. & 3. & 4. & 5. & 6. & 7. & 8. & 9. & 10. & 11. & 12. & 13. & 14. & 15. & 16. & 17. & 18. & 19. & 20. & 21. & 22. & 23. & 24. & 25. & 26. & 27. & 28. & 29. & 30. & 31. & 32. & 33. & 34. & 35. & 36. & 37. & 38. & 39. & 40. & 41. & 42. & 43. & 44. & 45. & 46. & 47. & 48. & 49. & 50. & 51. & 52. & 53. & 54. & 55. & 56. & 57. & 58. & 59. & 60. & 61. & 62. & 63. & 64. & 65. & 66. & 67. & 68. & 69. & 70. & 71. & 72. & 73. & 74. & 75. & 76. & 77. & 78. & 79. & 80. & 81. & 82. & 83. & 84. & 85. & 86. & 87. & 88. & 89. & 90. & 91. & 92. & 93. & 94. & 95. & 96. & 97. & 98. & 99. & 100.

NOTES.—Verse 1. These things have I spoken) Particularly what is mentioned in the two last chapters.

Be offended) be μη ενσταλαθηντε, that ye should not be stumbled. May not fall away from the faith, nor receive any injury to your souls, as that man does to his body, who stumbles or falls over a stone, or block, in the way, which he has not discovered.

2. They shall put you out of the synagogues) They will excommunicate you, and consider you as execrable, and unworthy unworthy to hold any commerce with God by religion, or with man by civil fellowship. See on chap. ix. 22. In these excommunications they were spoiled of all their substance: see Ezra x. 6. and see also Heb. x. 34. and deprived of their character, their influence, and every necessary of life. Though the Jewish people had the most humane laws, yet they were a most vindictive and cruel people.

That whosoever killeth you, &c.) This Paul found; for more than forty Jews bound themselves under a curse, that they would neither eat nor drink till they had killed him; Acts xxiii. 12, 13. and agreeably to this, it is said, in that Tract of the Talmud which is entitled Bemidbar, R. xxi. ad. Num. xxv. 13. "He who sheds the blood of the ungodly, is equal to him who brings an offering to God." What the Zealots did is notorious in history. They butchered any person in cold blood, whom they presumed to believe was an enemy to God, to the law, or to Moses; and thought they were fulfilling the will of God by 5 But now I go my way to him that sent me; and none of you asketh me. Whither goest thou?

6 But because I have said these things unto you, sorrow hath filled your heart.

7 Nevertheless I tell you the truth; it is expedient for you that I go away; for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you.

8 And when he is come, he will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment:

9 Of sin, because they believe not on me;

<sup>1</sup> John 1. 1. & 2. & 3. & 4. & 5. & 6. & 7. & 8. & 9. & 10. & 11. & 12. & 13. & 14. & 15. & 16. & 17. & 18. & 19. & 20. & 21. & 22. & 23. & 24. & 25. & 26. & 27. & 28. & 29. & 30. & 31. & 32. & 33. & 34. & 35. & 36. & 37. & 38. & 39. & 40. & 41. & 42. & 43. & 44. & 45. & 46. & 47. & 48. & 49. & 50. & 51. & 52. & 53. & 54. & 55. & 56. & 57. & 58. & 59. & 60. & 61. & 62. & 63. & 64. & 65. & 66. & 67. & 68. & 69. & 70. & 71. & 72. & 73. & 74. & 75. & 76. & 77. & 78. & 79. & 80. & 81. & 82. & 83. & 84. & 85. & 86. & 87. & 88. & 89. & 90. & 91. & 92. & 93. & 94. & 95. & 96. & 97. & 98. & 99. & 100.

these human sacrifices. We had the same kind of sacrifices here in the time of our Popish Queen Mary.

3. Because they have not known the Father) See on chap. xv. 25. Ignorance of the benevolence of GOD, and of the philanthropy of CHRIST, is the grand fountain whence all religious persecution and intolerance proceed.

4. As the beginning) I would not trouble you by speaking of these things pointedly at first, when I chose you to be my disciples; but have referred them to the present time, lest you should be discouraged; and now only declare them because it is absolutely necessary that you should be put upon your guard.

5. None of you asketh me, Whither goest thou?) In chap. xiii. 36. Peter had asked, Lord, whither goest thou? and Thomas, much the same in chap. xiv. 5. both of whom had received an answer. But now, at the time when Jesus was speaking this, none of them asked this question, because their hearts were filled with sorrow; ver. 6.

7. It is expedient—that I go away) In other places he had shown them the absolute necessity of his death for the salvation of men: see Matt. xx. 19. xxvi. 2. Mark ix. 31. x. 33. Luke ix. 44. xviii. 32. This he does not repeat here, but shows them, that, by the order of God, the Holy Spirit cannot come to them, nor to the world, unless he first die; and consequently men cannot be saved but in this way.

8. He will reprove) ελεγε, he will demonstrate these matters as clearly as to leave no doubt on the minds of those who

10 <sup>o</sup> Of righteousness, * because I go to my Father, and ye see me no more;

11 <sup>o</sup> Of judgment, because * the prince of this world is judged.

12 I have yet many things to say unto you, * but ye cannot hear them now.

13 Howbeit, when he, * the Spirit of truth is come, * he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will show you things to come.

14 He shall glorify me: for he shall receive of mine, and shall show it unto you.

15 * All things that the Father hath are mine: therefore said I, that he shall take of mine, and show it unto you.

16 <sup>v</sup> A little while, and ye shall not see me: and again a little while, and ye shall see me; * because I go to the Father.

17 Then said some of his disciples among themselves, What is this that he saith unto us, A little while, and ye shall not see me?

n Acts 2: 32. — Ch 31. 4 & 5. 32. — Acts 26: 18. — Luke 10: 18. Chap 12: 31. Eph. 2: 2. Col. 1: 10. Heb. 2: 14. — 1 John 4: 33. 1 Cor. 3: 2. Heb. 6: 12. — Ch 14: 17 & 18. 26. — Ch 14: 26. 1 John 2: 22, 27.

are simple of heart; and so fully, as to confound and shut the mouths of those who are gainsayers. See Acts ii. 1, &c.

The world] The Jewish nation first, and afterward the Gentile world; for his influences shall not be confined to one people, place, or time.

9. Of sin) Of the sin of the Jews in not receiving me as the Messiah, though my mission was accredited by the very miracles which the prophets foretold: see Isa. xxxv. 3-6. This was literally fulfilled on the day of Pentecost, when the Spirit was given; for multitudes of Jews were then convinced of this sin, and converted to God: see Acts ii. 37.

If we take this prediction of our Lord in a more general sense, then we may consider that it is one of the grand offices of the Holy Spirit to consist of sin: to show men what sin is; to demonstrate to them that they are sinners, and to show the necessity of an atonement for sin: and in this sense the phrase επιμαρτυρίας, may be understood; and in this sense it is used in multitudes of places in the Pentateuch; but the words because they believe not in me, restrict the meaning particularly to the sin of the Jews in rejecting Christ as the Messiah.

10. Of righteousness) Of my innocence and holiness, because I go away to my Father; of which, my resurrection from the dead, and my ascension to heaven, shall be complete proofs. Christ was treated by the Jews as an impostor, as a magician, as one possessed by the devil; as a wicked person, seducer, and destroyer of the law. His vindication from these charges be chiefly referred to the Holy Spirit, the Advocate, who, by his influences on the minds of the people, and by his eloquence and energy in the ministry of the apostles, convinced both the Jews and the Gentiles that the sentence of the Jewish rulers was unjust and infamous; and that the very person whom they had crucified, was both Lord and Christ—Lord, the great Governor of the universe; and Christ, the Lord's anointed, the promised Messiah. It was a matter of the utmost consequence to the Christian cause, to have the innocence and holiness of its founder demonstrated; and the crime of the Jews in putting him to death, made manifest to the world. This also has been literally fulfilled: the universe that has heard of him, believes the righteousness and innocence of Jesus; and the Jews, his persecutors, are confounded and execrated throughout the habitable globe.

11. Of judgment) Of the false judgment of the Jews in condemning the Lord Jesus, who, some think, is intended here by the ruler of this world: see chap. xiv. 31. Others think that Satan is meant, whose usurped power over the world, was now to be greatly restrained, and by and by totally destroyed: see chap. xii. 31. Col. ii. 15. Rev. xi. 18. xii. 10, 11. Perhaps our Lord's meaning is, that as a most astonishing judgment, or punishment, was now about to fall upon the Jews, in consequence of their obstinate infidelity; the Holy Ghost, by the ministry of the apostles, should demonstrate that this judgment, severe as it might seem, was amply merited by this worst of all people: and may we not say, that their continuance in the same crime, sufficiently vindicates the judgment of God, not only in its being poured out upon them at first, but in continuing to pursue them.

It is necessary to observe, that it was one office of the Spirit to convince of a judgment to come: and this he did particularly by the apostles, in declaring that God had appointed a day in which he would judge the world, by him whom he had appointed for that purpose: Acts xvii. 31. And we find that while Peter was asserting this doctrine at Caesarea, Acts x. 42. the Holy Spirit was poured out on the Jews and the Gentiles which were present, ver. 44, &c. and many were converted unto the Lord.

One general exposition may be given of these three verses. The Holy Spirit will convince the world of sin committed, and guilt and condemnation thereby incurred. Of righteousness—of the necessity of being pardoned, and made righteous through the blood of the Lamb, who, after being offered up for sin, went to the Father, ever to appear in his presence as our intercessor: and of judgment—of the great day thereof, when none shall be able to stand but those whose sins are pardoned, and whose souls are made righteous. In all that our Lord says here, there seems to be an allusion to the office of an advocate to a cause in a court of justice; who, by producing witnesses, me: and again a little while, and ye shall see me: and, because I go to the Father?

18 They said therefore, What is this that he saith, A little while? we cannot tell what he saith.

19 Now Jesus knew that they were desirous to ask him, and said unto them, Do ye inquire among yourselves of that I said, A little while, and ye shall not see me: and again a little while, and ye shall see me?

20 Verily, verily, I say unto you, That ye shall weep and lament, but the world shall rejoice: and ye shall be sorrowful, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy.

21 * A woman when she is in travail hath sorrow, because her hour is come: but as soon as she is delivered of the child, she remembereth no more the anguish, for joy that a man is born into the world.

22 * And ye now therefore have sorrow: but I will see you again, and * your heart shall rejoice, and your joy no man taketh from you.

n Matt. 11: 27. Ch. 2: 28. & 13: 3. & 17: 10. — Verse 10. Ch. 7: 38. & 12: 32 & 34. 18. — Verse 24. Ch. 13: 3. — 1 John 25: 17. — Verse 6. — Luke 24: 41, 52. Ch. 14: 1, 27. & 20: 19. Acts 2: 46. & 13: 21. 1 Pet. 4: 8.

and pleading upon the proof, convicts the opposite party of sin, demonstrates the righteousness of his client, and shows the necessity of passing judgment upon the accused.

The faith of the Gospel discovers unto us three different states of man: it shows him, 1st. Under sin, in which there is nothing but infidelity towards God, because there is no faith in Jesus Christ.

2. Under grace, in which sin is pardoned, and righteousness acquired by faith in Christ: who is gone to the Father to carry on, by his intercession, the great work of redemption. 3. In the peace and glory of heaven, where Christ will reign with his angels and servants, being banished into hell by the last judgment. Thus, in the Christian revelation, we are made acquainted with three grand truths, which contain the sum and substance of all true religion. The first is, the general corruption of human nature, and the reign of sin till the coming of Christ. The second is, the reparation of our nature by the Lord Jesus, and the reign of righteousness, by his grace: Rom. v. 21. The third is, the condemnation of sinners, and the total destruction of the kingdom of sin, and of all the power of the devil, by the last judgment.

12. Ye cannot hear them now.] In illustration of these three points, Christ had many things to say; but he found that his disciples would only bear general truths; yet in saying what he did, he sowed the seeds of the whole system of theological knowledge, and heavenly wisdom, which the Holy Spirit of this truth afterward watered and ripened into a glorious harvest of light and salvation, by the ministry of the apostles. Dr. Lightfoot supposes that the things which the apostles could not bear now, were such as these: 1. The institution of the Christian Sabbath, and the abolition of the Jewish. 2. The rejection of the whole Jewish nation, at the very time in which they expected to be set up and established for ever. 3. The entire change of the whole Mosaic dispensation, and the bringing the Gentiles into the church of God.

13. He will guide you] He will consider your feeble infant state; and as a father leads his child by the hand, so will the Holy Spirit lead and guide you. The Vulgate, and some copies of the Itala, read, he will τραξει you all truth; but this, and more, is implied in the word διηγήσει, he will lead; besides, this reading is not acknowledged by any Greek MS.

He shall not speak of himself] He shall teach nothing contrary to what I have taught you.

But whatsoever he shall hear] Of the Father and me, that he shall speak: and thus show the intimate consent between himself, the Father, and Christ. It is one conjoint testimony, in which the honour and glory of the Holy Trinity, and man's salvation, are equally concerned.

And he will show you things to come.] He will fully explain every thing that may now appear dark or difficult to you; will give you such a knowledge of futurity, as shall, in all necessary cases, enable you to foretell future events; and shall supply every requisite truth, in order to make the new covenant revelation complete and perfect.

15. All things that the Father hath are mine] If Christ had not been equal to God, could he have said this without blasphemy?

And shall show it unto you.] As Christ is represented the ambassador of the Father; so the Holy Spirit is represented the ambassador of the Son: coming vested with his authority, as the interpreter, and executor of his will.

16. A little while] He had but a few hours to live. And ye shall not see me] I shall be hidden from your view in the grave.

Again; a little while] In three days after my death: Ye shall see me] I will rise again, and show myself to you. Or, as I am going, by my ascension, to the Father, in a short time, ye shall see me personally no more; but in a little while I shall pour out my Spirit upon you, and others, through your ministry; and ye shall see me virtually in the great and wonderful work which shall then take place in the hearts and lives of men. This may also refer to his coming again to destroy the Jewish state; and also to judge the world: but how can this latter be said to be in a little while? Because a thousand years are but as a day in the sight of God: Psa. xc. 4.

18. What is this that he saith?] They knew from what he 23 And in that day ye shall ask me nothing. Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whosoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you.

24 Hitherto have ye asked nothing in my name: ask, and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full.

25 These things have I spoken unto you in proverbs: but the time cometh, when I shall no more speak unto you in proverbs, but I shall show you plainly of the Father.

26 At that day ye shall ask in my name: and I say not unto you, that I will pray the Father for you:

27 For the Father himself loveth you, because ye have loved me, and have believed that I came out from God.

28 I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world: again, I leave the world, and go to the Father.

29 His disciples said unto him, Lo, now speakest thou plainly, and speakest no proverb.

30 Now are we sure that thou knowest all things, and needest not that any man should thee: by which we believe that thou camest forth from God.

31 Jesus answered them, Do ye now believe?

32 Behold, the hour cometh, yea, is now come, that ye shall be scattered, every man to his own, and shall leave me alone: and yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me.

33 These things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world.

34 Do ye now believe? And will ye continue to believe? Ye are now fully convinced; and will ye in the hour of trial retain your conviction, and prove faithful and steady?

35 The hour cometh] Ye shall shortly have need of all the faith ye profess—ye now believe me to be the Omnipotent; but ye will find difficulty to maintain this faith, when ye see me seized, condemned, and crucified as a malefactor. Ye, your faith will be then so shaken, that ye shall run away, each striving to save himself at his own home, or among his kindred.

36 That in me ye might have peace] I give you this warning as another proof that I know all things: and to the end that ye may look to me alone for peace and happiness. The peace of God is ever to be understood as including all possible blessedness—light, strength, comfort, support, a sense of the divine favour, union of the Holy Spirit, purification of heart, &c. &c. and all these to be enjoyed in Christ.

In the world ye shall have tribulation] Or, as most of the very best MSS. read, ye, ye have—the tribulation is at hand, ye are just about to be plunged into it.

But be of good cheer] Do not despond on account of what I have said:—the world shall not be able to overcome you, how severely soever it may try you.

I have overcome the world.] I am just now going, by my death, to put it and its god to the rout. My apparent weakness shall be my victory: my ignominy shall be my glory; and the victory which the world, the devil, and my adversaries in general shall appear to gain over me, shall be their own lasting defeat, and my eternal triumph—Fear not!

Luther, writing to Philip Melancthon, quotes this verse, and adds these remarkable words: "Such a saying as this, is worthy to be carried from Rome to Jerusalem upon one's knees."

One of the grand subjects in this chapter, the mediation of Christ, is but little understood by most Christians. Christ having made an atonement for the sin of the world, has ascended to the right hand of the Father, and there he appears in the presence of God for us. In approaching the throne of grace, we keep Jesus, as our sacrificial victim, continually in view: our prayers should be directed through him to the Father: and under the conviction that his passion and death have purchased every possible blessing for us, we should with humble confidence, ask the blessings we need; and as in him the Father is ever well pleased, we should most confidently expect the blessings he has purchased. We may consider also, that his appearance before the throne in his sacrificial character, constitutes the great principle of mediation or intercession. He has taken our nature into heaven; in that he appears before the throne:—this, without a voice, speaks loudly for the sinful race of Adam, for whom it was assumed; and on whose account it was sacrificed. On these grounds every penitent and every believing soul may ask and receive, and their joy be complete. By the sacrifice of Christ, we approach God: through the mediation of Christ, God comes down to man.

37 I say not unto you, that I will continue your intercessor: I have given you already so many proofs of my love, that ye cannot possibly doubt this: besides, the Father himself needs no entreaty to do you good, for he loves you, and is graciously disposed to save you to the uttermost, because ye have loved me, and believed in me as coming from God, for the salvation of the world.

38 I came forth from the Father] With whom I existed from eternity in glory.

Am come into the world] By my incarnation.

I leave the world] By my death.

And go to the Father] By my ascension. These four words contain the whole economy of the Gospel of man's salvation, and a consummate abridgment of the Christian faith. This gave the disciples a key to the whole of our Lord's discourse; and especially to that part, ver. 16. that had so exceedingly embarrassed them; as appears by verses 17 and 19.

29. Lo, now speakest thou plainly] The disciples received more light now on the nature of Christ's person and office, than they had ever done before.

30. Now are we sure that thou knowest all things] Is not the following the meaning of the disciples. We believe that thou art not only the Messiah, who camest out from God, but that thou art that God who searchest the heart and triest the reins; and needest not to be asked, in order to make these acquainted with the necessities of thy creatures: for thou perfectly knowest their wants, and art infinitely disposed to relieve them.

31. Do ye now believe?] And will ye continue to believe? Ye are now fully convinced; and will ye in the hour of trial retain your conviction, and prove faithful and steady?

32. The hour cometh] Ye shall shortly have need of all the faith ye profess—ye now believe me to be the Omnipotent; but ye will find difficulty to maintain this faith, when ye see me seized, condemned, and crucified as a malefactor. Ye, your faith will be then so shaken, that ye shall run away, each striving to save himself at his own home, or among his kindred.

33. That in me ye might have peace] I give you this warning as another proof that I know all things: and to the end that ye may look to me alone for peace and happiness. The peace of God is ever to be understood as including all possible blessedness—light, strength, comfort, support, a sense of the divine favour, union of the Holy Spirit, purification of heart, &c. &c. and all these to be enjoyed in Christ.

In the world ye shall have tribulation] Or, as most of the very best MSS. read, ye, ye have—the tribulation is at hand, ye are just about to be plunged into it.

But be of good cheer] Do not despond on account of what I have said:—the world shall not be able to overcome you, how severely soever it may try you.

I have overcome the world.] I am just now going, by my death, to put it and its god to the rout. My apparent weakness shall be my victory: my ignominy shall be my glory; and the victory which the world, the devil, and my adversaries in general shall appear to gain over me, shall be their own lasting defeat, and my eternal triumph—Fear not!

Luther, writing to Philip Melancthon, quotes this verse, and adds these remarkable words: "Such a saying as this, is worthy to be carried from Rome to Jerusalem upon one's knees."

One of the grand subjects in this chapter, the mediation of Christ, is but little understood by most Christians. Christ having made an atonement for the sin of the world, has ascended to the right hand of the Father, and there he appears in the presence of God for us. In approaching the throne of grace, we keep Jesus, as our sacrificial victim, continually in view: our prayers should be directed through him to the Father: and under the conviction that his passion and death have purchased every possible blessing for us, we should with humble confidence, ask the blessings we need; and as in him the Father is ever well pleased, we should most confidently expect the blessings he has purchased. We may consider also, that his appearance before the throne in his sacrificial character, constitutes the great principle of mediation or intercession. He has taken our nature into heaven; in that he appears before the throne:—this, without a voice, speaks loudly for the sinful race of Adam, for whom it was assumed; and on whose account it was sacrificed. On these grounds every penitent and every believing soul may ask and receive, and their joy be complete. By the sacrifice of Christ, we approach God: through the mediation of Christ, God comes down to man.

world: again, I leave the world, and go to the Father.

29 His disciples said unto him, Lo, now speakest thou plainly, and speakest no proverb.

30 Now are we sure that thou knowest all things, and needest not that any man should thee: by which we believe that thou camest forth from God.

31 Jesus answered them, Do ye now believe?

32 Behold, the hour cometh, yea, is now come, that ye shall be scattered, every man to his own, and shall leave me alone: and yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me.

33 These things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world.

34 Do ye now believe? And will ye continue to believe? Ye are now fully convinced; and will ye in the hour of trial retain your conviction, and prove faithful and steady?

35 The hour cometh] Ye shall shortly have need of all the faith ye profess—ye now believe me to be the Omnipotent; but ye will find difficulty to maintain this faith, when ye see me seized, condemned, and crucified as a malefactor. Ye, your faith will be then so shaken, that ye shall run away, each striving to save himself at his own home, or among his kindred.

36 That in me ye might have peace] I give you this warning as another proof that I know all things: and to the end that ye may look to me alone for peace and happiness. The peace of God is ever to be understood as including all possible blessedness—light, strength, comfort, support, a sense of the divine favour, union of the Holy Spirit, purification of heart, &c. &c. and all these to be enjoyed in Christ.

In the world ye shall have tribulation] Or, as most of the very best MSS. read, ye, ye have—the tribulation is at hand, ye are just about to be plunged into it.

But be of good cheer] Do not despond on account of what I have said:—the world shall not be able to overcome you, how severely soever it may try you.

I have overcome the world.] I am just now going, by my death, to put it and its god to the rout. My apparent weakness shall be my victory: my ignominy shall be my glory; and the victory which the world, the devil, and my adversaries in general shall appear to gain over me, shall be their own lasting defeat, and my eternal triumph—Fear not!

Luther, writing to Philip Melancthon, quotes this verse, and adds these remarkable words: "Such a saying as this, is worthy to be carried from Rome to Jerusalem upon one's knees."

One of the grand subjects in this chapter, the mediation of Christ, is but little understood by most Christians. Christ having made an atonement for the sin of the world, has ascended to the right hand of the Father, and there he appears in the presence of God for us. In approaching the throne of grace, we keep Jesus, as our sacrificial victim, continually in view: our prayers should be directed through him to the Father: and under the conviction that his passion and death have purchased every possible blessing for us, we should with humble confidence, ask the blessings we need; and as in him the Father is ever well pleased, we should most confidently expect the blessings he has purchased. We may consider also, that his appearance before the throne in his sacrificial character, constitutes the great principle of mediation or intercession. He has taken our nature into heaven; in that he appears before the throne:—this, without a voice, speaks loudly for the sinful race of Adam, for whom it was assumed; and on whose account it was sacrificed. On these grounds every penitent and every believing soul may ask and receive, and their joy be complete. By the sacrifice of Christ, we approach God: through the mediation of Christ, God comes down to man.

37 I say not unto you, that I will continue your intercessor: I have given you already so many proofs of my love, that ye cannot possibly doubt this: besides, the Father himself needs no entreaty to do you good, for he loves you, and is graciously disposed to save you to the uttermost, because ye have loved me, and believed in me as coming from God, for the salvation of the world.

38 I came forth from the Father] With whom I existed from eternity in glory.

Am come into the world] By my incarnation.

I leave the world] By my death.

And go to the Father] By my ascension. These four words contain the whole economy of the Gospel of man's salvation, and a consummate abridgment of the Christian faith. This gave the disciples a key to the whole of our Lord's discourse; and especially to that part, ver. 16. that had so exceedingly embarrassed them; as appears by verses 17 and 19.

29. Lo, now speakest thou plainly] The disciples received more light now on the nature of Christ's person and office, than they had ever done before.

30. Now are we sure that thou knowest all things] Is not the following the meaning of the disciples. We believe that thou art not only the Messiah, who camest out from God, but that thou art that God who searchest the heart and triest the reins; and needest not to be asked, in order to make these acquainted with the necessities of thy creatures: for thou perfectly knowest their wants, and art infinitely disposed to relieve them.

31. Do ye now believe?] And will ye continue to believe? Ye are now fully convinced; and will ye in the hour of trial retain your conviction, and prove faithful and steady?

32. The hour cometh] Ye shall shortly have need of all the faith ye profess—ye now believe me to be the Omnipotent; but ye will find difficulty to maintain this faith, when ye see me seized, condemned, and crucified as a malefactor. Ye, your faith will be then so shaken, that ye shall run away, each striving to save himself at his own home, or among his kindred.

33. That in me ye might have peace] I give you this warning as another proof that I know all things: and to the end that ye may look to me alone for peace and happiness. The peace of God is ever to be understood as including all possible blessedness—light, strength, comfort, support, a sense of the divine favour, union of the Holy Spirit, purification of heart, &c. &c. and all these to be enjoyed in Christ.

In the world ye shall have tribulation] Or, as most of the very best MSS. read, ye, ye have—the tribulation is at hand, ye are just about to be plunged into it.

But be of good cheer] Do not despond on account of what I have said:—the world shall not be able to overcome you, how severely soever it may try you.

I have overcome the world.] I am just now going, by my death, to put it and its god to the rout. My apparent weakness shall be my victory: my ignominy shall be my glory; and the victory which the world, the devil, and my adversaries in general shall appear to gain over me, shall be their own lasting defeat, and my eternal triumph—Fear not!

Luther, writing to Philip Melancthon, quotes this verse, and adds these remarkable words: "Such a saying as this, is worthy to be carried from Rome to Jerusalem upon one's knees."

One of the grand subjects in this chapter, the mediation of Christ, is but little understood by most Christians. Christ having made an atonement for the sin of the world, has ascended to the right hand of the Father, and there he appears in the presence of God for us. In approaching the throne of grace, we keep Jesus, as our sacrificial victim, continually in view: our prayers should be directed through him to the Father: and under the conviction that his passion and death have purchased every possible blessing for us, we should with humble confidence, ask the blessings we need; and as in him the Father is ever well pleased, we should most confidently expect the blessings he has purchased. We may consider also, that his appearance before the throne in his sacrificial character, constitutes the great principle of mediation or intercession. He has taken our nature into heaven; in that he appears before the throne:—this, without a voice, speaks loudly for the sinful race of Adam, for whom it was assumed; and on whose account it was sacrificed. On these grounds every penitent and every believing soul may ask and receive, and their joy be complete. By the sacrifice of Christ, we approach God: through the mediation of Christ, God comes down to man.

37 I say not unto you, that I will continue your intercessor: I have given you already so many proofs of my love, that ye cannot possibly doubt this: besides, the Father himself needs no entreaty to do you good, for he loves you, and is graciously disposed to save you to the uttermost, because ye have loved me, and believed in me as coming from God, for the salvation of the world.

38 I came forth from the Father] With whom I existed from eternity in glory.

Am come into the world] By my incarnation.

I leave the world] By my death.

And go to the Father] By my ascension. These four words contain the whole economy of the Gospel of man's salvation, and a consummate abridgment of the Christian faith. This gave the disciples a key to the whole of our Lord's discourse; and especially to that part, ver. 16. that had so exceedingly embarrassed them; as appears by verses 17 and 19.

29. Lo, now speakest thou plainly] The disciples received more light now on the nature of Christ's person and office, than they had ever done before.

30. Now are we sure that thou knowest all things] Is not the following the meaning of the disciples. We believe that thou art not only the Messiah, who camest out from God, but that thou art that God who searchest the heart and triest the reins; and needest not to be asked, in order to make these acquainted with the necessities of thy creatures: for thou perfectly knowest their wants, and art infinitely disposed to relieve them.

31. Do ye now believe?] And will ye continue to believe? Ye are now fully convinced; and will ye in the hour of trial retain your conviction, and prove faithful and steady?

32. The hour cometh] Ye shall shortly have need of all the faith ye profess—ye now believe me to be the Omnipotent; but ye will find difficulty to maintain this faith, when ye see me seized, condemned, and crucified as a malefactor. Ye, your faith will be then so shaken, that ye shall run away, each striving to save himself at his own home, or among his kindred.

33. That in me ye might have peace] I give you this warning as another proof that I know all things: and to the end that ye may look to me alone for peace and happiness. The peace of God is ever to be understood as including all possible blessedness—light, strength, comfort, support, a sense of the divine favour, union of the Holy Spirit, purification of heart, &c. &c. and all these to be enjoyed in Christ.

In the world ye shall have tribulation] Or, as most of the very best MSS. read, ye, ye have—the tribulation is at hand, ye are just about to be plunged into it.

But be of good cheer] Do not despond on account of what I have said:—the world shall not be able to overcome you, how severely soever it may try you.

I have overcome the world.] I am just now going, by my death, to put it and its god to the rout. My apparent weakness shall be my victory: my ignominy shall be my glory; and the victory which the world, the devil, and my adversaries in general shall appear to gain over me, shall be their own lasting defeat, and my eternal triumph—Fear not!

Luther, writing to Philip Melancthon, quotes this verse, and adds these remarkable words: "Such a saying as this, is worthy to be carried from Rome to Jerusalem upon one's knees."

One of the grand subjects in this chapter, the mediation of Christ, is but little understood by most Christians. Christ having made an atonement for the sin of the world, has ascended to the right hand of the Father, and there he appears in the presence of God for us. In approaching the throne of grace, we keep Jesus, as our sacrificial victim, continually in view: our prayers should be directed through him to the Father: and under the conviction that his passion and death have purchased every possible blessing for us, we should with humble confidence, ask the blessings we need; and as in him the Father is ever well pleased, we should most confidently expect the blessings he has purchased. We may consider also, that his appearance before the throne in his sacrificial character, constitutes the great principle of mediation or intercession. He has taken our nature into heaven; in that he appears before the throne:—this, without a voice, speaks loudly for the sinful race of Adam, for whom it was assumed; and on whose account it was sacrificed. On these grounds every penitent and every believing soul may ask and receive, and their joy be complete. By the sacrifice of Christ, we approach God: through the mediation of Christ, God comes down to man.

NOTE.—Verse 1. These words spake Jesus] That is, what is related in the preceding chapters. We may consider our Lord as still moving on towards Gethsemane, not having yet only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent. 4 I have glorified thee on the earth: I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do.

Vol. V. R r

28

313

5 And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was.

6 I I have manifested thy name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world: thine they were, and thou gavest them me; and they have kept thy word.

7 Now they have known that all things whatsoever thou hast given me are of thee.

8 For I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me. (Ch. 3:24 & 5:26, 27, & 6:57, 58, & 7:39, & 10:26 & 11:42—Ch. 13:31 & 14:13—Ch. 13:34 & 15:26 & 16:20—Ch. 14:31 & 16:10—Ch. 17:1, 2 & 10, 30, & 14:9. Phil. 2:4 Col. 1:15, 17. Heb. 1:3, 17—1 Verse 25. Psa. 22:22.)

day of expiation; who in order to offer up the grand atonement for the sins of the people, 1. Washed himself and put on clean linen garments. This Christ appears to have imitated, chap. xiii. 4. He laid aside his garments, girded himself with a towel, &c. There is no room to doubt that he and his disciples had been at the bath before; see chap. xiii. 10. 2. The high-priest addressed a solemn prayer to God, 1. For himself; this Christ imitates, ver. 1—5. 2. For the sons of Aaron; our Lord imitates this in praying for his disciples, ver. 9—19. 3. For all the people; our Lord appears to imitate this also in praying for his church, all who should believe on him through the preaching of the apostles and their successors, ver. 20—24. After which he returns again to his disciples, ver. 25, 26. See CALVERT'S Dict. under Expiation; and see LA GRANDE Bible de M. MARTIN, in loc.

I. Our Lord's prayer for himself, ver. 1—5. Father! Here our Lord addresses the whole divine nature, as he is now performing his last acts in his state of humiliation.

Glorify thy Son.] Cause him to be acknowledged as the promised Messiah, by the Jewish people; and as the universal Saviour, by the Gentile world: and let such proofs of his Godhead be given, as shall serve to convince and instruct mankind.

Thy Son also may glorify thee! That by dying he may magnify thy law and make it honourable, respected among men—show the strictness of thy justice, and the immaculate purity of thy nature.

2. As thou hast given him power] As the Messiah, Jesus Christ received from the Father universal dominion. All flesh, i. e. all the human race, was given unto him, that by one sacrifice of himself he might reconcile them all to God: having by his grace tasted death for every man, Heb. ii. 9. And this was according to the promise of the universal inheritance made to Christ, Psal. li. 8. which was to be made up of the heathen, and the uttermost parts of the land, all the Jewish people. So that he got all from God, that he might give his life a ransom for the whole. See 2 Cor. v. 14, 15. Rom. v. 21. 1 Tim. ii. 4, 6.

That he should give eternal life, &c.] As all were delivered into his hands, and he poured out his blood to redeem all, then the design of God is that all should have eternal life: because all are given for this purpose to Christ: and that this end might be accomplished, he has become their sacrifice and atonement.

3. This is life eternal] The salvation purchased by Christ, and given to them who believe, is called life, 1. Because the life of man was forfeited to divine justice; and the sacrifice of Christ redeemed him from that death to which he was exposed. 2. Because the souls of men were dead in trespasses and sins; and Christ quickens them by his word and Spirit. 3. Because men who are not saved by the grace of Christ, do not live, they only exist: no good purpose of life being answered by them. But when they receive this salvation, they live—answer all the divine purposes, are happy in themselves, useful to each other, and bring glory to God. 4. It is called eternal life, to show that it reaches beyond the limits of time: and that it necessarily implies, 1. The immortality of the soul, 2. The resurrection of the body, and 3. That it is never to end, hence called αἰώνιος (ων, a life ever living; from αι, always, and ων, being or existence. And indeed no words can more forcibly convey the idea of eternity than these. It is called ἡ αἰώνιος (ων, THAT eternal life, by way of eminence. There may be an eternal existence without blessedness; but this is that eternal life, with which infinite happiness is inseparably connected.

The only true God.] The way to attain this eternal life is to acknowledge, worship, and obey, the one only true God; and to accept as teacher, sacrifice, and Saviour, the Lord Jesus, the one and only true Messiah. Bishop Pearce's remark here is well worthy of the reader's attention: "What is said here of the only true God, seems said in opposition to the gods whom the heathens worshipped; not in opposition to Jesus Christ himself, who is called the true God by John in 1 Epist. v. 20." The words in this verse have been variously translated, 1. That they might acknowledge thee, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent, to be the only true God. 2. That they might acknowledge thee, the only true God, and Jesus whom thou hast sent, to be the Christ or Messiah. 3. That they might acknowledge thee to be the only true God, and Jesus Christ to be him whom thou hast sent. And all these translations the original will bear. From all this we learn that the only way in which eternal life is to be attained is by acknowledging the true God and the divine mission of Jesus Christ, he being sent of God to redeem men by his blood: being the author of eternal salvation to all them that thus believe, and conscientiously keep his commandments.

A saying similar to this is found in the Institutes of Moses Brigeo, the first emanated being, who was produced from the mind of the Supreme God, and who revealed the knowledge of his will to mankind, is represented as addressing the human race and saying: "Of all duties, the principal is to acquire from the Upanishads (their sacred writings) a true knowledge of one supreme God; that is the most exalted of sciences, because it ensures eternal life. For in the knowledge and adoration of one God, all the rules of good conduct are fully comprised." See Institutions of Moses, ch. xii. Inst. 85, 91

4. I have glorified thee] Our Lord, considering himself as already sacrificed for the sin of the world, speaks of having completed the work which God had given him to do; and he looks forward to that time when, through the preaching of his Gospel, his sacrifice should be acknowledged, and the true God should be known and worshipped by the whole world.

5. Before the world was.] That is, from eternity, before there was any creation—so the phrase, and others similar to it, are taken in the Sacred Writings, see ver. 24. Psal. xc. 2. Eph. i. 4. See chap. i. 1. Lot the glory of my eternal divinity surround and penetrate my humanity, in its resurrection, ascension, and in the place which it is to occupy at thy right-hand, far above all creatures, Phil. ii. 6, 9.

II. Our Lord's prayer for his disciples, ver. 6, 19.

6. I have manifested thy name] Εφ' ὧσπερ, I have brought into light, and caused it to shine in itself, and to illuminate others. A little of the Divine Nature was known by the works of creation; a little more was known by the Mosaic revelation; but the full manifestation of God, his nature, and his attributes, came only through the revelation of Christ. (The men which thou gavest me) That is, the apostles, who having received this knowledge from Christ, were, by their preaching and writings, to spread it through the whole world. (Out of the world) From among the Jewish people; for in this sense is the word κοσμος to be understood in various parts of our Lord's last discourses.

Thine they were!] Objects of thy choice, and thou gavest them to me from among this very unbelieving people, that they might be my disciples and the heralds of my salvation. And they have kept thy word.] Though their countrymen have rejected it; and they have received me as thy well-loved Son in whom thou delightest.

8. I have given—them the words] I have delivered thy doctrine to them, so that they have had a pure teaching immediately from heaven: neither Jewish fables nor fictions of men have been mingled with it.

And have known surely] Are fully convinced, and acknowledge that I am the promised Messiah, and that they are to look for none other: and that my mission and doctrine are all divine, ver. 7, 8.

9. I pray not for the world] I am not yet come to that part of my intercession, see ver. 20. I am now wholly employed for my disciples, that they may be properly qualified to preach my salvation to the ends of the earth. Jesus here imitates the high-priest, the second part of whose prayer, on the day of expiation, was for the priests, the sons of Aaron, see on ver. 1. These words may also be understood as applying to the rebellious Jews. God's wrath was about to descend upon them, and Christ prays that his own followers might be kept from the evil, ver. 15. But he does not thus pray for the world, the rebellious Jews, because the cup of their iniquity was full, and their judgment summarised not.

10. I am glorified in them] Christ speaks of the things which were not, but which should be, as though they were. He anticipates the glorifying of his name, by the successful preaching of the apostles.

11. I am no more in the world] I am just going to leave the world, and therefore they shall stand in need of peculiar assistance and support. They have need of all the influence of my intercession, that they may be preserved in thy truth.

Keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me] Instead of εὐε δεῖνασθαι παι, whom whom thou hast given me, ΑΠΟΘΗΜΕ, Mt. EHV, and nearly one hundred others, read of which refers to the νοσσησται οων, thy name, immediately preceding. The whole passage should be read thus: Holy Father, keep them through thy own name whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, &c. By the name here, it is evident that the doctrine or knowledge of the true God is intended; as if our Lord had said, Keep them in that doctrine whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, &c. This same; those that thou gavest me I have kept, and none of them is lost, but the son of perdition; that the scripture might be fulfilled.

13 And now come I to thee; and these things I speak in the world, that they might have joy fulfilled in themselves.

14 I have given them thy word; and the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world.

15 I pray not that thou shouldst take them out of the world, but that thou shouldst keep them from the evil.

16 They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world. 17 Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth.

18 As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world.

19 And for their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth.

20 Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through thy word;

21 That they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me.

22 And the glory which thou gavest me, I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one: 23 I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me.

24 Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory which thou hast given me: for thou lovest me before the foundation of the world.

25 O righteous Father, the world hath not known thee; but I have known thee, and these have known that thou hast sent me.

26 And I have declared unto them thy name, and will declare it: that the love wherewith thou hast loved me may be in them, and I in them.

reading is supported by the most ample evidence and indisputable authority. Griesbach has admitted it into the text, and professor White in his CRISOSTOM says of it, Lectio industria genuina, "It is without doubt the genuine reading."

That they may be one] That they, and all that believe through their word (the doctrine which I have given them,) may be one body, united by one Spirit to me their living head. The union which Christ recommends here, and prays for, is so complete and glorious, as to be fitly represented by that union which subsists between the Father and the Son.

12. I kept them in thy name] In thy doctrine and truth. But the son of perdition] So we find that Judas, whom all account to have been lost, and whose case at best is extremely dubious, was first given by God to Christ. But why was he lost? Because, says St. Augustin, he would not be saved: and he further adds, After the commission of his crime, he might have returned to God and have found mercy. Aug. Serm. 136. n. 6. Psal. cxlvi. n. 20. Ser. 362. n. 8. and in Psal. cxvii. See Carmet: who remarks, Judas only became the son of perdition, because of his wilful malice, his abuse of the grace and instructions of Christ, and was condemned through his own avarice, perfidy, insensibility, and despair. In behalf of the mere possibility of the salvation of Judas, see the observations at the end of Acts 1.

Perdition or destruction is permitted; and Judas is represented as being her son, i. e. one of the worst of men—one whose crime appears to have been an attempt to destroy not only the Saviour of the world, but also the whole human race. And all this he was capable of through the love of money! How many of those who are termed creditable persons in the world, have acted his crime over a thousand times! To Judas and to all his brethren, who sell God and their souls for money, and who frequently go out of this world by a violent voluntary death, we may apply those burning words of Mr. Blair, with very little alteration:

"O cursed lust of gold! when for thy sake
The wretch throws up his damns in both worlds,
First hang'd in this, then damn'd in that to come."

That the scripture might be fulfilled] Or, thus the scripture is fulfilled, see Psal. xli. 9. cix. 8. compared with Acts 1. 20. Thus the traitorous conduct of Judas has been represented and illustrated by that of Aithophel, and the rebellion of Absalom against his father David. Thus what was spoken concerning them, was also fulfilled in Judas: to him therefore these scriptures are properly applied, though they were originally spoken concerning other traitors. Hence we plainly see that the treachery of Judas was not the effect of the prediction, for that related to a different case: but as his was of the same nature with that of the others; so to it the same scriptures were applicable.

13. My joy fulfilled in themselves] See on chap. xv. 11.

I have given them thy word] Or, thy doctrine—rov λoγov ovw. In this sense the word λογος is often used by St. John. And the world hath hated them] The Jewish rulers, &c. have hated them.—Why? Because they received the doctrine of God, the science of salvation; and taught it to others. They knew Jesus to be the Messiah, and as such they proclaimed him: our Lord speaks prophetically of what was about to take place. How terrible is the perversion of human nature! Men despise that which they should esteem: and endeavour to destroy that, without which they must be destroyed themselves!

15. That thou shouldst take them out of the world] They must not yet leave the land of Judæa: they had not as yet borne their testimony there, concerning Christ crucified and risen again from the dead. To take them away before this work was finished, would not answer the gracious design of God.—1. Christ does not desire that his faithful apostles should see die, and be taken to God. No; but that they may live long, labour long, and bring forth much fruit. 2. He does not intimate that they should exclude themselves from the world, by going to the desert or to the cloisters: but that they should continue and among the world, that they may have the opportunity of recommending the salvation of God. 3. Christ only prays that while they are in the world, employed

21 That they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me.

22 And the glory which thou gavest me, I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one:

23 I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me.

24 Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory which thou hast given me: for thou lovest me before the foundation of the world.

25 O righteous Father, the world hath not known thee; but I have known thee, and these have known that thou hast sent me.

26 And I have declared unto them thy name, and will declare it: that the love wherewith thou hast loved me may be in them, and I in them.

h 1 Cor. 1. 9, 20. 1 Thess. 4. 7. Heb. 10. 10.—i Or, truly sanctified.—k Verse 11, 22. Gal. 3. 16. Rom. 7. 6. Gal. 3. 28.—l Ch. 10. 28 & 14. 11.—m Ch. 14. 20. 1 Jn. 1. 3 & 2. 24.—n Gal. 3. 14.—o Ch. 16. 32 & 14. 3. Thoms. 4. 17.—p Ver. 6.—q Ch. 18. 21 & 16. 3.—r Ch. 7. 38 & 9. 35 & 10. 15.—s Ver. 6. Ch. 16. 27.—t Ver. 6. Ch. 18. 21 & Ch. 18. 29.

in the work of the ministry, they may be preserved from the influence rov πνευματος του evil one, the devil, who had lately entered into Judas, chap xlii. 27. and who would endeavour to enter into them, ruin their souls, and destroy their work. A devil without can do no harm; but a devil within ruins all.

17. Sanctify them] Αγιασων, from a, negative, and ya, the earth. This word has two meanings: 1. It signifies to consecrate, to separate from earth and common use, and to devote or dedicate to God and his service. 2. It signifies to make holy or pure. The prayer of Christ may be understood in both these senses. He prayed, 1. That they might be fully consecrated to the work of the ministry, and separated from all worldly concerns. 2. That they might be holy, and partake of all holiness to those to whom they announced the salvation of God. A minister who engages himself in worldly concerns is a reproach to the Gospel: and he who is not saved from his own sins, can with a bad grace recommend salvation to others.

Through thy truth] It is not only according to the truth of God that ministers are to be set apart to the sacred work; but it is from that truth, and according to it, that they must preach to others. That doctrine which is not drawn from the truth of God, can never save souls. God blesses no word but his own; because none is true without mixture of error, but that which has proceeded from himself. Our Lord still acts here in reference to the conduct of the high-priest, to whom it belonged to sanctify the priests, the sons of Aaron: see on ver. 1.

18. As thou hast sent me—so have I also sent them] The apostles had the same commission which Christ had, considered as man—they were ended with the same Spirit, so that they could not err, and their word was accompanied with the same success.

19. I sanctify myself] I consecrate and devote myself to death—that I may thereby purchase eternal salvation for them. There seems to be here an allusion to the entering of the high-priest into the holy of holies, when, having offered the sacrifice, he sprinkled the blood before the ark of the covenant. So Jesus entered into the holiest of all by his own blood, in order to obtain everlasting redemption for men: see Heb. ix. 11—13. The word, αγιασας, to consecrate or sanctify, is used in the sense of devoting to death in Jer. xli. 2. both in the Hebrew, and in the Septuagint: the Hebrew קדש, signifies also to sacrifice.

III. Our Lord's prayer for his church, and for all who would believe on his name, through the preaching of the apostles and their successors: see on ver. 1.

20. Neither pray I for these alone] This prayer extends itself through all ages, and takes in every soul that believes in the Lord Jesus.

And what is it that Christ asks in behalf of his followers? The greatest of blessings: unity, peace, love, and eternal glory.

21. That they all may be one] This prayer was literally answered to the first believers, who were all of one heart and of one soul: Acts iv. 42. And why is it that believers are not in the same spirit now? Because they neither attend to the example, nor to the truth of Christ.

That the world may believe] We have already seen that the word σοφως, world, is used in several parts of this last discourse of our Lord, to signify the Jewish people only.

Christ will have all his members to be one in spirit—one in rights and privileges, and one in the blessedness of the future world.

22. And the glory which thou gavest me, I have given them] That is, the power to work miracles, and to preach undisturbed truth, say some: but as our Lord is not here praying for the disciples, but for all those who should believe on him, through their word: ver. 20. it is more natural to understand the passage thus. As Christ, according to his human nature, is termed the Son of God, he may be understood as saying, "I have communicated to all those who believe, or shall believe in me, the glorious privilege of becoming sons of God; that, being all adopted children of the same Father, they may abide in peace, love, and unity." For this reason it is said, Heb. ii. 11. Christ is not ashamed to call them brethren.

However, our Lord may here, as in several other places, be using the past for the future; and the words may therefore be understood of the glory which they were to share with him in heaven.

23. That the world may know] That the Jewish people first, and secondly the Gentiles, may acknowledge me as the true Messiah, and be saved unto life eternal.

24. That they may behold my glory] That they may enjoy eternal felicity with me in thy kingdom. So the word is used, chap. iii. 3. Matt. v. 8. The design of Christ is, that all who believe, should love and obey persevere unto the end, and be eternally united to himself, and the ever blessed God, in the kingdom of glory.

25. The world hath not known me] Have not acknowledged me. See on chap. i. 11, 12.

And these have known me] Here our Lord returns to the disciples, speaks, 1st. Of their having received him as the Messiah; 2dly. Of his making the Father known unto them; 3dly. Of his purpose to continue to influence them by the Spirit of truth, that they might be perfectly united to God by an indissoluble Saviour for ever.

26. I have declared unto them thy name, &c.] I have taught them the true doctrine.

And will declare it] This he did, 1st. By the conversation he had with his disciples after his resurrection, during the space of forty days. 2dly. By the Holy Spirit which was poured out upon them on the day of Pentecost. And all these declarations Jesus Christ made, that the love of God, and Christ Jesus himself, might dwell in them; and thus they were to become a habitation for God through the eternal Spirit.

Our Lord's sermon, which he concluded by the prayer recorded in this chapter, begins at verse 13. of chap. xiii. and is one of the most excellent that can be conceived. His sermon on the Mount shows men what they should do, so as to please God: this sermon shows them how they are to do the things prescribed in the other. In the former, the reader sees a strict morality which he shall never be able to perform; in this, he sees all things are possible to him who believes; for that very God who made him, shall dwell in his heart, and enable him to do all that He pleases to employ him in. No man can properly understand the nature and design of the religion of Christ, who does not enter into the spirit of the preceding discourse. Perhaps no part of our Lord's words has been less understood, or more perverted, than the seventeenth chapter of St. John. I have done what I could in so small a compass, to make every thing plain; and to apply these words in that way in which I am satisfied he used them.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Jesus passes the brook Cedron, and goes to the garden of Gethsemane. 1. Judas having betrayed him, comes to the place with a troop of men to take him, 2, 3. Jesus addresses them, and they fall to the ground, 4—6. He addresses them again, and Peter smites Malchus, 7—11. They seize him, and lead him away to Caiaphas, 12—14. Peter follows to the palace of the high-priest, 15—18. The high-priest questions Christ concerning his doctrine, and Jesus answers, and is smitten, 19—23. Peter denies his Lord twice, 24—27. Jesus is led to the judgment hall, and Pilate and the Jews converse about him, 28—32. Pilate converses with Jesus, who informs him of the spiritual nature of his kingdom, 33—37. Pilate returns to the Jews, and declares Christ to be innocent, 38. He seeks to discharge him, and the Jews clamour for his condemnation, 39, 40. [A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCII. 1.]

WHEN Jesus had spoken these words, * he went forth with his disciples over the brook Cedron, where was a garden, into the which he entered, and his disciples.

2 And Judas also, which betrayed him, knew the place: (for Jesus oftentimes resorted thither with his disciples.)

3 4 Judas then, having received a band of men and officers from the chief priests and Pharisees, cometh thither with lanterns, and torches, and weapons.

4 Jesus therefore, knowing all things that should come upon him, went forth, and said unto them, Whom seek ye?

5 They answered him, Jesus of Nazareth. Jesus saith unto them, I am he.

6 As soon then as he said unto them, I am he, they went backward, and fell to the ground.

7 Then asked he them again, Whom seek ye? And they said, Jesus of Nazareth.

8 Jesus answered, I have told you that I am he: if therefore ye seek me, let these go their way:

9 That the saying might be fulfilled, which he spake, * Of them which thou gavest me, have I lost none.

10 ¶ Then Simon Peter, having a sword, drew it, and smote the high-priest's servant, and cut off his right ear.

11 ¶ Then Jesus said unto Peter, Put up thy sword: for whosoever shall use the sword, shall perish by the sword.

12 ¶ Then Jesus said unto them, But now let the high-priest and the chief priests and the scribes and the Pharisees kill the body, but cannot kill the soul: neither will I condemn any man; yet thus must the Son of Man be crucified.

13 ¶ Then he said unto them, I go to my Father, and ye shall worship him; whereas ye worship me, ye worship that which is not God: for the Father is the one who is God, and the Father is greater than I.

14 ¶ I and the Father are one.

15 ¶ Then the Jews said unto him, How canst thou say that thou art one with the Father, seeing thou sayest, the Father is greater than I?

16 ¶ Jesus answered them, and said, My Father is greater than I, because the Father that dwelleth in me, he that doeth all things in me.

17 ¶ I and the Father are one.

18 ¶ Then the Jews said unto him, Because thou sayest, I and the Father are one, therefore do we stone thee, because thou sayest, thou art God's Son, and makest thyself equal with God.

19 ¶ Jesus answered them, and said, I am not stoning you, because ye are not stoning me: but because ye say, which ye know to be false, I am God's Son.

20 ¶ I have said, I and the Father are one.

21 ¶ Then the Jews said unto him, Therefore do we stone thee, because thou sayest, thou art God's Son, and makest thyself equal with God.

22 ¶ Jesus answered them, and said, I honour my Father, and ye say, I blaspheme, because I say, I am God's Son.

23 ¶ I have said, I and the Father are one.

24 ¶ Then the Jews said unto him, Therefore do we stone thee, because thou sayest, thou art God's Son, and makest thyself equal with God.

25 ¶ Jesus answered them, and said, I am not stoning you, because ye are not stoning me: but because ye say, which ye know to be false, I am God's Son.

26 ¶ I have said, I and the Father are one.

27 ¶ Then the Jews said unto him, Therefore do we stone thee, because thou sayest, thou art God's Son, and makest thyself equal with God.

28 ¶ Jesus answered them, and said, I am not stoning you, because ye are not stoning me: but because ye say, which ye know to be false, I am God's Son.

29 ¶ I have said, I and the Father are one.

30 ¶ Then the Jews said unto him, Therefore do we stone thee, because thou sayest, thou art God's Son, and makest thyself equal with God.

31 ¶ Jesus answered them, and said, I am not stoning you, because ye are not stoning me: but because ye say, which ye know to be false, I am God's Son.

32 ¶ I have said, I and the Father are one.

33 ¶ Then the Jews said unto him, Therefore do we stone thee, because thou sayest, thou art God's Son, and makest thyself equal with God.

34 ¶ Jesus answered them, and said, I am not stoning you, because ye are not stoning me: but because ye say, which ye know to be false, I am God's Son.

35 ¶ I have said, I and the Father are one.

36 ¶ Then the Jews said unto him, Therefore do we stone thee, because thou sayest, thou art God's Son, and makest thyself equal with God.

37 ¶ Jesus answered them, and said, I am not stoning you, because ye are not stoning me: but because ye say, which ye know to be false, I am God's Son.

38 ¶ I have said, I and the Father are one.

39 ¶ Then the Jews said unto him, Therefore do we stone thee, because thou sayest, thou art God's Son, and makest thyself equal with God.

40 ¶ Jesus answered them, and said, I am not stoning you, because ye are not stoning me: but because ye say, which ye know to be false, I am God's Son.

41 ¶ I have said, I and the Father are one.

42 ¶ Then the Jews said unto him, Therefore do we stone thee, because thou sayest, thou art God's Son, and makest thyself equal with God.

43 ¶ Jesus answered them, and said, I am not stoning you, because ye are not stoning me: but because ye say, which ye know to be false, I am God's Son.

44 ¶ I have said, I and the Father are one.

45 ¶ Then the Jews said unto him, Therefore do we stone thee, because thou sayest, thou art God's Son, and makest thyself equal with God.

46 ¶ Jesus answered them, and said, I am not stoning you, because ye are not stoning me: but because ye say, which ye know to be false, I am God's Son.

47 ¶ I have said, I and the Father are one.

48 ¶ Then the Jews said unto him, Therefore do we stone thee, because thou sayest, thou art God's Son, and makest thyself equal with God.

49 ¶ Jesus answered them, and said, I am not stoning you, because ye are not stoning me: but because ye say, which ye know to be false, I am God's Son.

50 ¶ I have said, I and the Father are one.

51 ¶ Then the Jews said unto him, Therefore do we stone thee, because thou sayest, thou art God's Son, and makest thyself equal with God.

52 ¶ Jesus answered them, and said, I am not stoning you, because ye are not stoning me: but because ye say, which ye know to be false, I am God's Son.

53 ¶ I have said, I and the Father are one.

54 ¶ Then the Jews said unto him, Therefore do we stone thee, because thou sayest, thou art God's Son, and makest thyself equal with God.

more than the tenth of the fourth part of a legion. And as the number of the legion was uncertain, and their divisions not at all equal, no person can tell how many the band or spira contained. See many curious particulars in Raphelius on this point, vol. i. p. 351. edit. 1747. This band was probably those Roman soldiers given by the governor for the defence of the temple: and the officers were those who belonged to the sanhedrim.

With lanterns and torches] With these they had intended to search the corners and caverns, provided Christ had hidden himself; for they could not have needed them for any other purpose, it being now the fourteenth day of the moon's age, in the month Nisan, and consequently she appeared full and bright. The weapons mentioned here were probably no other than clubs, staves, and instruments of that kind, as we may gather from Matt. xxvi. 55. Mark xiv. 48. Luke xxii. 52. The swords mentioned by the other evangelists were probably those of the Roman soldiers: the clubs and staves belonging to the chief priest's officers.

4. Jesus—knowing all things, &c.] He had gone through all his preaching, working of miracles, and passion; and had nothing to do now, but to offer up himself on the cross: he therefore went forth to meet them, to deliver himself up to death.

5. Jesus of Nazareth] They did not say this till after Judas kissed Christ, which was the sign which he had agreed with the soldiers, &c. to give them that they might know whom they were to seize; see Matt. xxvi. 48. Though some harmonists place the kiss after what is spoken in the ninth verse.

6. They went backward, and fell to the ground.] None of the other evangelists mention this very important circumstance. Our Lord chose to give them this proof of his infinite power, that they might know that their power could not prevail against him, if he chose to exert his might; seeing that the very breath of his mouth confounded, drove back, and struck them down to the earth. Thus by the blast of God they might have perished, and by the breath of his nostrils they might have been consumed; Job iv. 9.

7. Let these go their way!] These words are rather words of authority, than words of entreaty. I voluntarily give myself up to you, but you must not molest one of these my disciples. At your peril injure them. Let them go about their business: I have already given you a sufficient proof of my power: I will not exert it in my own behalf, for I will lay down my life for the sheep; but I will not permit you to injure the least of these. It was certainly the supreme power of Christ that kept the soldiers and the mob from destroying all the disciples present, when Peter had given them such provocation, in cutting off the ear of Malchus. There were the high priest's servant, add out of his right ear. The servant's name was Malchus.

11 Then said Jesus unto Peter, Put up thy sword into the sheath: for the cup which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?

12 Then the band, and the captain, and officers of the Jews, took Jesus, and bound him, 13 And led him away to Annas first; for he was father-in-law to Caiaphas, which was the high-priest that same year.

14 Now Caiaphas was he, which gave counsel to the Jews, that it was expedient that one man should die for the people.

15 And Simon Peter followed Jesus, and so did another disciple: that disciple was known unto the high-priest, and went in with Jesus into the palace of the high-priest.

16 But Peter stood at the door without. Then went out that other disciple, which was known unto the high-priest, and spake unto her that kept the door, and brought in Peter.

17 Then saith the damsel that kept the door unto Peter, Art thou not he that saidst that thou keptst the door unto Jesus? Art probably as other disciples with Christ than Peter, James, and John, at this time: see Matt. xxvi. 37. Mark xiii. 33.

14. Ps. 32. 38. 39. 42.—3. Rev. 16. 17.—1. Luke 2. 2.—4. And Annas came down from Caiaphas the high-priest, ver. 14.—1. Ch. 11. 30.—Matt. 26. 59. Mk.

18. Having a sword] See the note on Luke xiii. 36.

19. Out of his right ear] He probably designed to have claven his ear in two; but God turned it aside, and only permitted the ear to be taken off; and this he would not have suffered, but only that he might have the opportunity of giving them a most striking proof of his divinity, in working an astonishing miracle on the occasion; see the notes on Matt. xvi. 51—56.

The other three evangelists mention this transaction; but neither give the name of Peter, nor of Malchus: probably because both persons were alive when they wrote: but it is likely both had been long dead, before St. John published his history.

11. The cup which my Father hath given me] The cup signifies sometimes the lot of life, whether prosperous or adverse: here it signifies the final sufferings of Christ.

12. The captain] Χαλιφας, the chiliarch, or chief over one thousand men—answering nearly to a colonel with us. See the note on Luke xxii. 4. He was probably the prefect or captain of the temple guard.

13. To Annas] This man must have had great authority in his nation, 1. Because he had been a long time high-priest. 2. Because he had no less than five sons, who successively enjoyed the dignity of the high-priesthood. And, 3. Because his son-in-law Caiaphas was at this time in possession of that office. It is likely that Annas was chief of the sanhedrim; and that it was to him in that office, that Christ was first brought. Some think that Annas was still high-priest, and that Caiaphas was only his deputy, though he did the principal part of the business; and that it is because of this, that he is called high-priest. But see the notes on Matt. ii. 4. and Luke iii. 2.

That same year.] The office was now no longer during life formerly. See the note on chap. xi. 49.

What is related in the 24th verse, Now Annas had sent him bound to Caiaphas, comes properly in after the 13th verse. One of the Versions 1698, adds this verse here, the latter Syriac has it in the margin, and St. Cyril in the text. See the notes.

14. Caiaphas was he, which gave counsel, &c.] Therefore he was an improper person to sit in judgment on Christ, whom he had prejudged and precondemned: see on chap. xi. 50—52. But Christ must not be treated according to the rules of justice; if he had, he could not have been put to death.

15. And another disciple] Not the other disciple, for the article is omitted by AD, two others: some editions; Syriac, Arabic, Gothic, and Nennes; So the Vulgate is to be understood. There are many conjectures who this disciple was: Jerem, Chrysoctom, Theophylact, Nonnus, Lyra, Erasmus, Piscator, and others, say it was John. It is true, John frequently mentions himself in the third person, but then he has always whom Jesus loved, as in chap. xiii. 23. xix. 26. xxi. 7. &c. except in chap. xix. 26. where he has plainly pointed out himself as writer of this Gospel: but in the place before us, he has mentioned no circumstance by which that disciple may be known to be John. To this may be added, that John being not only a Galilean, but a fisherman by trade, it is not likely that he should have been known to the high-priest, as it is here said of that disciple who followed Jesus with Peter. See Bishop Pearce, and Calmet. The conjecture of Grotius is the most likely: viz. that it was the person at whose house Jesus had supped. St. Augustin, Tract. 113. speaks like a man of sound sense: We should not decide hastily, says he, on a subject concerning which the Scripture is silent.

17. The damsel that kept the door] Casarius, a writer quoted by Calmet, says, this portress was named Baldila. It is worthy of remark, that women, especially old women, were employed by the ancients as porters. In 2 Sam. iv. 6. both the Septuagint and Vulgate make a woman porter to Ishbosheth. ARISTOPHANES, in Vespæ, v. 765. mentions them in the same office, and calls them Σκίπ, Skieis, which seems to signify a common maid-servant: Ορι την Συρα αυτου τη Σκίπ; Αδ Σρα. And ΕΡΕΜΙΑΣ, Troad. brings in Hecuba, complaining that she, who was wont to sit upon a throne, is now reduced to the abject necessity of becoming a porter, or a nurse, in order to get a morsel of bread. And ΦΛΑΥΤΟΣ, Curcul. Act. 1. ec. 1. mentions an old woman who was keeper of the gate: Annas not thou also one of this man's disciples? He saith, I am not. 18 And the servants and officers stood there, who had made a fire of coals; for it was cold: and they warmed themselves: and Peter stood with them and warmed himself.

19 The high-priest then asked Jesus of his disciples, and of his doctrine.

20 Jesus answered him, I spake openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogue, and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing.

21 Why askest thou me? ask them which heard me, what I have said unto them: behold, they know what I said.

22 And when he had thus spoken, one of the officers which stood by struck Jesus with the palm of his hand, saying, Answerest thou the high-priest so?

23 Jesus answered him, If I have spoken evil, bear witness of the evil: but if well, why smitest thou me?

24 Now Annas had sent him bound unto Caiaphas the high-priest.

14. Ps. 32. 38. 39. 42.—3. Rev. 16. 17.—1. Luke 2. 2.—4. And Annas came down from Caiaphas the high-priest, ver. 14.—1. Ch. 11. 30.—Matt. 26. 59. Mk. 7. 14, 35, 36. &c. 2.—2. Jer. 52. 1. Acts 3. 2.—4. Or, with a red.—Matt. 26. 57.

his sole cubitars custode janitrix. Why they in preference to him should be pitched upon for this office, I cannot conceive; but we find the usage was common in all ancient nations. See the notes on Matt. xvi. 59.

18. Servants and officers] These belonged to the chief priests, &c. the Roman soldiers had probably been dismissed after having conducted Christ to Annas.

19. Asked Jesus of his disciples, and of his doctrine.] He probably asked him, by what authority, or in virtue of what right, he collected disciples, formed a different sect, preached a new doctrine, and set himself up for a public reformer? As religion was interested in these things, the high-priest was considered as being the proper judge. But all this, with what follows, was transacted by night, and this was contrary to established laws. For the Talmud states, Fanned. c. iv. a. l. that "criminal processes can neither commence nor terminate, but during the course of the day. If the person be acquitted, the sentence may be pronounced during that day; but if he be condemned, the sentence cannot be pronounced till the next day. But no kind of judgment is to be executed, neither on the eve of the Sabbath, nor the eve of any festival." Nevertheless, to the lasting infamy of this people, Christ was judicially interrogated and condemned during the night; and on the night too of the pass-over, or, according to others, on the eve of that feast. Thus, as I have remarked before, all the forms of justice were insulted and outraged in the case of our Lord. In this his humiliation, his judgment was taken away. See Acts viii. 33.

20. I spake openly to the world] To every person in the land indiscriminately—to the people at large;—the res popæ, here, is tantamount to the French tout le monde, all the world, i. e. every person within reach. This is another proof that St. John uses the term world, to mean the Jewish people only; for it is certain our Lord did not preach to the Gentiles. The answer of our Lord, mentioned in this and the following verse, is such as became a person conscious of his own innocence, and confident in the righteousness of his cause. I have taught in the temple, in the synagogues, in all the principal cities, towns, and villages; and through all the country. I have had no secret school. You and your emissaries have watched me every where. No doctrine has ever proceeded from my lips, but what was agreeable to the righteousness of the law, and the purity of God. My disciples, when they have taught, have taught in the same way, and had the same witnesses. Ask those who have attended our public ministrations, and hear whether they can prove, that I or my disciples have preached any false doctrines, have ever troubled society, or disturbed the state. Attend to the ordinary course of justice, call witnesses, let them make their depositions, and then proceed to judge according to the evidence brought before you.

22. One of the officers—struck Jesus] This was an outrage to all justice: for a prisoner before he is condemned, is ever considered to be under the especial protection of justice; nor has any one a right to touch him, but according to the direction of the law. But it has been observed before, that if justice had been done to Christ, he could neither have suffered nor died.

24. Now Annas had sent him, &c.] It has been observed before, that the proper place of this verse is immediately after the 13th, and if it be allowed to stand here, it should be read in a parenthesis, and considered as a recapitulation of what had been before done.

27. And—the cock crew.] Peter denied our Lord three times:

Peter's first denial.—I. This took place when he was without or beneath, in the hall of Caiaphas's house. He was not in the higher part where Christ stood before the high-priest; but without that division of the hall, and in the lower part with the servants and officers, at the fire kindled in the midst of the hall, ver. 18, 18, and the girl who kept the door, had entered into the hall where she charged Peter.

Peter's second denial.—II. This was in a short time after the first, Luke xxii. 58. Having once denied his Master, he naturally retired from the place where his accuser was, to the vestibule of the hall, Matt. xxvi. 71. and it was the time of the first cock-crowing, or soon after midnight. After remaining here a short time, perhaps an hour, another girl sees him, and 26 ¶ And Simon Peter stood and warned himself. ¶ They said therefore unto him, Art not thou also one of his disciples? He denied it, and said, I am not.

26 One of the servants of the high-priest, being his kinsman whom ear Peter cut off, saith, Did not I see thee in the garden with him?

27 Peter then denied again: and immediately the cock crew. 28 ¶ Then led they Jesus from Caiaphas unto the hall of judgment: and it was early: and they themselves went not into the judgment hall, lest they should be defiled; but that they might eat the pass-over.

29 Pilate then went out unto them, and said, What accusation bring ye against this man?

30 They answered and said unto him, If he were not a malefactor, we would not have delivered him up unto thee.

31 Then said Pilate unto them, Take ye him, and judge him according to your law. The Jews therefore said unto him, It is not lawful for us to put any man to death:

29 ¶ That the saying of Jesus might be fulfilled, which he spake, signifying what death he should die.

33 ¶ Then Pilate entered into the judgment hall again, and called Jesus, and said unto him, Art thou the King of the Jews?

¶ Mat. 26: 67. Mark 14: 69. Luke 22: 69.—Mat. 26: 74. Luke 22: 69. Ch. 13: 38.—Mat. 27: 2. Mark 15: 1. Luke 23: 1. Acts 3: 13.—Or, Pilate's house. Matt. 27: 27.—Acts 10: 25 & 11: 3.—Mat. 28: 19. Ch. 12: 29.—y Mat. 27: 11.

says to them who were standing by in the vestibule, that he was one of them. Peter, to avoid this charge, withdraws into the hall, and warms himself. The girl, and those to whom she had spoken, follow him; the communication between the two places being immediate. Here a man enforces the charge of the girl, according to Luke; and others urge it, according to St. John; and Peter denies Jesus vehemently.

Peter's third denial.—III. He was now in the hall, and also within sight of Jesus, though at such a distance from him, that Jesus could not know what passed, but in a supernatural way. And about an hour after his second denial, those who stood by, founded a third charge against him, on his being a Galilean, which St. Luke says, chap. xxii. 69. one in particular strongly affirmed; and which, according to John, ver. 26, was supported by one of Malchus's relations. This occasioned a more vehement denial than before; and immediately the cock crew the second time; which is eminently called ακουροφωρια. The first denial may have been between our twelve and one; and the second between our two and three.

At the time of the third denial, Luke xxii. 61. proves that Jesus was in the same room with Peter. We must further observe, that Matthew, chap. xxvi. 57. lays the scene of Peter's denials in the house of Caiaphas; whereas John, ver. 15—22, seems to intimate, that these transactions took place in the house of Annas: but this difficulty arises from the injudicious insertion of the particle ου, therefore, in ver. 24, which should be omitted on the authority of ADES. Mt. BH. many others; besides some Versions, and some of the primitive Fathers. Griesbach has left it out of the text. See Bishop Newcome's Harm. Notes, p. 43.

The time of Peter's denials happened during the space of the third Roman watch, or that division of the night between twelve and three, which is called ακουροφωρια, or cock-crowing, Mark xiii. 35. Concerning the nature and progress of Peter's denial, see the notes on Matt. xxvi. 69, 75.

28. The hall of judgment? Εἰς τὸ πραιτωριον, το πραιτωριον. This was the house where Pilate lodged; hence called in our margin, Pilate's house. The praetorium is so called, from being the dwelling-place of the prator, or chief of the province. It was also the place where he held his court, and tried causes.

St. John has omitted all that passed in the house of Caiaphas—the accusations brought against Christ—the false witnesses—the insults which he received in the house of the high-priest—and the assembling of the grand council or sanhedrim. These he found amply detailed by the other three evangelists; and for this reason it appears that he omitted them. John's is properly a supplementary Gospel.

¶ Let it should be defiled? The Jews considered even the touch of a Gentile as a legal defilement; and therefore would not venture into the praetorium, for fear of contracting some impurity which would have obliged them to separate themselves from all religious ordinances till the evening. Lev. xv. 10, 11, 19, 20.

¶ That they might eat the pass-over.] Some maintained that res vanae here does not mean the paschal lamb, but the other sacrifices which were offered during the paschal solemnity—for this had been eaten the evening before; and that our Lord was crucified the day after the pass-over. Others have maintained that the paschal lamb is here meant; that this was the proper day for sacrificing it; that it was on the very hour in which it was offered that Christ expired on the cross; and that therefore, our Lord did not eat the paschal lamb this year, or that he ate it some hours before the common time. Bishop Pearce supposes that it was lawful for the Jews to eat the paschal lamb any time between the evening of Thursday and that of Friday. He conjectures too that this permission was necessary, on account of the immense number of lambs which were to be killed for that purpose. When Cestius desired to know the number of the Jews, he asked the priests how he might accomplish his wish? They informed him that this might be known by the number of the lambs slain at the pass-

24 Jesus answered him, Sayest thou this thing of thyself, or did others tell it thee of me?

25 Pilate answered, Am I a Jew? Thine own nation, and the chief priests, have delivered thee unto me: what hast thou done?

26 ¶ Jesus answered, ¶ My kingdom is not of this world: if any kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now is my kingdom not from hence.

27 Pilate therefore said unto him, Art thou a king then? Jesus answered, Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice.

28 Pilate saith unto him, What is truth? And when he had said this, he went out again unto the Jews, and saith unto them, I find in him no fault at all.

29 ¶ But ye have a custom, that I should release unto you one of the pass-over; will ye therefore that I release unto you the King of the Jews?

40 ¶ Then cried they all again, saying, Not this man, but Barabbas. ¶ Now Barabbas was a robber.

¶ 1 Tim. 6: 13.—Dan 9: 24 & 7: 14. Luke 12: 14. Ch. 4: 15 & 9: 15.—b Chap. 6: 47. 1 John 3: 19 & 4: 4.—Mat. 27: 24. Luke 23: 4. Ch. 19: 4, 6.—4 Mat. 27: 18. Mark 15: 6. Luke 23: 17.—a Acts 3: 14.—Luke 23: 19.

over, as never less than ten partook of one lamb, though twenty might feast on it. On this mode of computation he found the lambs to be 256,500; εικοσι πέντε μυριάδας πηνηντα, πέντε δε ζήσαντες ΑΙΑ και πέντακοντα. See Josephus, War, b. vi. c. 9. s. 3.

That Jesus ate a pass-over this last year of his life, is sufficiently evident from Matt. xxvi. 17—19. Mark xiv. 12—15. Luke xxii. 8—15. and that he ate this pass-over some hours before the ordinary time, and was himself slain at that hour in which the paschal lamb was ordered by the law to be sacrificed, is highly probable, if not absolutely certain. See the note on Matt. xxvi. 20. and at the conclusion of the chapter, where the subject, and the different opinions on it, are largely considered.

29. Pilate went out? This was an act of condescension; but as the Romans had confirmed to the Jews the free use of all their rights and ceremonies, the governor could do no less than comply with them in this matter. He went out to them, that they might not be obliged to come into the hall, and thus run the risk of being defiled.

30. If he were not a malefactor? So they did not wish to make Pilate the judge; but the executor of the sentence which they had already illegally passed.

31. It is not lawful for us to put any man to death? They might have judged Jesus according to their law, as Pilate bade them do: but they could only excommunicate, or scourge him. They might have voted him worthy of death: but they could not put him to death, if any thing of a secular nature were charged against him. The power of life and death was, in all probability, taken from the Jews when Archelaus, king of Judaea, was banished to Vienna, and Judas was made a Roman province; and this happened more than fifty years before the destruction of Jerusalem. But the Romans suffered Herod, mentioned Acts xii. to exercise the power of life and death during his reign. See much on this point in Cabinet and Pearce. After all, I think it probable, that though the power of life and death was taken away from the Jews, as far as it concerned affairs of state; yet it was continued to them in matters which were wholly of an ecclesiastical nature: and that they only applied thus to Pilate to persuade him that they were proceeding against Christ as an enemy of the state, and not as a transgressor of their own peculiar laws and customs. Hence, though they assert that he should die according to their law, because he made himself the Son of God, chap. xix. 7. yet they lay peculiar stress on his being an enemy to the Roman government; and when they found Pilate disposed to let him go, they asserted that if he did, he was not Caesar's friend, ver. 12. It was this that intimidated Pilate, and induced him to give him up, that they might crucify him. How they came to lose this power, is accounted for in a different manner by Dr. Lightfoot. His observations are very curious, and are unjoined to the end of this chapter.

32. That the saying of Jesus might be fulfilled? Or, thus the word was fulfilled. God permitted the Jews to lose the power of life and death, in the sense before stated, that according to the Roman laws, which punished sedition, &c. with the cross, Christ might be crucified, according to his own prediction; chap. xii. 32. and iii. 14.

33. Art thou the King of the Jews? St. Luke says, expressly, xxiii. 2. that when the Jews brought him to Pilate, they began to accense him as a rebel, who said he was king of the Jews, and forbade the people to pay tribute to Caesar. It was in consequence of this accusation that Pilate asked the question mentioned in the text.

34. Sayest thou this thing of thyself? That is, is it because my enemies thus accuse me, or because thou hast any suspicion of me, that thou askest this question?

35. Am I a Jew? That is, I am not a Jew, and cannot judge whether thou art what is called the Christ, the king of the Jews. It is thy own countrymen, and their spiritual rulers, who delivered thee up to me with the above accusation. What hast thou done? If thou dost not profess thyself king over this people, and an enemy to Cæsar; what is it that thou hast done for which they desire thy condemnation?

36. My kingdom is not of this world] It is purely spiritual and divine. If it had been of a secular nature, then my servants would have contended—they would have opposed force with force, as the kingdoms of this world do in their wars; but as my kingdom is not of this world, therefore no resistance has been made. Eusebius relates, Hist. Eccl. lib. iii. c. 20. "that the relatives of our Lord were brought before Domitian, and interrogated whether they were of the family of David? and what sort the kingdom of Christ was, and where it would appear? they answered that this kingdom was neither of this world, nor of an earthly nature: that it was altogether heavenly and angelical; and that it would not take place till the end of the world."

37. Thou sayest] A common form of expression for yes, it is so. I was born into the world, that I might set up and maintain a spiritual government: but this government is established and by truth. All that love truth, hear my voice, and attend to the spiritual doctrines I preach. It is by truth alone that I influence the minds, and govern the manners of my subjects. 28. What is truth?] Among the sages of that time there were many opinions concerning truth; and some had even supposed that it was a thing utterly out of the reach of men. Pilate perhaps might have asked the question in a mocking way; and his not staying to get an answer, indicated that he either despised getting a satisfactory one, or that he was indifferent about it. This is the case with thousands: they appear desirous of knowing the truth, but have not patience to wait in a proper way to receive an answer to their question.

I find in him no fault] Having asked the above question, and being convinced of our Lord's innocence, he went out to the Jews to testify his conviction, and to deliver him, if possible, out of their hands.

39. But ye have a custom] Nothing relative to the origin or reason of this custom is known. Commentators have swam in an ocean of conjecture on this point. They have lost their labour, and made nothing out: see the notes on Matt. xxvii. 15. Luke xxiii. 17.

40. Barabbas was a robber] See Matt. xxvii. 16.

The latter Syriac has in the margin αρχηγός, a chief robber, a captain of banditti, and it is probable that this was the case. He was not only a person who lived by plunder, but shed the blood of many of those whom he and his gang robbed; and rose up against the Roman government, as we learn from Luke xxiii. 19. There never existed a more perfidious, cruel, and murderous man, than these Jews; and no wonder they preferred a murderer to the Prince of Peace. Christ himself had said, if ye were of the world, the world would love its own. Like cleaves to like: hence we need not be surprised to find the vilest thing still preferred to Christ, his kingdom, and his salvation.

1. It is not easy to give the character of Pilate. From the manner of his conduct, we scarcely can tell when he is in jest or in earnest. He appears to have been fully convinced of the innocence of Christ, and that the Jews, through envy and malice, desired his destruction. On this ground he should have released him; but he was afraid to offend the Jews. He knew they were an uneasy, factious, and seditious people; and he was afraid to irritate them. Fiat justitia, ruat cælum: was no motto of his. For fear of the clamours of this bad people, he permitted all the forms and requisitions of justice to be outraged; and abandoned the most innocent Jesus to their rage and malice. In this case he knew what was truth, but did not follow its dictates; and he as hastily abandoned the Author of it, as he did the question he had asked concerning it. Pilate, it is true, was disposed to pity—the Jews were full of malice and cruelty. They both, however, joined in the murder of our Lord. The most that we can say for Pilate is, that he was disposed to justice; but was not inclined to hazard his comfort or safety in doing it. He was an easy, pliable man, who had no objection to do a right thing, if it should cost him no trouble; but he felt no disposition to make any sacrifice, even in behalf of innocence, righteousness, and truth. In all this business, Pilate showed that he was not a good man: and the Jews proved that they were of their father the devil. See chap. xix. 8.

2. As Dr. Lightfoot has entered into a regular examination of when and how the Jews lost the power of life and death in criminal cases; it may be necessary to lay before the reader a copious abstract of his researches on this subject, founded on ver. 31. of the preceding chapter.

"It cannot be denied that all capital judgment or sentence upon life, had been taken from the Jews for above forty years before the destruction of Jerusalem; as they oftentimes themselves confess. But how came this to pass? It is commonly received, that the Romans, at this time the Jews' lords and masters, had taken from all their courts a power and capacity of judging the capital matters. Let us superadd a few things here. Rabbi Cahna saith, when R. Ismael bar Jose lay sick, they sent to him, saying, Pray, sir, tell us two or three things which thou didst once tell us in the name of thy Father. He saith unto them, An hundred and fourscore years before the destruction of the temple, the wicked kingdom (the Roman empire) reigned over Israel; fourscore years before the destruction of the temple, they (the fathers of the sanhedrim) determined about the uncleanness of the heathen land, and about glass vessels. Forty years before the destruction of the temple, the sanhedrim removed and sat in the Taberne. What is the meaning of this tradition? Rabbi Isaac bar Abdimi saith, they did not judge judgments of mulcts. The gloss is, Those are the judgments about fining any that offered violence, that entice a maid, and the price of a servant. When, therefore, they did not sit in the room Gazit, they did not judge about these things, and so those judgments about mulcts or fines ceased. Avodah Zarah, fol. 82. Here we have one part of their judiciary power lost; not taken away from them by the Romans, but falling of itself, as it were, out of the hands of the sanhedrim. Nor did the Romans indeed take away their power of judging in capital matters; but they, by their own oscitancy, supine and unreasonable lenity, lost it themselves. For so the Gemara goes on: Rabbi Hachman bar Isaac saith, Let him not say that they did not judge judgments of mulcts, for they did not judge capital judgments either. And whence comes this? When they saw that so many murders and homicides multiplied upon them, that they could not well judge and call them to account, they said, It is better for us that we remove from place to place; for how can we surseize (sitting here and not punishing them) not contract guilt upon ourselves?

They thought themselves obliged to punish murderers while they sat in the room Gazit, for the place itself engaged them to it. They are the words of the Gemarists, upon which the gloss. The room Gazit, was half of it within, and half of it without the holy place. The reason which was, that it was requisite that the council should sit near the Divine Majesty. Hence it is that they say, Whoever constitutes an unjust judge, is as if he planted a grove by the altar of the Lord, as it is written, Judges and officers shall then make thee; and it follows presently after, Thou shalt not plant thee a grove near the altar of the Lord thy God, Deut. xvi. 18, 21. They removed therefore from Gazit, and sat in the Taberne: now though the Taberne were upon the mountain of the temple, yet they did not sit so near the Divine Majesty there, as they did when they sat in the room Gazit.

"Let us now in order put the whole matter together.

"1. The sanhedrim were most stupidly and unreasonably remiss in their punishment of capital offenders; going upon this reason especially, that they counted it so horrible a thing to put an Israelite to death. Forsooth he is of the seed of Abraham, of the blood and stock of Israel, and you must have a care how you touch such an one!

"R. Eliezar bar Simeon had laid hold on some thieves. R. Joshua bar Korhah sent to him, saying, O thou vinegar, the son of good wine! (i. e. O thou wicked son of a good father!) how long wilt thou deliver the people of God to the slaughter? He answered and said, I root the thorns out of the vineyard. To whom the other: Let the Lord of the vineyard come and root them out himself. Bava Meziab, fol. 83. 2. It is worth noting, that the very thieves of Israel are the people of God; and they must not be touched by any man, but referred to the judgment of God himself!

"When R. Ismael bar R. Jose was constituted a magistrate by the king, there happened some such thing to him; for Eliaz himself rebuked him, saying, How long wilt thou deliver over the people of God to slaughter! Ibid. fol. 64. 1. Hence that which we alleged elsewhere: The sanhedrim that happens to sentence any one to death within the space of seven years, is termed a destroyer. R. Eliezer ben Azariah saith it is so, if they should but condemn one within seventy years. Maccoth, fol. 7. 1.

"11. It is obvious to any one how this foolish remissness, and letting loose the reins of judgment, would soon increase the number of robbers, murderers, and all kinds of wickedness; and indeed they did so abundantly multiply, that the sanhedrim neither could, nor durst, as it ought, call the criminals to account. The law strict, while wickedness was in the height of its revels, and punitive justice was so out of countenance, that as to uncertain murders they made no search; and against certain ones they framed no judgment. Since the time that homicides multiplied, the beheading of the heifer ceased. Sotah, fol. 47. 1. And in the place before quoted in Avodah. When they saw the numbers of murderers so greatly increase, that they could not sit in judgment upon them, they said, Let us remove, &c. fol. 8. 2. So in the case of adultery, which we also observed in our notes on chap. viii. Since the time that adultery so openly advanced under the second temple, they left off trying the adulteress by the bitter water, &c. Mummon. in Sotah, cap. 3.

"So that we see, the liberty of judging in capital matters was no more taken from the Jews by the Romans, than the beheading of the heifer, or the trial of the suspected wife by the bitter waters, was taken away by them, which no one will affirm. It is a tradition of R. Chaia. From the day wherein the temple was destroyed, though the sanhedrim ceased; yet the four kinds of death (which were wont to be inflicted by the sanhedrim) did not cease. For he that had deserved to be stoned to death, either fell off from some house, or some wild beast tore and devoured him. He that had deserved burning, either fell into some fire, or some serpent bit him. He that had deserved to be slain, (i. e. with the sword), was either delivered into the hands of some heathen king, or was murdered by robbers. He that had deserved strangling, was either drowned in some river, or choked by a squintancy.

"This must be observed from the evangelists, that when they had Christ in examination in the palace of the high-priest all night; in the morning the whole sanhedrim met that they might pass sentence of death upon him. Where then was this that they met? Questionless in the room Gastih—at least if they adhered to their own rules and constitutions: Whether they be-tok themselves sometimes upon urgent necessity. The gloss before quoted excepts only the case of murder, with which, amongst all their false accusations, they never charged Christ.

"But, however, suppose it were granted that the great council met either in the Taberne, or some other place, (which yet agreed by no means with their own tradition,) did they deal truly, and as the matter really and indeed was, with Pilate, when they tell him, It is not lawful for us to put any man to death? He had said to them, Take ye him and judge him according to your laws. We have indeed judged and condemned him, but we cannot put any one to death. Was this that they said in fact true? How came they then to stone the proto-martyr Stephen? How came they to stone Ben Sarda at Lydda? Eleosa. Sanhed. fol. 36. 4. How came they to burn the priest's daughter alive that was taken in adultery? Bab. Sanhed. fol. 62. 1. and 61. 1. It is probable they had not put any one to death as yet, since the time that they had removed out of Gastih; and so might the easier persuade Pilate in that case. But their great design was to throw off the odium of Christ's death from themselves; at least among the vulgar crowd; fearing them, if the council themselves should have decreed his execution. They seek this evasion, therefore, which did not altogether want some colour and pretext of truth; and it succeeded according to what they desired. Divine Providence an ordering it, as the evangelist intimates, ver. 32. That the saying of Jesus might be fulfilled which he spake, signifying what death he should die: that is, be crucified according to the custom of the Romans. While I am upon this thought, I cannot but reflect upon that passage, than which nothing is more worthy observation in the whole description, of the Roman beast in the Revelation, chap. xiii. 4. The dragon which gave power to the beast. We cannot say this of the Assyrian, Babylonian, or any other monarchy; for the Holy Scriptures do not say it. But reason dictates, and the event itself tells us, that there was something acted by the Roman empire in behalf of the dragon, which was not compatible with any other, that is, the putting of the son of God to death. Which thing we must remember, as often as we recite that article of our creed, 'He suffered under Pontius Pilate,' that is, was put to death by the Roman empire."

CHAPTER XIX.

Jesus is scourged, crowned with thorns, and mocked by the soldiers, 1-3. He is brought forth by Pilate, wearing the purple robe; and the Jews clamour for his death, 4-8. Conversation between our Lord and Pilate, 9-11. Pilate expostulates with the Jews on their barbarous demands; but they become more inveterate, and he delivers Christ into their hands, 12-16. He, bearing his cross, is led to Golgotha, and crucified, 17-22. The soldiers cast lots for his raiment, 23, 24. Jesus commends his mother to the care of John, 25-27. Jesus thirsts, receives vinegar, and dies, 28-30. The Jews request that the legs of those who were crucified might be broken; the soldiers break those of the two thieves, and pierce the side of Christ: the scriptures fulfilled in these acts, 31-37. Joseph of Arimathea begs the body of Christ; and Nicodemus brings spices to embalm it, 38-40. He is laid in a new sepulchre, 41, 42. [A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCIL I.]

WHEN * Pilate therefore took Jesus, and scourged him.

1 2 And the soldiers platted a crown of thorns, and put it on his head, and they put on him a purple robe,

3 And said, Hail, King of the Jews! and they smote him with their hands.

4 ¶ Pilate therefore went forth again, and saith unto them, Behold, I bring him forth to you, <sup>5</sup> that ye may know that I find no fault in him.

5 Then came Jesus forth, wearing the crown of thorns, and of the purple robe. And Pilate saith unto them, Behold the man!

6 * When the chief priests therefore and officers saw him, they cried out, saying, Crucify him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them, Take ye him, and crucify him: for I find no fault in him.

7 The Jews answered him, ¶ We have a law, and by our law, <sup>a</sup> Matt. 23. 19 & 27. 26. Mark 15. 15. Luke 18. 32. — Ch. 18. 15. Verse 6. — Acts 1. 12. — Lev. 24. 16.

NOTES.—Verse 1. Pilate—took Jesus, and scourged him.] That is, caused him to be scourged; for we cannot with Bede, suppose that he scourged him with his own hand.

As our Lord was scourged by order of Pilate, it was probable, he was scourged in the Roman manner, which was much more severe than that of the Jews. The latter never gave more than thirty-nine blows: for the law had absolutely forbidden a man to be abused, or his flesh cut in this chastisement. Deut. xxv. 3. The common method of whipping or flogging in some places, especially that of a military kind, is a disgrace to the nation where it is done; to the laws, and to humanity. See Matt. xxvii. 26. and the note there. Though it was customary to scourge the person who was to be crucified; yet it appears that Pilate had another end in view by scourging our Lord. He hoped that this would have satisfied the Jews, and that he might then have dismissed Jesus. This appears from Luke xxiii. 16.

2 Platted a crown of thorns.] See on Matt. xxvii. 29.

5. And Pilate saith.] The word Pilate, which we supply in our version, is added by one MS., the latter Syriac, latter Arabic, and the Coptic.

Behold the man.] The man, who, according to you, affects the government and threatens to take away the empire from the Romans. Behold the man, whom ye have brought unto me as an enemy to Cesar; and as a sower of the seeds of sedition in the land! In him I find no guilt; and from him ye have no occasion to fear any evil.

6. Crucify him.] Acrus, which is necessary to the text, and which is wanting in the common editions, and is supplied by our version in Italics, is added here on the authority of almost every MS. and Version of importance. As it is omitted in the common editions, it affords another proof, that they were not taken from the best MSS.

7. We have a law.] In Lev. xxiv. 14—16. we find that blasphemers of God were to be put to death: and the chief priests having charged Jesus with blasphemy, they therefore voted that he deserved to die. See Matt. xvi. 65. 66. They might refer also to the law against false prophets, Deut. xviii. 20.

The Son of God.] It is certain that the Jews understood this in a very peculiar sense. When Christ called himself the Son of God, they understood it to imply positive equality to the supreme Being; and if they were wrong, our Lord never attempted to correct them.

8. He was the more afraid.] While Jesus was scourged only as a disturber of the peace of the nation, which accusation Pilate knew to be false: he knew he could deliver him, belie ought to die, because * he made himself the Son of God. 8 ¶ When Pilate therefore heard that saying, he was the more afraid;

9 And went again into the judgment hall, and saith unto Jesus, Whence art thou? But Jesus gave him no answer.

10 Then saith Pilate unto him, Speakest thou not unto me? knowest thou not that I have power to crucify thee, and have power to release thee?

11 Jesus answered, ¶ Thou couldest have no power at all against me, except it were given thee from above: therefore he that delivered me unto thee hath the greater sin.

12 And from thenceforth Pilate sought to release him: but the Jews cried out, saying, ¶ If thou let this man go, thou art not Cesar's friend: ¶ whosoever maketh himself a king, speaketh against Cesar.

<sup>a</sup> Matt. 26. 65. Ch. 8. 18 & 10. 32. — 1. Tim. 3. 7. Matt. 27. 12. — Luke 22. 65. Ch. 7. 20. — Luke 23. 2. — 1. Act. 17. 7.

cause the judgment in that case belonged to himself; but when the Jews brought a charge against him of the most capital nature, from their own laws, he then saw that he had every thing to fear, if he did not deliver Jesus to their will. The Sanhedrim must not be offended—the populace must not be irritated; from the former a complaint might be sent against him to Cesar: the latter might revolt, or proceed to some acts of violence, the end of which could not be foreseen. Pilate was certainly to be pitted: he saw what was right, and he wished to do it: but he had not sufficient firmness of mind. He did not attend to that important maxim, Fiat justitia, ruat cælum. Let justice be done, though the heavens should be dissolved. He had a vile people to govern, and it was not an easy matter to keep them quiet. Some suppose that Pilate's fear arose from hearing that Jesus had said, he was the Son of God: because Pilate, who was a polytheist, believed that it was possible for the offspring of the gods to visit mortals; and he was afraid to condemn Jesus for fear of offending some of the supreme deities. Perhaps the question in the succeeding verse refers to this.

9. Whence art thou?] This certainly does not mean, From what country art thou? for Pilate knew this well enough: but it appears he made this inquiry to know who were the parents of Christ; what were his pretensions, and whether he really were a demi-god, such as the heathens believed in. To this question we find our Lord gave no answer. He had already told him that his kingdom was not of this world; and that he came to erect a spiritual kingdom, not a temporal one: chap. xviii. 36, 37. This answer he deemed sufficient, and he did not choose to satisfy a criminal curiosity, nor to enter then into any debate concerning the absurdity of the heathen worship.

11. Hath the greater sin.] It is a sin in thee to condemn me, while thou art convinced in thy conscience that I am innocent; but the Jews who delivered me to thee, and Judas, who delivered me to the Jews, have the greater crime to answer for. Thy ignorance in some measure excuses thee; but the rage and malice of the Jews put them, at present, out of the reach of mercy.

12. Pilate sought to release him.] Pilate made five several attempts to release our Lord: as we may learn from Luke xxiii. 4, 15, 20, 22. John xiv. 4, 12, 13.

Thou art not Cesar's friend.] Thou dost not act like a person who has the interest of the emperor at heart. Ambassadors, prefects, counsellors, &c. were generally termed the friends of the emperor. This insinuation determined Pilate 13 When Pilate therefore heard that saying, he brought Jesus forth, and set down in the judgment seat in a place that is called the Pavement, but in the Hebrew, Gabbatha.

14 And it was the preparation of the pass-over, and about the sixth hour: and he saith unto the Jews, Behold your King!

15 But they cried out, Away with him, away with him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them, Shall I crucify your King? The chief priests answered, I We have no king but Cesar.

16 Then delivered he him therefore unto them to be crucified. And they took Jesus, and led him away.

17 And he, bearing his cross, went forth into a place called the place of a skull, which is called in the Hebrew, Golgotha: 18 Where they crucified him, and two other with him, on either side one, and Jesus in the midst.

19 And Pilate wrote a title, and put it on the cross. And the writing was, JESUS OF NAZARETH, THE KING OF THE JEWS.

20 This title then read many of the Jews: for the place where to make no longer resistance; he was afraid of being accused, and he knew Tiberius was one of the most jealous and distrustful princes of the world. During his reign, accusations of conspiracies were much in fashion: they were founded on the slightest pretences, and punished with excessive rigour. See Calmet, Treat. An. l. i. c. 72, 73, 74. Sueton. in Tiber. c. 58.

13 Matt. 27. 31. 1 Cor. 10. 21. Mark 15. 16. Luke 23. 34. 1 Matt. 27. 31. Mark 15. 16. Luke 23. 34. 22. Luke 23. 34. 23. Num. 15. 35. Heb. 12. 12. 1 Matt. 27. 31. Mark 15. 16. Luke 23. 34.

13. The Pavement.] Αἰθροῦσιον, literally, a stone pavement: probably it was that place in the open court, where the chair of justice was set, for the prefects of provinces always held their courts of justice in the open air; and which was paved with stones of various colours, like that of Ahasuerus, Euth. l. 6. of red, blue, white, and black marble; what we still term Mosaic work, or something in imitation of it; such as the Roman pavements frequently dug up in this and other countries, where the Romans have had military stations.

Gabbatha.] That is, an elevated place: from גבבא gabba, high, raised up; and it is very likely that the judgment seat was considerably elevated in the court, and that the governor went up to it by steps; and perhaps those very steps were what was called the Pavement. John does not say that Lithostraton, or the Pavement, is the meaning of the word Gabbatha; but that the place was called so in the Hebrew. The place was probably called Lithostraton, or the Pavement: the seat of judgment, Gabbatha, the raised or elevated place.

In several MSS. and Versions, the scribes not understanding the Hebrew word, wrote it variously, Gabbatha, Gabatha, Kappatha, Kappata, Gennetha, Gennassa, and Gennsour. Lightfoot conjectures that the Pavement here, means the room seated in the temple, in which the grand council, called the sanhedrin, held their meetings.

14. It was the preparation of the pass-over.] That is, the time in which they were just preparing to kill the paschal lamb. Critics differ widely concerning the time of our Lord's crucifixion; and this verse is variously understood. Some think it signifies merely the preparation of the Sabbath: and that it is called the preparation of the pass-over, because the preparation of the Sabbath happened that year on the eve of the pass-over. Others think that the preparation of the Sabbath is distinctly spoken of in ver. 31. and was different from what is here mentioned. Contending nations may be more easily reconciled than contending critics.

The sixth hour.] Mark says, chap. xv. 25. that it was the third hour. Turn, the third, is the reading of DL., four others, the Chron. Alex. Severus, Antiochen. Ammonitis, with others mentioned by Theophylact. Nonnus, who wrote in the fifth century, read πρην, the third. As in ancient times, all the numbers were written in the manuscripts, not at large, but in numeral letters, it was easy for r three, to be mistaken for s six. The Codex Bezae has generally numeral letters instead of words. Bengel observes that he has found the letter T gamma, TRAE, exceedingly like the s episema, sax, in some MSS. The major part of the best critics think that πρην, the third, is the genuine reading. See the note on Mark xv. 25.

Behold your King!] This was probably intended as an irony; and by thus turning their pretended serious apprehensions into ridicule, he hoped still to release him.

15. Assay with him.] Απορ: probably this means, kill him, to Isa. lvii. 1. It is said, καὶ ἀπορὸς δικάσι ἀπορῶν, and just seen are taken away; that is, according to some, by a violent death.

16. Then delivered he him) This was not till after he had washed his hands. Matt. xxvii. 24. to show by that symbolical action, that he was innocent of the death of Christ. John omits this circumstance, together with the insults which Christ received from the soldiers. See Matt. xxvii. 26, &c. Mark xv. 16, &c.

17. Bearing his cross) He bore it all alone first; when he could no longer carry the whole through weakness, occasioned by the ill usage he had received, Simon, a Cyrenian, helped him to carry it: see the note on Matt. xxvii. 32. Golgotha. See Matt. xxvii. 32.

18. Two other) Matthew and Mark in the parallel places call them robbers or murderers; they probably belonged to the gang of Barabbas. See about the figure of the cross, and the nature of crucifixion, on Matt. xxvii. 35.

Jesus was crucified was high to the city: and it was written in Hebrew, and Greek, and Latin.

21 Then said the chief priests of the Jews to Pilate, Write not, The King of the Jews; but that he said, I am King of the Jews.

22 Pilate answered, What I have written, I have written.

23 Then the soldiers, when they had crucified Jesus, took his garments, and made four parts, to every soldier a part; and also his coat: now the coat was without seam, woven from the top throughout.

24 They said therefore among themselves, Let us not rend it, but cast lots for it, whose it shall be: that the scripture might be fulfilled, which saith, They parted my raiment among them, and for my vesture they did cast lots. These things therefore the soldiers did.

25 Now there stood by the cross of Jesus his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene.

26 When Jesus therefore saw his mother, and the disciple

19. Matt. 27. 31. Mark 15. 24. Luke 23. 34. 1 Or, wrought.—Psalm 22. 18.—1 Matt. 27. 31. Mark 15. 24. Luke 23. 34.—Or, Cleopha.—Luke 18. 10.—Ch. 12. 23 & 24. 21. 7. 34.

19. Pilate wrote a title] See on Matt. xxvii. 37.

20. Hebrew, Greek, Latin.] See on Luke xxvii. 38.

On Matt. xxvii. 37. I have given this title in Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, as mentioned by this evangelist. The reader, however, will not be displeased to find the same title repeated here in a character which was written in the fourth century, and is probably nearly resembling that used in the earliest ages of Christianity. The Greek and Latin character, which is inserted here, is an exact fac-simile of that in the Codex Bezae, cut and cast at the expense of the University of Cambridge, for Dr. Kipling's edition of that most venerable MS. which contains the Greek text of the four evangelists and Acts; and the Latin text of the same, as it existed before the time of St. Jerome. Having examined the MS. myself, I can say that these types are a very faithful representation of the original.

In Hebrew, עֲשָׂרִים וְשֵׁשׁ עָשָׂר מֵלֶכֶת מַלְכֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל

In Greek, ΕΞΑΚΛΗΨΩΝ

In Latin, SEXAGESIMUM ET SEPTIMUM

IESUS NAZARENUS REX IUDAEORUM

22. What I have written, I have written.) That is, I will not alter what I have written. The Roman laws forbid the sentence to be altered when once pronounced: and as this inscription was considered as the sentence pronounced against our Lord, therefore it could not be changed: but this form of speech is common in the Jewish writings, and means simply, what is done shall continue. Pilate seems to speak prophetically. This is the king of the Jews: they shall have no other Messiah for ever.

23. To every soldier a part) So it appears there were four soldiers employed in nailing him to, and rearing up the cross.

The coat was without seam] Several have seriously doubted whether this can be literally understood, as they imagine that nothing with sleeves, &c. can be woven without a seam. But Baun, de Vest. Sacer. Heb. l. i. c. 16. has proved, not only that such things were done by the ancients, and are still done in the East: but himself got a loom made on which these kinds of tunics, vents, sleeves, and all, were woven in one piece. See much on this subject in Calmet.

Our Lord was now in the grand office of high-priest, and was about to offer the expiatory victim for the sin of the world. And it is worthy of remark, that the very dress he was in, was similar to that of the Jewish high-priest. The following is the description given of his dress by Josephus, Ant. b. iii. c. vii. s. 4. "Now this coat (χιτων) was not composed of two pieces, nor was it sewed together upon the shoulders and sides, but it was one long vestment, so woven as to have an opening for the neck; not an oblique one, but parted all along the back and breast: it was also parted where the hands were to come out." A little before, the same author says, that "the high-priest had a long robe of a blue colour, which hung down to the feet, and was put over all the rest." It is likely that this was the same with that upper garment which the soldiers divided among them, it being probably of a costly stuff. I may just add here, that I knew a woman who knit all kinds of clothes, even to the sleeves and button holes, without a seam; and have seen some of the garments which she made: that the thing is possible I have the fullest proof. For an explanation of χιτων, and ισαριον, which we translate cloak, and coat, see on Luke vi. 29.

24. That the scripture might be fulfilled] These words are found in the common printed text, in Matt. xxvii. 39. but they are omitted by ABDEFGHKLMSSU. Mt. BHV. 150 others: the principal Versions, Chrysostom, Th. East. Euthymius, the principal Origin, Hilary, Augustin, Juven. See Griesbach's second edition. But in the text of John they are not omitted by one MS., version, or ancient commentator.

The words are taken from Psalm. xxii. 18. where it appears they were spoken prophetically of this treatment which Jesus received, upwards of a thousand years before it took place!

But it should be remarked that this form of speech, which frequently occurs, often means no more than that the things standing by, whom he loved, he saith unto his mother, "Woman, behold thy son!"

27 Then saith he to the disciple, Behold thy mother! And from that hour that disciple took her unto his own home.

28 After this, Jesus knowing that all things were now accomplished, that the scripture might be fulfilled, saith, I thirst.

29 Now there was set a vessel full of vinegar: and they filled a sponge with vinegar, and put it upon hyssop, and put it to his mouth.

30 When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said, It is finished: and he bowed his head, and gave up the ghost.

Chap. 4.—Ch. 11. 4 & 12. 22.—Ps. 68. 21.—Matt. 27. 48.—Chap. 17. 4.—Verse 42. Mark 15. 42.

fell out, that such a portion of scripture may be exactly applied to it.

25. Mary the wife of Cleophas. She is said in Matt. xxvii. 56, (see the note there) and Mark xv. 40. to have been the mother of James the Less, and of Jesus; and this James her son is said in Matt. x. 3. to have been the son of Alphaeus; hence it seems that Alphaeus and Cleopas were the same person. To which may be added, that Hegesippus is quoted by Eusebius, Hist. Eccl. l. iii. c. 11, as saying that Cleopas was the brother of Joseph, the husband of the virgin. Theophylact says, that Cleopas, (brother of Joseph, the husband of the virgin) having died childless, his brother Joseph married his widow, by whom he had four sons, called by the evangelists the brothers of our Lord, and two daughters, the one named Salome, the other Mary, daughter of Cleopas, because she was his daughter according to law, though she was the daughter of Joseph according to nature. There are several conjectures equally well founded with this last to be met with in the ancient commentators; but in many cases it is very difficult to distinguish the different Marys mentioned by the evangelists. 26. The disciple—whom he loved John, the writer of this Gospel.

Woman, behold thy son! This is a remarkable expression, and has been much misunderstood. It conveys no idea of disrespect, nor of unconcern, as has been commonly supposed. In the way of compellation, man! and woman! were titles of as much respect among the Hebrews, as sir! and nadam! are among us. But why does not Jesus call her mother? Probably, because he wished to spare her feelings: he would not mention a name, the very sound of which must have wrung her heart with additional sorrow. On this account he says, Behold thy son! this was the language of pure natural affection. "Consider this crucified man no longer at present as any relative of thine: but take that disciple whom my power shall preserve from evil, for thy son; and while he considers thee as his mother, account him for thy child." It is probable that it was because the keeping of the blessed virgin was intrusted to him, that he was the only disciple of our Lord who died a natural death: God having preserved him for the sake of the person whom he gave him in charge. Many children are not only preserved alive, but abundantly prospered in temporal things, for the sake of the desolate parents whom God has cast upon their care. It is very likely that Joseph was dead previously to this: and that this was the reason why the desolate virgin is committed to the care of the beloved disciple. 23. I thirst! The scripture that referred to his drinking the vinegar, is Psal. lxxix. 21. The fatigue which he had undergone, the grief he had felt, the heat of the day, and the loss of blood, were the natural causes of this thirst. This he would have borne without complaint; but he wished to give them the fullest proof of his being the Messiah, by distinctly marking how every thing relative to the Messiah, which had been written in the prophets, had its complete fulfilment in him.

29. A vessel full of vinegar! This was probably that tart small wine, which we are assured was the common drink of the Roman soldiers. Our word vinegar, comes from the French vin aigre, sour or tart wine; and although it is probable that it was brought at this time for the use of the four Roman soldiers who were employed in the crucifixion of our Lord, yet it is as probable that it might have been furnished for the use of the persons crucified: who, in that lingering kind of death, must necessarily be grievously tormented with thirst. This vinegar must not be confounded with the vinegar and gall mentioned Matt. xxvii. 34. and Mark xv. 23. That, being a stupefying potion, intended to alleviate his pain, he refused to drink; but of this he took a little, and then expired, verse 30.

And put it upon hyssop! Or, according to others, putting hyssop about it. A great variety of conjectures have been produced: to remove the difficulty in this text, which is occasioned by supposing that the sponge was put on a stalk of hyssop, and that this is the reed mentioned by Matthew and Mark. It is possible that the hyssop might grow to such a size in Judea, as that a stalk of it might answer the end of a reed or cane in the case mentioned here; but still it appears to me more natural to suppose that the reed was a distinct thing, and that the hyssop was used only to bind the sponge fast to the reed; unless we may suppose, as we find it frequently used in the Old Testament in rites of purification. The various conjectures on this point may be seen in Eraser's Conject. and in Calmet.

30. It is finished! As if he had said, "I have executed the great decrees of the Almighty—I have satisfied the demands

31 The Jews, therefore, because it was the preparation, that the bodies should not remain upon the cross on the sabbath day, (for that sabbath day was a high day,) besought Pilate that their legs might be broken, and that they might be taken away.

28 Then came the soldiers, and brake the legs of the first, and of the other which was crucified with him.

33 But when they came to Jesus, and saw that he was dead already, they brake not his legs:

34 But one of the soldiers with a spear pierced his side, and forthwith came there out blood and water.

35 And he that saw it bare record, and his record is true: of his justice—I have accomplished all that was written in the prophets; and suffered the utmost malice of my enemies: and now the way to the Holy of Holies is made manifest through my blood." An awful, yet a glorious finish. Through this tragical death, God is reconciled to man; and the kingdom of heaven opened to every believing soul.

"Shout heaven and earth, this sum of good to MAN!" See the note on Matt. xxvii. 50.

The prodigies which happened at our Lord's death, and which are mentioned by the other three evangelists, are omitted by John: because he found the others had sufficiently stated them; and it appears he had nothing new to add. 31. It was the preparation! Every Sabbath had a preparation which began at the ninth hour, (that is, three o'clock,) the preceding evening. Joseph. Ant. b. xvi. c. 6. a. 2. relates an edict of the emperor Augustus in favour of the Jews, which orders, "that no one shall be obliged to give bail or surety on the Sabbath day, nor on the preparation before it, after the ninth hour." The time fixed here, was undoubtedly in conformity to the Jewish custom; as they began their preparation at three o'clock on the Friday evening.

That the bodies should not remain! For the law, Deut. xxi. 22, 23, ordered that the bodies of criminals should not hang all night; and they did not wish to have the Sabbath profaned by either taking them down on that day, or letting them hang to disturb the joy of that holy time. Probably their consciences began to sting them for what they had done; and they wished to remove the victim of their malice out of their sight. For that Sabbath day was a high day! 1. Because it was the Sabbath. 2. Because it was the day on which all the people presented themselves in the temple according to the command, Exod. xxiii. 17. 3. Because that was the day on which the sheaf of the first-fruits was offered, according to the command, Lev. xxiii. 10, 11. So that upon this day, there happened to be three solemnities in one. Lightfoot. It might be properly called a high day, because the pass-over fell on that Sabbath. Their legs might be broken! Lactantius says, l. iv. c. 25. that it was a common custom to break the legs or other bones of criminals upon the cross; and this appears to have been a kind of cessp de grace, the sooner to put them out of pain.

34. With a spear pierced his side! The soldier who pierced our Lord's side, has been called by the Roman Catholic writers, Longinus, which seems to be a corruption of Λαγνη, λανθη, a spear, or dart: the word in the text. (They meet over tell us, that this man was converted—that it was he who said, Truly this was the Son of God!—that he travelled into Cappadocia, and there preached the Gospel of Christ, and received the crown of martyrdom. But this deserves the same credit as the other legends of the popish church. Whether it was the right or the left side of Christ that was pierced, has been a matter of serious discussion among divines and physicians: and on this subject they are not yet agreed. That it is of no importance we are sure, because the Holy Ghost has not revealed it. Luke Crasseo, a famous painter, whose piece of the crucifixion is at Augsburg, has put to wound on either side: when he was asked the reason of this, I will do it, said he, when I am informed which side was pierced. Blood and water.) It may be naturally supposed, that the spear went through the pericardium and pierced the heart; that the water proceeded from the former, and the blood from the latter. Ambrose, Augustin, and Chrysostom, make the blood an emblem of the eucharist, and the water an emblem of baptism. Others represent them as the emblems of the Old and New Covenants. Protestants have thought them the emblems of justification, which is through the blood of the Lamb; and sanctification, which is through the washing of regeneration; and it is in reference to the first notion, that they mingle the wine with water in the sacrament of the Lord's supper. The piercing appears to have taken place because his legs were not broken; and as the law in this case stated that the criminals were to continue on the cross all they died, the side of our Lord was pierced to secure the accomplishment of the law; and the issuing of the blood and water, appears to be only a natural effect of the above cause; and probably nothing mystical or spiritual was intended by it. However, it affords the fullest proof that Jesus died for our sins. Dr. Lightfoot thinks that there is a reference here to the rock in the wilderness which Moses smote twice; and which, according to the Jews, Schemoth Rabba, fol. 128. "poured out blood at the first stroke, and water at the second." New, St. Paul says, 1 Cor. x. 4. That rock was Christ; and here the evangelist says, The soldier pierced his side, and there came out blood and water. St. John, therefore, in what he asserts and he knoweth that he saith true: that ye might believe. 36 For those things were done, that the scripture should be fulfilled. A bone of him shall not be broken.

37 And again another scripture saith, 'They shall look on him whom they pierced.

38 ' And after this, Joseph of Arimathea, being a disciple of Jesus, but secretly for fear of the Jews, brought Pilate that he might take away the body of Jesus: and Pilate gave him leave. He came therefore, and took the body of Jesus.

39 And there came also Nicodemus, which at the first came to Jesus at night. (John 12. 44. Numbers 16. 22. Psalm 22. 16, 17. Zach. 12. 10. Rev. 1. 7.)

in the 36th and 36th verses, wishes to call the attention of the Jews to this point, in order to show them that this Jesus was the true Messiah, who was typified by the rock in the wilderness. He knoweth that he saith true, that ye might believe.

36. He that saw it! Most probably John himself, who must have been pretty near the cross, to have been able to distinguish between the blood and the water, as they issued from the side of our blessed Lord.

And he knoweth! This appears to be an appeal to the Lord Jesus, for the truth of the testimony which he had now delivered. But why such a solemn appeal, unless there was something miraculous in this matter? It might appear to him necessary, 1. Because the other evangelists had not noticed it. 2. Because it contained the most decisive proof of the death of Christ. As a wound such as this was, could not have been inflicted (though other causes had been wanting) without occasioning the death of the person: and on his dying for men, depended the salvation of the world. And, 3. Because two important prophecies were fulfilled by this very circumstance, both of which designated more particularly the person of the Messiah. A bone of him shall not be broken, Exod. xii. 46. Numb. ix. 12. Psa. xxiii. 20. They will look upon him whom they pierced, Zach. xii. 10. Psa. xxii. 16.

38. Joseph of Arimathea! See on Matt. xxvii. 57-60. and particularly Mark xv. 42, 43.

39. Nicodemus! See on chap. iii. l. 2. Myrrh and aloes! Which drugs were used to preserve bodies from putrefaction. Calmet says, that the aloes mentioned here, is a liquor, which runs from an aromatic tree; and is widely different from that called aloes among us.

Some have objected, that a hundred pounds weight of myrrh and aloes, was enough to embalm two hundred dead bodies: and instead of incense, a hundred, some critics have proposed to read incense, a mixture of myrrh and aloes, of about a pound each. See Boswell's Conjectures. But it may be observed, that great quantities of spices were used for embalming dead bodies, when they intended to show peculiar marks of respect to the deceased. A great quantity was used at the funeral of Aristobolus: and it is said that five hundred servants bearing aromatics, attended the funeral of Herod: see Josephus, Ant. b. xv. c. 3. s. 4. and b. xvii. c. 8. s. 3. and four-score pounds of spices were used at the funeral of R. Gamaliel the elder. See Wetsin in loco.

40. Wound it in linen! See on chap. xi. 34.

41. There was a garden! It was an ancient custom for particular families to have burying places in their gardens. See 2 Kings xxi. 18, 26.

New sepulchre! See on Matt. xxvii. 60.

42. Because of the Jews' preparation! From this it may be conjectured, that they had designed to have put him in a more magnificent tomb; or, that they intended to make one expressly for himself, after the pass-over; or, that they had designed to have put him somewhere else, but could not do it for lack of time; and that they put him here, because the tomb was nigh. It appears plainly from embalming, &c. that none of these persons had any hope of the resurrection of Christ. They considered him as a great and eminent prophet, and treated him as such.

to Jesus by night, and brought a mixture of myrrh and aloes, about a hundred pound weight.

40 Then took they the body of Jesus, and wound it in linen clothes with the spices, as the manner of the Jews is to bury.

41 Now in the place where he was crucified, there was a garden: and in the garden a new sepulchre, wherein was never man yet laid.

42 There laid they Jesus therefore, because of the Jews' preparation day: for the sepulchre was nigh at hand.

1. Mat. 27. 67. Mark 15. 42. Luke 23. 55. 1. Ch. 9. 22. 4. 12. 42. 1. Ch. 2. 1. 2. 4. 7. 50. 1. Acts 6. 6. 1. Isa. 53. 9. 1. V. 21.

1. In the burial of our Lord, a remarkable prophecy was fulfilled: His death was appointed with the wicked, and with a rich man was his tomb. See Lowth on Isa. liii. 9. Every thing attending his mock trial, his passion, his death, his burial, &c. afforded the fullest proof of his innocence. In still continuing to reject him, the Jews seem to have exceeded the ordinary bounds of incredulity, and callousness of heart. One might imagine, that a candid attention to the Gospel facts collated with those passages in the law, and in the prophets, which they acknowledge to speak of the Messiah, would be sufficient to furnish them with the utmost evidence and fullest conviction, that he is the Christ, and that they are to expect none other. But where people once make a covenant with unbelief, argument, reason, demonstration, and miracles themselves, fail to convince them. As their conviction through this obstinacy, is rendered impossible, it belongs to God's justice to confound them. At present they have scarcely any correct knowledge of the true God, and while they continue to reject the genuine faith, they are capable of crediting the most degrading absurdities.

2. The Holy Sepulchre, or what has long passed for the burial place of our Lord, is now no more! On the following information, the reader may depend: "On the night of October 11, 1850, the church of the Holy Sepulchre was discovered to be on fire; and between five and six in the morning, the burning cupola, with all the melting and boiling lead upon it, fell in. The excessive heat which proceeded from this immense mass of liquid fire, caused not only the marble columns which supported the gallery, to burst, but likewise the marble floor of the church, together with the pilasters and images in bas relief, that decorated the chapel, containing the Holy Sepulchre, situated in the centre of the church. Shortly after, the massive columns which supported the gallery, fell down, together with the whole of the walls. Thus has perished the famous church raised by the Empress Helena, fourteen hundred years ago, over the place where the body of our blessed Lord was supposed to have been deposited, while he lay under the power of death. And thus has perished, an engine of deception, fraud, and imposture. To the most sinful purposes has this Holy Sepulchre been abused. The Greeks and Armenians have pretended, that on every Easter eve, the descender from heaven, and kindles all the lamps and candles in the place; and immense crowds of pilgrims frequent this place, on these occasions, in order to witness this ceremony, to light a taper at this sacred flame, and with these candles, to sing and daub pieces of linen, which are afterward to serve for winding sheets; for, says Mr. Maundrell, who was present, April 30, 1697, and witnessed the whole of this absurd and abominable ceremony, "It is the opinion of these poor people, that if they can but have the happiness to be buried in a shroud, smutted with this celestial fire, it will certainly secure them from the flames of hell."

See the whole of his circumstantial account of this imposture, and the ridiculous and abominable ceremonies with which it is accompanied, in his Journey from Aleppo to Jerusalem, edit. 6th. pp. 94-97. and let the reader thank God, that he is not degraded with a superstition, that renders the grace of the Gospel of none effect.

CHAPTER XX.

Mary Magdalene coming early to the sepulchre, finds it empty, and runs and tells Peter, 1. Peter and John run to the tomb, and find all as Mary had reported, 2-10. Mary sees a vision of angels in the tomb, 11-12. Jesus himself appears to her, and sends her with a message to the disciples, 13-18. He appears to the disciples, gives the fullest proof of the reality of his resurrection, and communicates to them a measure of the Holy Spirit, 19-22. The determined incredulity of Thomas, 23. Eight days after, Jesus appears again to the disciples, Thomas being present, to whom he gives the proofs he had desired, 24, 27. Thomas is convinced, and makes a noble confession, 28. Our Lord's reflections on his case, 29. Various signs done by Christ, not circumstantially related, 30. Why others are recorded, 31. [A. M. 4033. A. B. 29. An. Olymp. CCII. 1.]

THE first day of the week cometh Mary Magdalene early, when it was yet dark, unto the sepulchre, and seeth the stone taken away from the sepulchre.

2 Then she runneth, and cometh to Simon Peter, and to the other disciple whom Jesus loved, and saith unto them, They have taken away the Lord out of the sepulchre, and we know not where they have laid him.

3 Peter therefore went forth, and that other disciple, and came to the sepulchre.

1. Mat. 28. 1. Mark 16. 1. Luke 24. 1. 1. Chap. 12. 23. 4. 19. 28. 4. 27. 7. 34.

NOTES.—All that John relates concerning the resurrection of our Lord, he has collected partly from the account given by Mary Magdalene, and partly from his own observations. From Mary he derived the information given ver. 1, 2. and from ver. 11-13. From his own actual knowledge, what he relates ver.

4 So they ran both together: and the other disciple did outrun Peter, and came first to the sepulchre.

5 And he stooping down, and looking in, saw the linen clothes lying: yet went he not in.

6 Then cometh Simon Peter following him, and went into the sepulchre, and seeth the linen clothes lie,

7 And the napkin, that was about his head, not lying with the linen clothes, but wrapped together in a place by itself.

1. Luke 24. 12. 1. Ch. 18. 40. 1. Ch. 11. 44.

3-10; 19-29. and the whole of chap. xxi. It is supposed that he details the account given by Mary, without altering any circumstance, and without either addition or retrenchment. See Rosenmüller.

Verse 1.—The first day of the week! On what we call Sunday

8 Then went in also that other disciple, which came first to the sepulchre, and he saw, and believed.

9 For as yet they knew not the scripture, that he must rise again from the dead.

10 Then the disciples went away again unto their own home.

11 But Mary stood without at the sepulchre weeping: and as she wept, she stooped down, and looked into the sepulchre, and saw two angels in white sitting, the one at the head, and the other at the feet, where the body of Jesus had lain.

12 And they say unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? She saith unto them, Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him.

13 And when she had said thus, she turned herself back, and saw Jesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus.

14 And when she had said thus, she turned herself back, and saw Jesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus.

15 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? whom seekest thou? She, supposing him to be the gardener, saith unto him, Sir, if thou have borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away. 16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabbouni; which is to say, Master. 17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God and your God. 18 Mary Magdalene came and told the disciples that she had seen the Lord, and that he had spoken these things unto her. 19 Then on the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut, where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you. 20 And when he had so said, he showed unto them his hands and his side. Then were the disciples glad, when they saw the Lord.

day morning, the morning after the Jewish Sabbath. As Christ had been buried in haste, these holy women had brought perfumes, Mark xvi. 1. Luke xxiv. 1. to embalm him afresh; and in a more complete manner than it could have been done by Joseph and Nicodemus. John only mentions Mary of Magdala, because he appears to wish to give a more detailed history of her conduct, than of any of the rest: but the other evangelists speak of three persons who went together to the tomb, viz. Mary of Magdala, Mary the mother of James, and Salome: Matt. xxviii. 1. Mark xvi. 1.

2. Then she runneth] This was after the women had seen the angels, who said he was risen from the dead, Luke xxiv. 4. She told not only Peter and John, but the other apostles also, Matt. xxviii. 8. but only the two disciples above mentioned, went to the tomb to see whether what she had said was true. They have taken away the Lord] she mentions nothing of what the angels had said, in her hurry and confusion: she speaks things only by halves: and probably the vision of angels might have appeared to her only as an illusion of her own fancy: and not to be any further regarded.

4. Ostrum Peter] Not because he had a greater desire to see into the truth of these things; but because he was younger, and lighter of foot.

5. Went he not in.] Why? Because he was fully satisfied that the body was not there. But why did he not seize upon the linen clothes, and keep them as a most precious relic? Because he had too much religion and too much awe; and the time of superstition and nonsense was not yet arrived, in which, bits of rotten wood, rags of rotten cloth, decayed bones, (to whom originally belonging no one knows,) and bramble bushes, should become objects of religious adoration.

6. Seeth the linen clothes [ie] Ossuaries, from Staupas, to behold, and osna, to see—to look steadily at anything, so as to discover what it is, and to be satisfied with viewing it.

7. Wrapped together in a place by itself.] The providence of God ordered these very little matters so, that they became the fullest proofs against the lie of the chief priests, that the body had been stolen away by the disciples. [If the body had been stolen away, those who took it would not have stopped to strip the clothes from it; and to wrap them up, and lay them by in separate places.]

8. That other disciple] John. [Saw] That the body was not there. [And believed.] That it had been taken away, as Mary had said: but he did not believe that he was risen from the dead. See what follows.

9. They knew not the scripture] Viz. Psa. xvi. 9. [10. Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell—] לֹא יַעֲזַב נַפְשִׁי בְשֵׁהוֹל ki lo lazzob naphshi b'sheol—For thou wilt not abandon my life to the grave, nor suffer thy Holy One to see corruption. It was certainly a reproach to the disciples, that that they had not understood this prophecy, when our Lord had given them often the most direct information concerning it. Christ had referred to the history of Jonah, Matt. xii. 40. which was at once the type and the proof of his own resurrection. However, this ingenuous confession of John, in a matter so dishonourable to himself, is a full proof of his sincerity, and of the truth of his narration.

10. Unto their own home] Either to their own houses, if they still had any; or to those of their friends, or to those where they had a hired lodging, and where they met together for religious purposes. See ver. 19

11. But Mary stood without] She remained some time after Peter and John had returned to their own homes.

12. Seeth two angels] See on ver. 6. She knew these to be angels by their white and glittering robes. Matthew and Mark mention but one angel—probably that one only that spoke, verse 13.

One at the head, and the other at the feet] So were the cherubim placed at each end of the mercy-seat: Exod. xxv. 18, 19. Lightfoot.

13. They have taken away my Lord] It was conjectured on chap. xix. 42. that the body of our Lord was only put here for the time being, that after the Sabbath they might carry it to a more proper place—Mary seems to refer to this: They have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him. This reproach she probably attributed to some of our Lord's disciples, or to some of his friends.

to him, Sir, if thou have borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away.

16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabbouni; which is to say, Master.

17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God and your God.

18 Mary Magdalene came and told the disciples that she had seen the Lord, and that he had spoken these things unto her. 19 Then on the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut, where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you.

20 And when he had so said, he showed unto them his hands and his side. Then were the disciples glad, when they saw the Lord.

1 Ch. 16. 24.—Eph. 1. 17.—Mat. 23. 10. Luke 24. 10.—Mark 16. 14. Luke 24. 36. 1 Cor. 15. 5.—p. Ch. 16. 22.

14. She turned herself back] Or, corripas eis ra orthon, she was turned back, i. e. to go again with the other women to Jerusalem, who had already departed: but she had not as yet gone so far as to be out of the garden.

[Knew not that it was Jesus.] John has here omitted that the angels said to the women, about Christ's being risen: probably because it was so particularly related by the other evangelists; Matt. xxviii. 5-7. Mark xvi. 6, 7. Luke xxiv. 5, 6, 7. Mary was so absorbed in grief, that she paid but little attention to the person of our Lord, and therefore did not at first discern it to be him: nor could she imagine such an appearance possible, as she had no conception of his resurrection from the dead. She was therefore every way unprepared to recognize the person of our Lord.

15. Supposing him to be the gardener] Κηρυπος, the inspector or overseer of the garden, from κμασ, a garden, and ovos, an inspector—the person who had the charge of the workmen, and the care of the produce of the garden; and who rendered account to the owner.

And I will take him away] How true is the proverb, Love feels no loss. Jesus was in the prime of life when he was crucified, and had a hundred pounds' weight of spices added to his body; and yet Mary thinks of nothing less than carrying him away with her, if she can but find where he is laid!

16. Mary] This word has no doubt spoken with uncommon emphasis: and the usual sound of Christ's voice accompanied it, so as immediately to prove that it must be Jesus. What transports of joy must have filled this woman's heart! Let it be remarked, that Mary Magdalene sought Jesus more fervently, and continued more affectionately attached to him, than any of the rest; therefore to her first, Jesus is pleased to show himself; and she is made the first herald of the Gospel of a risen Saviour.

After Mary's exclamation of Rabbouni, and its interpretation by the evangelist, one MS. the latter Syriac, Syriac Hieros. and three copies of the Itala, add, rai sporocapasi, epebaui avrou, And she ran to embrace, or cling to him. Then our Lord's words come in with the reason for them.

17. Touch me not] Μη μου άρρασ, cling not to me. Αρρασ has this sense in Job xxxi. 7. where the Septuagint use it for the Hebrew בָּרַךְ דַּבַּח, which signifies to cleave, cling, stick, or be glued to. From Matt. xxviii. 9. It appears that some of the women held him by the feet, and worshipped him. This probably Mary did; and our Lord seems to have spoken to her to this effect: "Spend no longer time with me now: I am not going immediately to heaven—you will have several opportunities of seeing me again: but go and tell my disciples, that I am, by and by, to ascend to my Father and God, who is your Father and God also. Therefore, let them take courage."

18. Told the disciples—that he had spoken these things] St. Mark says, chap. xvi. 11. that the afflicted apostles could not believe what she had said. They seem to have considered it as an effect of her troubled imagination.

19. The doors were shut—for fear of the Jews] We do not find that the Jews designed to molest the disciples: that word of authority which Christ spoke, chap. xviii. 8. Let these go away—had prevented the Jews from offering them any injury; but as they had proceeded so far as to put Christ to death, the faith of the disciples not being very strong, they were led to think that they should be the next victims if found. Some think, therefore, that they had the doors not only shut but barricaded: nevertheless, Jesus came in, the doors being shut, &c. while they continued shut. But how? By his almighty power: and further we know not. Yet it is quite possible, that no miraculous influence is here intended. The doors might be shut for fear of the Jews; and Jesus might open them, and enter in the ordinary way. Where there is no need for a miracle, a miracle is never wrought. See on ver. 30. The evangelist has omitted the appearing of our Lord to the other women who came from the tomb, Matt. xxviii. 9. and that to the two disciples who were going to Emmaus, Luke xxiv. 13, &c. which all happened in the course of this same day.

Peace be unto you.] His usual salutation and benediction. May every blessing of heaven and earth which you need be granted unto you.

20. He showed unto them his hands and his side.] So it appears that his body bore the mark of the nails and the spear.

21 Then said Jesus to them again, Peace be unto you: <sup>a</sup> as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you.

22 And when he had said this, he breathed on them, and saith unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost:

23 <sup>b</sup> Whose soever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whose soever sins ye retain, they are retained.

24 <sup>c</sup> But Thomas, one of the twelve, <sup>d</sup> called Didymus, was not with them when Jesus came.

25 The other disciples therefore said unto him, We have seen the Lord. But he said unto them, Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, <sup>e</sup> and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe.

26 <sup>f</sup> And after eight days again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them: <sup>g</sup> then came Jesus, the doors being these marks were preserved, that the disciples might be the more fully convinced of the reality of his resurrection.

<sup>a</sup> Matt. 28. 18. Ch. 17. 18, 19. 19th. 31. <sup>b</sup> Tim. 2. 2.—<sup>c</sup> Matt. 16. 19. & 18. 18.—<sup>d</sup> Ch. 11. 16.—<sup>e</sup> Psal. 74. 41. Ch. 19. 34.

21. Even so send I you.] As I was sent to proclaim the truth of the Most High, and to convert sinners to God; I send you for the very same purpose; clothed with the very same authority, and influenced by the very same Spirit.

22. He breathed on them] Intimating by this, that they were to be made new men, in order to be properly qualified for the work to which he had called them; for in this breathing he evidently alluded to the first creation of man, when God breathed into him the breath of life, and he became a living soul: the breath or Spirit of God, (רוּחַ אֱלֹהִים) being the grand principle and cause of his spiritual and divine life.

Receive ye the Holy Ghost] From this act of our Lord, the influence of the Holy Spirit on the souls of men have been termed his inspiration; from in, into, and spiro, I breathe. Every word of Christ which is received in the heart by faith, comes accompanied by this divine breathing; and without this, there is neither light nor life. Just as Adam was before God breathed the quickening spirit into him, so is every human soul till it receives this inspiration. Nothing is seen, known, discerned, or felt of God, but through this. To every private Christian this is essentially requisite; and no man ever did, or ever can preach the Gospel of God so as to convince and convert sinners without it. "There are many (says pious Queneel) who extol the dignity of the apostolic mission, and compare that of bishops and pastors with that of Christ; but with what shame and fear ought they to be filled, if they do but compare the life and deportment of Christ, with the lives and conversations of those who glory in being made partakers of his mission. They may depend on it, that if sent at all, they are only sent on the same conditions, and for the same end, namely—to preach the truth, and to establish the kingdom of God, by opposing the corruption of the world; and by acting and suffering to the end, for the advancement of the glory of God. That person is no other than a monster in the church, who, by his sacred office, should be a dispenser of the Spirit; and who, by the corruption of his own heart, and by a disorderly, worldly, voluptuous, and scandalous life, is at the same time a member and instrument of the devil."

23. Whose soever sins ye remit] See the note on Matt. xvi. 19. and xviii. 18. It is certain God alone can forgive sins; and it would not only be blasphemous, but grossly absurd, to say that any creature could remit the guilt of a transgression which had been committed against the Creator. The apostles received from the Lord the doctrine of reconciliation, and the doctrine of condemnation. They who believed on the Son of God, in consequence of their preaching, had their sins remitted; and they who would not believe, were declared to lie under condemnation. The reader is desired to consult the note referred to above, where the custom to which our Lord alludes is particularly considered. Dr. Lightfoot supposes that the power of life and death, and the power of delivering over to Satan, which was granted to the apostles, is here referred to. This was a power which the primitive apostles exclusively possessed.

24. Thomas—called Didymus] See this name explained, chap. xi. 16.

Was not with them; And by absenting himself from the company of the disciples, he lost this precious opportunity of seeing and hearing Christ; and of receiving (at this time) the inestimable blessing of the Holy Ghost. Where two or three are assembled in the name of Christ, he is in the midst of them. Christ had said this before: Thomas should have remembered it, and not have forsaken the company of the disciples. What is the consequence? His unbelief becomes, 1st. Utterly unreasonable: ten of his brethren witnessed that they had seen Christ, ver. 25: but he rejected their testimony. 2dly. His unbelief became obstinate; it was determined not to believe on any evidence that it might please God to give him: he would believe according to his own prejudices, or not at all. 3dly. His unbelief became presumptuous and fearless; a view of the person of Christ will not suffice; he will not believe that it is he, unless he can put his finger into the holes made by the nails in his Lord's hands; and thrust his hands into the wounds made by the spear in his side. Thomas had lost much good, and gained much evil, and yet was insensible of his state. Behold the consequences of forsaking the assemblies of God's people! Jesus comes to the shut, and stood in the midst, and said, Peace be unto you.

27 Then saith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands: and <sup>h</sup> reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side: and be not faithless, but believing.

28 And Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God.

29 Jesus saith unto him, Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: <sup>i</sup> blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed.

30 <sup>j</sup> And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book:

31 <sup>k</sup> But these are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; <sup>l</sup> and that believing ye might have life through his name.

<sup>h</sup> Luke 24. 39. <sup>i</sup> John 1. 1.—<sup>j</sup> 2 Cor. 5. 7. <sup>k</sup> 1 Pet. 1. 8.—<sup>l</sup> Ch. 21. 25.—<sup>m</sup> Luke 1. 4.—<sup>n</sup> Ch. 2. 15, 16. & 24. <sup>o</sup> 1 Pet. 1. 9.

meeting—a disciple is found out of his place, who might have been there; and he is not only not blessed, but his heart gets hardened and darkened through the deceitfulness of sin. It was through God's mere mercy that ever Thomas had another opportunity of being convinced of his error. Reader! take warning.

26. After eight days] It seems likely that this was precisely on that day se'night, on which Christ had appeared to them before—and from this we may learn that this was the weekly meeting of the apostles; and though Thomas was not found at the former meeting, he was determined not to be absent from this. According to his custom, Jesus came again; for he cannot forget his promise—two or three are assembled in his name; and he has engaged to be among them.

27. Then saith he to Thomas] Through his infinite compassion he addressed him in a particular manner; condescending in this case to accommodate himself to the prejudices of an obstinate, though sincere disciple.

Reach hither thy finger, &c.] And it is very probable that Thomas did so! for his unbelief was too deeply rooted to be easily cured.

28. Thomas answered, &c.] Those who deny the Godhead of Christ, would have us to believe that these words are an exclamation of Thomas, made through surprise, and that they were addressed to the Father, and not to Christ. Theodorus of Mopsuestes was the first, I believe, who gave the words this turn; and the fifth Œcumenic Council, held at Constantinople, anathematized him for it. This was not according to the spirit of the Gospel of God. However, a man must do violence to every rule of construction, who can apply the address here to any but Christ. The text is plain,—Jesus comes in—sees Thomas, and addresses him; desiring him to come to him, and put his finger into the print of the nails, &c. Thomas, perfectly satisfied of the reality of our Lord's resurrection, says unto him—My Lord! and my God! &c. Thou art indeed, the very same person, my Lord, whose disciple I have so long been; and thou art my God, henceforth the object of my religious adoration. Thomas was the first who gave the title of God to Jesus; and by this glorious confession, made some amends for his former obstinate incredulity. It is worthy of remark, that from this time forward, the whole of the disciples treated our Lord with the most supreme respect; never using that familiarity towards him, which they had often used before. The resurrection from the dead, gave them the fullest proof of the divinity of Christ. And this, indeed, is the use which St. John makes of this manifestation of Christ. See ver. 30, 31. Bishop Pearce says here: "Observe, that Thomas calls Jesus his God, and that Jesus does not reprove him for it, though probably it was the first time he was called so." And I would ask, could Jesus be jealous of the honour of the true God; could he be a prophet; could he be even an honest man, to permit his disciple to indulge in a mistake so monstrous and destructive, if it had been one?

29. Thomas] This word is omitted by almost every MS., Version, and ancient commentator of importance.

Blessed are they, &c.] Thou hast seen, and therefore thou hast believed, and now thou art blessed; thou art now happy; fully convinced of my resurrection, yet no less blessed shall all those be who believe in my resurrection, without the evidence thou hast had. From this we learn, that to believe in Jesus on the testimony of his apostles, will put a man into the possession of the very same blessedness which they themselves enjoyed. And so has God constituted the whole economy of grace, that a believer at eighteen hundred years' distance from the time of the resurrection, suffers no loss, because he has not seen Christ in the flesh. The importance and excellence of implicit faith in the testimony of God, is thus stated by Rab. Tanchum. "Rab. Simeon ben Lachesh saith, The proselyte is more beloved by the holy blessed God, than that whole crowd that stood before Mount Sinai; for unless they had heard the thundering, and seen the flames and lightning, the hills trembling, and the trumpets sounding, they had not received the law. But the proselyte hath seen nothing of all this, and yet he hath come in, devoting himself to the holy blessed God, and hath taken upon him (the yoke of) the kingdom of heaven." Reader! Christ died for thee—believe, and thou shalt be saved; and become as blessed and as happy as an apostle.

30. Many other signs truly did Jesus, &c.] That is, beside the two mentioned here, ver. 19. and ver. 26. viz. Christ entering into the house in a miraculous manner twice, notwithstanding the doors were fast shut: see on ver. 19. The other miracles which our Lord did, and which are not related here, were such as were necessary to the disciples only, and therefore not revealed to mankind at large. There is nothing in the whole revelation of God but what is for some important purpose, and there is nothing left out that could have been of any real use.

31. That ye might believe] What is here recorded is to give a full proof of the divinity of Christ; that he is the promised Messiah; that he really suffered and rose again from the dead, and that through him every believer might have eternal life.

Life] Several MSS., Versions, and Fathers, read eternal life, and this is undoubtedly the meaning of the word, whether the various reading be admitted or not.

Grotius has conjectured that the Gospel, as written by St. John, ended with this chapter: and that the following chapter was added by the church of Ephesus. This conjecture is supported by nothing in antiquity. It is possible that these two last verses might have formerly been at the conclusion of the last chapter, as they bear a very great similarity to those that are found there: and it is likely that their true place is between the 24th and 25th verses of the succeeding chapter; with the latter of which they in every respect correspond, and with it form a proper conclusion to the book. Except this correspondence, there is no authority for changing their present position.

After reading the Gospel of John, his first epistle should be next taken up: it is written exactly in the same spirit, and keeps the same object steadily in view. As John's Gospel may be considered a supplement to the other evangelists, so his first epistle may be considered a supplement and continuation to his own Gospel. In some MSS. the epistles follow this Gospel, not merely because the transcribers wished to have all the works of the same writer together; but because there was such an evident connexion between them. The first epistle is to the Gospel, as a pointed and forcible application is to an interesting and impressive sermon.

CHAPTER XXI.

Jesus shows himself to the disciples at the sea of Tiberias, 1-5. The miraculous draught of fishes, 6-11. He dines with his disciples, 12-14. Questions Peter concerning his love to him, and gives him commission to feed his sheep, 15-17. Foretels the manner of Peter's death, 18, 19. Peter inquires concerning John, and receives an answer that was afterwards misunderstood, 20-23. John's concluding testimony concerning the authenticity of his Gospel, and the end for which it was written, 24, 25. [A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCII. 1.]

AFTER these things Jesus showed himself again to the disciples at the sea of Tiberias: and on this wise showed he himself.

2 There were together Simon Peter, and Thomas called Didymus, and Nathanael of Cana in Galilee, and the sons of Zebedee, and two other of his disciples.

3 Simon Peter saith unto him, I go a fishing. They say unto him, We also go with thee. They went forth and entered into a ship immediately; and that night they caught nothing.

4 But when the morning was now come, Jesus stood on the shore: but the disciples knew not that it was Jesus.

5 Then Jesus saith unto them, Children, have ye any meat? They answered him, No.

6 And he said unto them, Cast the net on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find. They cast therefore, and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes.

7 Therefore that disciple whom Jesus loved saith unto Peter, It is the Lord. Now when Simon Peter heard that it was the Lord, he girt his fisher's coat unto him, (for he was naked,) and did cast himself into the sea.

8 And the other disciples came in a little ship; as they were a Ch. 1. 45.-b Matt. 4. 21.-c Ch. 20. 14.-d Luke 24. 41.-e Or, 81re.

NOTES.—Verse 1. Jesus showed himself again] After that our Lord had appeared several times to the women, and to the apostles at Jerusalem, and at the tomb, he bade them go into Galilee, giving them the promise of meeting them there: Matt. xxviii. 7. Mark xvi. 7. This promise we find he fulfilled in the way John relates it here. This was the seventh appearance of our Lord after the resurrection. Matthew, chap. xxviii. 16. has but just mentioned it; of it the rest of the evangelists say nothing; and this is the reason why John gives it so particularly.

3. Peter saith—I go a fishing] Previously to the crucifixion of our Lord, the temporal necessities of himself and his disciples appear to have been supplied by the charity of individuals; Luke viii. 3. As it is probable that the scandal of the cross had now shut up this source of support; and the disciples not fully knowing how they were to be employed, purposed to return to their former occupation of fishing, in order to gain a livelihood, and therefore the seven mentioned, ver. 2. embarked on the sea of Tiberias, otherwise called the sea of Galilee.

That night they caught nothing.] God had so ordered it, that they might be the more struck with the miracle which he afterwards wrought.

4. Knew not that it was Jesus.] Probably because it was either not light enough: or, he was at too great a distance: or, he had assumed another form, as in Mark xvi. 12. otherwise his person was so remarkable, that all his disciples readily knew him when he was at hand: see ver. 12.

5. Children.] Παιδια, a term of familiarity, and affectionate kindness: it is the vocative case plural of παιδιον, which is the diminutive of παῖς, and literally signifies little children, or beloved children. How the margin has made sirs out of it, I cannot conceive.

Any meat] Πρωτοφάγιον, from πρῶς, besides, and φαγω, I eat, any thing that is eaten with bread or such like solid substances, to make the deglutition the more easy: here it evidently means any kind of fish: and our Lord seems to have appeared at first in the character of a person who wished to purchase a part of what they had caught: see the note on chap. vi. 9.

6. And ye shall find] The Ethiopic, three copies of the Itala, and St. Cyril, add, They said therefore unto him, we have laboured all the night, and caught nothing, nevertheless at thy command we will let down the net. This is borrowed from Luke v. 5.

For the multitude of fishes] This was intended as an emblem of the immense number of souls which should be converted to God by their ministry, according to the promise of Christ: Matt. iv. 19.

7. His fisher's coat] Or, his upper coat, Ενωστῶν, from ἐνω, upon, and ὄστῶν, I clothe; something analogous to what we term a great coat, or surcoat.

He was naked] He was only in his vest. Ἴμματος, naked, is often used to signify the absence of this upper garment only. In 1 Sam. xix. 24. when Saul had put off his ἱμαρία, upper garments, he is said to have been ἴμματος, naked; and David, when girded only with a linen ephod, is said to have been uncovered, in 2 Sam. vi. 14, 20. To which may be added what we read in the Sept. Job xxii. 6. thou hast taken away the covering of the naked; ἀπέκλυς ἱμῶν, the plaid, or blanket, in which they wrapped themselves; and besides which they had none other. In this sense it is that Virgil says, Geor. l. 299. Nudus ara, sere nudus, i. e. strip off your upper garments, and work till you sweat. See more examples in Bp. Pearce.

Cast himself into the sea.] It is likely that they were in very shallow water, and as they were only two hundred cubits from the land, (about one hundred and thirty-two English yards) it is possible that Peter only stepped into the water, that he might assist them to draw the boat to land, which was now heavily laden. It is not likely that he went into the water in order to swim ashore: had he intended this, it is not to be supposed that he would have put his great coat on, which must have been an essential hindrance to him in getting to shore.

8. Drawing the net] It is probable that this was that species of fishing, in which the net was stretched from the shore out into the sea; the persons who were in the boat, and who shot the net, fetched a compass, and bringing in a haler, which was attached to the other end of the net, those who were on shore, helped them to drag it in. As the net was sunk with weights to the bottom, and the top floated on the water by cork or pieces of light wood, all the fish that happened to come within the compass of the net were of course dragged to shore. The sovereign power of Christ had, in this case, miraculously collected the fish to that part where he ordered the disciples to cast the net.

9. They saw a fire, &c.] This appears to have been a new miracle. It could not have been a fire which the disciples had there, for it is remarked as something new; besides, they had caught no fish: ver. 5. and here was a small fish upon the coals; and a loaf of bread provided to eat with it. The whole appears to have been miraculously prepared by Christ.

12. Come and dine] Ἄγετε ἀφ' ἑμαυτοῦ. Though this is the

12. Come and dine] Ἄγετε ἀφ' ἑμαυτοῦ. Though this is the Jonas, lovest thou me? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. * He saith unto him, Feed my sheep.

17 He saith unto him the third time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? Peter was grieved because he said unto him the third time, Lovest thou me? And he said unto him, Lord, I know knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee. Jesus saith unto him, Feed my sheep.

18 Verily, verily, I say unto thee, When thou wast young, thou girdest thyself, and walkedst whither thou wouldest: but when thou shalt be old, thou shalt stretch forth thy hands, and another shall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldest.

19 This spake he, signifying by what death he should glorify God. And when he had spoken this, he saith unto him, Follow me.

20 Then Peter, turning about, seeth the disciple whom Jesus

1. Acts 13. 27. 28. 1. 1. 2. Ps. 2. 25. & 5. 2. 4. 1. Ch. 2. 94. 25. & 16. 30. — Ch. 13. 38. Acts 12. 1. — 2. 1. 1. 1. 1.

literal translation of the word, yet it must be observed that it was not dinner time, being as yet early in the morning: ver. 4. but Kypke has largely shown, that the original word is used by Homer, Xenophon, and Plutarch, to signify breakfast; or any early meal, as well as what we term dinner. It might perhaps appear singular, otherwise, it would be as agreeable to the use of the Greek word, to have translated it, come and breakfast.

Dare I ask him? Ever since the confession of Thomas, a proper awe of the deity of Christ had possessed their minds.

13. And giveth them] Eating likewise with them, as St. Luke expressly says, chap. xxiv. 43.

14. This is now the third time] That it, this was the third time he appeared unto the apostles, when all or most of them were together.—He appeared to ten of them, chap. xx. 19. again to eleven of them, ver. 26. and at this time to seven of them, ver. 2. of this chapter. But when the other evangelists are collated, we shall find that this was the seventh time in which he had manifested himself after he arose from the dead. 1st. He appeared to Mary of Magdala, Mark xvi. 9. John xx. 15, 16. 2dly. To the holy women who came from the tomb, Matt. xxviii. 9. 3dly. To the two disciples who went to Emmaus, Luke xxiv. 13, &c. 4thly. To St. Peter alone, Luke xxiv. 34. 5thly. To the ten, in the absence of Thomas, chap. xx. 19. 6thly. Eight days after to the eleven, Thomas being present, ver. 26. 7thly. To the seven, mentioned in ver. 2. of this chapter; which was between the eight and fortieth day after his resurrection. Besides these seven appearances, he showed himself, 8thly. To the disciples on a certain mountain in Galilee, Matt. xxviii. 16. If the appearance mentioned by St. Paul, 1 Cor. xv. 6. to upwards of 500 brethren at once, if this be not the same with his appearance on a mountain in Galilee, it must be considered the ninth. According to the same apostle, he was seen of James, 1 Cor. xv. 7. which may have been the tenth appearance. And after this, to all the apostles, when, at Bethany, he ascended to heaven in their presence. See Mark xvi. 19, 20. Luke xxiv. 50—53. Acts i. 3—12. 1 Cor. xv. 7. This appears to have been the eleventh time in which he distinctly manifested himself after his resurrection. But there might have been many other manifestations, which the evangelists have not thought proper to enumerate, as not being connected with any thing of singular weight or importance.

15. Simon—lovest thou me? Peter had thrice denied his Lord, and now Christ gives him an opportunity in some measure to repair his fault by a triple confession.

More than these 7] This was a kind of reproach to Peter: he had professed a more affectionate attachment to Christ than the rest; he had been more forward in making professions of friendship and love than any of the others; and no one, (Judas excepted,) had treated his Lord so basely. As he had before intimated that his attachment to his Master was more than that of the rest, our Lord now puts the question to him, Dost thou love me more than these? To which Peter made the most modest reply—Thou knowest I love thee, but no longer dwells on the strength of his love, nor compares himself with even the meanest of his brethren. He had before cast a very unkind reflection on his brethren. Though all be offended because of thee, yet I will never be offended, Matt. xxvi. 23. But he had now learnt by dreadful experience, that he who trusteth his own heart is a fool; and that a man's sufficiency for good is of the Lord alone.

The words more than these, Bishop Pearce thinks refer to the provisions they were eating, or to their secular employments; for, says he, "It does not seem probable that Jesus should put a question to Peter, which he could not possibly answer: because he could only know his own degree of love for Jesus, not that of the other disciples." But it appears to me, that our Lord refers to the profession made by Peter, which I have quoted above.

It is remarkable, that in these three questions, our Lord uses the verb αγαπαω, which signifies, to love affectionately, ardently, supremely, perfectly; see the note on Matt. xxi. 37. and that Peter always replies, using the verb φιλω, which signifies to love, to like, to regard, to feel friendship for another. As if our Lord had said, "Peter, dost thou love me ardently and supremely?" To which he answers, "Lord, I feel an affection for thee—I do esteem thee—but dare, at present, say no more."

loved, following; which also leaned on his breast at supper, and said, Lord, which is it that betrayeth thee?

21 Peter seeing him, saith to Jesus, Lord, and what shall this man do?

22 Jesus saith unto him, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? follow thou me.

23 Then went this saying abroad among the brethren, that that disciple should not die: yet Jesus said not unto him, He shall not die; but, I if I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?

24 * This is the disciple which testifieth of these things, and wrote these things: and we know that his testimony is true. 25 * And there are also many other things which Jesus did, the which, if they should be written every one, I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written. Amen.

1. Ch. 13. 27. 28. 1. 1. 2. Ps. 2. 25. & 5. 2. 4. 1. Ch. 2. 94. 25. & 16. 30. — Ch. 13. 38. Acts 12. 1. — 2. 1. 1. 1. 1.

There is another remarkable change of terms in this place. In ver. 15. and 17. our Lord uses the verb βοσκαω, to feed, and in ver. 16. he uses the word ποιμαινω, which signifies to tend a flock, not only to feed, but to take care of, guide, govern, defend, &c. by which he seems to intimate, that it is not sufficient, merely to offer the bread of life to the congregation of the Lord, but he must take care that the sheep be properly collected, attended to, regulated, guided, &c. and it appears that Pet. perfectly comprehended our Lord's meaning, and saw that it was a direction given not only to him, and to the rest of the disciples, but to all their successors in the Christian ministry; for himself says, 1 Epist. chap. 2. Feed the flock of God, (ποιμαίνετε το ποίπιον του Θεου,) which is among you, taking the oversight, (επιτρονωνας, acting as superintendants, and guardians,) not by constraint, but willingly, not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind. Every spiritual shepherd of Christ, has a flock composed of lambs, young converts; and SHEEP, experienced Christians, to feed, guide, regulate, and govern. To be properly qualified for this, his wisdom and holiness should always exceed those of his flock. Who is sufficient for these things? The man who lives in God, and God in him.

To the answer of Christ in ver. 16. the latter Syriac adds, If thou lovest me, and esteamest me, feed my sheep.

17. Peter was grieved] Fearing, says St. Chrysostom, lest Christ saw something in his heart, which he saw not himself; and which might lead to another fall; and that Christ was about to tell him of it, as he had before predicted his denial.

18. Thou shalt stretch forth thy hands] Wetstein observes, that it was a custom at Rome, to put the necks of those who were to be crucified, into a yoke, and to stretch out their hands, and fasten them to the end of it, and having thus led them through the city, they were carried out to be crucified. See his note on this place. Thus then Peter was girded, chained, and carried whither he would not—not that he was unwilling to die for Christ, but he was a man, he did not love death; but he loved his life less than he loved his God.

19. Should glorify God? Ancient writers state that about thirty-four years after this, Peter was crucified; and that he deemed it so glorious a thing to die for Christ, that he begged to be crucified with his head downwards, not considering himself worthy to die in the same posture in which his Lord did. So Eusebius, Prudentius, Chrysostom, and Augustin. See Calmet.

Follow me.] Whether our Lord meant by these words that Peter was to walk with him a little way for a private interview; or whether he meant that he was to imitate his example, or be conformed to him in the manner of his death, is very uncertain.

22. If I will that he tarry till I come] There are several opinions concerning this; the following are the principal. 1. Some have concluded from these words, that John should never die. Many eminent men, ancients and moderns, have been, and are of this opinion. 2. Others thought that our Lord intimated that John should live till Christ came to judge and destroy Jerusalem. On this opinion it is observed, that Peter, who was the oldest of the apostles, died in the year 67, which, says Calmet, was six years before the destruction of Jerusalem; and that John survived the ruin of that city about thirty years, he being the only one of the twelve who was alive when the above desolation took place. 3. St. Augustin, Bede, and others, understood the passage thus: If I will that he remain till I come and take him away by a natural death, what is that to thee, follow thou me to thy crucifixion. On this it may be observed, that all antiquity agrees, that John, if he did die, was the only disciple who was taken away by a natural death. 4. Others imagine, that our Lord was only now taking Peter aside, to speak something to him in private, and that Peter seeing John following, wished to know whether he should come along with them; and that our Lord's answer stated that John should remain in that place, till Christ and Peter returned to him: and to this meaning of the passage many eminent critics incline. For nearly eighteen hundred years, the greatest men in the world have been puzzled with this passage. It would appear intolerable in me to attempt to decide where so many eminent doctors have disagreed, and do still disagree. I rather lean to the fourth opinion. See the conclusion of the Preface to this Gospel.

24. This is the disciple] It is, I think, very likely that these two verses were added by some of the believers at that time, as a testimony to the truth of the preceding narration:—and I allow, with Bishop Pearce and others, that it is possible that John may mean himself when he says, we know, &c. yet I think that it is very unlikely. It is certain that this Gospel loses no part of its authority in admitting the sufrage of the church of God: it rather strengthens the important truth which are delivered in it; and in the mouths of so many witnesses the sacred matters which concern the peace and salvation of the world are still more abundantly established. See the last note on the preceding chapter.

We know. Instead of scimus, we know, some have written scio, I know indeed; but this is mere conjecture, and is worthy of no regard. It is likely that these verses were added by those to whom John gave his work in charge.

95. Many other things] Before his disciples, is added by two MSS. The Scholia in several MSS. intimate that this verse is an addition: but it is found in every ancient Version, and in Origen, Cyril, and Chrysostom.

Could not contain, &c.] Origen's signification of the word χωρειν, is, to admit of, or receive favourably. As if he had said, The miracles of Christ are so many, and so astonishing, that if the whole were to be detailed, the world would not receive the account with proper faith—but enough is recorded that men may believe that Jesus is the Son of God, and that in believing they may have life through his name; chap. xx. 31.

We have already seen that this apostle often uses the term world to designate the Jewish people only; and if it have this sense here, which is possible, it will at once vindicate the above exposition of the word χωρειν. As if he had said, Were I to detail all the signs and miracles which Jesus did among his disciples, and in the private families where he sojourned, the Jewish people themselves would not receive nor credit these accounts: but enough is written to prove that this Christ was the promised Messiah.

Bp. Pearce has a very judicious note here, of which what follows is an abstract, with a few additions.

Even the world itself, &c.] This is a very strong eastern expression to represent the number of miracles which Jesus wrought. But however strong and strange this expression may seem to us of the western world, we find sacred and other authors using hyperboles of the like kind and signification. In Numb. xiii. 33. the spies who returned from the search of the land of Canaan, say that they saw giants there of such a prodigious size that they were in their own sight as grasshoppers. In Dan. iv. 11. mention is made of a tree, whereof the height reached unto the heaven; and the sight thereof unto the end of all the earth. And the author of Ecclesiasticus, in chap. xvii. 15. speaking of Solomon's wisdom, says, Thy soul covered the whole earth, and thou filledst it with parables: so here, by one degree more of hyperbole, it is said that the world would not contain all the books which should be written concerning Jesus's miracles, if the particular account of every one of them were given. In Josephus, Antiq. lib. xix. c. 20. God is mentioned as promising to Jacob that he would give the land of Canaan to him and his seed; and then it is added, ο παντασιν πασαν, βαση ηλιος ορα, και γη και θαλασσα. They shall fill all, whatsoever the sun illuminates, whether earth or sea. Philo, in his tract De Ebriet. T. l. p. 382. 10. is observed to speak after the same manner, ο γαρ των δουρων ικανος οσους χωρησει η ανθρωπινη κληρη, ισος οσος ε κοςμος. Neither is any one able to contain the vast abundance of gifts; nor is the world capable of it. And in his tract De Poetria. Caini, T. l. p. 263. l. 38. he says, speaking of the fulness of God, ο υδω γαρ εις (ε) κλοντων επιδεικνυσθαι βουληθει τον αυτου, χωρησει ανηπιρωθεις και θαλασσα γη. "And should he will to draw out his fulness, the whole compass of sea and land could not contain it."

Homer, who, if not born in Asia Minor, had undoubtedly lived there, has sometimes followed the hyperbolic manner of speaking, which prevailed so much in the East, as in Iliad. b. xx. he makes Aeneas say to Achilles, Αλλ' αγε μηκει ταυτα λεγουμεθα, νηπιτοιο υς, Ηραος' εν μεσση θυμηθι θρηστης. Ητι γαρ αφορητοις ονειδα κρησθαι Πηλαα μαλ' ουδ' ανηρης εκατομβυγος ακθος αριονο. Σπαρτην λεγλωσθε εσι βροτων, πολεις θ' ενι μεθι, Παντοιοσιν ενω δε πολυς υωρα και ενθα Οκτωιον κ' επιποδα αυος, τοιον κ' εναιτοσιναι. Iliad. xx. v. 244—50.

But wherefore should we longer waste the time in idle prate: while battle rours around? Reproach is cheap. With ease we might discharge Gibes at each other, till a ship that casts An hundred ears, should sink beneath the load. The tongue of man is voluble, thick words For every theme, nor wants wide field and long; And as he speaks, so shall he bear again. Cowper.

Few instances of any thing like these have been found in the western world, and yet it has been observed that Cicero in Philipp. II. 44. uses a similar form: Præsertim cum illi eam gloriam consecuti sunt, quæ vix celo capere videratur—"especially when they pursued that glory which heaven itself seems scarcely sufficient to contain." And Livy also, in vii. 25. Ha viros populi Romani, quæ vix terrarum capit orbis

—"these energies of the Roman people, which the terraqueous globe can scarcely contain."

We may define hyperbole thus: it is a figure of speech where more seems to be said than is intended; and it is well known that the Asiatic nations abound in these. In Deut. l. 23. cities with high walls round about them; are said to be exalted up to heaven. Now what is the meaning of this hyperbole? Why, that the cities had very high walls—then, is the hyperbole a truth? Yes, for we should attach no other idea to these expressions, than the authors intended to convey by them. Now, the author of this expression never designed to intimate that the cities had walls which reached to heaven; nor did one of his countrymen understand it in this sense—they affixed no other idea to it, (for the words, in common use, conveyed no other) than that these cities had very high walls. When John therefore wrote, the world itself could not contain the books, &c. what would every Jew understand by it? Why, that if every thing which Christ had done and said, were to be written, the books would be more in number than had ever been written concerning any one person or subject: i. e. there would be an immense number of books. And so there would, for it is not possible that the ten thousandth part of the words and actions of such a life as our Lord's was, could be contained in the compass of one or all of these Gospels.

There is a hyperbole very like this, taken from the Jewish writers, and inserted by BARNABAS, Hist. des Juifs, liv. iii. c. l. a. 9. "Jochanan succeeded Simeon—he attained the age of Moses—he employed forty years in commerce, and in pleading before the sanhedrim. He composed such a great number of precepts and lessons, that if the heavens were paper, and all the trees of the forest so many pens, and all the children of men so many scribes, they would not suffice to write all his lessons." Now what meaning did the author of this hyperbole intend to convey? Why, that Jochanan had given more lessons than all his contemporaries or predecessors. Nor does any Jew in the universe understand the words in any other sense. It is worthy of remark, that this Jochanan lived in the time of St. John; for he was in Jerusalem when it was besieged by Vespasian. See Basnage, as above.

There is another quoted by the same author, Ibid c. v. a. 7 where speaking of Eleazar one of the presidents of the sanhedrim, it is said: "Although the firmament were vellum, and the waters of the ocean were changed into ink, it would not be sufficient to describe all the knowledge of Eleazar; for he made not less than three hundred consultations concerning the manner of cultivating cucumbers." Now, what did the rabbin mean by this hyperbole? Why, no more than that Eleazar was the greatest naturalist in his time; and had written and spoken more on that subject and others, than any of his contemporaries. This Eleazar flourished about seventy-three years after Christ. It is further worthy of remark, that this man also is stated to have lived in the time of St. John. John is supposed to have died A. D. 99.

Hyperboles of this kind, common to the East and to the West, to the North and to the South, may be found every where; and no soul is puzzled with them but the critics. The above examples, I trust, are sufficient to vindicate and explain the words in the text. It is scarcely necessary to add, that the common French expression, tout le monde, which literally means the whole world, is used in a million of instances to signify the people present at one meeting, or the majority of them; and often the members of one particular family. And yet no man who understands the language, ever imagines, that any besides the congregation in the one case, or the family in the other, is intended.

Amen] This word is omitted by ABCD, several others; Syriac, all the Arabic, and both the Persian; the Coptic, Sæhidic, Ethiopic, Armenian, Syriac Hierus. Vulgate, and all the Itala but three.

The word amen, which has passed unaltered into almost all the languages of the world in which the Sacred Writings are extant, is pure Hebrew; and signifies to be steady, constant, firm, established, or confirmed. It is used as a particle of affirmation and adjuration. When a person was sworn to the truth of any fact, the oath was recited to him, and he bound himself by simply saying, amen amen. See an instance of this, Numb. v. 22. In Deut. xxvii. 15—26. it is to be understood in the same sense, the persons who use it binding themselves under the curse there pronounced, should they do any of the things there prohibited. It is often used as a particle of affirmation, approbation, and consent, examples of which frequently occur in the Old Testament. When any person commenced a discourse or testimony with this word, it was considered in the light of an oath; as if he had said, I pledge my truth, my honour, and my life, to the certainty of what I now state.

Our Lord begins many of his discourses with this word, either singly, Amen, I say unto you; or doubled, Amen, amen, I say unto you, which we translate verily: as Christ uses it, it may ever understand it as expressing an absolute and incontestible truth. Instances of the use of the simple term frequently occur, see Matt. v. 18, 26. vi. 2. 5. 16. vii. 10. x. 15. 23. 42. &c. &c.: but it is remarkable that it is omitted by St. John, see chap. i. 51. iii. 3. 5. 11. v. 19. 24. 26. vi. 26. 38. 47. 53. vii. 34. 51. 54. x. 1. 7. xii. 24. xiii. 16. 27. 28. xiv. 28. xvi. 20. 23. 24. 18. and is never found iterated by any of the other evangelists. Some have supposed that the word amen is abstracted, and contains the initials of ארי לוי נסמן...

Maier Newman, my Lord the faithful King; to whom the person who uses it is always understood to make his appeal.
Christ is himself called the Amen, & אמן, Rev. 1. 18. 14. because of the eternity of his nature, and the unchangeableness of his truth.
In later ages, it was placed at the end of all the books in the New Testament except the Acts, the epistle of James, and the third epistle of John, merely as the transcriber's attestation to their truth: and perhaps, it is sometimes to be understood as vouching to the fidelity of his own transcript.

The subscriptions to this Gospel, as well as to the preceding Gospels, are various in the different Versions and Manuscripts. The following are those which appear most worthy of being noticed.

"The most holy Gospel of the preaching of John the evangelist, which he spoke and proclaimed in the Greek language at Ephesus, is finished."—Syriac in Bib. Polyglot.

"With the assistance of the supreme God, the Gospel of St. John, the son of Zebedee, the beloved of the Lord, and the preacher of eternal life, is completed. And it is the conclusion of the four most holy and vivifying Gospels, by the blessing of God. Amen." Arabic in Bib. Polyglot.

"The four glorious Gospels, of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, are completed."—Persic in Bib. Polyglot.

Other subscriptions are as follow:

"The end of the holy Gospel of John—delivered thirty years—thirty-two years after the ascension of Christ—in the Isle of Patmos—by the Greek tongue, at Ephesus—under the reign of Domitian—written by John when he was an exile in Patmos—under the Emperor Trajan—and delivered in Ephesus by Gaius, the host of the apostles. John having returned from his exile in Patmos, composed his Gospel, being one hundred years of age, and lived to the age of one hundred and twenty."—Sulias.

It may be just necessary to inform the reader, that the most ancient MSS. have scarcely any subscription at all, and that there is no dependence to be placed on any thing of this kind, that is found in the others; most of the transcribers making conclusions according to their different fancies. See the concluding note of the preceding chapter; and see the preface to this Gospel, where other subjects relative to it are discussed.

HARMONIZED TABLE OF CONTENTS OF THE FOUR GOSPELS.

The following harmonized Table of Contents of the four Gospels, I have borrowed from Professor Michælis's Introduction to the New Testament, by Dr. Marsh, vol. iii. p. 40, &c. and think it will be of use to the reader in pointing out where the same transaction is mentioned by the evangelists; what they have in common, and what is peculiar to each. The arrangement of facts, as they occur in St. Matthew, is here generally followed; and the Evangelists omitted with his account. From this table, it will at once appear, how little St. John has, in common with the other three, except in the concluding part of his Gospel: and hence the propriety will be self-evident of considering his work in the light of a most important supplement to the Evangelical History.

A few directions, for the proper use of this Table, may be necessary: though it is, in general, so very plain, that there is little danger of its being misunderstood.

The sections, Nos. 1, 2, &c., are produced in a sort of chronological order; and, therefore, are found prefixed to those facts in the different evangelists, in the order of time in which those facts are supposed to have succeeded each other: e. g. Luke's preface is sect. 1st, Matthew having nothing of the kind. The genealogy under sect. 3d, Matt. i. &c. Birth of John, under sect. 3d, Luke; &c.—The arrangement of Matthew is seldom altered; but the consecutive facts are numbered as nearly as possible, in the supposed chronological order of their occurrence.

Besides this general harmonical Table of contents of the four Gospels, I have added three others. The first is a Synopsis of the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, and Luke, composed by Professor Griestrich, in order to show that the whole Gospel of Mark, twenty-four verses excepted, is contained nearly in the same words, in Matthew and Luke. The second, a Table of forty-two sections, whose transactions are as common to the three first evangelists. And the third, a Table representing those passages in our Lord's sermon on the mount, which are found either in word, or substance, in certain places of St. Luke's Gospel. These tables, it is hoped, will be of some real service by every serious and intelligent reader.

TABLE I.

- 1. Preface, Lk. i. 1-4; Jn. i. 1-14.
2. Genealogy of Christ, Mt. i. 1-17. Lk. iii. 23-38.
3. Birth of John, Lk. i. 5-25.
4. Birth of Christ announced to Mary, Lk. i. 26-38.
5. Mary's visit to Elizabeth, Lk. i. 39-56.
6. Joseph's dream, Mt. i. 18-24.
7. Birth of John, Lk. i. 57-80.
8. Birth of Christ, Mt. i. 25. Lk. i. 1-20.
9. Circumcision of Christ, Lk. i. 21.
10. Presentation of Christ in the temple, Lk. ii. 22-24.
11. Jesus sought and worshipped by the wise men; Flight into Egypt, and return; Massacre of the children of Bethlehem, Mt. ii. 1-13.
12. Education of Christ, and remarkable history of him in his first year at the feast of the Passover, Lk. ii. 41-52.
13. John preaches, Mt. iii. 1-12. Mk. i. 1-8. Lk. iii. 1-9.
14. Christ is baptized, Mt. iii. 13-17. Mk. i. 9-11. Lk. iii. 21, 22.
15. Christ is tempted, Mt. iv. 1-11. Mk. i. 13-15. Lk. iv. 1-13.
16. Remarkable addition made by St. John, relative to the testimonies in favour of Christ, by which he obtained his first disciples, who soon increased in numbers, Jn. i. 15-51.
17-20. History of Christ before the imprisonment of John.
21. Christ returns into Galilee, and turns water into wine at Cana, Jn. i. 1-11.
22. Goes to Jerusalem at the feast of the - pass-over, and drives the sellers out of the temple, Jn. ii. 13-22.

23. Instructs Nicodemus in the nature of the new birth, Jn. iii. 25-36.
24. Remains in Judea; additional testimony of John Baptist concerning him, Jn. iii. 23-36.
25. Returns after the imprisonment of John, through Samaria to Galilee: conversation with the Samaritan woman; many Samaritans believe in him, Jn. iv. 1-42.
26. Arrives in Galilee, calls several disciples and performs miracles, Matthew: v. 13-28. Mk. i. 14-20; Lk. iv. 14; Jn. iv. 43, 44.
27. Remarkable edition of a second miracle at Cana, by which the absent son of a nobleman is instantly restored to health, Jn. iv. 45-54.
28. Christ teaches in the synagogue at Nazareth, Lk. iv. 15-30.
29-30. History of a single day, and that a Sabbath.
31-32. Hist. of single day, and that a Sabbath.
33. Christ teaches in the synagogue at Capernaum, and heals a demoniac, Mk. i. 21-28. Lk. iv. 31-37.
34. Christ ascends a mountain, passes the night in prayer, and then chooses his apostles, Mk. iii. 13-19. Lk. vi. 12-16.
35. Christ delivers a discourse in which he condemns the morality of the Pharisees, and opposes to it a better morality, which he commissions his apostles to teach, Mt. iv. 23. v. 17. Lk. vi. 17-49.
36. Cleanses a leper, Mt. viii. 1-4. Mk. i. 40-43. Lk. v. 12-16.
37. Heals the servant of a Centurion, Mt. viii. 5-13. Lk. vii. 1-10.
38. Restores Peter's mother-in-law, and affirms, by his words, that several of his call persons, Mt. viii. 11-17. Mk. i. 29-34. Lk. vi. 38-41.
The day immediately following the preceding Sabbath.
39. In point of chronology, this does not belong to the present place, even according to St. Luke; but because it is so near to several of the persons, Mt. viii. 11-17. Mk. i. 29-34. Lk. vi. 38-41.
The day immediately following the preceding Sabbath.
40. In point of chronology, this does not belong to the present place, even according to St. Luke; but because it is so near to several of the persons, Mt. viii. 11-17. Mk. i. 29-34. Lk. vi. 38-41.
The day immediately following the preceding Sabbath.
41. Some critics and harmonists who agree in the main with Professor Michælis in this part of his history, dissent in a few particulars. Michælis thinks that all the transactions included from No. 25. to No. 30. happened on one day. And Professor Marsh states the argument thus:
No. 27. is the Sermon on the Mount, related by Matthew, chap. v. vi. and vii.
No. 28, 29, and 30. The cure of the leper—of Peter's mother-in-law—and other such persons at Capernaum, are all related by St. Matthew, chap. viii. 1-7, several of which took place on the same day on which the Sermon on the Mount was delivered.
No. 25. not mentioned by Matthew, took place according to Mark i. 25. 30. Luke iv. 23. on the same day as the cure of St. Peter's mother-in-law, No. 26.
No. 26. Christ's choice of the twelve apostles (not mentioned by St. Matthew) immediately preceded the Sermon on the Mount, according to Luke vi. 12.—consequently all the events in Nos. 25-30. happened on the same day.
Dr. Marsh allows the probability of Nos. 27-30. happening on the same day, but thinks Nos. 25 and 26. should not be referred to the same time.
"On these two articles," says he, "Matthew is totally silent, and therefore we have the authority only of St. Mark and St. Luke. But though St. Luke refers No. 25. to the same day as they refer No. 30. yet they both agree in referring No. 26. to a later day. We have no authority whatsoever, therefore, to refer No. 25. to that day assigned by our authors, and even if we refer No. 25. to that day, it ought not to occupy the place which he has allotted to it, but it should immediately precede No. 30. for the reason already assigned. On the other hand, if we refer No. 26. to that day, we must necessarily refer No. 25. to an earlier day; for on these two articles, St. Mark and St. Luke are our only guides, and they both agree in making a very distinct and circumstantial separation of them." [Part of the Introduction to Michælis's Introduction, vol. iii. part. ii. p. 69-71.]

- 41. Christ departs from Capernaum, Mt. v. 25-29. Lk. iv. 42-44.
42. Restores to life the young man at Nain, Lk. vii. 11-17.
43. Peter's copious draught of fishes; of which no traces are discoverable with respect to the time when it happened, Lk. v. 1-11.
44. Another history of a single day, which was likewise a Sabbath.
45. Christ defends his disciples who plucked ears of corn on the Sabbath, Mt. xii. 1-8. Mk. iii. 23-25. Lk. vi. 1-5.
46. Cures a withered hand, Mt. xii. 9-13. Mk. iii. 1-12. Lk. vi. 6-11.
47. Drives out a devil, and is accused of doing it by the assistance of Beelzebub, the prince of the devils; his answer, Mt. xii. 22-30. Mk. iii. 22-30. Lk. vi. 19-21.
48. Dines with a Pharisee: conversation at table, Lk. xi. 37. Lk. 12.
49. Preaches in parables, Mt. xiii. 1-52. Mk. iv. 1-34. Lk. 4-18.
50. Christ endeavours to retire from the multitude, and calls to the other side of the lake Genesareth. Account of one who offers himself to be a disciple of Christ; and of another, who requests permission to remain with his father, till his death, Mt. viii. 18-27. Mk. iv. 35-41. Luke viii. 22-25. ix. 37-62.
51. Drives out a devil who calls himself Legion, Mt. viii. 28-34. Mk. v. 1-20. Lk. vii. 25-32.
52. Heals a paralytic person, Mt. ix. 1-8. Mk. ii. 1-12. v. 21. Lk. v. 17-26.
53. Calls Matthew and Levi: dines with tax-gatherers, Mt. ix. 9-17. Mk. ii. 13-22. Lk. v. 27-29.
54. Heals a woman afflicted with an hemorrhage, and restores the daughter of Jairus, who was supposed to be dead, Mt. ix. 18-26. Mk. v. 23-34. Lk. viii. 40-56.
55. Restores two blind men to sight, Mt. ix. 27-31.
56. Restores a dumb man to his speech, Mt. ix. 32-34.
57. Sends out his twelve apostles, Mt. ix. 35. xi. 1. Mk. vi. 7-13. Lk. ix. 1-6. (but at a later period) the seventy disciples, Lk. x. 1-14.
58. Answers John, who inquires of him whether he is the Messiah, Mt. xi. 2-9. Lk. vii. 18-35.
59. Cures the cities in which he had performed the greatest part of his miracles, Mt. xi. 30-32.
60. Is appointed by a woman, who had led a sinful life, Lk. vii. 37-50.
61. Account of those who ministered to Christ on his travels, Lk. viii. 1-3.
62. Christ comes to Nazareth where he is disrespectfully treated, Matt. xiii. 54-58. Mk. vi. 1-6. Perhaps Lk. iv. 15-30. which I placed No. 24. belongs to this article, and contains the same history, but differently related.
63. Herod, who had beheaded John, is doubtful what he should believe of Christ, Mt. xiv. 1-12. Mk. vi. 14-29. Lk. ix. 7-9.
64. Account of several remarkable transactions and discourses at a great festival in Jerusalem, omitted by the other evangelists, Jn. v. entire.
65. 5,000 men fed with five loaves and two fishes, Mt. xiv. 13-21. Mk. vi. 30-56. Lk. ix. 10-17. Jn. vi. entire.
66. Discourses on washing of hands, clean, and unclean meats, and other Jewish doctrines, Mt. xv. 1-30. Mk. vii. 1-23.
67. Christ heals the daughter of a Canaanite woman, Mt. xv. 21-28. Mk. vii. 24-30.
68. Performs several miracles, Mt. xv. 29-31. Mk. vii. 31-37.
69. Feeds 4,000 men with seven loaves and a few small fishes, Mt. xv. 32-39. Mk. viii. 1-10.
70. Answers those who require a sign from heaven, Mt. xvi. 1-4. Mk. viii. 11-13.
71. I place the sending out of the seventy disciples in the same article with that of the twelve apostles, merely because the two facts resemble each other; for we have no knowledge of the precise period in which the former event happened, and the evangelists themselves have often assigned a similar plan."

§ 60. Commands his disciples to beware of the leaven of the Pharisees, which command they misunderstand, Mt. xvi. 5-12. Mk. viii. 14-21.

§ 60. Restores a blind man to sight, Mk. viii. 23-26.

§ 61. Asks his disciples whom they suppose him to be. Peter answers, that he is the Messiah, which Jesus confirms, Mt. xvi. 13-20. Mk. viii. 27-30. Lk. ix. 18-21. Mk. viii. 14-21.

§ 62. Foretells his death on the cross, Mt. xvi. 21-28. Mk. viii. 31. Lk. ix. 21-27.

§ 63. Is transfigured on a lofty mountain beyond the Jordan, Mt. xvii. 1-13. Mk. ix. 2-13. Lk. ix. 28-36.

§ 64. Cures a lunatic, Mt. xvii. 14-21. Mk. ix. 14-29. Lk. ix. 37-42.

§ 65. Again foretells his approaching sufferings, Mt. xvii. 22, 23. Mk. ix. 30-32. Lk. ix. 43-45.

§ 66. Pays the half shekel as tribute for the service of the temple, Mt. xxii. 24-27.

§ 67. His discourses occasioned by the dispute, who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven, Mt. xviii. 1-9. Mk. ix. 33-50. Lk. ix. 46-50 xvii. 1-4.

§ 68. Answers Peter's question how often he must forgive, Mt. xviii. 21-35.

§ 69-83. Single scattered accounts, recorded only by St. Luke, some of which belong to the three or four last months of the life of Christ; others to an earlier period, and which are not arranged according to the order of time.

§ 69. Christ is refused the offices of hospitality by the Samaritans, Lk. ix. 51-56.

§ 70. Answers the question, who is our neighbour, Lk. x. 25-37.

§ 71. Visits Martha a second time: his discourse relative to her too anxious preparations for table, Lk. x. 38-42.

§ 72. Teaches his disciples to pray, Lk. xi. 1-13.

§ 73. Discourses occasioned by the request which a person present had made to Christ, that he would command his brother to divide with him his inheritance, Lk. xi. 13-19.

§ 74. Discourses occasioned by Pilate's having put to death several Galileans, and mingled their blood with their sacrifices, Lk. xiii. 1-9.

§ 75. Christ cures on the Sabbath day, an infirm woman, who was unable to walk upright, Lk. xiii. 10-22.

§ 76. Answers the question, whether few or many will be saved, Lk. xiii. 23-30.

§ 77. Replies to those who desire him to retire because Herod sought to put him to death, Lk. xiii. 31-35.

§ 78. Dines with a Pharisee on the Sabbath day. His actions and discourses on that occasion, Luke xiv. entire.

§ 79. Dines with publicans, and justifies his conduct to those who censure him. Acceptation of the Gentiles, Lk. xv. entire.

§ 80. On this occasion he instructs his disciples in the true use of riches, and defends his doctrine against the Pharisees, who deride it, Lk. xvi. entire.

§ 81. His discourse on the extraordinary effects of faith, Lk. xvii. 5-10.

§ 82. Heals ten lepers, of whom the Samaritan alone returns thanks, Lk. xvii. 11-19.

§ 83. Answers the question, when the kingdom of God should come, Lk. xvii. 20. xviii. 14.

§ 84. Answers the question relative to divorces, Mt. x. 1-12. Mk. x. 1-12.

§ 85. Takes little children into his arms and blesses them; and on this occasion reproves his disciples, Mt. xv. 13-15. Mark x. 13-16. Lk. xviii. 15-17.

§ 86. Answers a rich young man who asked him how he should obtain eternal life; Christ's important discourse on this occasion with his disciples, Mt. xix. 16. xx. 16. Mk. x. 17-31. Lk. xviii. 18, 20.

§ 87. Discourses again on his approaching death, Mt. xx. 17-19. Mk. x. 32-34. Lk. xviii. 31-34.

§ 88. The mother of the sons of Zebedee requests for them the first rank in the kingdom of Christ, Christ's answer, Mt. xx. 20-28. Mk. x. 35-43.

§ 89-92. Supplement of several events and discourses omitted by the three first evangelists, which took place especially at Jerusalem, and which belong to the period between No. 83. and No. 88.

§ 89. Christ's actions and discourses at Jerusalem, at a feast of tabernacles, Jn. vii. 1. x. 21.

§ 90. Discourses at Jerusalem at the festival of the dedication of the temple, Jn. x. 22-42.

§ 91. Christ raises Lazarus from the dead, Jn. xi. 1-46.

§ 92. Returns to Ephraim, Jn. xi. 54.

§ 93. Restores two blind men to sight, Mt. xx. 29-34. Mk. x. 46-52. Lk. xviii. 35-43.

§ 94. Visits Zaccheus, Luke xix. 1-10.

§ 95. Describes in a parable the Jews who rejected him, Lk. xix. 11-27.

§ 96. Christ is anointed at Bethany by Mary: he defends this action against the unjust censure of his disciples, and particularly of Judas Iscariot, who forms the resolution to betray him, Mt. xxvi. 6-12. Mk. xiv. 3-9. Jn. xi. 1-8.

§ 97. Christ's entry into Jerusalem, Mt. xxi. 1-11. Mk. xi. 1-10. Lk. xix. 28-44. Jn. xii. 12-19.

§ 98. He goes as Lord into the temple, and again drives out the sellers; he cures a fig-tree, Mt. xxi. 12-20. Mk. xi. 11-14. Lk. xix. 45-48.

§ 99. Answers the question, by what power he does this, Mt. xxi. 23-26. Mk. xi. 27. xii. 12. Lk. xx. 1-19.

§ 100. Parable of the neglected festival of a king, Mt. xxii. 1-14.

§ 101. Answer to the question relative to the tribute money, Mt. xxii. 15-22. Mk. xii. 13-17. Lk. xx. 20-26.

§ 102. Answers to the objection made by the Sadducees to the resurrection of the dead, Mt. xxiii. 29-33. Mk. xii. 18-27. Lk. xx. 27-40.

§ 103. Answer to the question, which is the great commandment of the law? Mt. xxiii. 34-40. Mk. xii. 28-34.

§ 104. The question proposed, whose son the Messiah is? Mt. xxiii. 41-46. Mk. xii. 35-37. Lk. xx. 41-44.

§ 105. Discourses against the Pharisees, Mt. xxiii. entire. Mk. xii. 28-40. Lk. xx. 45-47.

§ 106. Small alms-offering of a widow commended, Mk. xii. 41-44. Lk. xii. 1-4.

§ 107. Prophecy of the destruction of Jerusalem, Mt. xxiv. entire. Mk. xiii. entire. Lk. xxi. 5-38.

§ 108. Addition to the preceding prophecy found only in the Gospel of St. Mark, xxi. 1-30.

§ 109. Christ answers the question relative to the last judgment, Mt. xxv. 31-46.

§ 110. After the preceding discourses were ended, he again foretells his approaching death, Mt. xxvi. 2.

§ 111. Of the Greeks who wished to see Jesus: Christ's discourse on this occasion, and the answer in Hebrew, Jn. xii. 20-26.

§ 112. Discourse on the infidelity of the Jews after the performance of so many miracles, Jn. xii. 37-50.

§ 113. Judas Iscariot promises to betray Christ, and receives 30 pieces of silver, Mt. xxvi. 3-5. Mk. xiv. 10-11. Lk. xxi. 3-5.

§ 114. Preparation for the feast of the pass-over, Mt. xxvi. 17-19. Mk. xiv. 12-16. Lk. xxii. 7-14. Jn. xiii. 1.

§ 115. Christ before he eats the feast of the pass-over, washes the feet of his disciples, Jn. xiii. 1-20.

§ 116. He sits down to table and speaks of his betrayer, Mt. xxvi. 20-25. Mk. xiv. 17-21. Lk. xxii. 14.

§ 117. Presents to his apostles the cup of the pass-over; his discourse on that occasion, Lk. xxii. 15-18.

§ 118. Institutes the Holy Supper, Mt. xxvi. 26-29. Mark xiv. 22-25. Lk. xxii. 19, 20.

§ 119. After supper he speaks again of his betrayer, Lk. xxii. 21-23. Jn. xiii. 21-30.

§ 120. Another dispute among the apostles who should be the greatest in the kingdom of God, Lk. xxii. 24-30.

§ 121. Christ goes into the garden of Gethsemane, and foretells to Peter that he would betray him, Mt. xxvi. 30-35. Mk. xiv. 26-31. Lk. xxii. 31-38.

§ 122. His discourse on the way, Jn. xiii. 31. xvii. 25.

§ 123. Prayer that the cup might be removed from him, Mt. xxvi. 36-46. Mk. xiv. 29-42. Lk. xxii. 39-46.

§ 124. Christ is taken into custody, Mt. xxvi. 47-56. Mk. xiv. 43-52. Lk. xxii. 47-53. Jn. xiii. 1-12.

§ 125. Brought before the sanhedrim, and condemned; is denied by Peter, Mt. xxvi. 57-75. Mk. xiv. 53-72. Lk. xxii. 54-71. Jn. xiii. 13-28.

§ 126. Christ is led before Pilate; Judas hangs himself, Mt. xxvii. 1-10. Mk. xv. 1. Lk. xxiii. 1.

§ 127. Christ is accused before Pilate, Mt. xxvii. 11-24. Mk. xv. 2-14. Lk. xxiii. 2-22. Jn. xviii. 29. xix. 12.

§ 128. Is condemned to death, Mt. xxvii. 24-31. Mk. xv. 15-20. Lk. xxiii. 23-25. Jn. xix. 13-16.

§ 129. And crucified, Mt. xxvii. 26-38. Mk. xv. 21-28. Lk. xxiii. 26-35. Jn. xix. 17-24.

§ 130. Is reviled on the cross, Mt. xxvii. 39-49. Mk. xv. 29-36. Lk. xxiii. 36-43.

§ 131. Supplement of several facts not recorded by the other evangelists, Jn. xix. 25-30.

§ 132. Extraordinary events at the death of Christ, Mt. xxvii. 50-54. Mk. xv. 38-41. Lk. xxiii. 44-49.

§ 133. Christ on examination, is found to be already dead, and is moreover pierced with a spear, Mt. xxvii. 51-57. Mk. xv. 33-34. Lk. xxiii. 55-56. Mk. xv. 43-47. Luke xxiii. 50-55. Jn. xix. 38-42.

§ 134. Appointment of a guard at his sepulchre, Mt. xxvii. 62-66.

§ 135. The women purchase spices to embalm the body of Christ, Mt. xxvii. 1. Lk. xxiii. 56.

§ 136. Burial of Christ, Mt. xxvii. 55-61. Mk. xv. 42-47. Luke xxiii. 50-55. Jn. xix. 38-42.

§ 137. The guards bring the account to the chief priests, and are bribed to say that the disciples had stolen the body, Mt. xxvii. 11-15.

§ 138. Further accounts of the resurrection brought by Mary Magdalene, who sees Christ alone, and is commanded to report it to the other women, Mt. xxvii. 16-19. Mk. xvi. 1-8. Lk. xxiv. 1-10.

§ 139. The guards bring the account to the chief priests, and are bribed to say that the disciples had stolen the body, Mt. xxvii. 11-15.

§ 140. Christ shows himself alive to the two disciples who were going to Emmaus, Mk. xvi. 12, 13. Lk. xxiv. 13-35.

§ 141. Christ shows himself to the apostles, and to several disciples who were with them, Mk. xvi. 14-18. Lk. xxiv. 36-49. Jn. xxi. 19-23.

§ 142. Eight days after, he shows himself to the eleven apostles, Thomas likewise being then present, Jn. xx. 24-31.

§ 143. Christ shows himself to two disciples, and five apostles at the sea of Tiberias. His remarkable discourse with Peter and John, Jn. xxi. entire.

§ 144. Christ shows himself in Galilee to all his disciples, on a mountain where Christ had appointed them, Mt. xxviii. 16-20.

TABLE II.

Professor Griestach, who believed that St. Mark constructed his Gospel from those of Matthew and Luke, has drawn up a Harmony of these three evangelists, in which he shows that 24 verses excepted, the whole of St. Mark's Gospel is contained in those of St. Matthew and St. Luke. His whole scheme in detail, may be seen in his Synopsis Evangelicæ. Matt. Marc. et Lucae, 8vo. Hal. 1776. From his Commentationes Theologicæ Dr. Marsh gives the following Table, which brings the whole into the narrowest compass. Let it be observed that the middle column contains the whole of St. Mark's Gospel; those to the right and left contain the portions of St. Matthew's Gospel and St. Luke's, which correspond to the stated portions of the Gospel according to St. Mark.

MATTHEW.	MARK.	LUKE.
iii. 1-4. 22.	i. 1-29.	iv. 21-44.
	40. iii. 6.	v. 12. vi. 11.
xii. 15, 16.	iii. 7-12.	va. 12-14.
22, 23.	13, 19.	v. 21.
24-32.	14-20.	22-30.
33-50.	21-23.	31-36.
xvi. 1-23.	iv. 1-20.	viii. 15-18.
24-30.	21-25.
31, 32.	26-29.
33, 34.	30-32.
35.	33, 34.
	35-41.	32-35.
	v. 1-13.	36-56.
53-58.	vi. 1-6.
	7-13.	ix. 1-6.
xiv. 1, 2.	14-16.	7-9.
3-12.	17-23.
	24, 25.	15.
	xviii. 12-21.	16-17.
	22-xvii. 12.
	13-15.
xvi. 13-xviii. 9.	16-18.	18-20.
xix. 1-12.	19-xii. 37.	xviii. 15-xx. 44.
13-xxiii. 1.	xiii. 28-44.	xx. 45-xxii. 4.
	xiv. 1-52.	xxi. 52-xxv.
xxiv. 1-36.	33-37.
xxv. 1-xxviii. 8.	xiv. 1-xvi. 8.
	xvii. 9.	xxv. 10-25.
	10-13.	26-43.
	14.
xxviii. 18-20.	15-18.	50, 51.
	19.
	20.

See Dr. Marsh's Origin of the three first Gospels, p. 180.

TABLE III.

The following 42 sections, extracted from Eichorn by Dr. Marsh, contain such transactions as are common to the three former evangelists: St. Mark and St. Luke having precisely the same arrangement. From sections 19 to the end, St. Matthew's arrangement is the same with that of Mark and Luke; but he has arranged the subjects contained in the 18 first sections in a different manner.

§ 1. John the Baptist, Mk. 1-8. Lk. iii. 1-18. Mt. iii. 1-12.

§ 2. Baptism of Christ, Mark 1. 9-11. Lk. iii. 21, 22. Mt. iii. 13-17.

§ 3. Temptation of Christ, Mark 1. 12, 13. Lk. iv. 1-12. Mt. iv. 1-11.

§ 4. Christ's return to Galilee, and arrival at Capernaum, Mark 1. 14. Lk. iv. 14. Mt. iv. 12, 13.

§ 5. Cure of Peter's mother-in-law, Mk. 1. 29-34. Lk. iv. 38-41. Mt. viii. 14-17.

§ 6. Cure of a leper, Mk. 1. 40-45. Lk. v. 12-16. Mt. viii. 2-4.

§ 7. Cure of a person afflicted with the palsy, Mk. ii. 1-12. Lk. v. 17-26. Mt. ix. 1-8.

§ 8. Call of St. Matthew, Mk. ii. 13-12. Lk. v. 27-29. Mt. ix. 9-17.

§ 9. Christ goes with his disciples through the corn-fields, Mk. ii. 23. Lk. vi. 1-5. Mt. xii. 1-8.

§ 10. Cure of a withered hand, Mk. iii. 1-4. Mt. ix. 31. Lk. v. 17-26. Mt. ix. 1-8.

§ 11. Preparation for the sermon on the mount, Mk. iii. 7-19. Lk. vi. 12-19. Mt. vi. 23-25.

§ 12. Confutation of the opinion that Christ casts out devils by the assistance of fleetze-sub. Mk. iii. 30-30. Mt. xli. 24-45. (perhaps formerly Luke also)

§ 12. Arrival of the mother and brethren of Christ. Mt. iii. 31-33. Lk. viii. 19-21. Mt. xli. 46-50. Mt. xli. 4-18. Mt. xlii. 1-24.

§ 13. Parable of the sower. Mt. x. 1-9. Lk. vii. 4-18. Mt. xlii. 1-24.

§ 14. Christ crosses the sea, and undergoes a storm. Mt. ix. 25-41. Lk. viii. 23-25. Mt. viii. 18-17.

§ 15. Transactions in the country of the Gadarenes. Mt. v. 20. Lk. viii. 26-29. Mt. viii. 29-24.

§ 17. The daughter of Jairus restored to life. Mt. v. 21-43. Lk. viii. 40-56. Mt. ix. 18-28.

§ 18. Christ sends out the twelve apostles. Mt. xi. 7-13. Lk. ix. 1-4. Mt. x. 1-42.

§ 19. The fame of Christ reaches the court of Herod. Mt. xiv. 1-12. Mk. vi. 14-29. Lk. ix. 7-9.

§ 20. Five thousand men fed. Mt. xiv. 13-21. Mt. vi. 30-44. Lk. ix. 10-17.

§ 21. Acknowledgment of the apostles that Christ is the Messiah. Mt. xvi. 13-28. Mk. viii. 27-42. Lk. ix. 18-27.

§ 22. Transfiguration of Christ on the mount. Mt. xvii. 1-10. Mk. ix. 2-9. Lk. ix. 30-38.

§ 23. Christ cures a demoniac whom his disciples were unable to cure. Mt. xvii. 14-21. Mt. ix. 14-22. Lk. ix. 37-43.

§ 24. Christ foretells his death. Mt. xvii. 22. Mt. xix. 30-32. Lk. ix. 45-48.

§ 25. Dispute among the disciples about precedence. Mt. xviii. 1-5. Mk. ix. 33-37. Lk. ix. 46-48.

§ 26. Christ blesses children who are brought to him, and answers the question by what means salvation is to be obtained? Mt. xix. 13-30. Mk. x. 13-18. Lk. xviii. 15-30.

§ 27. Christ again foretells his death. Mt. xxi. 17-19. Mk. x. 32-34. Lk. xviii. 31-34.

§ 28. Blind men at Jericho restored to sight. Mt. xxi. 33-34. Mk. x. 46-52. Lk. xviii. 35-42.

§ 29. Christ's public entry into Jerusalem, and his trial. Mt. xxi. 1-10. Lk. xix. 28-44.

§ 30. Christ expels the buyers and sellers from the temple. Mt. xxi. 12-14. Mk. xi. 15-17. Lk. xix. 45, 46.

§ 31. Christ called to account by the chief priests and elders for teaching publicly in the temple; he answers them, and then delivers a parable. Mt. xxi. 27-37. Mk. xxi. 27. Mt. xxi. 33-46. Lk. xxi. 29-34.

§ 32. On the tribute to Cæsar, and marriage with a brother's widow. Mt. xxiii. 15-34. Mk. xli. 12-34. Lk. x. 20-40.

§ 33. Christ's discourse with the Pharisees relative to the Messiah being called Lord, by David. Mt. xxiii. 41-46. Mk. xii. 35-37. Lk. xx. 41-44.

§ 34. The Pharisees censured by Christ. Mt. xxiii. 1, &c. Mk. xli. 35-40. Lk. x. 45-47.

§ 35. Christ foretells the destruction of Jerusalem. Mt. xxiv. 1-34. Mk. xiii. 1-36. Lk. xxi. 5-36.

§ 36. Preliminary to the account of Christ's passion. Mt. xxvi. 1-5. Mk. xiv. 1, 2. Lk. xxii. 1, 2.

§ 37. Bribery of Judas, and the celebration of the pass-over. Mt. xxvi. 14-29. Mk. xiv. 10-26. Lk. xxii. 9-20.

§ 38. Christ goes to the mount of Olives. Mt. xxvi. 30-46. Mk. xiv. 32-42. Lk. xxii. 39-46.

§ 39. Is seized by a guard of the chief priests. Mt. xxvi. 47-55. Mk. xiv. 43-44. Lk. xxii. 47-55.

§ 40. Christ's denial, &c. Mt. xxvi. 69-xxvii. 18. Mk. xiv. 66-xv. 10. Lk. xxii. 56-xxiii. 17.

§ 41. The crucifixion and death of Christ. Mt. xxvii. 20-66. Mk. xv. 11-47. Lk. xxiii. 18-56.

§ 42. The resurrection. Mt. xxviii. 1, &c. Mk. xvi. 1, &c. Lk. xxiv. 1, &c.

TABLE IV.

The following Table represents the passages in our Lord's sermon on the mount, contained in Matt. v. vi. and vii. which are found in Luke, or in substance in the Gospel according to Luke, in the parallel passages here noted in a collateral column.

MATT.		LUKE		MATT.		LUKE
25, 26.	xii. 59, 59.	vii. 1-8.	vii. 37-46.
27.	xv. 18.	7-11.	xi. 9-13
28-32.	vi. 29, 30.	12.	vi. 21.
33.	27, 28.	13.	xii. 24.
34.	25.	14-21.	vi. 43-48.
35, 36.	22, 23.	22, 23.	xiii. 25-27.
37.	24.	24-27.	vi. 47-48.

See Dr. Marsh's Origin of the three first Gospels, p. 400.

KEY TO SECTIONS OF TABLE I.

Exhibiting what sections the evangelists have in common with each other — 1. Luke and John common with Matt. & Luke sec. 2; sections 3, 4, 6 are under Luke only, the other evangelists having nothing to correspond; and so of the rest. See explanatory remarks at the commencement of the table, p. 385.

MATT.		LUKE		MATT.		LUKE
John	Matt.	John	Matt.	John	Matt.	John	Matt.
94	1	50	21	60	60	115	117
95	3	33	32	61	61	99	119
96	4	34	33	62	62	91	110
97	5	35	34	63	63	102	121
98	6	36	35	64	64	93	112
99	7	37	36	65	65	94	113
100	8	38	37	66	66	95	114
101	9	39	38	67	67	96	115
102	10	40	39	68	68	97	116
103	11	41	40	69	69	98	117
104	12	42	41	70	70	99	118
105	13	43	42	71	71	100	119
106	14	44	43	72	72	101	120
107	15	45	44	73	73	102	121
108	16	46	45	74	74	103	122
109	17	47	46	75	75	104	123
110	18	48	47	76	76	105	124
111	19	49	48	77	77	106	125
112	20	50	49	78	78	107	126
113	21	51	50	79	79	108	127
114	22	52	51	80	80	109	128
115	23	53	52	81	81	110	129
116	24	54	53	82	82	111	130
117	25	55	54	83	83	112	131
118	26	56	55	84	84	113	132
119	27	57	56	85	85	114	133
120	28	58	57	86	86	115	134
121	29	59	58	87	87	116	135
122	30	60	59	88	88	117	136
123	31	61	60	89	89	118	137
124	32	62	61	90	90	119	138
125	33	63	62	91	91	120	139
126	34	64	63	92	92	121	140
127	35	65	64	93	93	122	141
128	36	66	65	94	94	123	142
129	37	67	66	95	95	124	143
130	38	68	67	96	96	125	144
131	39	69	68	97	97	126	145
132	40	70	69	98	98	127	146
133	41	71	70	99	99	128	147
134	42	72	71	100	100	129	148
135	43	73	72	101	101	130	149
136	44	74	73	102	102	131	150
137	45	75	74	103	103	132	151
138	46	76	75	104	104	133	152
139	47	77	76	105	105	134	153
140	48	78	77	106	106	135	154
141	49	79	78	107	107	136	155
142	50	80	79	108	108	137	156
143	51	81	80	109	109	138	157
144	52	82	81	110	110	139	158
145	53	83	82	111	111	140	159
146	54	84	83	112	112	141	160
147	55	85	84	113	113	142	161
148	56	86	85	114	114	143	162
149	57	87	86	115	115	144	163
150	58	88	87	116	116	145	164

PREFACE TO THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

The Book of the ACTS OF THE APOSTLES forms the fifth, and last, of the historical books of the New Testament. And on this account, it has been generally placed at the end of the four Gospels: though in several MSS. and Versions, it is found at the end of St. Paul's Epistles, as many circumstances in them, are referred to by the narrative contained in this book; which is carried down almost to the apostle's death.

This book has had a variety of names; Ἱστορίαι τῶν Ἀποστόλων, the Res gestæ, Acts or Transactions of the Apostles, is the title it bears in the Codex Bezae. Πράξεις τῶν Ἁγίων Ἀποστόλων, The Acts of the Holy Apostles, is its title in the Codex Alexandrinus, and several others; as well as in several of the ancient Versions, and in the Greek and Latin Fathers. One or other form of the above title, is followed by almost all the editors of the Greek Testament, and translators and commentators in general. By some it has been reckoned a fifth Gospel; and by Œcumenius it is termed, The Gospel of the Holy Spirit; and by St. Chrysostom, To Βαβίλιον, Ἀνοδείξις ἀνοσώτων, The Book, The demonstration of the Resurrection. These two last characters are peculiarly descriptive of its contents. All the promises which Christ gave of the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit, are shown here to have been fulfilled in the most eminent manner; and by the effusion of the Holy Spirit, the resurrection of our blessed Lord has been fully demonstrated. The calling of the Gentiles, is another grand point, which is here revealed and illustrated. This miracle of miracles, as one terms it, which had been so frequently foretold by the prophets and by Christ himself, is here exhibited; and by this grand act of the power and goodness of God, the Christian church has been founded; and thus the tabernacle and kingdom of God have been immutably established among men. It is truly a fifth Gospel, as it contains the glad tidings of peace and salvation to the whole Gentile world.

All antiquity is unanimous in ascribing this book to St. Luke as the author; and from the commencement of it, we see plainly that it can be attributed to no other; and it seems plain that St. Luke intended it as a continuation of his Gospel, being dedicated to Theophilus, to whom he had dedicated the former; and to which, in the introduction to this, he expressly refers: indeed he has taken up the narrative in this book, precisely in the place where he had dropped it in the other; The former treatise have I made, O Theophilus, of all that Jesus began both to do and teach, until the day in which he was taken up, &c. and from this we may form a safe conjecture, that the two books were written at no greater a distance from each other, than the time of the last occurrence recorded in this book. Some have supposed that this book was written from Alexandria; but this does not appear to be probable. The conjecture of Michaelis is much more likely, viz. that it was written from Rome; at which place St. Luke mentions his arrival in company with St. Paul, shortly before the close of the book. See Acta xxviii. 16.

Though the time in which the book of the Acts was written, is not recorded, yet the same writer observes, that as it is continued to the end of the second year of St. Paul's imprisonment, it could not have been written before the year 63; and had it been written after that year, it is reasonable to conclude that it would have related some farther particulars relative to St. Paul; or would at least have mentioned the event of his imprisonment, in which the reader is so much interested. This argument seems conclusive, in reference to the date of this book.

St. Luke's long attendance upon St. Paul, and his having been himself an eye-witness to many of the facts which he has recorded, independently of his divine inspiration, render him a most respectable and credible historian. His medical knowledge, for he is allowed to have been a physician, enabled him, as Professor Michaelis has properly observed, both to form a proper judgment of the miraculous cures which were performed by St. Paul, and to give an account and authentic detail of them. It is worthy also of observation, that St. Luke himself does not appear to have possessed the gift of miraculous healing. Though there can be no doubt, that he was with St. Paul when shipwrecked at Malta, yet he was not concerned in healing the father of Publius the governor; nor of the other sick persons mentioned Acta xxviii. 8, 9. These were all healed by the prayers of St. Paul, and the imposition of his hands; and consequently miraculously; nor do we find any evidence that St. Luke was ever employed in this way. This is another proof of the wisdom of God: had the physician been employed to work miracles of healing, the excellence of the power would have been attributed to the skill of the man, and not to the power of his Maker.

The Acts of the Apostles has been generally considered in the light of a Church History, and consequently, the first ecclesiastical history on record. But Professor Michaelis very properly contends that it cannot have been intended as a general history of the Christian church; even for the period of time it embraces, as it passes by all the transactions of the church at Jerusalem after the conversion of St. Paul; the propagation of Christianity in Egypt; Paul's journey into Arabia; the state of Christianity at Babylon (1 Pet. v. 13); the foundation of the Christian church at Rome; several of St. Paul's voyages; his thrice suffering shipwreck, &c. &c. See more particulars in Lardner and Michaelis.

The object of St. Luke appears to have been twofold, 1. To relate in what manner the gifts of the Holy Spirit were communicated on the day of pentecost, and the subsequent miracles performed by the apostles, by which the truth of Christianity was confirmed. 2. To deliver such accounts as proved the claim of the Gentiles to admission into the church of Christ; a claim disputed by the Jews, especially at the time when the Acts of the Apostles were written. Hence we see the reason why he relates, chap. viii. the conversion of the Samaritans; and chap. x. xi. the story of Cornelius, and the determination of the council in Jerusalem, relative to the Levitical law; and for the same reason he is more diffuse in his account of St. Paul's conversion, and his preaching to the Gentiles, than he is on any other subject. In such a restricted manner has St. Luke compiled his history, that Michaelis is of opinion, that it was the intention of this apostle to record only those facts which he had either seen himself, or heard from eye-witnesses, Introduc. vol. v. p. 385, &c.

The book of the Acts has been uniformly and universally received by the Christian church in all places and ages: it is mentioned and quoted by almost every Christian writer, and its authenticity and importance universally admitted. Arator, a subdeacon in the church at Rome in the sixth century, turned it into verse. In ancient times, personal history and important transactions, in most nations, were generally thus preserved; as the facts through the medium of verses could be the more easily committed to memory.

St. Luke's narration bears every evidence of truth and authenticity. It is not a made up history. The language and manner of every speaker are different: and the same speaker is different in his manner, according to the audience he addresses. The speeches of Stephen, Peter, Cornelius, Tertullus, and Paul, are all different, and such as we might naturally expect from the characters in question, and the circumstances in which they were at the time of speaking. St. Paul's speeches are also suited to the occasion, and to the persons before whom he spoke. When his audience was heathens, though he kept the same end steadily in view, yet how different is his mode of address from that used when before a Jewish audience. Several of these peculiarities, which constitute a strong evidence of the authenticity of the work, shall be pointed out in the notes. See some good remarks on this head, in Michaelis's Introduction, ubi supra.

As St. Luke has not annexed any date to the transactions he records, it is not a very easy matter to adjust the chronology of the Acts; but, as in some places he refers to political facts, the exact times of which are well-known, the dates of several transactions in his narrative may be settled with considerable accuracy. It is well-known, for instance, that the famine mentioned chap. xi. 29, 30, happened in the fourth year of the emperor Claudius, which answers to the forty-fourth of the Christian era. From facts of this nature, dates may be derived with considerable accuracy: all such dates are carefully noted, as in the preceding parts of the Commentary; and the chronology is adjusted in the best manner possible. In some cases conjecture and probability are the only lights by which this obscure passage can be illuminated. The dates of the commencement and the end of the books are tolerably certain; as the work certainly begins with the twenty-ninth year of the Christian era, chap. i. and ii. and ends probably with the sixty-third, chap. xviii. 30.

In the book of the Acts we see how the church of Christ was formed and settled. The apostles simply proclaim the truth of God relative to the passion, death, resurrection, and ascension of Christ; and God accompanies their testimony with the demonstration of his Spirit. What was the consequence? Thousands acknowledge the truth, embrace Christianity, and openly profess it at the most imminent risk of their lives. The change is not a change of merely one religious sentiment or mode of worship for another; but a change of tempera, passions, prospects, and moral conduct. All before was earthly, or animal, or devilish: or all these together: but now all is holy, spiritual, and divine—the heavenly influence becomes extended, and nations are born unto God. And how was all this brought about? Not by might nor power; nor by the sword, nor by secular authority; not through worldly motives and prospects; not by pious frauds or cunning craftiness; not by the force of persuasive eloquence; in a word, by nothing but the sole influence of truth itself, attested to the heart by the power of the Holy Ghost. Wherever religious frauds and secular influence have been used to found or support a church, professing itself to be Christian, there, we may rest assured, is the fullest evidence that that church is wholly antichristian: and where such a church, possessing secular power, has endeavoured to support itself by persecution, and persecution unto privation of goods, of liberty, and of life, it not only shows itself to be antichristian, but also diabolic. The religion of Christ stands in no need either of human cunning or power. It is the religion of God, and is to be propagated by his power: this the book of the Acts fully shows; and in it we find the true model, after which every Christian church should be builded. As far as any church can show that it has followed this model, so far it is holy and apostolic. And when all churches or congregations of people, professing Christianity, shall be founded and regulated according to the doctrines and disciplines laid down in the book of the Acts of the Apostles, then the aggregate body may be justly called The Holy Apostolic, and Catholic Church.

The simplicity of the primitive Christian worship, as laid down in the book of the Acts, is worthy of particular notice and admiration. Here are no expensive ceremonies; no apparatus calculated merely to impress the senses, and produce emotions in the animal system. "to help," as has been foolishly said, "the spirit of devotion." The heart is the subject in which this spirit of devotion is kindled; and the Spirit of God alone is the agent that communicates and maintains the celestial fire; and God, who knows and searches that heart, is the object of its adoration, and the only source whence it expects the grace that pardons, sanctifies, and renders it happy. No strange fire can be brought to this altar; for the God of the Christians can be worshipped only in spirit and truth: the truth revealed, directing the worship; and the Spirit given, applying that truth, and giving life and energy to every faculty and power. Thus God was worshipped in his own way, and through his own power: every religious act thus performed, was acceptable to him: the praises of his followers rose up as incense before the throne, and their prayers were heard and answered. As they had but one God, so they had but one Mediator between God and man, the Lord Jesus Christ. They received him as the gift of God's eternal love; sought and found redemption in his blood; and in a holy and useful life, showed forth the virtues of him who had called them from darkness into his marvellous light: for no profession of faith was then considered of any worth, that was not supported by that love to God and man, which is the fulfilling of the law, which is the life and soul of obedience to the divine testimonies, and the ceaseless spring of benevolence and humanity. This is the religion of Jesus Christ, as laid down and exemplified in this blessed book.

"Ye different sects who all declare,
Lo! Christ is here, and Christ is there,
Your stronger proofs divinely give,
And show me where the Christians live."

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

[For Chronological Eras, see at the end of the Acts.]

CHAPTER I.

St. Luke's prologue, containing a repetition of Christ's history from his passion till his ascension, 1—9. Remarkable circumstances in the ascension, 10, 11. The return of the disciples to Jerusalem, and their employment there, 12—14. Peter's discourse concerning the death of Judas Iscariot, 15—20, and the necessity of choosing another apostle in his place 21, 22. Barnabas and Matthias being set apart by prayer, the apostles having given their votes, Matthias is chosen to succeed Judas, 23—25. [A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCII. 1.]

THE former treatise have I made, O Theophilus, of all that Jesus began both to do and teach,

2<sup>d</sup> Until the day in which he was taken up, after that he, e Gen. 2. 3. Matt. 12. 1. Luke 1. 3 & 11. 29.—5 Mark 16. 19. Luke 9. 51. & 24. 51. Verse 9. 1 Tim. 3. 16.

NOTES.—Verse 1. The former treatise] The Gospel according to Luke, which is here most evidently intended.

O Theophilus] See the note on Luke i. 3. To do and teach] These two words comprise his miracles and sermons. This introduction seems to intimate, that as he had already in his Gospel given an account of the life and actions of our Lord: so in this second treatise, he was about to give an account of the deeds and acts of some of the chief apostles, such as Peter and Paul.

2. After that he, through the Holy Ghost, &c.] This clause has been variously translated: the simple meaning seems to be this: that Christ communicated the Holy Spirit to his disciples after his resurrection, as he had not done before. In Luke xxiv. 45. it is said, that he opened their understanding, that they might understand the Scriptures; and in John xx. 22. that he breathed on them, and said, Receive ye the Holy through the Holy Ghost, <sup>e</sup> had given commandments unto the apostles whom he had chosen:

3<sup>d</sup> To whom also he showed himself alive after his passion e Matt. 28. 19. Mark 16. 15. John 20. 21. Ch. 10. 41. et.—d Mark 16. 14. Luke 24. 36. John. 8. 19. 22. & 21. 1, 14. 1 Cor. 10. 8.

Ghost. Previously to this, we may suppose, that the disciples were only on particular occasions made partakers of the Holy Spirit; but from this time it is probable that they had a measure of this supernatural light and power constantly resident in them. By this, they were not only able to proclaim the truth, but to discern the meaning of all the Old Testament scriptures which referred to Christ; and to appoint whatever rites or ordinances were necessary for the establishment of his church. There were many things which the apostles said, did, and decreed, for which they had no verbal instructions from our Lord; at least, none that are recorded in the Gospels; we may therefore conclude, that these were suggested to them by that Holy Spirit which now became resident in them; and that it is to this, that St. Luke refers in this verse, After that he, through the Holy Ghost, had given commandments unto the apostles.

by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God:

4 And, being assembled together with them, commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith he, ye have heard of me.

5 For John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence.

6 When they therefore were come together, they asked of him, saying, Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?

3. To whom—he showed himself alive—by many infallible proofs] Παλλοις τεκμηριοις; by many proofs of such a nature, and connected with such circumstances, as to render them undubitable; for this is the import of the Greek word τεκμηριον. The proofs were such as these: 1. Appearing to several different persons at different times. 2. His eating and drinking with them. 3. His meeting them in Galilee, according to his own appointment. 4. His subjecting his body to be touched and handled by them. 5. His instructing them in the nature and doctrines of his kingdom. 6. His appearing to upwards of five hundred persons at once, 1 Cor. xv. 6. And, 7. Continuing these public manifestations of himself for forty days.

The several appearances of Jesus Christ, during the forty days of his abiding with his disciples, between his resurrection and ascension, are thus enumerated by Bishop PARSONS: the first was to Mary Magdalene, and the other Mary, Matt. xxviii. 1—9. The second, to the two disciples on their way to Emmaus, Luke xxiv. 15. The third, to Simon Peter, Luke xxiv. 34. The fourth, to ten of the apostles, Thomas being absent, Luke xxiv. 36, and John xx. 19. (All these four appearances took place on the day of his resurrection.) The fifth was to the eleven disciples, Thomas being then with them, John xx. 26. The sixth, to seven of the apostles in Galilee, at the sea of Tiberias, John xxi. 4. The seventh, to James, 1 Cor. xv. 7, most probably in Jerusalem, and when Jesus gave an order for all his apostles to assemble together, as in Acts i. 4. The eighth, when they were assembled together, and when he led them unto Bethany, Luke xxi. 50, from whence he ascended to heaven. But see the note on John xxi. 14. for further particulars.

Pertaining to the kingdom of God] Whatever concerned the doctrine, discipline, and establishment of the Christian church.

4. And, being assembled together] Instead of συναλιζουμενος, being assembled together, several good MSS. and Versions read συναναλιζουμενος, living or eating together, which refers the conversation reported here to some particular time, when he sat at meat with his disciples. See Mark xvi. 14. Luke xxiv. 41—44. See the margin. But probably the common reading is to be preferred; and the meeting on a mountain of Galilee is what is here meant.

The promise of the Father] The HOLY SPIRIT, which indeed was the grand promise of the New Testament, as Jesus CHRIST was of the Old. And as Christ was the grand promise of the Old Testament, during the whole continuance of the Old Covenant: so is the Holy Ghost, during the whole continuance of the New. As every pious soul that believed in the coming Messiah, through the medium of the sacrifices offered up under the law, was made a partaker of the merit of his death; so every pious soul that believes in Christ crucified, is made a partaker of the Holy Spirit. Thus, as the benefit of the death of Christ extended from the foundation of the world till his coming in the flesh, as well as after: so the inspiration of the Holy Spirit has been, and will be continued through the whole lapse of time, till his coming again to judge the world. It is by this Spirit that sin is made known, and by it the blood of the covenant is applied; and indeed, without this, the want of salvation cannot be discovered, nor the value of the blood of the covenant duly estimated. How properly do we still pray, and how necessary is the prayer, “Cleanse the thoughts of our hearts by the inspiration of thy Holy Spirit, that we may perfectly love thee, and worthily magnify thy name, through Jesus Christ our Lord! Amen.” Communion Service.

Ye have heard of me.] In his particular conversations with his disciples, such as those related John xiv. 16—26, xv. 26, xvi. 7—16, to which passages, and the notes on them, the reader is requested to refer: but it is likely that our Lord alludes more particularly to the conversation he had with them on one of the mountains of Galilee.

5. Ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence.] This must refer to some conversation that is not distinctly related by the evangelists; as these identical words do not occur in any of the preceding histories. The Codex Bezae, reads this passage thus: but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost, which ye shall receive not many days hence. John baptized with water, which was a sign of penitence, in reference to the remission of sin; but Christ baptizes with the Holy Ghost, for the destruction of sin, the illumination of the mind, and the consolation of the heart. John's baptism was in reference to the spiritual kingdom; but Christ's baptism established and maintained that kingdom. From this passage we may also learn, that baptism does not always mean, being plunged or immersed in water; for as this promise most evidently refers to the communication of the Holy Spirit, on him, saying, Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?

7 And he said unto them, It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power;

8 But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.

9 And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him of their sight.

the following Pentecost, and then he sat upon each as a cloven tongue of fire: this certainly has more affinity to sprinkling than to plunging. However, the mode of administering the sign was of very little consequence; and which is the best mode is exceedingly dubious—the stress should be laid on receiving the thing signified—the Holy Ghost, to illuminate, regenerate, refine, and purify the heart. With this, sprinkling or immersion are equally efficient: without this, both are worth nothing.

6. When they therefore were come together] It is very likely that this is to be understood of their assembling on one of the mountains of Galilee, and there meeting our Lord.

At this time restore again the kingdom] That the disciples, in common with the Jews, expected the Messiah's kingdom to be at least in part secular, I have often had occasion to note. In this opinion they continued less or more till the day of Pentecost; when the mighty out-pouring of the Holy Spirit taught them the spiritual nature of the kingdom of Christ. The kingdom had now for a considerable time been taken away from Israel; the Romans, not the Israelites, had the government. The object of the disciples' question seems to have been this: to gain information from their all-knowing Master, whether the time was now fully come, in which the Romans should be thrust out, and Israel made, as formerly, an independent kingdom. But though the verb ανακαθισταναι signifies to reinstate, to renew, to restore to a former state, or master, of which numerous examples occur in the best Greek writers; yet it has also another meaning, as Schoettgen has here remarked, viz. of ending, abolishing, blotting out—so Hesychius says, ανακαθισταις is the same as τελειουσις, finishing, making an end of a thing. And Hippocrates, Aph. vi. 49. uses it to signify the termination of a disease. On this interpretation the disciples may be supposed to ask, having recollected our Lord's prediction of the destruction of Jerusalem, and the whole Jewish commonwealth, Lord, wilt thou at this time destroy the Jewish commonwealth, which opposes thy truth, that thy kingdom may be set up over all the land? This interpretation agrees well with all the parts of our Lord's answer, and with all the circumstances of the disciples, of time, and of place; but still, the first is most probable.

7. The times or the seasons] Χρονος η καιρος. Times here may signify any large portion of a period, era, or century; such as an Olympiad, lustrum, or year—and seasons, the particular part, season, or opportunity in that period, &c. in which it might be proper to do any particular work. God has not only fixed the great periods in which he will bring about those great revolutions, which his wisdom, justice, and mercy have designed; but he leaves himself at full liberty to choose those particular portions of such periods, as may be best for the accomplishment of those purposes. Thus God is no necessary agent—every thing is put in his own power, εν τῃ ιδιᾳ ἐξουσιᾳ, under his control and authority; nor will he form decrees, of which he must become the necessary executor. The infinite liberty of acting, or not acting, as wisdom, justice, and goodness shall see best, is essential to God; nor can there be a point in the whole of his eternity, in which he must be the necessary agent of a fixed and unalterable fate. Infinite, eternal liberty to act or not to act, to create or not create, to destroy or not destroy, belongs to God alone: and we must take care how we imagine decrees, formed even by his own presence, in reference to futurity, which his power is from the moment of their conception laid under the necessity of performing. In every point of time and eternity, God must be free to act or not to act, as may seem best to his godly wisdom.

8. But ye shall receive power.] Δυνασεισ δυναμεις. Translating different terms of the original by the same English word, is a source of misapprehension and error. We must not understand δυναμεις, which we translate power, in this verse, as we do ἐξουσιᾳ, translated by the same word in the preceding verse. In the one, God's infinite authority over all times and seasons, and his uncompellable liberty of acting or not acting, in any given case, are particularly pointed out: in the other, the energy communicated by him to his disciples, through which they were enabled to work miracles, is particularly intended; and δυναμεις, in general, signifies such power; and is sometimes put for that of which it is the cause, viz. a miracle. See Matt. vii. 22, xi. 20—23, xiii. 54, 58. Mark vi. 6. Luke x. 13. and Acts i. 22. The disciples were to be made instruments in the establishment of the kingdom of Christ; but this must be by the energy of the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven; nevertheless this energy would be given in such times and seasons, and in such measures, as should appear best to the infinite wisdom of God. Christ does not immediately answer the question of the disciples, as it was a point savouring too much of mere curiosity; but he gave them such information

• He was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight. 10 f And while they looked steadfastly towards heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel; 11 Which also said, 'Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner, as ye have seen him go into heaven.

12 g Then returned they unto Jerusalem from the mount called Olivet, which is from Jerusalem a sabbath day's journey.

18 And when they were come in, they went up into an upper room, where abode both Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, Philip, and Thomas, Bartholomew, and Matthew, James the son of Alphaeus, and Simon Zelotes, and Judas the brother of James.

14 b These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with the women, and Mary the mother of Jesus, and with the brethren.

as was calculated to bring both their faith and hope into action. St. Chrysostom has well observed, "that it is the prerogative of an instructor to teach his disciple, not what he wishes to learn, but what his master sees best for him." Διδασκαλοῦ τούτου ἐστὶ μὴ εἰ βούλεται ὁ μαθητῆς, ἀλλ' εὐ συμφερεὶ μαθεῖν, οὐδ' αὖτε.

Ye shall be witnesses—in all Judea, &c.] Though the word ἡγῶν, is used often to denote Judea alone, yet here, it is probable, it is to be taken in its largest extent. All the inhabitants of the globe might at that period be considered divisible into three classes. 1. The Jews, who adhered to the law of Moses, and the prophetic writings; worshipping the true God only, and keeping up the temple service, as prescribed in their law. 2. The SAMARITANS, a mongrel people, who worshipped the God of Israel in connexion with other gods, 2 Kings xvii. 6, &c. and who had no kind of religious connexion with the Jews. See on Matt. x. 5. And, 3. The GENTILES, the heathens through all other parts of the world, who were addicted to idolatry alone; and had no knowledge of the true God. By the terms in the text we may see the extent to which this commission of instruction and salvation was designed to reach: to the Jews; to the Samaritans, and the uttermost parts of the earth, i. e. to the Gentile nations: thus, to the whole human race, the Gospel of the kingdom was to be proclaimed. When the twelve disciples were sent out to preach, Matt. x. 5. their commission was very limited—they were not to go in the way of the Gentiles, nor enter into any city of the Samaritans, but preach the Gospel to the lost sheep of the house of Israel: but here their commission is enlarged, for they are to go into all the world, and to preach the Gospel to every creature. See Matt. xviii. 18.

9. He was taken up.] He was speaking face to face with them, and while they beheld, he was taken up; he began to ascend to heaven, and they continued to look after him, till a cloud received him out of their sight—ill he had ascended above the region of the clouds, by the density of which, all further distinct vision was prevented. The circumstances are very remarkable, and should be carefully noted. They render insupportable the theory that states "That our Lord did not ascend to heaven; that his being taken up, signifies his going into some mountain, the top of which was covered with clouds, or thick vapours; and that the two men in white garments were two angels or spirits, who simply informed the disciples of his revisiting them again at some future time." One would suppose that an opinion of this kind could hardly ever obtain credit among people professing Christianity; and yet it is espoused by some men of considerable learning and ingenuity. But the mere letter of the text will be ever sufficient for its total confutation. He that believes the text, cannot receive such a miserable comment. Foreign critics and divines take a most infulfillitude on subjects of this kind.

10. Looked steadfastly.] Keeping their eyes intensely fixed on their ascending Lord: continuing to look even after he had ascended above the region of the inferior clouds.

Two men stood by them.] Doubtless angels in human shape. In white apparel.] As emblematical of their purity, happiness, and glory.

11. Gazing up into heaven.] Not to the top of a mountain, to which an unbridled fancy, influenced by infidelity, would intimate he had ascended, and not to heaven.

This same Jesus.] Clothed in human nature, shall so come in like manner—with the same body, descending from heaven by his own sovereign and all-controlling power, as ye have seen him go into heaven. Thus shall he come again to judge the quick and the dead. It was a very ancient opinion among Christians, that when Christ should come again to judge the world, he would make his appearance on Mount Olivet. Some think that his coming again to destroy the Jewish nation is what the angels refer to. See a connected account of the different appearances of Christ, at the end of this chapter.

12. A Sabbath day's journey.] See the difficulties in this verse explained in the note on Luke xxiv. 60. A Sabbath day's journey was seven furlongs and a half. Olivet was but five furlongs from Jerusalem; and Bethany was fifteen. The first region or tract of mount Olivet which was called Bethany, was distant from the city a Sabbath day's journey, or seven furlongs and a half; and the same distance did that tract callication, with the women, and Mary the mother of Jesus, and with the brethren.

15 v And in those days Peter stood up in the midst of the disciples, and said, (the number of the names together, were about a hundred and twenty.)

16 Men and brethren, this scripture must needs have been fulfilled, concerning the Holy Ghost by the mouth of David spake before concerning Judas, which was guilty to them that took Jesus.

17 For he was numbered with us, and had obtained part of this ministry.

19 Now this man purchased a field with the reward of iniquity; and falling headlong, he burst asunder in the midst, and all his bowels gushed out.

19 And it was known unto all the dwellers at Jerusalem; insomuch that they gathered together at the door of the chamber. And when they were come in, they went up into an upper room, where abode both Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, Philip, and Thomas, Bartholomew, and Matthew, James the son of Alphaeus, and Simon Zelotes, and Judas the brother of James.

led Bethpage, extend from the city. When, therefore, our Lord came to the place where these two tracts touched each other, he there ascended, which place was distant from Jerusalem, a Sabbath day's journey, as St. Luke here remarks.—See the notes referred to above.

13. They went up into an upper room.] This was either a room in the temple, or in the house of one of the disciples, where this holy company was accustomed to meet. In Luke xxiv. 53. it is said that after their return from mount Olivet, they were continually in the temple, praising and blessing God: it is probable, therefore, that the upper room, mentioned in this verse, is that apartment of the temple mentioned above. But still it is not certain that this place should be so understood; as we have the fullest proofs that the upper rooms in private houses were used for the purpose of reading the law, and conferring together on religious matters. See several proofs in Lightfoot. Add to this, that the room here mentioned, seems to have been the place where all the apostles lodged, οὐκ ἦν κεναρακουοῦντες, and therefore most probably a private house.

14. These continued—in prayer and supplication.] Waiting for the promise of the Father, according to the direction of our Lord, Luke xxiv. 49. The words καὶ ἦν ὄντες, and in supplication, are omitted by ABCDE, and the Syriac, the Coptic, Ethiopic, Armenian, Vulgate, Itala, and some of the primitive Fathers. On this evidence, Griesbach has left them out of the text: and others contend for the propriety of this omission, because, say they, ἦν ἰσοσχεῖν and ἦν ὄντες, prayer and supplication mean the same thing. Whether the reading be genuine or spurious, this inference is not just. Prayer, may simply imply any address to God, in the way of petition or request; supplication, the earnest, affectionate, and continued application to God for the blessings requested from him by prayer. Prayer asks, supplication expostulates, entreats, urges, and re-urges the petition.

With the women.] Probably those who had been witnesses of his resurrection, with the immediate relatives of the apostles. Peter we know was married, Matt. viii. 14. and so might others of the disciples; and therefore the wives of the apostles as well as of other pious men, may be here intended.

15. In the midst of the disciples.] Μαθητῶν; but instead of this, ἀδελφῶν, brethren, is the reading of ABC, a few others, with the Coptic, Ethiopic, Armenian, and Vulgate. This seems the best reading, because of what immediately follows; for it was not among the disciples merely that he stood, but among the whole company, which amounted to one hundred and twenty. It is remarkable, that this was the number which the Jews required to form a council, in any city; and it is likely that in reference to this, the disciples had gathered together with themselves, the number of one hundred and twenty, chosen out of the many who had been already converted by the ministry of our Lord, the twelve disciples, and the seventy-two whom he had sent forth to preach, Luke x. 1, &c. thus they formed a complete council, in presence of which, the important business of electing a person in the place of Judas, was to be transacted.

16. The Holy Ghost by the mouth of David.] This is a strong attestation to the divine inspiration of the book of Psalms. They were dictated by the Holy Spirit; and spoken by the mouth of David.

17. Obtained a part of this ministry.] Ἐλαβεν τὸν κληρὸν; he obtained the lot of this ministry—not that he, or any of the twelve apostles was chosen to this ministry by lot, but as lot signifies the portion a man has in life, what comes to him in the course of the divine providence, or, as an especial gift of God's goodness, it is used here, as in many other parts of the Sacred Writings, to signify office, or station. On this subject, the reader is referred to the notes on Lev. xvi. 8, 9. Josh. xiv. 2. see also this chap. ver. 26.

18. Purchased a field with the reward of iniquity.] Probably Judas did not purchase the field himself, but the money for which he sold his Lord, was thus applied, see Matt. xxvii. 6-8. It is possible, however, that he might have designed to purchase a field, or piece of ground, with this reward of his iniquity, and might have been in treaty for it, though he did not close the bargain, as his bringing the money to the treasury proves: the priests knowing his intentions might have completed the purchase and as Judas was now dead, applied the conuch as that field is called in their proper tongue, Aeldama, that is to say, The field of blood.

20 For it is written in the book of Psalms, " Let his habitation be desolate, and let no man dwell therein: and " his <sup>o</sup> bishoprick let another take.

21 Wherefore of these men which have companied with us all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us, 22 <sup>o</sup> Beginning from the baptism of John, unto that same day that <sup>o</sup> he was taken up from us, must one be ordained <sup>o</sup> to be a witness with us of his resurrection.

— Ps. 95. 25.—a Ps. 103. 8.—O, office, or charge.—y Mark 1. 1.—y Ver. 8.—y John 13. 7. Ver. 3. Ch 4. 31.—Ch 15. 2.

field this bought, for the burial of strangers, i. e. Jews from foreign parts, or others, who, visiting Jerusalem, had died there. Though this case is possible, yet the passage will bear a very consistent interpretation without the assistance of this conjecture: for in ordinary conversation, we often attribute to a man, what is the consequence of his own actions, though such consequence was never designed nor wished for by himself; thus we say of a man embarking in a hazardous enterprise, he is gone to seek his death; of one whose conduct has been ruinous to his reputation, he has disgraced himself; of another, who has suffered much in consequence of his crimes, he has purchased repentance at a high price, &c. &c. All these, though undesigned, were consequences of certain acts, as the buying of the field, was the consequence of Judas's treason.

And [falling headlong, he burst asunder] It is very likely, that the 18th and 19th verses are not the words of Peter, but of the historian St. Luke, and should be read in a parenthesis, and then the 17th and 20th verses will make a connected sense. On the case of Judas, and the manner of his death, see the observations at the end of this chapter.

19. It was known unto all the dwellers at Jerusalem] The repentance of Judas, his dying testimony in behalf of our Lord's innocence, and his tragical death, were publicly known; as was also the transaction about the purchase of the field; and hence arose the name by which it was publicly known. These circumstances must have lessened the credit of the chief priests; and have prepared the public mind to receive the Gospel of the kingdom, when preached to them after the day of Pentecost.

The field is called in their proper tongue, Aeldama] This proper tongue was not the Hebrew, that had long ceased to be the proper tongue in Palestine: it was a sort of Chaldaic-Syriac which was commonly spoken. The word in the Syriac version is haz haw chawal dema, and literally signifies the field of blood; because it was bought by the price of the life or blood of the Lord Jesus.

20. For it is written in the book of Psalms] The places usually referred to are Psal. lix. 25. Let their habitation be desolate, and let none dwell in their tents. And Psal. cix. 8. Let his days be few, and let another take his office; וְיָרֶדּוּ פְקֻדָּתוֹ, his oversership, his charge of visitation or superintendance, translated by the ΣΕΒΟΥΑΓΙΝΤ, ἡπικρατορας, VULGATE, episcopatus; and we following both, bishoprick, but not with sufficient propriety; for surely the office or charge of Judas, was widely different from what we call bishoprick, the diocese, catted, and emoluments of a bishop, επισκοπος, episcopos, which was corrupted by our Saxon ancestors into byscop, biscep, and by us into bishop, signifies literally an overser, or superintendent, from επι, over, and ακρυσται, I see, a person who had the inspection, overser, or superintendance of others. The ancient επισκοποι, were persons who had the care of different congregations of the church of Christ; who travelled, preached, enforced the discipline of the church, and took care to prevent false doctrines, heresies, &c. Those who still deserve this title, and it is an august and noble one, walk by the same rule, and mind the same thing. επισκοπος, episcopos, or bishop, is a scriptural and sacred title; was gloriously supported in the primitive church; and many to the present day are not less ornaments to the title, than the title is ornamental to them. The best defences of the truth of God, and the protestant faith, are in the works of the bishops of the British churches.

The words quoted from the Psalms, were originally spoken against the enemies of David: and as David, in certain particulars, was a type of Christ, the words are applied to him in an especial manner, who had sinned against his own soul and the life of his Master.

21. Which have companied with us] They judged it necessary to fill up this blank in the apostolate, by a person who had been an eye-witness of the acts of our Lord.

Went in and out] A phrase which includes all the actions of life.

22. Beginning from the baptism of John] From the time that Christ was baptized by John in Jordan; for it was at that time that his public ministry properly began.

Must one be ordained] This translation misleads every reader who cannot examine the original text. There is no term for ordained in the Greek, καταβαλει, to be, is the only word in the verse to which this interpretation can be applied. The New Testament printed at London, by Robert Barker, the king's printer, in 1615, renders this and the preceding verse more faithfully, and more clearly, than our common version: Wherefore of these men who have companied with us, all the time that the Lord Jesus was conversant among us, beginning from the baptism of John, unto the day he 23 And they appointed two, Joseph called <sup>o</sup> Barsabas, who was surnamed Justus, and Matthias.

24 And they prayed, and said, Thou, Lord, which knowest the hearts of all men, show whether of these two thou hast chosen.

25 <sup>o</sup> That he may take part of this ministry and apostleship, from which Judas by transgression fell, that he might go to his own place.

26 And they gave forth their <sup>o</sup> lots, and the lot fell upon Matthias; and he was numbered with the eleven apostles.

— 1 Sam. 16. 7. 1 Chron. 22. 9. & 23. 17. Jer. 11. 20. & 17. 10. Ch. 15. 2. Rev. 2. 23.—y Ver. 17.—y Lev. 16. 8, 9. Josh. 14. 2.

was taken up from us, must one of them be MADE a witness with us of his resurrection. The word ordained would naturally lead most readers to suppose that some ecclesiastical rite was used on the occasion, such as imposition of hands, &c. although nothing of the kind appears to have been employed.

23. They appointed two] These two were probably of the number of the seventy disciples; and in this respect, well fitted to fill up the place. It is likely that the disciples themselves were divided in opinion which of these two was the most proper person; and therefore laid the matter before God, that he might decide it by the lot. No more than two candidates were presented; probably because the attention of the brethren had been drawn to those two alone, as having been most intimately acquainted with our Lord; or, in being better qualified for the work than any of the rest, but they knew not which to prefer.

Joseph called Barsabas] Some MSS. read Joseph Barnabas, making him the same with Some Barnabas, chap. iv. 36. But the person here is distinguished from the person there, by being called Justus.

24. Thou, Lord, which knowest the hearts] Εν Κοπε καρπισσορα. The word καρπισσορα, the searcher of hearts, seems to be used here as an attribute of God, he knows the hearts, the most secret purposes, intentions, and dispositions of all men; and because he is the knower of hearts, he knew which of these men he had qualified the best, by natural and gracious dispositions and powers, for the important work to which one of them was now to be appointed.

25. That he may take part of this ministry, &c.] Instead of ως Αγγελος, the lot, which we translate part, rev. error, the place, in the reading of ABC<sup>o</sup>, Coptic, Vulgate, and the Itala, in the Codex Beza, and from them the verse may be read thus, That he may take the place of this ministry and apostle ship, (from which Judas fell) and go to his own place; but instead of idior, own, the Codex Alexandrinus, and one of Matthai's MSS. read δικασον, just; that he might go to his just or proper place. This verse has been variously expounded: 1. Some suppose that the words that he might go to his own place, are spoken of Judas, and his punishment in hell, which they say must be the own place of such a person as Judas. 2. Others refer them to the purchase of the field, made by the thirty pieces of silver, for which he had sold our Lord. 3. Others refer them to the purchase of the field, made by the thirty pieces of silver, for which he had sold our Lord. 4. Others refer them to the purchase of the field, made by the thirty pieces of silver, for which he had sold our Lord. 5. Others refer them to the purchase of the field, made by the thirty pieces of silver, for which he had sold our Lord.

6. Others refer them to the purchase of the field, made by the thirty pieces of silver, for which he had sold our Lord. 7. Others refer them to the purchase of the field, made by the thirty pieces of silver, for which he had sold our Lord. 8. Others refer them to the purchase of the field, made by the thirty pieces of silver, for which he had sold our Lord. 9. Others refer them to the purchase of the field, made by the thirty pieces of silver, for which he had sold our Lord. 10. Others refer them to the purchase of the field, made by the thirty pieces of silver, for which he had sold our Lord.

26. They gave forth their lots] In what manner this or any other question was decided by lot, we cannot precisely say. The most simple form was to put two stones, pieces of board, metal, or slips of parchment, with the names of the persons inscribed on them, into an urn; and after prayer, sacrifice, &c. to put in the hand and draw out one of the lots, and then the case was decided. I have considered this subject at large on Lev. xvi. 8, 9. and Josh. xiv. 2.

He was numbered with the eleven apostles.] The word συγκαταριθμηθη, comes from συ, together with αριθμω, according to, and λιθος, a pebble, or small stone, used for lots, and as a means of enumeration among the Greeks, Romans, and Egyptians; hence the words calculate, calculation, &c. from calculus, a small stone or pebble. From this use of the word, though it signifies in general to sum up, associate, &c. we may conjecture that the calculus or pebble was used on this occasion. The brethren agreed that the matter should be determined by lot; the lots were cast into the urn; God was entreated to direct the choice; one drew out a lot, the person whose name was inscribed on it, was thereby declared to be the object of God's choice, and accordingly associated with the disciples. But it is possible that the whole was decided by what we commonly call ballot, God inclining the hearts of the majority to ballot for Matthias. Nothing certain can, however, be stated on this head. Thus the number twelve was made up, that these might be the fountain, under God, of the whole Christian church; as the twelve sons of Jacob had been of the Jewish church. For it has already been remarked, that our Lord formed his church on the model of the Jewish. See the notes on John xvii. 1, &c. As the Holy Ghost, on the day of Pentecost, was to descend upon them, and endue them with power from on high, it was necessary that the number twelve should be filled up previously, that the newly elected person might also be made partaker of the heavenly gift.—How long it was found necessary to keep up the number twelve, we are not informed—the original number was soon broken by persecution and death.

On the death of Judas there is a great diversity of opinions among learned men and divines.

1. It is supposed, following the bare letter of the text, that Judas hanged himself, and that the rope breaking, he fell down, was burst with the fall, and thus his bowels gushed out.

2. That having hanged himself, he was thrown on the dung-hill, and the carcass becoming putrid, the abdomen, which soonest yields to putrefaction, burst, and the bowels were thus shed from the body; and possibly torn out by dogs.

3. That being filled with horror and despair, he went to the top of the house, or to some eminence, and threw himself down; and thus falling headlong, his body was broken by the fall, and his bowels gushed out.

4. That Satan, having entered into him, caught him up in the air, and thence precipitated him to the earth; and thus his body being broken to pieces, his bowels gushed out. This is Dr. Lightfoot's opinion, and has been noticed on Matt. xxvii. 5.

5. Others think that he died or was suffocated through excessive grief; and that thus the terms in the text, and in Matt. xxvii. 5, are to be understood. The late Mr. Wakefield defends this meaning with great learning and ingenuity.

6. Others suppose the expressions to be figurative; Judas, having been highly exalted in being an apostle, and even the purse-bearer to his Lord and brother disciples; by his treason forfeited this honour, and is represented as falling from a state of the highest dignity, into the lowest infamy; and then dying through excessive grief. The Rev. John Jones, in his Illustrations of the four Gospels, sums up this opinion thus: "So sensible became the traitor of the distinguished rank which he forfeited, and of the deep disgrace into which he precipitated himself, by betraying his Master, that he was seized with such violent grief, as occasioned the rupture of his bowels, and ended in suffocation and death." p. 671.

After the most mature consideration of this subject, on which I hesitated to form an opinion in the note on Matt. xxvii. 5, I think the following observations may lead to a proper knowledge of the most probable state of the case. 1. Judas, like many others, thought that the kingdom of the Messiah would be a secular kingdom; and that his own secular interest must be promoted by his attachment to Christ. Of this mind all the disciples seem to have been, previously to the resurrection of Christ. 2. From long observation of his Master's conduct, he was now convinced that he intended to erect no such kingdom; and that consequently the expectations which he had built on the contrary supposition, must be ultimately disappointed. 3. Being poor and covetous, and finding there was no likelihood of his profiting by being a disciple of Christ, he formed the resolution (probably at the instigation of the chief priests) of betraying him for a sum of money sufficient to purchase a small inheritance, on which he had already cast his eye. 4. Well knowing the uncontrollable power of his Master, he might take it for granted, that though betrayed, he would extricate himself from their hands; and that they would not be capable of putting him either to pain or death. 5. That having betrayed him, and finding that he did not exert his power to deliver himself out of the hands of the Jews; and seeing, from their implacable malice, that the murder of his most innocent Master was likely to be the consequence, he was struck with deep compunction at his own conduct, went to the chief priests, confessed his own profligacy, proclaimed the innocence of his Master, and returned the money for which he had betrayed him; probably hoping that they might be thus influenced to proceed no further in this unprincipled business, and immediately dismiss Christ. 6. Finding that this made no impression upon them, from their own words, What is that to us? See how to that; and that they were determined to put Jesus to death, seized with horror at his crime and its consequences, the remorse and agitation of his mind produced a violent dysentery, attended with powerful inflammation, (which in a great variety of cases has been brought on by strong mental agitation,) and while the distressful irritation of his bowels obliged him to withdraw for relief: he was overwhelmed with grief and affliction, and having fallen from the seat, his bowels were found to have gushed out, through the strong spasmodic affections with which the disease was accompanied.

I have known cases of this kind, where the bowels appeared to come literally away by piece-meal.

Now, when we consider that the word any (see, Matt. xxvii. 5, which we translate hanged himself), is by the very best critics thus rendered, was choked; and that the words of the sacred historian in this place, falling headlong, he burst asunder in the midst, and all his bowels gushed out, may be no other than a delicate mode of expressing the circumstance to which I have alluded under observation 6; perhaps this way of reconciling and explaining the evangelist and historian, will appear not only probable, but the most likely. To strengthen this interpretation, a few facts may be adduced of deaths brought about in the same way with that in which I suppose Judas to have perished. The death of Jehoram, is thus related, 2 Chron. xxi. 18, 19. And after all this, the Lord smote him in his bowels with an incurable disease: and it came to pass that, after the end of two years, his bowels fell out, by reason of his sickness: so he died of sore diseases. אֲרִיסְטוֹבֻלוֹס bethachalaim, with inflammation, or ulcers. The death of Herod was probably of the same kind, Acts xii. 22. That of Aristobulus, as described by Josephus, War, book 1. chapter 3. is of a similar nature: having murdered his mother and brother, his mind was greatly terrified, and his bowels being torn with excruciating torments, he voided much blood, and died in miserable agonies. Again, in his Antiquities, book xv. chap. 10. sect. 3. he thus describes the death of Zenodorus: "His bowels bursting, and his strength exhausted by the loss of much blood, he died at Antioch in Syria."

Taking it for granted, that the death of Judas was probably such as related above; collating all the facts and evidences together, can any hope be formed that he died within the reach of mercy? Let us review the whole of these transactions.

1. It must be allowed that his crime was one of the most inexcusable ever committed by man; nevertheless, it has some alleviations. 1. It is possible that he did not think his Master could be hurt by the Jews. 2. When he found that he did not use his power to extricate himself from their hands, he deeply repented that he had betrayed him. 3. He gave every evidence of the sincerity of his repentance, by going openly to the Jewish rulers, (1.) Confessing his own guilt; (2.) Asserting the innocence of Christ; (3.) Returning the money which he had received from them; and then, (4.) The gentleness of his regret was proved by its being the cause of his death.

But, II. Judas might have acted a much worse part than he did, 1. By persisting in his wickedness. 2. By slandering the character of our Lord, both to the Jewish rulers and to the Romans; and had he done so, his testimony would have been credited, and our Lord would then have been put to death as a malefactor, on the testimony of one of his own disciples; and thus the character of Christ and his Gospel must have suffered extremely in the sight of the world; and these very circumstances would have been pleaded against the authenticity of the Christian religion by every infidel, in all succeeding ages. And, 3. Had he persisted in his evil way, he might have lighted such a flame of persecution against the infant cause of Christianity, as must, without the intervention of God, have ended in its total destruction; now, he neither did, nor endeavoured to do any of these things. In other cases, these would be powerful pleadings.

Judas was indisputably a bad man; but he might have been worse: we may plainly see that there were depths of wickedness to which he might have proceeded, and which were prevented by his repentance. Thus things appear to stand previously to his end. But is there any room for hope in his death? In answer to this, it must be understood, 1. That there is presumptive evidence that he did not desert himself; and, 2. That his repentance was sincere. If so, was it not possible for the mercy of God to extend even to his case? It did so to the murderers of the Son of God; and they were certainly worse men (strange as this assertion may appear) than Judas. Even he gave them the fullest proof of Christ's innocence: their buying the field with the money Judas threw down, was the full proof of it; and yet, with every convincing evidence before them, they crucified our Lord. They excited Judas to betray his Master, and crucified him when they had got him into their power, and therefore St. Stephen calls them both the betrayers and murderers of that Just One, Acts vii. 52. In these respects they were more deeply criminal than Judas himself; yet even to those very betrayers and murderers, Peter preaches repentance, with the promise of remission of sins, and the gift of the Holy Ghost, Acts iii. 12—26. If then, these were within the reach of mercy, and we are informed that a great company of the priests became obedient to the faith, Acts vi. 7. then certainly Judas was not in such a state as precluded the possibility of his salvation. Surely the blood of the covenant could wash out even his stain, as it did that more deeply engrained one, of the other betrayers and murderers of the Lord Jesus.

Should the 25th verse be urged against this possibility, because it is there said that Judas fell from his ministry and apostleship, that he might go to his own place, and that this place is hell; I answer, 1. It remains to be proved that this place means hell; and, 2. It is not clear that the words are spoken of Judas at all, but of Matthias: his own place, meaning that vacancy in the apostolate, to which he was then elected. See the note on ver. 25.

That the repentance of Judas was merely the effect of his horror; that it did not spring from compunction of heart; that it was legal, and not evangelical, &c. &c. In saying what none can with propriety say, but God himself, who searches the heart. What renders his case more desperate, are the words of our Lord, Matt. xxvi. 24. We unite that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed! It had been good for that man if he had not been born! I have considered this saying in a general point of view, in my note on Matt. xxvi. 24 and were it not a proverbial form of speech among the Jews to express the state of any flagrant transgressor, I should be led to apply it, in all its literal import, to the case of Judas, as I have done in the above note, to the case of any damned soul; but when I find that it was a proverbial saying, and that it has been used in many cases, where the fixing of the irreversible doom of a sinner is not implied, it may be capable of a more favourable interpretation than what is generally given to it. I shall produce a few of those examples from Schlegel, to which I have referred in my note on Matt. xxvi. 24.

In CALANAR, fol. li. 2. it is said, "Whoever considers these four things, it would have been better for him had he never come into the world, viz: That which is above; that which is below; that which is before; and that which is behind. And whosoever does not attend to the honour of his Creator, it were better for him had he never been born."

In SHENOTS KARBNA, sect. 40. fol. 135. 1, 2. it is said, "Whosoever knows the law, and does not do it, it had been better for him had he never come into the world."

In VATERA KARBNA, sect. 36. fol. 179. 4. and MIDRASH COMMENT. fol. 91. 4. it is thus expressed, "It were better for him had he never been created; and it would have been better for him had he been strangled in the womb, and never have seen the light of this world."

In ROMAN GENES. fol. 71. col. 232. it is said, "If any man be penitentious toward the poor, it had been better for him had he never come into the world." Ibid. fol. 84. col. 333. "If any performs the law, not for the sake of the law, it were good for that man had he never been created." These examples sufficiently prove that this was a common proverb, and is used with a great variety and latitude of meaning; and seems intended to show, that the case of such and such persons was not only very deplorable, but extremely dangerous; but does not imply the positive impossibility either of their repentance or salvation.

The utmost that can be said for the case of Judas is this: he committed a heinous act of sin and ingratitude; but he repented, and did what he could to undo his wicked act: he had committed the sin unto death, i. e. a sin that involves the death of the body; but who can say, (if mercy was offered to Christ's murderers, and the Gospel was first to be preached at Jerusalem, that these very murderers might have the first offer of salvation through him whom they had pierced,) that the same mercy could not be extended to wretched Judas? I contend, that the chief priests, &c. who instigated Judas to deliver up his Master, and who crucified him; and who crucified him too as a malefactor, having at the same time, the most indubitable evidence of his innocence, were worse men than Judas himself; and that if mercy was extended to those, the wretched penitent traitor did not die out of the reach of the yearning of his bowels. And I contend further, that there is no positive evidence of the final damnation of Judas in the sacred text.

I hope it will not displease the humane reader, that I have entered so deeply into the consideration of this most deplorable case. I would not set up knowingly, any plea against the claims of justice; and God forbid that a sinner should be found capable of pleading against the cries of mercy in behalf of a fellow culprit. Daily, innumerable cases occur of persons who are betraying the cause of God, and selling, in effect, Christ and their souls for money. Every covetous man, who is living for this world alone, is of this stamp. And yet, while they live, we do not despair of their salvation, though they are continually repeating the sin of Judas, with all its guilt and punishment before their eyes! Reader, learn from thy Lord this lesson, blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy. The case is before the Judge; and the Judge of all the earth will do right.

CHAPTER II.

The day of Pentecost being arrived, and the disciples assembled, the Holy Spirit descended as a mighty rushing wind, and in the likeness of fiery tongues sat upon them; in consequence of which, they were all enabled to speak different languages, which they had never learned, 1-4. An account of persons from various countries who were present, and were astonished to hear the apostles declare the wonderful works of God in their respective languages, 5-12. Some came, 12, and are confounded by Peter, who asserts, that this work is of God; and that thereby a most important prophecy was fulfilled, 14-21. He takes occasion from this to preach Jesus to them, as the true Lord and only Messiah, 22-36. The people are alarmed and convinced, and inquire what they shall do, 37. He exhorts them to repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus, that they may receive remission of sins and the gift of the Holy Spirit, 38-40. They gladly receive his word, about three thousand are baptized and added to the church in one day; they continue steadfast in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, 41, 42. The apostles wrought many miracles; and the disciples have all things in common, and live in a state of great happiness and Christian fellowship 43-47. [A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCII. 1.]

AND when the day of pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place.

2 And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting.

a Lev. XXIII. Deut. 16.9. Ch. 20. 16. b Ch. 1. 14.

c Chap. 4. 31.

NOTES.—Verse 1. When the day of Pentecost was fully come The feast of Pentecost was celebrated fifty days after the pass-over; and has its name πεντηκοστή from πεντηκοντα, fifty, which is compounded of πεντ, five, and κοστα, the decimal termination. It commenced on the fiftieth day, reckoned from the first day of unleavened bread, i. e. on the morrow after the paschal lamb was offered. The law relative to this feast is found in Lev. xxiii. 15, 16. in these words: And ye shall count unto you from the morrow after the Sabbath, from the day that ye brought the sheaf of the wave offering; seven sheaves shall be complete; even unto the morrow after the seventh Sabbath, shall ye number fifty days. This feast was instituted in commemoration of the giving the law on mount Sinai; and is therefore sometimes called by the Jews חנוכה שבועות, the anniversary terah, the joy of the law; and frequently the feast of weeks. There is a correspondence between the giving of the law, which is celebrated by this feast of Pentecost, together with the crucifixion of our Lord, which took place at the pass-over; and this descent of the Holy Spirit, which happened at this Pentecost. 1. At the pass-over, the Israelites were delivered from Egyptian bondage: this was a type of the throldom in which the human race were to Satan and sin. 2. At the pass-over, Jesus Christ, who was typified by the paschal lamb, was sacrificed for the sin of the world, and by this sacrifice, redemption from sin and Satan is now procured and proclaimed. 3. On the Pentecost, God gave his law on Mount Sinai, accompanied with thunderings and lightnings. On the Pentecost, God sent down his Holy Spirit, like a rushing mighty wind; and tongues of fire sat upon each disciple, in order that by his influence, that new law of light and life might be promulgated and established. Thus, the analogy between the Egyptian bondage and the thralldom occasioned by sin; the deliverance from Egypt, and the redemption from sin; the giving of the law, with all its emblematic accompaniments, and the sending down the Holy Spirit, with its symbols of light, life, and power, has been exactly preserved. 4. At the Jewish pass-over, Christ was degraded, humbled, and ignominiously put to death: at the following festival, the Pentecost, he was highly glorified; and the all-conquering and ever-lasting might of his kingdom then commenced. The Holy Spirit seems to have designed all these analogies, to show that through all preceding ages, God had the dispensation of the Gospel continually in view; and that the old law and its ordinances were only designed as preparatives for the new.

They were all with one accord in one place. It is probable that the ALL here mentioned, means the [20] spoken of ch. i. 13. who were all together at the election of Matthias. With one accord, εὐθυμῶντες; this word is very expressive; it signifies that all their minds, affections, desires, and wishes, were concentrated in one object, every man having the same end in view; and having but one desire, they had but one prayer to God, and every heart uttered it. There was no person uninterested; none unconcerned, none lukewarm; all were earnest; and the Spirit of God came down to meet their united faith and prayer. When any assembly of God's people meet in the same spirit, they may expect every blessing they need.

In one place.—Where this place was, we cannot tell: it was probably in the temple, as seems to be intimated in ver. 48. where he said, they were daily, εὐθυμῶντες αἰνωσάμενοι ἑαυτοῖς ἰσως ἄρα ἕως ἡμέρας, 15. which was the Jewish hour of morning prayer, as the sixth hour was the hour of evening prayer, ch. iii. 1. It is most probable that the temple was the place in which they were assembled.

2. A sound from heaven] Probably thunder is meant, which is the harbinger of the Divine presence.

Rushing mighty wind] The passage of a large portion of electrical fluid over that place, would not only occasion the sound, or thunder, but also the rushing mighty wind; as the air would rush suddenly and strongly into the vacuum occasioned by the rarefaction of the atmosphere in that place, through the sudden passage of the electrical fluid; and the wind would follow the direction of the fire. There is a good deal of similarity between this account, and that of the appearance of God to Elijah, 1 Kings xix. 11, 12, where the strong wind, the earthquake, and the fire, were harbingers of the Almighty's presence, and prepared the heart of Elijah to hear the small still voice; so, this sound, and the mighty rushing wind, prepared the apostles to receive the influences and gifts of the Holy Spirit. In both cases, the sound, strong wind, 3<sup>d</sup> And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them.

4 And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance.

5 And there were dwelling at Jerusalem, Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven.

6 Now when this was noted abroad, the multitude came together, and were confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language.

4 Exod. 16. 36.—Chap. 1. 6.—Mark 16. 17. Chap. 10. 46. & 11. 4. 1 Cor. 12. 10, 28, & 12. 1. & 14. 2, &c.

and fire, although natural agents, were supernaturally employed. See the note on ch. 17.

3. Cloven tongues like as of fire] The tongues were the emblem of the languages they were to speak. The cloven tongues pointed out the diversity of those languages; and the fire seemed to intimate, that the whole would be a spiritual gift, and be the means of bringing light and life to the souls who should hear them preach the everlasting Gospel in those languages.

But upon each of them.] Scintillations, conceptions, or flashes of fire, were probably at first frequent through every part of the room where they were sitting; at last these flashes became defined, and a lambent flame, in the form of a cloven tongue, became stationary on the head of each disciple; a proof that the spirit of God had made each his temple or residence. That unusual appearances of fire were considered emblems of the presence and influence of God, both the Scriptures, and the Jewish writings amply prove. Thus God manifested himself to Moses, when he appointed him to deliver Israel, Exod. 13. 2, 3, and thus he manifested himself when he delivered the laws on Mount Sinai, Exod. 24. 16—20. The Jews, in order to support the pretensions of their rabbins as delivering their instructions by Divine authority and influence, represent them as being surrounded with fire while they were delivering their lectures; and that their words, in consequence, penetrated and exhilarated the souls of their disciples. Some of the Mahomedans represent divine inspiration in the same way. In a fine copy of a Persian work, entitled Ajaseh ul Mathookat, or Wonders of Creation, now before me, where a marred account of Abraham's sacrifice, mentioned Gen. xv. 9—17, is given, instead of the burning lamp passing between the divided pieces of the victim, ver. 17, Abraham is represented as standing between four fowls, the cock, the peacock, the duck, and the crow, with his head almost wrapt in a flame of lambent fire, as the emblem of the Divine communication made to him of the future prosperity of his descendants. The painting in which this is represented, is most exquisitely finished. This notion of the manner in which divine intimations were given, was not peculiar to the Jews and Arabians; it exists in all countries; and the glories which appear round the heads of Chinese, Hindoo, and Christian saints, real or supposed, were simply intended to signify that they had especial intercourse with God: and that his Spirit, under the emblem of fire, sat upon them and became resident in them. There are numerous proofs of this in several Chinese and Hindoo paintings in my possession; and how frequently this is to be met with in legends, miscels, and in the ancient ecclesiastical books of the different Christian nations of Europe, every reader acquainted with ecclesiastical antiquity knows well. See the dedication of Solomon's temple 2 Chron. vii. 1—3.

The Greek and Roman heathens had similar notions of the manner in which divine communications were given; strong wind, loud and repeated peals of thunder, convulsions of lightning, and lambent flames resting on those who were objects of the deity's regard, are all employed by them to point out the mode in which their gods were reported to make their will known to their votaries. Every thing of this kind was probably borrowed from the account given by Moses of the appearance on Mount Sinai; for traditions of this event were carried through almost every part of the habitable world, partly by the expelled Canaanites, partly by the Greek sages travelling through Asiatic countries in quest of philosophic truth; and partly by means of the Greek version of the Septuagint, made nearly 300 years before the Christian era.

A flame of fire seen upon the head of any person, was among the heathens, considered as an omen from their gods, that the person was under the peculiar care of a supernatural power, and destined to some extraordinary employment. Many proofs of this occur in the Roman poets and historians. Wetstein, in his note on this place, has made an extensive collection of them. I shall quote but one, which almost every reader of the Æneid of Virgil will recollect:

Talis vociferans, gemitu tectum omne replebat:
Cum subitum, dictique oritur mirabile monstrum.
Namque manus later, mæstorum ora parentum,
Ecce levit summo de vertice visus Ilii.
Funderet lamen apax, tactuque innoxia molli
Lambere flamma comas, et circum tempora pascat.
Nos pavidi tripidare uicta, crinemque flagrantem
Excitæ, et sanctos restinguere fontibus ignes.
At pater Anchises oculos ad sidera lætos
Extulit, et cælo palmas cum voce tetendit:
Jupiter omnipotens—
Da auxiliium, poter atque hæc omnia foveo.

Virg. Æn. li. v. 679.

7 And they were all amazed and marvelled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak? Galileans?

8 And how hear we every man in our own tongues, whereas we were born?

9 & Parthians, and Medes, and Elamites, and the dwellers in Mesopotamia, and in Judea, and Cappadocia, in Pontus, and Asia.

10 Phrygia, and Pamphylia, in Egypt, and in the parts of Libya about Cyrene, and strangers of Rome, Jews and proselytes, Or, when this voice was made.—Or, troubled in mind.—Chap. 1. 11.—1 Tim. 10. 2. 1 Pet. 1. 1.

While thus she fills the house with clamorous cries, Our hearing is diverted by our eyes; For while I held my son, in the short space Betwixt our knees and our last embrace, Strange to relate! from young Julia's head, A lambent flame arose, which gently spread Around his brows, and on his temples fell. Amazed, with running water we prepare To quench the sacred fire, and slake his hair; But old Anchises, veered in omens, rear'd His hands to heaven, and this request preferr'd: If any vows almighty Jove can bend, Confirm the glad presage which thou art pleas'd to send.

DRYDEN.

There is nothing in this poetic fiction which could be borrowed from our Sacred Volume; as Virgil died about twenty years before the birth of Christ.

It may be just necessary to observe, that tongue of fire may be a Hebraism: for in Isaiah v. 26. וּשְׂרָפָה לִשְׂוֹן עֹקֵץ, which we render simply fire; is literally a tongue of fire, as the margin very properly has it. The Hebrews give the same of a ray is termed in Josh. xv. 2. וְשֵׁרָפָה, a tongue. And in ver. 5. of the same chapter, which appears to have been a prophetic vision is called וְשֵׁרָפָה אֲשֵׁרָה, a tongue of the sun.

But upon each.] That in, one of those tongues like flames, sat upon the head of each disciple; and the continuance of the appearance, which is indicated by the word sat, shows that there could be no illusion in the case. I still think that in all this case, the agent was natural, but supernaturally employed.

4. To speak with other tongues.] At the building of Babel, the language of the people was confounded; and in consequence of this, they became scattered over the face of the earth: at this foundation of the Christian church, the gift of various languages was given to the apostles, that the scattered nations might be gathered; and united under one shepherd, and superintendent (shepherds) of all souls.

As the Spirit gave them utterance.] The word προφητικῶς, seems to imply such utterance as proceeded from immediate inspiration, and included oracular communications.

5. Devout men, out of every nation.] Either by these we are simply to understand Jews who were born in different countries, and had now come up to Jerusalem to be present at the pass-over, and for purposes of traffic; or proselytes to Judaism, who had come up for the same purpose: for I cannot suppose that the term ἀγαπῶντες, devout men, can be applied to any other. At this time there was scarcely a commercial nation under heaven, where the Jews had not been scattered for the purpose of trade, merchandise, &c. and from all these nations, it is said, there were persons now present at Jerusalem.

6. When this was noised abroad.] If we suppose that there was a considerable peal of thunder, which followed the escape of a vast quantity of electric fluid, and produced the mighty rushing wind, already noticed on ver. 8, then the whole city must have been alarmed; and as various circumstances might direct their attention to the temple; having looked thither, they were further astonished and confounded to hear the disciples of Christ addressing the mixed multitude in the languages of the different countries from which these people had come.

Every man heard them speak in his own language.] We may naturally suppose, that as soon as any person presented himself to one of these disciples, he, the disciple, was immediately enabled to address him in his own language, however various this had been from the Jewish or Galilean dialects. If a Roman presented himself, the disciple was immediately enabled to address him in Latin—if a Grecian, in Greek—in Arab, in Arabic, and so of the rest.

7. Are not all these—Galileans?] Persons who know no other dialect, save that of their own country. Persons wholly uneducated, and consequently, naturally ignorant of those languages which they now speak so fluently.

8. How hear we every man in our own tongue.] Some have supposed from this, that the miracle was not so much wrought on the disciples, as on their hearers: imagining that although the disciples spoke their own tongue; yet every man so understood what was spoken as if it had been spoken in the language in which he was born. Though this is by no means so likely as the opinion which states, that the disciples themselves spoke all these different languages; yet the miracle is the same, howsoever it be taken: for it must require as much of the miraculous power of God in enable an Arab to understand a Galilean, as to enable a Galilean to speak Arabic. But that the gift of tongue was actually given to the apostles, we have the fullest proof; so we find particular ordinances laid 11 Crates and Arabians, do we hear them speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God.

 12 And they were all amazed, and were in doubt, saying one to another, "What meaneth this?"
 13 Others, mocking said, These men are full of new wine.
 14 But Peter, standing up with the eleven, lifted up his voice, and said unto them, Ye men of Judea, and all ye that down by these very apostles, for the regulation of the exercise of this gift, see 1 Cor. xiv. 1, &c.

1 Ira 11. 14. Gal. 4. 22.—Heb. 9. 12. Luke 9. 43.—1 Thom. 8. 7.—Ira 44. 3.

9. Partians Partia anciently included the northern part of modern Perzia: it was situated between the Caspian Sea and Persean Gulf; rather to the eastward of both.

Medes Medin was a country lying in the vicinity of the Caspian Sea: having Partia on the east; Assyria on the south; and Mesopotamia on the west.

Elamites Probably inhabitants of that country now called Perzia: both the Medes and Elamites, were a neighbouring people, dwelling beyond the Tigris.

Mesopotamia Now Diarbec, in Asiatic Turkey; situated between the rivers Tigris and Euphrates; having Assyria on the east; Arabia Deserta with Babylonia on the south; Syria on the west; and Armenia on the north. It was called Padan-aram by the ancient Hebrews; and by the Asiatics is now called Maverannahar, i. e. the country beyond the river.

Judean This word has exceedingly puzzled commentators and critics: and most suspect that it is not the true reading. Dr. Pearce supposes, that Ioudæan, is an adjective, agreeing with Mesopotamian, and translates the passage thus: the dwellers in Jewish Mesopotamia. He vindicates this translation, by showing, that great numbers of the Jews were settled in this country: Josephus says that the ten tribes remained in this country till his time; that "there were countless myriads of them there, and that it was impossible to know their numbers." Mesopades αριστοι, και αριθμοι γινωσκων μη δυναμεναι. See Ant. lib. xv. c. 2. s. 2 and c. 3. s. 1. Bell. Jud. lib. l. c. 1, 2. This interpretation, however ingenious, does not comport with the present Greek text. Some imagine that Ioudæan, is not the original reading; and therefore they have corrected it into Syriam, SYRIA; Armeniam, ARMENIA; Indiam, INDIA; Asiam, ASIA; Iberiam, IBERIA; Bethyniam, BITHYNIA; and Kaliciam, CALICIA: all these stand on very slender authority, as may be seen in Griesbach; and the last is a mere conjecture of Dr. Mangey. If Judean be still considered the genuine reading, we may account for it thus: the men who were speaking were known to be Gallileans; now the Gallilean dialect was certainly different from that spoken in Judea—the surprise was occasioned by a Jew being able to comprehend the speech of a Gallilean, without any interpreter, and without difficulty; and yet it is not easy to suppose that there was such a difference between the two dialects, as to render these people wholly unintelligible to each other.

CAPPADOCIA Was an ancient kingdom of Asia, comprehending all that country that lies between Mount Taurus and the Euxine Sea.

PONTUS: Was anciently a very powerful kingdom of Asia, originally a part of Cappadocia; bounded on the east by Colchis; on the west by the river Halyx; on the north by the Black Sea; and on the south by Armenia minor. The famous Mithridates was king of this country; and it was one of the last which the Romans were able to subjugate.

ASIA Meaning probably Asia Minor; it was that part of Turkey in Asia now called Natolia.

10. FRYBIA A country in Asia Minor, southward of Pontus.

PAMPHYLIA The ancient name of the country of Natolia, now called Caramania, between Lycia and Cilicia, near the Mediterranean Sea.

EGYPT: A very extensive country of Africa, bounded by the Mediterranean on the north; by the Red Sea and the Isthmus of Sues, which divide it from Arabia on the east; by Abyssinia or Ethiopia on the south; and by the deserts of Barra and Nubis on the west. It was called Misraim by the ancient Hebrews, and now Mear by the Arabians. It extends 600 miles from north to south; and from 100 to 250 in breadth from east to west.

LYBIA In a general way, among the Greeks, signified Africa: but the northern part, in the vicinity of Cyrene, is here meant.

CYRENEA A country in Africa on the coast of the Mediterranean Sea; southward of the most western point of the island of Crete.

Strangers of Rome Persons dwelling at Rome, and speaking the Latin language, partly consisting of regularly descended Jews and proselytes to the Jewish religion.

11. Crete: Natives of Crete, a large and noted island in the Levant, or eastern part of the Mediterranean Sea; now called Candia.

Arabians: Natives of Arabia, a well known country of Asia, having the Red Sea on the west; the Persean Gulf on the east; Judea on the north; and the Indian Ocean on the south.

The wonderful works of God. Such as the incarnation of Christ; his various miracles, teaching, death, resurrection, and ascension; and the design of God to save the world through him. From this one circumstance we may learn that all the people enumerated above, were either Jews or proselytes; and that there was probably none that could be, strictly speaking, called heathens among them. It may at first dwell at Jerusalem, be this known unto you, and hearken to my words:

15 For those are not drunken, as ye suppose, seeing it is but the third hour of the day:

16 But this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel;

17 And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and appear strange that this could be found Jews in so many different countries; some of which were very remote from the others. But there is a passage in Pihlo's embassy to Caius, which throws considerable light on the subject. In a letter sent to Caius by king Agrippa, he speaks of "the holy city of Jerusalem, not merely as the metropolis of Judea, but of many other regions, because of the colonies at different times led out of Judea; not only into the neighbouring countries, such as Egypt, Phoenicia, Syria, and Cœlogyria; but also into those that are remote, such as Pamphylia, Cilicia, and the chief parts of Asia as far as Bithynia, and the innermost parts of Pontus; also into the regions of Europe, Thessaly, Bœtia, Macedonia, Ætolia, Attica, Argos, Corinth, and the principal parts of Peloponnesus. Not only the continents and provinces, (says he,) are full of Jewish colonies, but the most celebrated cities also, Eubœa, Cyprus, and Crete, not to mention the countries beyond the Euphrates. All these, (a small part of Babylon and some other prefectures excepted, which possess fertile territories) are inhabited by Jews. Not only my native city entreats thy clemency, but other cities also, situated in different parts of the world, Asia, Europe, Africa, both islands, sea coasts, and inland countries." PAntonius Opera, edit. Mangey, vol. ii. p. 557.

Book. 11. 19. & 27. Joel 2. 28. Zeck. 12. 10. John 7. 39.— Chap. 10. 46.

It is worthy of remark, that almost all the places and provinces mentioned by St. Luke, are mentioned also in this letter of King Agrippa. These being all Jews or proselytes, could understand in some measure, the wonderful works of God, of which mere heathens could have formed no conception. It was wisely ordered that the miraculous descent of the Holy Ghost should take place at this time, when so many from various nations were present to bear witness to what was done; and to be themselves, subjects of his mighty working. These, on their return to their respective countries, would naturally proclaim what things they saw and heard; and by this, the way of the apostles was made plain; and thus Christianity made a rapid progress over all those parts, in a very short time after the resurrection of our Lord.

13. These men are full of new wine. Rather sweet wine, for γλυκωτος cannot mean the mustum or new wine, as there could be none in Judea so early as Pentecost. The γλυκωτος, gleucos, seems to have been a peculiar kind of wine, and is thus described by Hesychius and Suidas: Γλυκωτος, το σρωταριον της εραδης, επι κερση. Gleucos is that which distils from the grape before it is pressed. This must be at once both the strongest and sweetest wine. Calmet observes, that the ancients had the secret of preserving wine sweet through the whole year; and were fond of taking morning draughts of it. to this Horace appears to refer. Sat. l. ii. s. iv. ver. 34.

And thus forth misceth mella Falerna.
 Mendocis: quoniam vacuis committere venis
 Nil nisi lens docet leni præcordia mulgo
 Proturris melius.

And thus first, most injudiciously, quaff'd strong wine and honey for his morning draught. With lenient beverage fill your empty veins.

For lenient must, will better cleanse the reins.—FRANCIS.

14. Peter standing up with the eleven. They probably spoke by turns, not altogether; but Peter began the discourse.

All ye that dwell at Jerusalem. Of κατοικοις; would be better translated by the word sojourn; because these were not inhabitants of Judea, but the strangers mentioned in verses 9, 10, and 11, who had come up to the feast.

15. But the third hour of the day. That is, about nine o'clock in the morning, previously to which, the Jews scarcely ever ate or drank; for that hour was the hour of prayer. This custom appears to have been so common, that even the most intemperate among the Jews were not known to transgress it: Peter therefore spoke with confidence, when he said, these are not drunken—seeing it is but the third hour of the day, previously to which, even the intemperate did not use wine.

16. Spoken by the prophet Joel. The prophecy which he delivered so long ago, is just now fulfilled; and this is another proof that Jesus whom ye have crucified, is the Messiah.

17. In the last days. The time of the Messiah; and so the phrase was understood among the Jews.

I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh. Rabbi Tanchum says, "When Moses laid his hands upon Joshua, the holy blessed God said, In the time of the old test each individual prophet, prophesied: but in the times of the Messiah, all the Israelites shall be prophets." And this they build on the prophecy quoted in this place by Peter.

Your sons and your daughters shall prophesy. The word prophesy is not to be understood here as implying the knowledge and discovery of future events: but signifies to teach and proclaim the great truths of God, especially those which concerned redemption by Jesus Christ.

Your young men shall see visions, &c. These were two of the various ways, in which God revealed himself under the 4 your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams :

18 And on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days, of my Spirit ; and they shall prophesy :

19 And I will show wonders in heaven above, and signs in the earth beneath : blood, and fire, and vapour of smoke :

20 The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before that great and notable day of the Lord come :

21 And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved.

22 Ye men of Israel, hear these words : Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you, by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know :

Ch. 21. 9.—Ch. 21. 4, 9, 10. 1 Cor. 12. 10. Gal. 3. 14. 1.—1 John 1. 9. 10. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100.

Old Testament. Sometimes he revealed himself by a symbol, which was a sufficient proof of the divine presence : fire was the most ordinary, as it was the most expressive symbol. Thus he appeared to Moses on Mount Horeb, and afterward at Sinai ; to Abraham, Genesis xv. to Elijah, 1 Kings xix. 11, 12. At other times he revealed himself by angelic ministry ; this was frequent, especially in the days of the patriarchs ; of which we find many instances in the book of Genesis.

By dreams he discovered his will in numerous instances ; see the remarkable case of Joseph, Gen. xxviii. 5, 9, of Jacob, Gen. xxxi. 1, &c. xvi. 2, &c. of Pharaoh, Gen. xli. 1—7, of Nebuchadnezzar, Dan. iv. 10—17. For the different ways in which God communicated the knowledge of his will to mankind, see the note on Gen. xv. 1.

18. On my servants and on my hand-maidens] This properly means persons of the lowest condition, such as male and female slaves. As the Jews asserted that the spirit of prophecy never rested upon a poor man ; these words are quoted to show that, under the Gospel dispensation, neither bond nor free, male nor female, is excluded from sharing in the gifts and graces of the Divine Spirit.

19. I will show wonders] It is likely that both the prophet and the apostle refer to the calamities that fell upon the Jews at the destruction of Jerusalem ; and the fearful signs and portents that preceded these calamities. See the notes on Matt. xxiv. 6—7, where these are distinctly related.

Blood, fire, and vapour of smoke] Skirmishes and assassinations over the land ; and wasting the country with fire and sword.

20. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood] These are figurative representations of eclipses, intended, most probably, to point out the fall of the civil and ecclesiastical state in Judea ; see the notes on Matt. xxiv. 29. That the sun is darkened, when a total eclipse takes place, and that the moon appears of a bloody hue, in such circumstances, every person knows.

21. Whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord, shall be saved.] The predicted ruin is now impending ; and only such as receive the Gospel of the Son of God shall be saved. And that none but the Christians did escape, when God poured out those judgments, is well known ; and that all the Christians did escape, not one of them perishing in those devastations, stands attested by the most respectable authority. See the note on Matt. xxiv. 13.

22. A man approved of God] Αποδοκιμασθενος, celebrated, famous. The sense of the verse seems to be this : Jesus of Nazareth, a man sent of God, and celebrated among you by miracles, wonders, and signs ; and all these done in such profusion as had never been done by the best of your most accredited prophets. And these signs, &c. were such as demonstrated his divine mission.

23. Him being delivered by the determinate counsel] Sp. Pearce paraphrases the words thus : Him having been given forth : i. e. sent into the world, and manifested by being made flesh, and dwelling among you, as it is said in John i. 14. see also chap. iv. 23.

Kypke contends that εκδορος, delivered, does not refer to God, but to Judas the traitor : “ the Jews received Jesus, delivered up to them by Judas ; the immutable counsel of God so permitting.”

By the determinate counsel, ωρισμενη βουλη ; that counsel of God which defined the time, place, and circumstance, according (προγνωσι) to his foreknowledge, which always saw what was the most proper time and place for the manifestation and crucifixion of his Son ; so that there was nothing casual in these things, God having determined that the salvation of a lost world should be brought about in this way ; and neither the Jews nor Romans had any power here, but what was given to them from above. It was necessary to show the Jews, that it was not through Christ's weakness, or inability to defend himself, that he was taken ; nor was it through their malice merely that he was slain ; for God had determined long before, from the foundation of the world, Rev. xiii. 8, to give his Son a sacrifice for sin ; and the treachery of Judas, and the malice of the Jews, were only the incidental means by which the great counsel of God was fulfilled : the counsel of God intending the sacrifice ; but never ordering that it should be brought about by such wretched means. This was permitted ; the other was decreed. See the observations at the end of this chapter.

23 Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain :

24 Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death : because it was not possible that he should be holden of it.

25 For David speaketh concerning him, I foresaw the Lord always before my face, for he is on my right hand, that I should not be moved :

26 Therefore did my heart rejoice, and my tongue was glad ; moreover also my flesh shall rest in hope :

27 Because thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption.

28 Thou hast made known to me the ways of life ; thou shalt make me full of joy with thy countenance.

Chap. 5. 30.—y Verse 32. Chap. 3. 15. & 4. 10. & 10. 42. & 13. 35. & 17. 31. Rom. 4. 24. & 8. 11. 1 Cor. 6. 14. & 15. 12. & 2 Cor. 4. 14. Gal. 1. 1. Eph. 1. 20. Col. 2. 12. 1 Thess. 1. 10. Heb. 13. 20. 1 Pet. 1. 21.—y Psal. 16. 5.

By wicked hands have crucified and slain] I think this refers to the Romans, and not to the Jews ; the former being the agents to execute the evil purposes of the latter. It is well known that the Jews acknowledged, that they had no power to put our Lord to death, John xviii. 31, and it is as well known that the punishment of the cross was not a Jewish but a Roman punishment ; hence we may infer, that by die xepov avopwv, by the hands of the wicked, the Romans are meant, being called avopwv, without law, because they had no revelation from God ; whereas the others had what was emphatically termed a νόμος του Θεου, the law of God, by which they profess to regulate their worship and their conduct. It was the Jews, therefore, who caused our Lord to be crucified by the hands of the heathen Romans.

24. Whom God hath raised up] For, as God alone gave him up to death ; so God alone raised him up from death.

Having loosed the pains of death] It is generally supposed that this expression means, the dissolving of those bonds or obligations, by which those who enter into the region of the dead, are detained there, till the day of the resurrection ; and this is supposed to be the meaning of חַבְדֵי מוֹת chebdey moeth, in Psal. cxvi. 3, or, חַבְדֵי מוֹת chebdey moeth, in Psal. xviii. 5, and in 2 Sam. xxii. 6, to which, as a parallel, this place has been referred. But Kypke has sufficiently proved, that λυειν τας οδους θανατου, signifies rather to REMOVE the pains or sufferings of death. So Lucian, De Conser. Hist. says, “ a copious sweat to some, ελιου τον πυρον, REMOVES or carries off the fever. So STRABO speaking of the bath of Jericho, says, λυει δε κεφαλαγιους θανατου, it wonderfully REMOVES the headache, &c.” That Christ did suffer the pains and sorrows of death in his passion, is sufficiently evident, but that these were all removed, previously to his crucifixion, is fully seen in that calm manner in which he met it, with all its attendant terrors. If we take the words as commonly understood, they mean, that it was impossible for the Prince of life to be left in the empire of death ; his resurrection therefore was a necessary consequence of his own divine power.

Instead of θανατου, of death, the Codes Beza, Syriac, Coptic and Vulgate, have Αδω, of hell, or the place of separate spirits ; and perhaps it was on no better authority than this various reading, supported, by slender evidence, that He descended into hell, became an article in what is called the apostles' creed. And on this article many a popish legend has been builded, to the discredit of sober sense and true religion.

25. For David speaketh concerning him] The quotation here is made from Psal. xvi. which contains a most remarkable prophecy concerning Christ ; every word of which applies to him, and to him exclusively. See the notes there.

26. And my tongue was glad] In the Hebrew it is יתְּצַיִק עֲבֹדִי. “ And my glory was glad :” but the evangelist follows the Septuagint, in reading εν γλωσσαις y glossaiss, what all the other Greek interpreters in the Hexapla, translate δαξα μου, my glory ; and what is to be understood by glory here ? Why the soul certainly, and not the tongue ; and so some of the best critics interpret the place.

27. Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell] Εις Αδω, in Hades, that is, the state of separate spirits, or the state of the dead. Hades was a general term among the Greek writers, by which they expressed this state ; and this HADES, was Tartarus to the wicked, and Elysium to the good. See the explanation of the word in the note on Matt. xi. 23.

To see corruption.] Dust thou art, and unto dust thou shalt return, was a sentence pronounced on man after the fall : therefore this sentence could be executed on none but those who were fallen ; but Jesus being conceived without sin, neither partook of human corruption, nor was involved in the condemnation of fallen human nature ; consequently it was impossible for his body to see corruption ; and it could not have undergone the temporary death to which it was not naturally liable, had it not been for the purpose of making an atonement. It was therefore impossible that the human nature of our Lord could be subject to corruption ; for though it was possible that the soul and it might be separated for a time ; yet as it had not sinned, it was not liable to dissolution ; and its immortality was the necessary consequence of its being pure from transgression.

28. Thou hast made known to me the ways of life] That is, the way from the region of death, or state of the dead and separate spirits ; so that I shall resume the same body, and 29 Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day.

30 Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne; 31 He seeing this before spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hell, neither his flesh did see corruption.

32 This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses.

33 Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath abided forth this, which ye now see and hear.

34 For David is not ascended into the heavens: but he saith himself, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, live the same kind of life, as I had before I gave up my life for the sin of the world.

Let me speak freely—of the patriarch David] In Midrio Tullio, it is said, in a paraphrase on the words, my flesh also shall rest in hope, "neither worm nor insect had power over David." It is possible that this opinion prevailed in the time of St. Peter; and if so, his words are the more pointed and forcible: and therefore thus applied by Dr. Lightfoot: "That this passage, Thou shalt not leave my soul in hell, &c. is not to be applied to David himself, appears in that I may confidently aver concerning him, that he was dead and buried, and never rose again, but his soul was left in hell, in the state of the dead, and we saw that very notion, that it is the sepulchre of David, who died and was there buried; nor is there one syllable mentioned any where of the resurrection of his body, or the return of his soul of hell, from the state of the dead." To this the same author adds the following remarkable note: I cannot slip over that passage Hieron. Chariv. fol. 73. Rab. Jose saith, David died at Pentecost, and all Israel bewailed him, and offered their sacrifices the day following. This is a remarkable coincidence: and may be easily applied to him, of whom David was a type.

30 According to the flesh, he would raise up Christ] This whole clause is wanting in ACD, one of the Syriac, the Coptic, Aethiopic, Armenian, and Vulgate; and is variously entered in others. Griesbach rejects it from the text, and professor White says of the words, "certissime delenda," they should doubtless be expunged. This is a gloss, says Schottgen, that has crept into the text, which I prove thus: 1. The Syriac and Vulgate, the most ancient of the versions, have not these words. 2. The passage is consistent enough and intelligible without them. 3. They are superfluous, as the mind of the apostle concerning the resurrection of Christ follows immediately in the succeeding verse. The passage, therefore, according to Ep. Pearse, should be read thus, Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath, of the fruit of his loins, to sit on his throne; and foreseeing that he (God) would raise up Christ, he spake of the resurrection of Christ, &c. "In this translation the words which Peter quotes for David's, are exactly the same with what we read in the Psalm above-mentioned: and the circumstance of David's foreseeing that Christ was to be raised up, and was the person meant, is not represented as a part of the oath; but is only made to be Peter's assertion, that David as a prophet, did foresee it, and meant it."

31 That his soul was not left in hell] The words in inferno, in inferis, are omitted by ABCD, Syriac, Coptic, Aethiopic, and Vulgate. Griesbach has left them out of the text, and Professor White says again, certissime delenda. The passage may be thus read: "he spake of the resurrection of Christ, that he was not left in hades, neither did his flesh see corruption." For the various readings in this and the preceding verse, see Griesbach.

32 Whereof we all are witnesses.] That is, the whole 120 saw him after he rose from the dead; and were all ready, in the face of persecution and death, to attest this great truth.

33 By the right hand of God exalted] Raised by omnipotence to the highest dignity in the realms of glory, to sit at the right hand of God, and administer the laws of both worlds.

The promise of the Holy Ghost] This was the promise that he had made to them a little before he suffered, as may be seen in John xiv. and xvi. and after he had risen from the dead, Luke xxiv. 49. and which, as the apostle says, was now abed forth.

34 David is not ascended] Consequently, he has not sent forth this extraordinary gift; but it comes from his Lord, of whom he said, The Lord said unto my Lord, &c. See the note on these words, Matt. xxii. 44.

35. Until I make thy foes thy footstool.] It was usual with conquerors to put their feet on the necks of vanquished leaders; as emblematical of the state of subjection to which they were reduced, and the total extinction of their power. By quoting these words, Peter shows the Jews, who continued enemies to Christ, that their discomfiture and ruin must necessarily take place; their own king and prophet having predicted this in connexion with the other things which had al-

35 Until I make thy foes thy footstool.

36 Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ.

37 Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do?

38 Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.

39 For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.

40 And with many other words did he testify and exhort, saying, Save yourselves from this untoward generation.

41 Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day, there were added unto them, about three thousand souls.

36 [Ch. 10. Eph. 4. 5. Pa. 114. 1. Mat. 28. 4. 1 Cor. 12. 8. Heb. 1. 13. Ch. 13. Rom. 8. 15. Luke 12. 10. Luke 2. 18. Ch. 2. 15. Luke 21. 4. Ch. 12. 12. 1 Cor. 12. 8. Ch. 2. 22. 5. Ch. 10. 4. 11. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100.]

ready been so literally and circumstantially fulfilled. This conclusion had the desired effect, when pressed home with the strong application in the following verse.

36. Both Lord and Christ.] Not only the Messiah, but the supreme Governor of all things and all persons, Jews and Gentiles, angels and men. In the preceding discourse, Peter assumes a fact, which none would attempt to deny, viz. that Jesus had been lately crucified by them. He then, 1. Proves his resurrection. 2. His ascension. 3. His exaltation to the right hand of God. 4. The effusion of the Holy Spirit, which was the fruit of his glorification, and which had not only been promised by himself, but foretold by their own prophets: in consequence of which, 5. It was indisputably proved, that the same Jesus, whom they had crucified, was the promised Messiah; and if so, 6. The Governor of the universe, from whose power and justice they had every thing to dread, as they refused to receive his proffered mercy and kindness.

37. When they heard this, they were pricked in their heart] This powerful, intelligent, consecutive, and interesting discourse, supported every where by prophecies and corresponding facts, left them without reply and without excuse; and they plainly saw there was no hope for them, but in the mercy of him whom they had rejected and crucified.

What shall we do?] How shall we escape those judgments, which we now see hanging over our heads?

38. Peter said unto them, Repent] Μετανοήσατε; humble yourselves before God, and deeply deplore the sins you have committed; pray earnestly for mercy, and deprecate the displeasure of increased justice. For a definition of repentance, see on Matt. iii. 2.

And be baptized every one of you] Take on you the public profession of the religion of Christ, by being baptized in his name; and thus acknowledge yourselves to be his disciples and servants.

For the remission of sins] Ἐπίσχεσις ἀμαρτιῶν, in reference to the remission, or removal of sins. Baptism pointing out the purifying influences of the Holy Spirit; and it is in reference to that purification that it is administered, and should in consideration never be separated from it. For baptism itself purifies not the conscience; it only points out the grace by which this is to be done.

Ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost] If ye faithfully use the sign, ye shall get the substance. Receive the baptism, in reference to the removal of sins, and ye shall receive the Holy Ghost, by whose agency alone the efficacy of the blood of the covenant is applied, and by whose refining power the heart is purified. It was by being baptized in the name of Christ, that men took upon themselves the profession of Christianity; and it was in consequence of this, that the disciples of Christ were called CHRISTIANS.

39. For the promise is unto you] Jews of the land of Judea: not only the fulfilment of the promise which he had lately recited from the prophecy of Joel was made to them; but in this promise was also included, the purification from sin, with every gift and grace of the Holy Spirit.

To all that are afar off] To the Jews wherever dispersed, and to all the Gentile nations: for, though St. Peter had not as yet a formal knowledge of the calling of the Gentiles, yet the Spirit of God, by which he spoke, had undoubtedly this in view; and therefore the words are added, even as many as the Lord our God shall call; i. e. all to whom, in the course of his providence and grace, he shall send the preaching of Christ crucified.

40. Save yourselves from this untoward generation] Separate yourselves from them; be ye saved, σωθεὶς: the power is present with you, make a proper use of it, and ye shall be delivered from their obstinate unbelief, and the punishment that awaits it in the destruction of them and their city by the Romans.

41. They that gladly received his word] The word ἠκούσαντες, which signifies joyfully, readily, willingly, implies that they approved of the doctrine delivered: that they were glad to hear of this way of salvation; and that they began immediately to act according to its dictates. This last sense is well expressed in a similar phrase by Josephus, when speaking of the young Israelites enticing the Midianitish women to sin, by fair speeches, he says, αὶ τὸ ἀκούσαντες ἀξίως ἐλάτρευον τοὺς λόγους

42 * And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers.

43 And fear came upon every soul; and * many wonders and signs were done by the apostles.

44 And all that believed were together; and * had all things common;

q Verse 46. Ch. 1. 14. Rom. 12. 19. Eph. 6. 18. Col. 4. 2. Heb. 10. 23.—r Mark 16. 17. Ch. 4. 31. & 9. 12.—s Ch. 4. 32; 5. 4.—t Isa. 55. 7.

συνεκαθάρσεν, ANt. l. iv. c. 4. Then they who approved of their words consorted with them. The word is however omitted by ABCD., Coptic, Sahidic, Ethiopic, Vulgate, the Itala of the Codex Bezae, Clemens, and Chrysostom.

Were baptized] That is, in the name of Jesus, ver. 38. for this was the criterion of a Jew's conversion; and when a Jew had received baptism in this name, he was excluded from all communication with his countrymen; and no man would have forfeited such privileges, but on the fullest and clearest conviction. This baptism was a very powerful means to prevent their apostasy; they had, by receiving baptism in the name of Jesus, renounced Judaism, and all the political advantages connected with it; and they found it indispensably necessary to make the best use of that holy religion which they had received in its stead. Dr. Lightfoot has well remarked, that the Gentiles who received the Christian doctrine, were baptized in the name of the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost; whereas, the Jewish converts, for the reasons already given, were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.

Were added—three thousand souls] Προσέτερον, they sent over from one party to another. The Greek writers make use of this verb to signify that act by which cities, towns, or provinces, changed their masters, and put themselves under another government. So these 3000 persons left the scribes and Pharisees, and put themselves under the teaching of the apostles, professing the Christian doctrine; and acknowledging that Christ was come; and that he who was lately crucified by the Jews, was the promised and only Messiah; and in this faith they were baptized.

These 3000 were not converted under one discourse, nor in one place, nor by one person. All the apostles preached; some in one language, and some in another: and not in one house; for where was there one at that time, that could hold such a multitude of people? For out of the multitudes that heard, 3000 were converted; and if one in five was converted, it must have been a very large proportion. The truth seems to be this: All the apostles preached in different parts of the city, during the course of that day: and in that day, τριακισία, 3000 converts were the fruits of the conjoint exertions of these holy men. Dr. Lightfoot thinks that the account in this place, is the fulfilment of the prophecy in Psalm cx. 1, &c. The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand; this refers to the resurrection and ascension of Christ. Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power, ver. 3. This was the day of his power; and while the apostles proclaimed his death, resurrection, and ascension, the people came willingly in, and embraced the doctrines of Christianity.

42. They continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine] They received it, retained it, and acted on its principles.

And fellowship] Κοινωνία, community; meaning association for religious and spiritual purposes. The community of goods cannot be meant; for this is mentioned verses 44, 45, where it is said, they had all things common.

And in breaking of bread] Whether this means the holy eucharist, or their common meals, is difficult to say. The Syriac understands it of the former. Breaking of bread, was that act which preceded a feast or meal; and which was performed by the master of the house, when he pronounced the blessing: what we would call grace before meat. See the form on Matt. xxvi. 26.

And in prayers.] In supplications to God for an increase of grace and life in their own souls; for establishment in the truth which they had received; and for the extension of the kingdom of Christ in the salvation of men. Behold the employment of the primitive and apostolic church! 1. They were builded up on the foundation of the prophets and apostles, Jesus Christ himself being the corner-stone. 2. They continued steadfastly in that doctrine, which they had so evidently received from God. 3. They were separated from the world and lived in a holy Christian fellowship, strengthening and building up each other in their most holy faith. 4. They were frequent in breaking bread; in remembrance that Jesus Christ died for them. 5. They continued in prayers; knowing that they could be no longer faithful than while they were upheld by their God; and knowing also, that they could not expect his grace to support them, unless they humbly and earnestly prayed for its continuance.

43. And fear came upon every soul] Different MSS. and Versions read this clause thus, And great fear and trembling came upon every soul in Jerusalem. For several weeks past, they had a series of the most astonishing miracles wrought before their eyes; they were puzzled and confounded at the manner in which the apostles preached; who charged them home with the deliberate murder of Jesus Christ; and who attested in the most positive manner, that he was risen from the dead, and that God had sent down that mighty effusion of the Spirit, which they now witnessed, as a proof of his resur-

45 And sold their possessions and goods, and * parted them to all men, as every man had need.

46 * And they, continuing daily with one accord * in the temple, and * breaking bread * from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart.

47 Praising God, and * having favour with all the people. And * the Lord added to the church daily, such as should be saved.

q Ch. 1. 14.—r Luke 24. 31. Ch. 8. 42.—s Ch. 20. 7.—t Or, at home.—y Luke 2. 28. Ch. 4. 32. Rom. 11. 18.—z Ch. 5. 14. & 11. 1.

rection and ascension: and that this very person whom they had crucified, was appointed by God to be the Judge of quick and dead. They were in consequence stung with remorse, and were apprehensive of the judgments of God; and the wonders and signs continually wrought by the apostles were at once proofs of the celestial origin of their doctrine and mission, and of their own baseness, perfidy, and wickedness.

44. And all that believed] Οι πιστεύοντες, the believers, i. e. those who conscientiously credited the doctrine concerning the incarnation, crucifixion, resurrection, and ascension of Jesus Christ; and had, in consequence, received redemption in his blood.

Were together] Εν τῷ αὐτῷ. "These words signify either, in one time, chap. iii. l. or in one place, chap. ii. l. or in one thing. The last of these three senses seem to be the most proper here; for it is not probable that the believers, who were then 3000 in number, ver. 41. besides the 120 spoken of chap. 1. 15. were used all to meet at one time, or in one place in Jerusalem." See Bp. Pearce.

And had all things common] Perhaps this has not been well understood. At all the public religious feasts in Jerusalem, there was a sort of community of goods. No man at such times hired houses or beds in Jerusalem; all were lent gratis by the owners: Yoma, fol. 12. Megil. fol. 26. The same may be well supposed of their ovens, cauldrons, tables, spits, and other utensils. Also, provisions of water were made for them at the public expense. Shakkalim, cap. 9. See Lightfoot here. Therefore a sort of community of goods was no strange thing at Jerusalem, at such times as these. It appears, however, that this community of goods was carried further; for we are informed ver. 45. that they sold their possessions and their goods, and parted them to all as every man had need. But this probably means, that as in consequence of this remarkable out-pouring of the Spirit of God, and their conversion, they were detained longer at Jerusalem than they had originally intended; they formed a kind of community for the time being, that none might suffer want on the present occasion; as no doubt the unbelieving Jews, who were mockers, ver. 13. would treat these new converts with the most marked disapprobation. That an absolute community of goods never obtained in the church at Jerusalem, unless for a very short time, is evident from the apostolical precept, 1 Cor. xvi. 1, &c. by which collections were ordered to be made for the poor; but if there had been a community of goods in the church, there could have been no ground for such recommendations as these, as there could have been no such distinction as rich and poor, if every one on entering the church, gave up all his goods to a common stock. Besides, while this sort of community lasted at Jerusalem, it does not appear to have been imperious upon any: persons might or might not thus dispose of their goods, as we learn from the case of Ananias, ch. v. 4. Nor does it appear that what was done at Jerusalem at this time obtained in any other branch of the Christian church; and in this and the fifth chap. where it is mentioned, it is neither praised nor blamed. We may therefore safely infer, it was something that was done at this time, on this occasion, through some local necessity, which the circumstances of the infant church at Jerusalem might render expedient for that place, and on that occasion only.

46. They, continuing daily with one accord in the temple] They were present at all the times of public worship, and joined together in prayers and praises to God; for it is not to be supposed that they continued to offer any of the sacrifices prescribed by the law.

Breaking bread from house to house] This may signify that select companies who were contiguous to each other, frequently ate together at their respective lodgings on their return from public worship. But eat at home, which we translate from house to house, is repeatedly used by the Greek writers for home, or at home; (see margin;) for though they had all things in common, each person lived at his own table. Breaking bread is used to express the act of taking their meals. The bread of the Jews was thin, hard, and dry, and was never cut with the knife, as ours is; but was simply broken by the hand.

With gladness and singleness of heart.] A true picture of genuine Christian fellowship. They ate their bread: they had no severe fasts: the Holy Spirit had done in their souls, by his refining influence, what others vainly expect from bodily austerities. It may be said also, that if they had no severe fasts, they had no splendid feasts; all was moderation, and all was contentment. They were full of gladness, spiritual joy, and happiness; and singleness of heart, every man worthy of the confidence of his neighbour; and all walking by the same rule, and minding the same thing.

47. Praising God] As the fountain whence they had derived all their spiritual and temporal blessings; seeing him in all things, and magnifying the work of his mercy.

Having favour with all the people] Every honest, upright Jew, would naturally esteem those for the simplicity, purity, and charity of their lives. The scandal of the cross had not yet commenced; for though they had put Jesus Christ to death, they had not yet entered into a systematic opposition to the scriptures he taught.

And the Lord added to the church daily, such as should be saved. Though many approved of the life and manners of these primitive Christians, yet they did not become members of this holy church; God permitting none to be added to it, but only such, those who were saved from their sins and prejudices. The church of Christ was made up of saints: sinners were not permitted to incorporate themselves with it.

One MS. and the Armenian versions, instead of οὐκ ἔσωσαν τοὺς ἐσθλαίους, have οὐκ ἔσωσαν τοὺς ἐσθλαίους, to them who were saved: reading the verse thus: And the Lord added daily to those who were saved. He united those who were daily converted under the preaching of the apostles, to those who had already been converted. And thus every lost sheep that was found, was brought to the flock, that under the direction of the great Master Shepherd, they might go out and in, and find pasture. The words, to the church, τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, are omitted by B<sup>1</sup>, C<sup>1</sup>, E<sup>1</sup>, G<sup>1</sup>, H<sup>1</sup>, I<sup>1</sup>, K<sup>1</sup>, L<sup>1</sup>, M<sup>1</sup>, N<sup>1</sup>, O<sup>1</sup>, P<sup>1</sup>, Q<sup>1</sup>, R<sup>1</sup>, S<sup>1</sup>, T<sup>1</sup>, U<sup>1</sup>, V<sup>1</sup>, W<sup>1</sup>, X<sup>1</sup>, Y<sup>1</sup>, Z<sup>1</sup>, and several add the words ἐν τῷ αὐτῷ, at that time (which begin the first verse of the next chapter) to the conclusion of this. My old MS. English Bible, reads the verse thus: For so the Lord increased them that were saved daily, and the day, into the same thing. Nearly the same rendering as that in Wickliff. Our translation of οὐκ ἔσωσαν τοὺς ἐσθλαίους, such as should be saved, is improper and insupportable. The original means simply and solely those who were then saved: those who were redeemed from their sins, and baptized into the faith of Jesus Christ. The same as those whom St. Paul addressed, Eph. ii. 3. by grace ye are saved, ἵνα ἔσωσάμενοι: or, ye are those who have been saved by grace. So in Titus iii. 5. according to his mercy he saved us, ἐσώσεν ἡμᾶς, by the washing of regeneration. And in 1 Cor. i. 18. we have the words οὐκ ἔσωσαν τοὺς ἐσθλαίους, them who are saved, to express those who had received the Christian faith; in opposition to τοὺς ἀπολλύμενους, those who are lost, namely, the Jews, who obstinately refused to receive salvation on the terms of the Gospel, the only way in which they could be saved: for it was by embracing the Gospel of Christ that they were put in a state of salvation: and by the grace it imparted, actually saved from the power, guilt, and dominion of sin. See 1 Cor. xv. 2. I make known unto you, brethren, the Gospel which I preached unto you, which ye have received, and in which ye stand: and by which ye are saved, δι' οὗ εἰς σωτηρίαν. Our translation, which indeed existed long before our present authorized version, as may be seen in Cardmarden's Bible, 1566; Beck's Bible, 1549; and Tindall's Testament, printed by Will. Tylle, in 1548, is bad in itself, but it has been rendered worse by the comments put on it, viz. that those whom God adds to the church, shall necessarily and unavoidably be eternally saved; whereas no such thing is hinted by the original text, be the doctrine of the inflexibility of the saints true or false; which shall be examined in its proper place.

On that awful subject, the foreknowledge of God, something has already been spoken, see ver. 23. Though it is a subject which no finite nature can comprehend, yet it is possible so to understand what relates to us in it, as to avoid those rocks of presumption and dependency, on which multitudes have been shipwrecked. The foreknowledge of God is never spoken of in reference to himself; but in reference to us: in him properly, there is neither foreknowledge, nor afterknowledge. Omniscience, or the power to know all things, is an attribute of God, and exists in him as omnipotence or the power to do all things. He can do whatsoever he will; and he does whatsoever is fit or proper to be done. God cannot have foreknowledge, strictly speaking, because this would suppose that there was something coming, in what we call futurity, which had not yet arrived at the presence of the Deity. Neither can he have any afterknowledge, strictly speaking, for this would suppose that something that had taken place, in what we call preterity or past time, had now got beyond the presence of the Deity. As God exists in all that can be called eternity, so he is equally every where: nothing can be future to him, because he lives in all futurity; nothing can be past to him, because he equally exists in all past time: futurity and preterity are relative terms to us; but they can have no relation to that God who dwells in every point of eternity, with whom all that is past, all that is present, and all that is future to man, exists in one infinite, indivisible, and eternal NOW. As God's omnipotence implies his power to do all things; so God's omniscience implies his power to know all things: but we must take heed that we meddle not with the infinite free agency of this Eternal Being. Though God can do all things, he does not all things. Infinite judgment directs the operations of his power, so that though he can, yet he does not do all things, but only such things as are proper to be done. In what is called illimitable space, he can make millions of millions of systems; but he does not see proper to do this. He can destroy the solar system; but he does not do it; he can fashion and order, in endless variety, all the different beings which now exist, whether material, animal, or intellectual; but he does not do this, because he does not see it proper to be done. Therefore, it does not follow, that because God can do all things, that therefore he must do all things. God is omniscient, and can know all things; but does it follow from this, that he must know all things? Is he not as free in the volitions of his wisdom, as he is in the volitions of his power? God has ordained some things as absolutely certain; these he knows as absolutely certain. He has ordained other things as contingent; these he knows as contingent. It would be absurd to say, that he foreknows a thing as only contingent, which he has made absolutely certain. And it would be as absurd to say, that he foreknows a thing to be absolutely certain, which, in his own eternal counsel, he has made contingent. By absolutely certain, I mean a thing which must be in that order, time, place, and form, in which Divine Wisdom has ordained it to be; and that it can be no otherwise than this infinite counsel has ordained. By contingent, I mean such things as the infinite wisdom of God has thought proper to poise on the possibility of being or not being, leaving it to the will of intelligent beings to turn the scale. To deny this would involve the most palpable contradictions, and the most monstrous absurdities. If there be no such things as contingencies in the world, then every thing is fixed and determined by an unalterable decree and purpose of God; and not only all free agency is destroyed, but all agency of every kind, except that of the Creator himself; for, on this ground, God is the only operator, either in time or eternity. All created beings are only instruments, and do nothing but as impelled and acted upon by this almighty and sole Agent. Consequently, every act is his own; for if he have purposed them all as absolutely certain, having nothing contingent in them, then he has ordained them to be so: and if no contingency, then no free agency, and God alone is the sole actor. Hence, the blasphemous, though, from the premises, fair conclusion, that God is the author of all the evil and sin that are in the world; and hence follows that absurdity, that as God can do nothing that is wrong, ὡς θεὸς οὐκ ἔσται ἐν κρίσει. Sin is no more sin; a vicious human action is no crime, if God have deeded it, and, by his foreknowledge and will, impelled the creature to act it. On this ground there can be no punishment for delinquencies; for if every thing be done as God has predestined, and his determinations must necessarily be all right, then necessarily the instrument nor the agent has done wrong. Thus all vice and virtue, praise and blame, merit and demerit, guilt and innocence, are at once confounded; and all distinctions of this kind confounded with them. Now, allowing the doctrine of the contingency of human actions, (and it must be allowed, in order to shun the above absurdities and blasphemies) then we see every intelligent creature accountable for its own works, and for the use it makes of the power with which God has endued it: and to grant all this consistently, we must also grant, that God foresees nothing as absolutely and inevitably certain, which he has made contingent; and because he has designed it to be contingent, therefore he cannot know it as absolutely and inevitably certain. I conclude that God, although omniscient, is not obliged in consequence of this, to know all that he can know; no more than he is obliged, because he is omnipotent, to do all that he can do.

How many, by confounding the self and free agency of God with a sort of continual impulsive necessity, have raised that necessity into an all-commanding and over-ruling energy, to which God himself is made subject. Very properly did Milton set his damned spirits about such work as this, and has made it a part of their endless punishment.

Others apart sat on a hill retired,
In thoughts more elevate; and reason'd high
Of providence, foreknowledge, will, and fate:
Fix'd fate, free will, foreknowledge absolute,
And found no end, in wand'ring mazes lost.

PARAD. LOST, b. ii. l. 587.

Among some exceptionable expressions, the following are also good thoughts on the free agency and fall of man.

I made him just and right,
Sufficient to have stood, though free to fall.
Not free, what proof could they have giv'n sincere
Of true allegiance, constant faith, or love.
When only what they needs must do appear'd,
Not what they would? What praise could they receive Useless and vain, of freedom both despoil'd,
Made passive both, had serv'd Necessity,
Not ME.—
So without least impulse or shadow of fate,
Or aught by me immutably foreseen,
They trespass, authors to themselves in all
Both what they judge, and what they choose, for so
I form'd them free, and free they must remain
Till they enthrall themselves: I else must change
Their nature, and revoke the high decree
Unchangeable, eternal, which ordain'd
Their freedom; they themselves ordained their fall.

Ibid. b. iii. l. 96, 103, 120.

I shall conclude these observations with a short extract from Mr. Bird's Conferences, where, in answer to the objection, "If many things fall out contingently, or as it were, by accident, God's foreknowledge of them can be but contingent, dependent on man's free will;" he answers: "It is one thing to know that a thing will be done necessarily; and another, to know necessarily, that a thing will be done. God doth necessarily foreknow all that will be done; but he doth not know, that those things which shall be done voluntarily, will be done necessarily: he knoweth that they will be done: but he know-ask what, that they might have fallen out otherwise, for aught he had ordered to the contrary. So likewise, God knew that Adam would fall: and yet he knew that he would not fall necessarily: for it was possible for him not to have fallen. And, as touching God's pre-ordination going before his providence, as the cause of all events: this would be, to make God the author of all the sin in the world; his knowledge comprehending that, as well as other things. God, indeed, foreknoweth all things, because they will be done; but things are not (therefore) done, because he foreknoweth them. It is impossible that any man, by his voluntary manner of working, should elude God's foresight; but then, this foresight doth not necessitate the will; for this were to take it wholly away. For, as the knowledge of things present, imports no necessity on that which is done; so, the foreknowledge of things future, lays no necessity on that which shall be: because, whosoever knows and sees things, he knows and sees them as they are, and not as they are not: so that God's knowledge doth not confound things, but reaches to all events, not only which come to pass, but as they come to pass, whether contingently or necessarily. As for example, when you see a man walking upon the earth, and at the very same instant, the sun shining in the heavens; do you not see the first as voluntary, and the second as natural? And though at the instant you see both done, there is a necessity that they be done, (or else you could not see them at all;) yet there was a necessity of one only, before they were done, (namely, the sun's shining in the heavens,) but none at all of the other, (viz. the man's walking upon the earth.) The sun could not but shine, as being a natural agent; the man might not have walked, as being a voluntary one." This is a good argument: but I prefer that which states the knowledge of God to be absolutely free.

CHAPTER III.

Peter and John go to the temple at the hour of prayer, and heal a man who had been lame from his mother's womb, 1-8. The people are astonished, and the apostles inform them that it was not by their own power they had healed the man, but through the power of Jesus of Nazareth, whom they had crucified, 9-16. Peter both accuses and reproves them, and exhorts them to repentance, 17-21. Shows that in Jesus Christ the prophecy of Moses was fulfilled; and that all the prophets testified of Jesus and his salvation, 22-24; and that in him, the covenant made with Abraham is fulfilled; and that Christ came to bless them by turning them away from their iniquities, 25, 26. [A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCIL 1.]

NOW Peter and John went up together into the temple at the hour of prayer, being the ninth hour. And a certain man lame from his mother's womb was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple which is called Beautiful, to ask alms of them that entered into the temple. Who seeing Peter and John about to go into the temple, asked an alms. And Peter, fastening his eyes upon him with John, said, Look on us.

5 And he gave heed unto them, expecting to receive something of them. 6 Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but as I have given thee: in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, rise up and walk. 7 And he took him by the right hand, and lifted him up: and immediately his feet and ankle bones received strength; 8 And he leaping up, stood, and walked, and entered with them into the temple, walking, and leaping, and praising God. 9 And all the people saw him walking and praising God:

Ch. 3. 1. - Ps. 117. - Ch. 11. 8. - John 9. 8.

Ch. 4. 10. - 1. Cor. 25. 6. - Ch. 4. 16, 21.

NOTES.—Verse 1. Peter and John went up together] The words εν τω αερο, which we translate together, and which are the first words in this chapter in the Greek text, we have already seen, chap. II. 47. are added by several MSS. and Versions to the last verse of the preceding chapter. But they do not make so good a sense there, as they do here; and should be translated, not together, which really makes no sense here, but at that time; intimating that this transaction occurred nearly about the same time that those took place which are mentioned at the close of the former chapter.

At the hour of prayer] This, as is immediately added, was the ninth hour, which answers, in a general way, to our three o'clock in the afternoon. The third hour, which was the other grand time of public prayer among the Jews, answered, in a general way, to our nine in the morning. See the note on chap. II. ver. 15.

It appears that there were three hours of the day destined by the Jews to public prayer: perhaps they are referred to by David, Ps. lv. 17. sunrise and morning and at noon will I pray and cry aloud. There are three distinct times marked in the book of the Acts. The third hour, chap. II. 15. answering, as we have already seen, to nearly our nine o'clock in the morning; the sixth hour, chap. x. 9. answering to about twelve with us; and the ninth hour, mentioned in this verse, and answering to our three in the afternoon.

The rabbins believed that Abraham instituted the time of morning prayer; Isaac that at noon, and Jacob, that of the evening: for which they quote several scriptures, which have little reference to the subject in behalf of which they are produced. Others of the rabbins, particularly Tanchum, made a more natural division. Men should pray, 1. When the sun rises; 2. When the sun has gained the meridian; 3. When the sun has set, or passed just under the horizon. At each of these three times they required men to offer prayer to God; and I should be glad to know that every Christian in the universe observed the same rule: it is the most natural division of the day; and he who conscientiously observes these three stated times of prayer, will infallibly grow in grace, and in the knowledge of Jesus Christ our Lord.

2. A man lame from his mother's womb] The case of this man must have been well known, 1. From the long standing of his infirmity; 2. From his being daily exposed in a place so public. It appears that he had no power to walk, and was what we term a cripple, for he was carried to the gate of the temple, and laid there in order to excite compassion. These circumstances are all marked by St. Luke, the more fully to show the greatness and incontestable nature of the miracle.

The gate which is called Beautiful] There are different opinions concerning this gate. Josephus observes, Bell. Jud. lib. v. chap. v. sect. 3. that the temple had nine gates, which were on every side covered with gold and silver; but there was one gate, which was without the holy house, and was of Corinthian brass, and greatly excelled those which were only covered with gold and silver; and τὴν τῆς τῆς καταρρυτοῦ καὶ περιχρῆστῆς παρασκευῆς. The magnitudes of the other gates were equal one to another; but that over the Corinthian gate, which opened on the east, over against the gate of the holy house itself, was much larger: περιχρῆστῆς γὰρ πικρῶν οὐκ ἔστιν ἀνεστῆσαι, τσοσσοῦντα παρὲς τὰς θύρας εἶδη, καὶ τὸν κόσμον ἐπληθύνει, καὶ δαίμονες παρὸς ἀργύρου τε καὶ χρῆσται for its height was fifty cubits, and its doors were forty cubits, and it was adorned after a most costly manner, as having much richer and thicker plates of silver and gold upon them than upon the other. This last was probably the gate which is here called Beautiful; because it was on the outside of the temple, to which there was an easy access, and because it was evidently the most costly, according to the account in Josephus; but it must be granted that the text of Josephus is by no means clear.

4. Look on us] He wished to excite and engage his attention that he might see what was done to produce his miraculous cure; and it is likely, took this occasion to direct his faith to Jesus Christ. See note on verse 16. Peter and John probably felt themselves suddenly drawn by the Holy Spirit, to pronounce the healing name in behalf of this poor man.

5. Expecting to receive something of them] Because it was a constant custom for all who entered the temple to carry money with them to give to the treasury, or to the poor, or to both. It was on this ground that the friends of the lame man laid him at the gate of the temple, as this was the most likely place to receive alms.

6. Silver and gold have I none] Though it was customary for all those who entered the temple to carry some money with them, for the purposes mentioned above, yet so poor were the apostles, that they had nothing to give, either to the sacred treasury, or to the distressed. The popish writers are very dexterous at forming analogies between St. Peter and the pope; but it is worthy of note, that they have not attempted any here. Even the judicious and generally liberal Calmei, passes by this important saying of the person whom he believed to have been the first pope. Thomas Aquinas, surnamed the angelical doctor, who was highly esteemed by Pope Innocent IV., going one day into the pope's chamber, where they were reckoning large sums of money, the pope, addressing himself to Aquinas, said: "You see that the church is no longer in an age in which she can say, Silver and gold have I none!" "It is true, holy father," replied the angelical doctor, "nor can she now say to the lame man, Rise up and walk!" This was a faithful testimony, and must have cut deep for the moment. One thing is very remarkable, that though the saints of this church can work no miracles while alive, they work many when dead: and it is the attestation of those post mortem miracles, that leads to their canonization. Thomas a Becket, who did no good while he lived, is reported to have done much after his death. Many have visited his tomb, and in days of yore, many were said to be healed of whatsoever disease they had. The age is more enlightened, and the tomb of this reputed saint has lost all its power.

7. Immediately his feet and ankle-bones received strength] The suddenness of the cure was the proof of the miracle: his walking and leaping were the evidences of it.

8. Walking, and leaping, and praising God.] These actions are very naturally described. He walked, in obedience to the command of the apostle, rise up and walk: he leaped, to try the strength of his limbs, and to be convinced of the reality of the cure: he praised God, as a testimony of the gratitude he felt for the cure he had received. Now was fulfilled, in the most literal manner, the words of the prophet Isa. chap. xxxv. 6. The lame man shall leap as a hart. 9. And all the people saw him] The miracle was wrought in 10 And they knew that it was he which sat for a time at the Beautiful gate of the temple : and they were filled with wonder and amazement at that which had happened unto him.

11 And as the same man which was healed held Peter and John, all the people ran together unto them in the porch that is called Solomon's, greatly wondering.

12 And when Peter saw it, he answered unto the people, Ye men of Israel, why marvel ye at this ? or why look ye so earnestly on us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk ?

13 The God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob, the God of our fathers, hath glorified his Son Jesus ; whom ye delivered up, and denied him in the presence of Pilate, when he was determined to let him go.

14 But ye denied the Holy One and the Just, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you ;

15 And killed the Prince of life, whom God hath raised from the dead : whereof we are witnesses.

16 And his name, through faith in his name, hath made this man strong, whom ye see and know : yea, the faith which is in Jesus, John 10. 25. Ch. 5. 10. Ch. 5. 28. John 7. 38. 12. 16. & 17. 1. Matt. 23. 2. Matt. 23. 3. Mark 16. 11. Luke 24. 19. R. John 18. 41. 19. 15. Ch. 12. 26. — Ps. 16. 10. Mark 1. 8. Luke 1. 33. Ch. 2. 27. & 4. 2. — p. 7. 26. & 22. 14. — Q. or, author, Heb. 2. 10. & 2. 1. John 5. 11. — Ch. 2. 22.

the most public manner, and in the most public place ; and in a place where the best judgment could be formed of it : for as it was a divine operation, the priests, &c. were the most proper persons to judge of it ; and under their notice it was now wrought.

11. Held Peter and John] He felt the strongest affection for them, as the instruments by which the divine influence was conveyed to his diseased body.

In the porch that is called Solomon's] On this portico, see Ep. Pearce's note, inserted in this work, John x. 23.

12. As though by our own power] Δεσπότης, miraculous energy.

Or holiness] Η εὐσέβεια, meaning religious attachment to the worship of God. Do not think that we have wrought this miracle by any power of our own ; or that any super-eminent piety in us should have induced God thus to honour us, by enabling us to work it. Instead of εὐσέβεια, holiness, the Syriac of Erpen, Armenian, Vulgate, and some copies of the Bala, have εὐνομία, power or authority ; but the first appears to be the legitimate reading.

13. The God of Abraham, &c.] This was wisely introduced, to show them that He whom they called their God, had acknowledged Jesus Christ for His Son, and wrought this miracle in his name ; and by thus honouring Jesus whom they slew, he had charged home the guilt of that murder upon them.

Denied him in the presence of Pilate] Ηπρωσάθη, ye have renounced him as your king, and denounced him to death as a malefactor, when Pilate, convinced of his perfect innocence, was determined, ἀπαρτάς, judged it proper and just to let him go. Pilate wished to act according to justice ; you acted contrary to justice and equity in all their forms.

14. Ye denied the Holy One] Τὸν ἅγιον, a manifest reference to Paul. xvi. 10. Thou wilt not suffer thy Holy One to see corruption, where the original word ἅγιον Chaoidesca, thy Holy One is translated by the Septuagint τὸν ὁσίον σου, a word of the same import with that used by Peter.

And desired a murderer] Βαραββας : the case must have been fresh in their own remembrance. Like cleaves to like, and begets its like ; they were murderers themselves, and so Christ calls them, Matt. xxii. 7. and they preferred a murderer to the Holy and Righteous One of God.

15. And killed the Prince of life] Τὸν ἀρχηγὸν τῆς ζωῆς, the author of this life : not only implying that all life proceeds from Jesus Christ as its source ; but that the life-giving influence of that religion which they were now proclaiming, came all through him. Αρχηγός signifies a prime leader or author, a captain, τὸν ἀρχὴν, the beginning, head, or chief ; and αὐτός, I lead. In Heb. ii. 10. Christ is called Αρχηγὸς τῆς σωτηρίας, the Captain of salvation. He teaches the doctrine of life and salvation, leads the way in which men should walk, and has purchased the eternal life and glory which are to be enjoyed at the end of the way. So the Jews preferred a son of death, a destroyer of life, to the Author and Procurer of life and immortality !

Whereof we are witnesses] They had now wrought a most striking miracle in the name of Christ, and immediately proposed themselves as witnesses of his resurrection from the dead ; the miracle which they had thus wrought being an unimpeachable proof of his resurrection.

16. And his name] JESUS, the Saviour ; through faith in his name, as the Saviour, and author of life, and all its concomitant blessings, such as health, &c. It is not clear whether the apostles refer to their own faith in Jesus, or to the faith of the lame man. It is true Christ had promised that they should perform miracles in his name, Mark xvi. 17, 18, and that whatsoever they asked of the Father in his name, he would grant it, John xvi. 23. And they might have been led at this time to make request unto God, to be enabled to work this miracle ; and the faith they had in his unlimited power and unchangeable truth might have induced them to make this request. Or, the faith might have been that of the lame man ; the apostle, in the time they desired him to look on them, might have taught him the necessity of believing in Christ in order to his by him, hath given him this perfect soundness in the presence of you all.

17 And now, brethren, I wot that through ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers.

18 But with these things, which God before had showed by the mouth of all his prophets, that Christ should suffer, he hath so fulfilled.

19 Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord ;

20 And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you :

21 Whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets, since the world began.

22 For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me ; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you.

23 And it shall come to pass, that every soul which will not receive the blessing, which the apostles most positively attribute, not to their power or holiness, but to Jesus Christ alone. Faith always receives ; never gives.

17. I wot] I know. Wot is from the Anglo-Saxon, witan, to know ; and hence wot, science or understanding. Through ignorance ye did it] This is a very tender excuse for them ; and one which seems to be necessary, in order to show them that their state was not utterly desperate ; for if all that they did to Christ had been through absolute malice, (they well knowing who he was,) if any sin could be supposed to be unpardonable, it must have been theirs. Peter, foreseeing that they might be tempted thus to think, and consequently to despair of salvation, tells them that their offence was extenuated by their ignorance of the person they had tormented and crucified. And one must suppose, that had they been fully convinced that this Jesus was the only Messiah, they never would have crucified him ; but they did not permit themselves to receive conviction on the subject.

18. But these things—he hath so fulfilled.] Your ignorance, and malice have been overruled by the sovereign wisdom and power of God, and have become the instruments of fulfilling the divine purpose, that Christ must suffer, in order to make an atonement for the sin of the world. All the prophets had declared this ; some of them in express terms, others indirectly and by symbols ; but as the whole Mosaic dispensation referred to Christ, all that prophesied or ministered under it, must have referred to him also.

19. Repent ye therefore] Now that ye are convinced that this was the Messiah, let your minds be changed, and your hearts become contrite for the sins you have committed.

And he converted] Επιστρέψατε ; turn to God through this Christ, deeply deploring your transgressions, and believing on his name ; that your sins may be blotted out, which are not only recorded against you, but for which you are condemned by the justice of God ; and the punishment due to them must be executed upon you, unless prevented by your repentance, and turning to him whom ye have pierced. The blotting out of sins may refer to the ceremony of the waters of jealousy, where the curse that was written in the book, was to be blotted out with the bitter water. See the note on Num. v. 23. Their sins were written down against them, and cried aloud for punishment ; for they themselves had said, his blood be upon us, and upon our children, Matt. xxvi. 28. and unless they took refuge in this sacrificial blood, and got their sins blotted out by it, they could not be saved.

When the times of refreshing shall come] Dr. Lightfoot contends, and so ought all, that οὐκ ἐν εὐθυστατοις ἀναστροφῆς, should be translated, that the times of refreshing may come. Αναστροφή, signifies a breathing time, or respite, and may be here applied to the space that elapsed from this time till the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans. This was a time of respite, which God gave them to repent of their sins, and be converted to himself. Taking the word in the sense of refreshment in general, it may mean the whole reign of the kingdom of grace, and the blessings which God gives here below to all genuine believers, peace, love, joy, and communion with himself. See on verse 21.

20. Which before was preached unto you] Instead of ἀποσπεύμενον, before preached, ABDE, 63 others, both the Syriac, all the Arabic, the Armenian, Chrysostom, and others, have ἀποκηρυχθέντων, who was before designed, or appointed ; and this is without doubt the true reading. Christ crucified was the person whom God had from the beginning appointed or designed for the Jewish people. It was not a triumphant Messiah which they were to expect ; but one who was to suffer and die. Jesus was this person ; and by believing in him as thus suffering and dying for their sins, he should be again sent, in the power of his Spirit, to justify and save them.

hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people. 24 Yea, and all the prophets from Samuel, and those that follow after, as many as have spoken, have likewise foretold of these days.

25 * Ye are the children of the prophets, and of the covenant

21. When the heavens must receive] He has already appeared upon earth, and accomplished the end of his appearing; he has ascended unto heaven, to administer the concerns of his kingdom, and there he shall continue till he comes again to judge the quick and the dead.

The times of restitution of all things] The word ανακαταστασις, from ανα, which signifies from, and καταστασις, to establish, or settle any thing, viz. in a good state; and when σοφ is added to it, then this preposition implies, that this good state, in which it is settled, was preceded by a bad one, from which the change is made to a good one. So in chap. 1. 6. when the disciples said to Christ, will thou at this time restore again (ανακαταστασις) the kingdom to Israel? they meant, as the Greek word implies, will thou take the kingdom from the Romans, and give it back to the Jews? Now, as the word is here connected with, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets, it must mean the accomplishment of all the prophecies and promises contained in the Old Testament relative to the kingdom of Christ upon earth: the whole reign of grace, from the ascension of our Lord till his coming again, for all of these things have the holy prophets spoken; and as the grace of the Gospel was intended to destroy the reign of sin, its energetic influence is represented as restoring all things, destroying the bad state, and establishing the good: taking the kingdom out of the hands of sin and Satan, and putting it into those of righteousness and truth. This is done in every believing soul; all things are restored to their primitive order; and the peace of God, which passes all understanding, keeps the heart and mind in the knowledge and love of God. The man loves God with all his heart, soul, mind, and strength, and his neighbour as himself: and thus, all the things, of which the holy prophets have spoken since the world began, relative to the salvation of any soul, are accomplished in this case; and when such a work becomes universal, as the Scriptures seem to intimate that it will, then all things will be restored in the fullest sense of the term. As therefore the subject here referred to, is that of which all the prophets from the beginning have spoken, (and the grand subject of all their declarations was Christ, and his work among men,) therefore the words are to be applied to this, and no other meaning. Jesus Christ comes to raise up man from a state of ruin, and restore to him the image of God, as he possessed it at the beginning.

All his holy prophets] Harvar, all, is omitted by ABCD., some others, one Syriac, the Coptic, Ethiopic, Armenian, and Vulgate. Griesbach leaves it out of the text, and inserts the article tau, which the Greek MSS. have in the place of harvar. The text reads thus: which he hath spoken by his holy prophets, &c.

Since the world began.] An' atones; an, atone signifies complete and ever-during existence or eternity, it is sometimes applied, by way of accommodation, to denote the whole course of any one period, such as the Mosaic dispensation. See the note on Gen. xxi. 33. It may therefore here refer to that state of things from the giving of the law; and as Moses is mentioned in the next verse, and none before him, it is probable that the phrase should be so understood here. But if we apply it to the commencement of time, the sense is still good; Enoch, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these things; which God made with our fathers, saying unto Abraham, 26 And in thy seed shall all the kindreds of the earth be blessed. 27 * Unto you first, God having raised up his Son Jesus, 7 sent him to bless you, 8 in turning away every one of you from his iniquities.

* Matthew 10. 42. & 18. 34. Luke 24. 47. Chapter 17. 34, 35. — 1 Voss 22. — 2 Matt. 1. 21.

and indeed the birth, life, miracles, preaching, sufferings, death, resurrection, ascension, and reign of Jesus Christ, have been the only theme of all prophets and inspired men from the foundation of the world.

22. Moses truly said unto the fathers] On this subject the reader is requested to refer to the note at the end of Deut. xviii. From this appeal to Moses, it is evident that Peter wished them to understand that Jesus Christ was come, not as an ordinary prophet, to exhort to repentance and amendment, but as a legislator, who was to give them a new law: and whose commands and precepts they were to obey, on pain of endless destruction. Therefore, they were to understand, that the Gospel of Jesus Christ was that new law, which should supersede the old.

24. All the prophets from Samuel] Dr. Lightfoot observes, "we have Moses and Samuel mentioned together in this place, as also Psal. xcix. 6. because there were few or no prophets between these two; 1 Sam. iii. 1. and the apparition of angels having been more frequent: but after the decease of Phineas, it is a question whether there was any oracle by Urim and Thummim, through the defect of prophecy in the high-priests till the times of Samuel. But then it revived in Abimelech, Abiathar," &c. The Jews have a saying, Hiems. Chagigah. fol. 77. משה וסמואל זכו לכהונה Samuel was the chief of the prophets. Perhaps it was in reference to this, that Peter said, all the prophets from Samuel, &c. foretold of these days.

25. Ye are the children of the prophets] This is the argumentum ad hominem: as ye are the children or disciples of the prophets, ye are bound to believe their predictions, and obey their precepts; and not only so, but ye are entitled to their promises. Your duty and your interest go hand in hand; and there is not a blessing contained in the covenant which was made with your fathers, but belongs to you. Now as this covenant respected the blessings of the Gospel, you must believe in Jesus Christ, in order to be put in possession of all these blessings.

26. Unto you first, God having raised up] As you are the children of the prophets, and of the covenant, the first offers of salvation belong to you; and God thus makes them to you. The great mission of Jesus Christ is directed first to you, that you may be saved from your sins. God designs to bless you, but it is by turning each of you away from his iniquities. The salvation promised in the covenant is a salvation from sin, not from the Romans; and no man can have his sin blotted out, who does not turn away from it.

1. We may learn from this, that neither political nor ecclesiastical privileges can benefit the soul, merely considered in themselves: a man may have Abraham for his father, according to the flesh; and have Satan for his father, according to the spirit. A man may be a member of the visible church of Christ, without any title to the church triumphant. In short, if a man be not turned away from his iniquities, even the death of Christ profits him nothing. His name shall be called Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sin.

2. If Christ be the substance and sum of all that the prophets have written, is it not the duty and interest of every Christian, in reading the prophets, &c. to search for the testimony they bear to this Christ, and the salvation procured by his death?

CHAPTER IV.

The priests and Sadducees are incensed at the apostles' teaching, and put them in prison, 1-3. The number of those who believed, 4. The rulers, elders, and scribes, call the apostles before them, and question them concerning their authority to teach, 5-7. Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, answers, and proclaims Jesus, 8-12. They are confounded at his discourse and the miracle wrought on the lame man, yet command them not to preach in the name of Jesus, 13-18. Peter and John refuse to obey, 19, 20. They are further threatened and dismissed, 21, 22. They return to their own company, who all join in praise and prayer to God, 23-30. God answers and fills them with the Holy Spirit, 31. The blessed state of the primitive disciples, 32-36. The case of Jesus, who sold his estate, and brought the money to the common stock, 36, 37. [A. M. 4033. A. D. 29. An. Olymp. CCII. 1.]

AND as they spake unto the people, the priests, and the captain of the temple, and the Sadducees, came upon them,

2 Being grieved that they taught the people, and preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead.

3 And they laid hands on them, and put them in hold unto the next day: for it was now even-tide.

a Or, ruler, Luke 22. 4. Ch. 8. 32. — Matt. 23. 2. Acts 22. 5.

NOTES.—Verse 1. The Priests] These persons had evidenced the most implacable enmity against Christ from the beginning.

The captain of the temple] See this office particularly explained in the note on Luke xvii. 4.

The Sadducees] Whose whole system was now in danger, by the preaching of the resurrection of Christ; for they believed not in the immortality of the soul, nor in any future world. These made a common cause with the priests, &c. to suppress the evidence of Christ's resurrection, and silence the apostles.

4 Howbeit many of them which heard the word believed; and the number of the men was about five thousand.

5 * And it came to pass on the morrow, that they their rulers, and elders, and scribes,

6 And * Annas the high priest, and Caiaphas, and John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the high priest, were gathered together at Jerusalem.

o Luke 3. 2. John 11. 49. & 12. 12.

2. Being grieved] Διανεμεσθαι, they were thoroughly fatigued with the continuance of this preaching, their minds suffered more labour through vexation at the success of the apostles, than the bodies of the apostles did in their fatiguing exercise of preaching during the whole day.

4. The number—was about five thousand] That is, as I understand the passage, the 120 which were converted before pentecost, the 3000 converted at pentecost, and 1800 converted since the conversion of the 3000, making in the whole 5000, or about, about that number: there might have been more or less; the historian does not fix the number absolutely. A 20 For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard.

21 So when they had farther threatened them, they let them go, finding nothing how they might punish them, because of the people: for all men glorified God for that which was done.

22 For the man was above forty years old, on whom this miracle of healing was showed.

23 And being let go, they went to their own company, and reported all that the chief priests and elders had said unto them.

24 And when they heard that they lifted up their voice to God with one accord, and said, Lord, thou art God, which hast made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all that in them is:

25 Who by the mouth of thy servant David hath said, Why did the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things?

26 The kings of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together against the Lord and against his Christ.

27 For a truth against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, (both Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, were gathered together.)

28 For to do whatsoever thy hand and thy counsel determined before to be done.

29 And now, Lord, behold their threatenings: and grant unto thy servants, that with all boldness they may speak thy word,

30 By stretching forth thine hand to heal; and that signs and wonders may be done by the name of thy holy child Jesus.

31 And when they had prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled together, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the word of God with boldness.

32 And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul: neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common.

33 And the number of the men increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

34 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

35 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

36 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

37 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

38 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

39 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

40 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

41 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

42 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

43 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

44 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

45 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

46 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

47 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

48 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

49 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

50 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

51 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

52 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

53 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

54 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

55 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

56 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

57 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

58 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

59 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

60 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

61 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

62 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

63 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

64 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

65 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

66 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

27 For a truth against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, (both Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, were gathered together.)

28 For to do whatsoever thy hand and thy counsel determined before to be done.

29 And now, Lord, behold their threatenings: and grant unto thy servants, that with all boldness they may speak thy word,

30 By stretching forth thine hand to heal; and that signs and wonders may be done by the name of thy holy child Jesus.

31 And when they had prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled together, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the word of God with boldness.

32 And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul: neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common.

33 And the number of the men increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

34 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

35 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

36 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

37 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

38 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

39 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

40 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

41 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

42 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

43 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

44 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

45 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

46 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

47 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

48 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

49 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

50 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

51 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

52 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

53 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

54 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

55 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

56 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

57 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

58 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

59 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

60 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

61 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

62 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

63 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

64 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

65 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

66 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

67 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

68 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

69 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

70 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

71 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

72 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

73 And the multitude of the disciples increased in Jerusalem, and the priests of the temple increased also, and the Grecians, and the Jews, and the Samaritans.

cles, they had reason to believe that all Jerusalem (themselves excepted, who had steeled their hearts against all good) should be converted to the religion of him whom they had steeledly crucified.

[Let us steeledly threaten them.] Απειλη απειλησασθα, let us threaten them with threatening, a Hebrewism; and a proof that St. Luke has translated the words of the council into Greek, just as they were spoken.

[That they speak—to no man in this name.] Nothing so ominous to them as the name of Christ crucified, because they themselves had been his crucifiers. On this account they could not bear to hear salvation preached to mankind through him of whom they had been the betrayers and murderers; and who was soon likely to have no enemies but themselves.

18. Not to speak—nor teach in the name of Jesus.] Any other doctrine and any other name, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites and infidels will bear, but the doctrine which is according to godliness, proclaiming salvation through the blood of Christ crucified, they will not tolerate. If their doctrine were not the truth of God, it could not be so unpopular; there is such an enmity in human nature against all that is good and true, that whatever comes from God is generally rejected by men.

19. Whether it be right in the sight of God.] As if they had said, worldly prudence, and a consideration of our secular interests would undoubtedly induce us to obey you, but acting as before God, and following the dictates of eternal truth and justice, we dare not be silent. Can it be right to obey men contrary to the command and will of God? When he commands us to speak, dare we hold our tongue? We have received our authority from God through Christ, and feel fully persuaded of the truth by the Holy Spirit which now dwells in us: and we should be guilty of treason against God were we on any consideration to suppress his testimony. Your own consciences testify that we should be sinners against our heavenly King, were we to act according to your orders: and the conclusion is, that we cannot but speak what we have seen and heard.

21. When they had further threatened them] Προσπειλησασμενοι, when they had added to their former threatenings, repeating the former menaces, and adding new penalties.

[Finding nothing how they might punish them] Or, as the Codes Bæze reads, μη εννοουσαν αριαν ως σοφουσαν, not finding a cause why they might punish them. This reading is supported by the Syriac and Arabic. Bishop Pearce says, "This is better sense and better Greek."

[Because of the people] The people saw the miracle, confessed the finger of God, believed on the Lord Jesus, and thus became converts to the Christian faith: and the converts were now so numerous, that the sanhedrim was afraid to proceed to any extremities, lest an insurrection should be the consequence.

22. The man was above forty years old] The disease was of long standing, and consequently the more inveterate; but all difficulties, small or great, yield equally to the sovereign power of God. It is as easy with God to convert a sinner of forty or fourscore, as one of ten years old. But he who now refuses to obey the call of God, has neither reason nor revelation to support himself even in the most distant hope, that he shall get, in a future time, the salvation which he rejects in the present.

23. They went to their own company] This was properly the first persecution that had been raised up against the church, since the resurrection of Christ: and as the rest of the disciples must have known that Peter and John had been cast into prison; and that they were to be examined before the sanhedrim; and knowing the evil disposition of the rulers, towards their brethren, they doubtless made joint supplication to God for their safety. In this employment, it is likely Peter and John found them on their return from the council, and repeated to them all their treatment, with the threats of the chief priests and elders.

24. Lord, thou art God] Αενορα, ο ο Θεος, Thou God art the sovereign Lord. Thy rule is universal, and thy power unlimited; for thou hast the heaven and its glories, the earth and the sea, and their endlessly varied and numerous inhabitants, under thy direction and control.

25. By the mouth of thy servant David hath said] Several add, but impertinently, δία νεωτερος δεινος, by the Holy Spirit, but it is sufficient that God has said it; and thus we find that David spoke by the inspiration of God: and that the second Psalm relates to Jesus Christ, and predicts the vain attempts made by Jewish and heathen powers to suppress Christianity.

26. Against the Lord, and against his Christ.] Κατα τον Χριστον αυτον, should be translated against his ANOINTED, because it particularly agrees with ος εξοικιας, whom thou hast ANOINTED, in the succeeding verse.

27. There is a parenthesis in this verse that is not sufficiently noticed: it should be read in connexion with ver. 23, thus: For of a truth against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, (for to do whatsoever thy hand and thy counsel determined before to be done,) both Herod and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles and people of Israel, were gathered together.

It is evident that what God's hand and counsel determined before to be done, was not that which Herod, Pontius Pilate, the Gentiles, (Romans,) and the people of Israel, had done and were doing; for then their rage and vain counsel would be such as God himself had determined should take place, which is both impious and absurd: but these gathered together to hinder what God had before determined, that his Christ or Anointed should perform; and thus the passage is undoubtedly to be understood.

[Were gathered together.] Εν τη πολι ταυτη, in this very city, are added by ABDE and several others; all the Syriac, the Coptic, Ethiopian, Armenian, Slavonian, Vulgate, Malte, and several of the primitive Fathers. This reading Griesbach has received into the text. This makes the words much more emphatic; in this thy own city, these different, and in all other cases dissentient powers, are leagued together against thine Anointed, and are determined to prevent the accomplishment of thy purpose.

29. And now, Lord, behold their threatenings] It is not against us, but against thee that they conspire: it is not to prevent the success of our preaching, but to bring to nought thy counsel: the whole of their enmity is against thee. Now, Lord, look upon it: consider this:

And grant unto thy servants] While we are endeavouring to fulfil thy counsels, and can do nothing without thee, sustain our courage that we may proclaim thy truth with boldness and irresistible power.

30. By stretching forth thy hand to heal] Show that it is thy truth which we proclaim, and confirm it with miracles, and show how highly thou hast magnified thy Son Jesus, whom they have despised and crucified, by causing signs and wonders to be wrought in his name.

Thy holy child Jesus.] Του υγιου παιδος σου, should be translated thy holy servant, as in Ver. 25. Δαβιδ παιδος σου, thy servant David, not thy child David: the word is the same in both places.

31. The place was shaken] This earthquake was an evidence of the presence of God, and a most direct answer to their prayer, as far as that prayer concerned themselves. The earthquake proclaimed the stretched out arm of God, and showed them that resistance against his counsels and determinations must come to nought.

And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost] And in consequence of this, they spake the word of God with boldness; a pointed answer to a second part of their request, ver. 29. A right prayer will always have a right and ready answer. Though these disciples had received the Holy Spirit on the day of pentecost, yet they were capable of larger communications; and what they had then received did not preclude the necessity of frequent supplies, on emergent occasions. Indeed, one communication of this Spirit always makes way and disposes for another. Neither apostle nor private Christian can subsist in the divine life, without frequent influences from on high. Had these disciples depended on their pentecostal grace, they might have sunk now under the terror and menaces of their combined and powerful foes. God gives grace for the new 29 And with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus: and great grace was upon them all.

30 Neither was there any among them that lacked: for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the price of the things that were sold, 31 And laid them down at the apostles' feet: and distributed it unto every man according as he had need.

being: but no stock for subsistence, because he will keep all his followers continually dependant on himself.

With boldness.] Παρρησια βελουται πιστευουσιν, to all who were willing to believe, is added by DE., two others, Augustin, Irenaeus, and Bede.

32. The multitude of them that believed.] The whole 5000, mentioned verse 4. and probably many others, who had been converted by the ministry of the other apostles since that time.

Were of one heart and of one soul.] Were in a state of the most perfect friendship and affection. In all the 5000 there appeared to be but one heart and one soul; so perfectly did they agree in all their views, religious opinions, and holy affections. Some MSS. add και ομοθυμαδον, εν φωνη ενουδια, and there was no kind of difference or dissention among them. This remarkable reading is found in the Codex Bezae, another of great authority, E., two others, Ambrose, Bede, Cyrilian, and Zeno. Diogenes Laertius relates of Aristotle, ερωτησθεις, τι ομοθυμαδον ενουκουσα απαντες, One soul dwelling in two bodies. This saying has been justly celebrated; but what would this wonderful philosopher have thought and said had he seen these disciples of Jesus, and friends of mankind; one soul dwelling in 5000 bodies!

They had all things common.] See the notes on chap. ii. 44. where this subject is examined. See below, ver. 34.

33. WITH great power gave the apostles witness.] This power they received from the Holy Spirit, who enabled them μεγαλη δυναμι, with striking miracles, to give proof of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus. For this is the point that was particularly to be proved: that he was slain and buried, all knew; that he rose again from the dead, many knew: but it was necessary to give such proofs as should convince and confound all. This preaching and these miracles demonstrated this divine truth: Jesus died for your sins; he rose again for your justification: behold what God works in confirmation of these glorious truths; believe therefore in the Lord Jesus, and ye shall not perish, but have everlasting life.

Great grace was upon them all.] All received much of the favour or grace of God; and they had much favour with all who feared God. In both these ways this clause may be understood; for αγαπη means favour, whether that be evidenced by benevolence, or beneficence, or by both. The favour of God is the benevolence of God; but his benevolence is never exerted without the exertions of his beneficence. Hence the grace or favour of God, always implies a blessing or gift from the hand of his mercy and power. The favour or beneficence of men may exist without beneficence, because it may not be in their power to communicate any gift or benefit, though they are disposed to do it; or, 2dly. The persons who enjoy their favour may not stand in need of any of their kind acts: but it is not so with God; his good will is ever accompanied by his good work; and every soul that is an object of his benevolence, stands in the utmost need of the acts of his beneficence. Hence as he loved the world, he gave his son a ransom for all. All needed his help; and because they all needed it, therefore all had it. And truly we may say of the whole human race, for whom the Son of God tasted death; that great grace was upon all; for ALL have been purchased by his sacrificial death. This by the way.

34. Neither was there any among them that lacked.] It was customary with the Jews to call the poor together, to eat of the sacrifice; but as the priests, &c. were incensed against Christ and Christianity, consequently the Christian poor could have no advantage of this kind; therefore, by making a com-tribution was made unto every man according as he had need.

36 And Jones, who by the apostles was surnamed Barnabas, (which is, being interpreted, The son of consolation,) a Levite, and of the country of Cyprus, 37 Having land, sold it, and brought the money, and laid it at the apostles' feet.

Ch. V. 36. 1-4 Verse 36, 37. Ch. 1, 2.

mon stock for the present necessity, the poor were supplied, so there was none among them that lacked. This provision, therefore, of the community of goods, which could be but temporary, was made both suitably and seasonably. See Bishop Pearce, and see the note on chap. ii. 44.

35. Laid-down at the apostles' feet.] To show how cordially and entirely they parted with them. And they entrusted the management of the whole to those men, to whom they found God had entrusted the gifts of his Holy Spirit, and the doctrine of the kingdom of heaven.

36. Jones.] Or Joseph, as many excellent MSS. read; but who he was, further than what is here said, we know not. Surnamed Barnabas.] Or Barabbas, according to the Coptic. The son of consolation.] Υιος παρακλησις; as παρακλησις, signifies exhortation, as well as consolation, and is, indeed, distinguished from the latter, 1 Cor. xiv. 3. The original name was probably בר נבא Bar naba, or בר נבא Bar nebai, which signifies the son of prophecy, or exhortation; and this is certainly one sense which prophecy has in the New Testament; and in this way Barnabas distinguished himself among the apostles. See Acts xi. 23. And Barnabas εκκοσμησεν ταυς ολους that with purpose of heart they should cleave unto the Lord.

A Levite, and of the country of Cyprus.] Cyprus is an island in the Mediterranean Sea, off Cilicia, and not very distant from the Jewish coast. The Jews were very numerous in that island. See Dion. Cas. lib. 65. 69. Though he was a Levite, he might have had land of his own by private purchase. The Levites, as a tribe, had no land in Israel; but the individuals certainly might make purchases any where in the country; but as Barnabas was of Cyprus, his land probably lay there; and as it is likely that he was one of those strangers that came up to Jerusalem to the late feast, and was there converted, he might have sold his land in the island to some of his own countrymen who were at Jerusalem at this time; and so, being called to the work of the ministry, continued to associate with the apostles, travelling every where, and preaching the Gospel of the kingdom of God. He was the constant companion of St. Paul, till the separation took place on account of John Mark, mentioned Acts xv. 36-39.

1. It is worthy of remark, that the two apostles of the Gentiles, though of Jewish extraction, were both born in Gentile countries: Paul in Cilicia, Barnabas in Cyprus: this gave them many advantages; served to remove prejudices from the heathens, and gavethem no doubt much facility in the Greek tongue, without which they could have done but little in Asia Minor, nor in most parts of the Roman empire where they travelled. How admirably does God determine even the place of our birth, and the bounds of our habitation! When under the influence of the grace of Christ, every thing is turned to a man's advantage. The man whom he calls to his work, he will take care to endue with every necessary qualification. And is it too much to say, that God never did call a man to preach the Gospel whom he did not qualify, in such a manner, that both the workman and the work should appear to be of God?

2. Some have said that ignorance is the mother of devotion. Devotion and religion are both scandalized by the saying. Enlightened piety has ever been the most sincere, steady, and active. God makes those wise who turn unto him; and by experimental religion, all the powers of the mind are greatly improved. Every genuine minister of Christ has an enlightened heart; and to this it is his duty to add a well cultivated mind. Ex quois ligno Mercurius non fit: A blockhead never did, and never can make a minister.

CHAPTER V.

The hypocrisy of Ananias and his wife Sapphira; and their awful death, 1-11. The apostles work many miracles, and the church of God is increased, 12-16. The high priests and the Sadducees being incensed against the apostles, seize and put them in prison, 17, 18. The angel of God delivers them, and commands them to go to the temple, and proclaim the Gospel, 19, 20. The high priests having gathered the council together in the morning, sends to the prison to have the apostles brought before him, 21. The officers return, and report that they found the prison shut, and the watch set, but that the men had got out, 22, 23. A messenger arrives in the mean while, and says, that the apostles are preaching in the temple, 24, 25. The captain and officers go and bring them before the council, who speak with them, 26-28. The apostles defend themselves, and charge the council with the murder of Christ; and assert his resurrection from the dead and ascension to the right hand of God, 29-32. The council are confounded, and purpose to slay the apostles, 33. Gamaliel gives them reasonable and prudent advice, 34-39. The council agree to it, but before they discharge the apostles, beat them, and command them not to teach in the name of Jesus, 40. They depart, rejoicing in their persecution, and continue to preach Jesus Christ, 41, 42. (Chr. A. M. 4094. Chr. A. D. 30.)

BUT a certain man named Ananias, with Sapphira his wife, sold a possession,

2 And kept back part of the price, his wife also being privy to it, and brought a certain part, and laid it at the apostles' feet.

Ch. A. 32.—b Numb. 35.6. Deut. 23.18. Mat. 23.4.

NOTE.—Verse 1. But a certain man named Ananias.] Of these unhappy people we have no further account than what is recorded here. In reference to birth, connexions, &c. their 3 But Peter said, Ananias, why hath Satan filled thine heart to lie to the Holy Ghost, and to keep back part of the price of the land?

4 Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? and after it was a Luke 12.3.—d Or, to deceive, verse 9.

names are written in the dust. The import of his name, מרצחאנניא, the grace or mercy of the Lord, agrees very ill with his conduct.

said, was it not in thine own power? why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God.

5 And Ananias hearing these words fell down, and gave up the ghost: and great fear came on all them that heard these things.

6 And the young men arose, / wound him up, and carried him out, and buried him.

7 And it was about the space of three hours after, when his wife, not knowing what was done, came in.

8 And Peter answered unto her, Tell me whether ye sold the land for so much? And she said, Yea, for so much.

9 Then Peter said unto her, How is it that ye have agreed together to tempt the Spirit of the Lord? behold, the feet of them which have buried thy husband are at the door, and shall carry thee out.

1 Verse 10, 11.—John 10. 40.—Verse 5, Matt. 4. 7.—h Verse 9.—1 Verse 5, Ch. 2. 23. 24. 19. 17.—h Ch. 2. 43. 24. 23. 24. 19. 11. Rom. 16. 19. 2 Cor. 12. 21. Heb. 2. 4.

2. Kept back part of the price Ananias and Sapphira were evidently persons who professed faith in Christ, with the rest of the disciples. While all were making sacrifices for the present necessity, they came forward among the rest, pretending to bring all the money they had got for a possession, κτῆμα, (of what kind we know not), which they had sold. A part of this price, however, they kept back, not being willing to trust entirely to the bounty of Providence, as the others did; thinking, probably, that as the whole was their own, they had a right to do with it as they pleased; and so they had: they were under no necessity to sell their possession: but the act of selling it for the ostensible purpose of bringing it into the common stock, left them no further control over it, nor property in it: and their pretence, that the money which they brought was the whole produce of the sale, was a direct lie in itself, and an attempt to deceive the Holy Spirit, under whose influence they pretended to act. This constituted the iniquity of their sin.

3. Why hath Satan filled thine heart? The verb πληροῦν, which we translate to fill, Kypke has showed, by many examples, to signify, to instigate, excite, impel, &c. and it was a common belief, as well among the heathens as among the Jews and Christians, that when a man did evil, he was excited to it by the influence and malice of an evil spirit. It is strange, that by the general consent of mankind, sin against God has been ever considered so perfectly unnatural, and so evil in itself, that no man would commit it, unless impelled to it by the agency of the devil. The words of St. Peter here, prove that such an agency is not fictitious; if there had been no devil, no some wile, and perhaps feel it their interest to believe; or if this devil had no influence on the souls of men, Peter, under the agency of the Holy Spirit, would not have expressed himself in this way; for if the thing were not so, it would have been the most direct means to lead the disciples to form false opinions, or to confirm them in old and absurd prejudices.

To lie to the Holy Ghost? Πωροῦσθαι το Πνεῦμα το Ἅγιου, to deceive the Holy Spirit. Every lie is told with the intention to deceive, and they wished to deceive the apostles, and, in effect, that Holy Spirit, under whose influence they professed to act. Lying against the Holy Ghost, is in the next verse said to be lying against God: therefore, the Holy Ghost is GOD.

To keep back part of the price? Νοσοφισαῖν ἀπὸ τῆς τιμῆς. The verb νοσοφισαῖν, νοσοφισαῖν, is used by the Greek writers to signify purloining part of the public money, speculation. The word is used here with great propriety, as the money for which the estate was sold, was public property; as it was for this purpose alone that the sale was made.

4. Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? See the note on ver 2, and see that also on chap. 11. 44.

5. Fell down, and gave up the ghost? Πέσω, ἐξέλιπε, falling down, he expired, breathed his last: "Gave up the ghost" is a very improper translation here. See the notes on Gen. xv. 8. and on Matt. xxvii. 50. Two things may be remarked here: 1. That the sin of this person was of no ordinary magnitude, else God would not have visited it with so signal a punishment. 2. That Peter must have had the power to discern the state of the heart, else he had not known the perdition of Ananias. This power, commonly called the discernment of spirits, the apostles had as a particular gift, not, probably, always, but at select times: when God saw it necessary for the good of his church.

6. The young men arose) Some of the stout young men, belonging to the disciples then present; who were the fittest to undertake a work of this kind, which required considerable bodily exertion.

Buried him.) This was on the same day on which he died. It was a clear case, that he was dead: and dead by a judgment of God, that would not be revoked. As therefore it was no case of suspended animation, there was no reason to delay the burial.

9. To tempt the Spirit of the Lord? So, the Holy Ghost, God, and the Spirit of the Lord, are the same person.

10. Yielded up the ghost? See ver. 5. It was not by Peter's words, nor through Peter's prayers, nor through shame, nor through remorse, that this guilty pair died, but by an immediate judgment of God. The question of the salvation of Ananias and Sapphira has been not a little agitated; and most seem inclined to hope that though their sin was punished by this awful display of the divine judgment, that mercy was ex-

10 b Then fell she down straightway at his feet, and yielded up the ghost: and the young men came in, and found her dead, and carrying her forth, buried her by her husband.

11 And great fear came upon all the church, and upon as many as heard these things.

12 And by the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people; (and they were all with one accord in Solomon's porch.

13 And of the rest durst no man join himself to them: but the people magnified them.

14 And believers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women.)

15 Inasmuch that they brought forth the sick into the streets, and laid them on beds and couches, that at the least the shadow of Peter passing by, might overshadow some of them.

16 There came also a multitude out of the cities round about tended to their souls. For my own part I think their sin was what the apostle, 1 John v. 16. calls a sin unto death: a sin which must be punished with temporal death, or the death of the body, while mercy was extended to the soul. It was right in this infant state of the church, to show God's displeasure against deceit, fraud, and hypocrisy; had this guilty pair been permitted to live after they had done this evil, this long-suffering would have been infallibly abused by others; and in stead of leading them who had sinned, to repentance, might have led them to hardness of heart, by causing them to presume on the mercy of God. That hypocrisy may be afraid to show her face, God makes these two an example of his justice; but because they had not the ordinary respite, we may presume that God extended mercy to them, though cut off almost in the act of sin.—Their case however, cannot become a precedent, allowing them to have received mercy; because those who have seen in this case the clemency of God, must expect much sorer punishment, if with such an example before their eyes, they should presume on the mercy of their Maker: this would be doing evil that good might come: and the perdition of such would be just.

1 Chap. 2. 11. & 4. 32.—m John 9. 32. & 42. 12. & 19. 38.—n Ch. 2. 17 & 4. 9.—o Or, in every street.—p Matt. 9. 21. & 14. 23. Ch. 19. 12.

11. Great fear came upon all the church) This judgment answered the end for which it was inflicted; a deeply religious fear occupied every mind: and hypocrisy and deception were banished from this holy assembly. On the word Church, see the observations at the end of Matt. xvi. it has been properly observed, that we have in this place a native specimen of a New Testament church: 1. Called by the Gospel; 2. Grafted into Christ by baptism; 3. Animated by love; 4. United by all kinds of fellowship; 5. And disciplined by the exemplary punishment of hypocrites. See Dodd.

12. By the hands of the apostles) This verse should be read with the 18th, to which it properly belongs.

Solomon's porch.) See the note on John x. 23.

13. And of the rest durst no man join himself to them) Who were these called the rest, τῶν λοιπῶν; Dr. Lightfoot thinks the 120 are intended, of which he supposes Ananias to have been one; who all seeing wonders wrought by the apostles, were afraid to associate themselves with them in any way of equality; as they saw that God put peculiar honour upon them. Calmet more rationally observes, that the Jewish nation was then divided into many different sects, who entertained widely different opinions on various articles. The apostles adopted none of these jarring sentiments, and none of the different sects dared to join themselves to them; neither Pharisees, Sadducees, nor Herodians, as such, were found in this simple holy church. The people felt the force and power of the apostles' doctrine, and magnified them; no more attending to the teaching of the others: the apostles taught them as men having authority, and not as the scribes and Pharisees. This irritated the high-priest and his Sadducean council, and led them to adopt the measures mentioned below, ver. 17.

14. And believers were the more added to the Lord) Believers, 1. Those who credited the divine mission of Christ. 2. That he was the Messiah. 3. That he died for their sins.

4. That he rose again. 5. That he ascended into heaven. 6. That he sent down the gift of the Holy Spirit. 7. That he ever appeared in the presence of God for them. 8. That he ever appeared in the presence and remission of sins. And 9. He by whom the world is to be judged. These were simple articles, of the truth of which they had the fullest evidence.

15. Inasmuch that they brought forth the sick) This verse is a continuation of the subject begun in the 15th. The following is the order in which all these verses should be read from the 11th to the 15th.

11. And great fear came upon all the church, and upon as many as heard these things.

13. And of the rest durst no man join himself to them; but the people magnified them:

14. And believers were the more added to the Lord, both men and women.

12. (last clause) And they were all with one accord in Solomon's porch.

12. (first clause) And by the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people;

15. Inasmuch that they brought forth the sick into the streets, and laid them on beds and couches, &c. &c. How these different verses, and clauses of verses, got so in nata Jerusalem, bringing sick folks, and them which were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were healed every one. 17 Then the high-priest rose up, and all they that were with him, (which in the sect of the Sadducees,) and were filled with indignation, 18 And laid their hands on the apostles, and put them in the common prison.

19 But the angel of the Lord by night opened the prison doors, and brought them forth, and said, 20 Go, stand and speak in the temple to the people all the words of this life.

21 And when they heard that they entered into the temple at Acts 17, 18. John 11, 32.—Chap. 4, 1, 2, 6.—Or, once.— Luke 21, 12.—

terminated and confounded as they are now in our common text, I cannot tell: but the above will appear at once to be the natural order in which they should be placed.

That—the shadow of Peter passing by) I cannot see all the miraculous influence here, that others profess to see. The people who had seen the miracles wrought by the apostles pressed with their sick to share the healing benefit: as there must have been many diseased people, it is not likely that the apostles, who generally addressed such persons, prayed, and used imposition of hands, could reach all those that were brought to them, as fast as the multitude of their friends could wish. As therefore they could not get Peter or the other apostles, personally, to all their sick, they thought if they placed them on that side of the way, where the shadow was projected, (the sun now probably declining, and consequently the shadow lengthening,) they should be healed by the shadow of the man passing over them, in whose person such miraculous powers were lodged. But it does not appear that the persons who thus thought and acted, were of the number of those converts already made to the faith of Christ: nor does it appear that any person was healed in this way. The sacred penman simply relates the impression made on the people's minds, and how they acted in consequence of this impression. A pious writer, assuming that the shadow of Peter actually cured all on which it was projected, argues from this precarious principle in favour of the wonderful efficacy of relics: for says he, "if the shadow of a saint can do so much, how much more may his bones, or any thing that was in contact with his person perform?" Now, before this conclusion can be valid, it must be proved, 1. That the shadow of Peter did actually cure the sick; 2. That this was a virtue common to all the apostles; 3. That all eminent saints possess the same virtue; 4. That the bones, &c. of the dead, possess the same virtue with the shadow of the living; 5. That those whom they term saints, were actually such; 6. That miracles of healing have been wrought by their relics; 7. That touching these relics as necessarily produces the miraculous healing, as they suppose the shadow of Peter to have done. I think there is not sufficient evidence here that Peter's shadow healed any one, though the people thought it could; but allowing that it did, no evidence can be drawn from this, that any virtue is resident in the relics of reputed or real saints, by which miraculous influence may be conveyed. It was only in rare cases that God enabled even an apostle to work a miracle.

After the words, might overshadow some of them, the Vulgate adds, et liberaverunt ab infirmitatibus suis, a Greek MS. (E.) has nearly the same words, και προωωωσεν αρισ ανθρωπων ης ετισον, and that they might be freed from all the infirmities which they had; a few other MSS. agree in the main with this reading.

16. Sick folks, and them which were vexed with unclean spirits) Here it is evident that sick people are distinguished from those who were vexed with unclean spirits; and therefore they were not one and the same thing. The same distinction is made Matt. iv. 24. x. 1. Mark i. 32, 34. xvi. 17, 18. and Luke iv. 40, 41. and vii. 21.

17. The high-priest—and—the sect of the Sadducees] Αιρεσις των αδουδαιων, of the heresy of the Sadducees. In this place as well as in several others, the word αιρεσις, heresy, has no evil meaning in itself; it is a word of distinction, and may receive either a good or bad colouring from the persons or opinions designated by it. It signifies a sect or party whether good or bad, distinguished from any other sect. Αιρεσις, Aeresy, comes from αιρεω, I choose, and was anciently applied to the different sects of the heathen philosophers, the members of each sect having chosen their own in preference to all the others. It has been applied among ecclesiastical writers, in the same way; when a man chooses one party of Christians in preference to others, to be his companions in the way of salvation; and he chooses them and their creed and Christian disciplines, because he believes the whole to be more consistent with the oracles of God, than any of the rest. The church of Rome has thought proper to apply it to all those who can neither credit her transubstantiation, depend on her purgatory, nor worship her relics. A heretic, in her acceptance, is one who is not a papist, and becomes not a papist, utterly out of the way, and out of the possibility of being saved. These persons should recollect that, by a then persecuting brother, St. Paul, all the apostles, and the whole church of Christ, were termed Μακαριων αιρεσις, the heresy of the Nazarenes, ch. xxiv. 5. and it was after the way which the persecuting Jews called Aseway that St. Paul and the rest of the apostles, were shipped early in the morning, and taught. But the high-priest came, and they that were with him, and called the council together, and all the senate of the children of Israel, and sent to the prison to have them brought.

22 But when the officers came, and found them not in the prison, they returned and told,

23 Saying, The prison truly found we shut with all safety, and the keepers standing without before the doors: but when we had opened, we found no man within.

24 Now when the high-priest and the captain of the temple and the chief priests heard these things, they doubted of this whereunto this would grow.

John 6, 66, & 17, 2. 1 John 5, 11.—Chap. 4, 5, 6. Verse 17, 20.— Luke 22, 4. Chap. 4, 1.

the God of their fathers, lb. ver. 14. and it was according to the strictest heresy in the Jewish church, αποβησαν αιρεσις, that St. Paul lived, before his conversion, chap. xxvi. 5. and we find from chap. xviii. 22 that the whole church of Christ was termed this heresy, ταυρις αιρεσις, chap. xviii. 22 and this by persons who intended no reproach, but wished simply to distinguish the Christians from scribes, Pharisees, sadducees, &c. Heresy, therefore, in its first acceptation, signifies simply a choice: afterward it was applied to designate all those persons who made the same choice, and hence the word sect and it became synonymous; in process of time it was applied to those professing Christianity, who made, in some cases, a different choice as to some article of faith, or form of worship, from those which had obtained in that part of the church with which they had been before connected. The majority from whom they became thus separated, spoke evil of them, and treated them ill, because they presumed to choose for themselves, on the foundation of the Holy Scriptures; and because they would take nothing for the truth of God that was not accredited from heaven. Thus, when the people, now called Protestants, began to examine their creed according to the Holy Scriptures, and in consequence of this examination, left out auricular confession, indulgences, the priest's power to forgive sins, adoration of saints, angels, and relics; purgatory, and the doctrine of transubstantiation, because they could not find them in the word of God; the papists called them heretics, by which they meant, in opposition to the meaning of the word, persons holding damnable errors; and as such, they persecuted, burnt, and destroyed them wherever they had power. Now be it known to these persecutors, that the Protestants still choose to reject opinions and practices which they know to be unscriptural, absurd, and superstitious; and which they have a thousand times demonstrated to be such; and on this ground may they still be HERETICS!

Were filled with indignation] Ζηλος, with zeal. Ζηλος, from ζω, to be hot, and λα or λια, very much, signifies a vehement affection or disposition of the mind, which, according to its object, is either good or bad; laudable or blameable. Its meaning in this place is easily discerned; and not improperly translated indignation, in our version. We need not be surprised that the Sadducees were filled with indignation, because the apostles proclaimed the resurrection of Christ; and through that, the general resurrection, which was diametrically opposed to their doctrine; for they denied the possibility of a resurrection, and believed not in the being of either angel or spirit: nor did they allow of the existence of a spiritual world. See on chap. iv. 2

18. Put them in the common prison.] It being too late in the evening to bring them to a hearing. To this verse the Codes. Beza adds, και προωωωσεν εις κειρας, εις τα ιδια, and each of them went to his own house.

19. But the angel of the Lord—opened the prison doors) This was done, 1. To increase the confidence of the apostles, by showing them that they were under the continual care of God; and, 2. To show the Jewish rulers that they were fighting against Him while persecuting his followers, and attempting to prevent them from preaching the Gospel. This was another warning graciously given them by a good and merciful God, that they might repent, and so escape the coming wrath.

20. All the words of this life.] All the doctrines of life eternal, founded on the word, death, and resurrection of Christ Jesus. This is another paraphrase for Gospel. Go to the temple, the most public place: and speak to the people, who come there to worship according to the law, the words of this life; the whole doctrine of salvation from sin and death: and show that the law is fulfilled in the sacrifice of Jesus: and that, by his resurrection, he has brought life and immortality to light.

21. Called the council together] Συνοδου, the sanhedrim, presbytery, if they did differ, is not now known.

22. The prison truly found we shut] All the doors were properly bolted, and the keepers at their post; but when we had opened for it appears they were alone in possession of the keys; how much must this have increased their astonishment when they found that the doors were not broken open, the guards properly posted, and every thing as they left it; for they themselves had put the apostles in prison, but when they had opened, there was no man within!

24. They doubted of them whereunto this would grow.] They did not know what to think of the apostles, whether they had saved themselves by magic; or whether they were 26 Then came one and told them, saying, Behold, the men whom ye put in prison are standing in the temple, and teaching the people.

26 Then went the captain with the officers, and brought them without violence: for they feared the people, lest they should have been stoned.

27 And when they had brought them, they set them before the council: and the high-priest asked them, 28 Saying, Did not we straitly command you that ye should not teach in this name? and behold, ye have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine, and intend to bring this man's blood upon us.

29 Then Peter and the other apostles answered and said, We ought to obey God rather than men.

30 The God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew and hanged on a tree.

31 Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Saviour, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins.

32 And we are his witnesses of these things; and so is also the Holy Ghost, whom God hath given to them that obey him.

33 When they heard that, they were cut to the heart, and took counsel to slay them.

34 Then stood there up one in the council, a Pharisee, named Gamaliel, a doctor of the law, had in reputation among all the people, and commanded to put the apostles forth a little space;

35 And said unto them, Ye men of Israel, take heed to yourselves what ye intend to do as touching these men. For before these days rose up Theudas, boasting himself to be somebody; to whom a number of men, about four hundred, joined themselves: who was slain; and all, as many as obeyed him, were scattered, and brought to nought.

36 And after these things, there rose up Judas the Galilee, who gathered together about four hundred men: and he also was perished, and all that obeyed him were scattered.

37 Now these things were done before Jerusalem was besieged by the Romans: and yet they were not brought to nought.

38 Therefore I counsel you, that ye leave these men alone, and let them alone: for if this counsel prevail with our brethren, ye will not be troubled: but if the counsel shall prevail, let them be as the other nations, and let them alone.

39 And he said unto them, I counsel you, that ye touch not these men: for if they be found guilty, we will punish them: but if not, let them alone, that they be not troubled.

40 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

41 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

42 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

43 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

44 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

45 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

46 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

47 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

48 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

49 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

50 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

51 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

52 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

53 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

54 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

55 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

56 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

57 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

58 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

59 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

60 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

31 Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Saviour, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins.

32 And we are his witnesses of these things; and so is also the Holy Ghost, whom God hath given to them that obey him.

33 When they heard that, they were cut to the heart, and took counsel to slay them.

34 Then stood there up one in the council, a Pharisee, named Gamaliel, a doctor of the law, had in reputation among all the people, and commanded to put the apostles forth a little space;

35 And said unto them, Ye men of Israel, take heed to yourselves what ye intend to do as touching these men.

36 For before these days rose up Theudas, boasting himself to be somebody; to whom a number of men, about four hundred, joined themselves: who was slain; and all, as many as obeyed him, were scattered, and brought to nought.

37 And after these things, there rose up Judas the Galilee, who gathered together about four hundred men: and he also was perished, and all that obeyed him were scattered.

38 Therefore I counsel you, that ye leave these men alone, and let them alone: for if this counsel prevail with our brethren, ye will not be troubled: but if the counsel shall prevail, let them be as the other nations, and let them alone.

39 And he said unto them, I counsel you, that ye touch not these men: for if they be found guilty, we will punish them: but if not, let them alone, that they be not troubled.

40 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

41 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

42 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

43 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

44 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

45 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

46 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

47 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

48 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

49 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

50 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

51 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

52 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

53 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

54 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

55 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

56 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

57 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

58 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

59 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

60 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

61 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

62 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

63 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

64 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

65 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

66 And he said unto them, We will not stir up the people, lest we be brought to nought.

delivered by a real miracle; and they were at a loss to tell what the issue of these things would be.

26. Then came one and told them] White they were in the perplexity mentioned above, a messenger surprised them with the information, that the very men whom they had imprisoned the preceding night, were standing in the temple and teaching the people!

26. Brought them without violence] On receiving the information mentioned above, proper officers were sent to seize, and bring them before the council. The officers on reaching the temple, found the multitude gladly receiving the doctrine of the apostles: and so intent on hearing all the words of this life, that they were afraid to show any hostility to the apostles, lest the people should stone them: we may therefore conclude that the officers entreated them to accompany them to the council; and that they felt it their duty to obey every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake, and so cheerfully went with them, trusting in the Lord their God.

28. Did not we straitly command you] Ου παραγγελα παραγγελαμεν, with commanding did we not command you; another proof of the accuracy and fidelity of St. Luke, who seems always to give every man's speech as he delivered it: not the substance, but the very words. See chap. iv. 17.

Not teach in this name] That is, of JESUS, as the Christ, or Messiah. His saving name, and the doctrines connected with it, were the only theme and substance of their discourses.

Intend to bring this man's blood upon us.] You speak in such a way of him to the people, as to persuade them that we have crucified an innocent man; and that we must fall victims on the account to the Divine vengeance, or to the fury of the people, whom, by your teaching, you are exciting to sedition against us.

29. We ought to obey God rather than men.] The same answer they gave before, chap. iv. 19. founded on the same reason, which still stood good. We have received our commission from GOD: we dare not lay it down at the desire or command of men. See the note on chap. iv. 19.

30. The God of our fathers raised up Jesus] It was well to introduce this, that the council might at once see, that they preached no strange God; and that he who so highly honoured the patriarchs, Moses, and the prophets, had yet more highly honoured Jesus Christ in raising him from the dead, and seating him at his right hand; and proclaiming him as the only giver of salvation, and the repentance which leads to it.

Whom ye slew] They charge them again with the murder of Christ, as they had done before, ch. iv. 10-12. where see the notes.

31. Him hath God exalted with his right hand] By a supereminent display of his almighty power, for so the right hand of God often means; he has raised him from the dead, and raised his human nature to the throne of his glory. Instead of δεξια, the right hand, the Codex Bezae has δεξην, to glory.

A Prince] The leader or director in the way. See the notes on chap. iii. 15 and 19.

And a Saviour] Σωστης, a deliverer or preserver. The word σωστης comes from σωω, to save, deliver, preserve, escape from death, or danger, bring into a state of security or safety. Jesus and Saviour are nearly of the same import. See the note on John i. 17. He alone delivers from sin, death, and hell; by him alone we escape from the snares and dangers to which we are exposed: and it is by and in him, and in union with him, that we are preserved blameless and harmless, and made the sons of God without rebuke. He alone can save the soul from sin, and preserve it in that state of salvation.

To give repentance] See this explained Matt. iii. 2.

Forgiveness of sins.] Αφεση των ημαρτων, the taking away of sins. This is not to be restrained to the mere act of justification; it implies the removal of sin, whether its power, guilt, or impurity, be considered. Through Jesus we have the destruction of the power, the pardon of the guilt, and the cleansing from the pollution of sin. And was Jesus Christ exalted a Prince and a Saviour to give repentance and remission of sins to ISRAEL? then none need despair. If such as were now before the apostles, could be saved, then the salvation of the very worst of transgressors, of any or all sin, this side perdition, is gloriously possible. Yes, for his name's sake!

for every man; and he prayed for his murderers, compared to some of whom, JUDAS himself was a saint.

The two words in italics, in this text, to be, are impertinently introduced; it reads much better without them.

32. We are his witnesses] The word αρα, his, is omitted by AD. and several others of good note; the Syriac, all the Arabic, Ethiopic, and Vulgate. It does not seem to be necessary.

Of these things] Των ημαρτων τουτων, of these transactions; i. e. of Christ's life and miracles, and of your murderous proceedings against him.

And so is also the Holy Ghost] In the gift of tongues lately communicated; and by his power and influence on our souls, by which we are enabled to give irrefragable witness of our Lord's resurrection.

To them that obey him.] We obey God, not you; and therefore God gives us this Spirit, which is in us a fountain of light, life, love, and power. The Spirit of God is given to the obedient in proportion as a man who has received the first influences of it, (for without this, he cannot move in the spiritual life,) is obedient to those influences, in the same proportion, the gifts and graces, the light, life, and power of the Holy Spirit, are increased in his soul.

33. They were cut to the heart] Δακρυερωτο, literally, they were seen through, from δια, through, and πηνη, to see. They were stung to the heart, not with compunction and remorse, but with spite, malice, and revenge: for, having the murder of Christ thus brought home to their consciences, in the first feelings of their malice and revenge, they thought of destroying the persons who had witnessed their nefarious conduct.

34. A Pharisee, named Gamaliel, a doctor of the law] "This," says Dr. Lightfoot, "was Rabban Gamaliel the first; commonly, by way of distinction, called Rabban Gamaliel the elder. He was president of the council after the death of his own father Rabban Simeon, who was the son of Hillel. He was St. Paul's master, and the 35th receiver of the traditions, and on this account might not be improperly termed νομοδιδασκαλος, a doctor of the law, because he was one that kept and handed down the Cabala received from mount Sinai. He died 18 years before the destruction of Jerusalem, his son Simeon succeeding him in the chair, who perished in the ruins of the city." Though probably no favourer of Christianity, yet for a Pharisee, he seems to have possessed a more liberal mind than most of his brethren; the following advice was at once humane, sensible, candid, and enlightened.

35. What ye intend to do] Το πολλησιν παροισιν, what ye are about to do, they had already intended to destroy them; and they were now about to do it.

36. Rose up Theudas] Josephus, Ant. lib. xx. cap. 4. sect. 1. mentions one named Theudas who was the author of an insurrection; about whom there has been much controversy whether he were the person spoken of here by Gamaliel. Every circumstance as related by Josephus agrees well enough with what is referred to here, except the etymology; for the Theudas mentioned by Josephus, made his insurrection when Pappus was governor of Judea; which was at least ten years after the time in which the apostles were brought before this council. Much labour has been thrown away in unsuccessful attempts to reconcile the historians and the evangelists, when it is very probable they speak of different transactions. Bishop Pearce thinks "the whole difficulty will disappear if we follow the opinion of Abp. Usher, who imagined that Luke's Theudas was the same with that Judas of whom Josephus gives this account, Ant. lib. xvii. cap. 12. sect. 5. and War, lib. ii. cap. 4. sect. 1. that a little after the death of Herod the Great, he raised an insurrection in Galilee, and that he was defeated and put to death, as is implied in sect. x. of the same chapter. That Theudas and Judas might be names for the same persons, Ep. Pearce thinks probable from the consideration, that the same apostle who is called Judas in John vi. 68. and Luke vi. 16. and called Jude, an Jude i. s. in Matt. xii. 18. called Theudas; and in Matt. x. 3. is also called Lebbaeus. This apostle having the names Judas and Theudas, and Lebbaeus, no Jew had more than two names, unless when a patronymic name was given to him, as when Joseph was named Jesus, 37 After this man rose up Judas of Galilee in the days of the taxing, and drew away much people after him: he also perished; and all, even as many as obeyed him, were dispersed.

38 And now I say unto you, Refrain from these men, and let them alone: for if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to nought:

39 But if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it; lest haply ye be found even <sup>to</sup> to fight against God.

Prover. 21. 29. Isa. 40. 24. Mat. 19. 17. Luke 9. 15. 1 Cor. 1. 25. — Ch. 7. 51. & 53. & 2. 2. — Ch. 4. 12. — Matt. 16. 17. & 23. 24. Mark 13. 9.

was called Barabbas, i. e. the son of Saba. It is no unreasonable thing to suppose, that Theudas and Theudas are the same name; and that therefore the person called Theudas in Luke, is probably the same whom Josephus in the places above quoted, calls Judas."

Dr. Lightfoot thinks, that "Josephus has made a slip in his chronology;" and rather concludes, that the Theudas mentioned in the Ant. lib. xx. cap. 4. sect. 1. is the person referred to in the text. I confess the matter does not appear to me of so much consequence: it is mentioned by Gamaliel in a careless way, and St. Luke, as we have already seen, scrupulously gives the words of every speaker. The story was no doubt well known, and there were no doubts formed on it by the Jewish council. We see plainly the end for which it was produced; and we see that it answered this end most amply; and certainly we have no further concern with Gamaliel or his story.

Boasting himself to be somebody) Αυτων ειπαι τινα αυτων, saying that he was a great personage, i. e. according to the supposition of Bp. Pearce, setting himself up to be king of the Jews, see the preceding note. After αυτων, himself, αυτων, great one, is added by several very respectable MSS. and Versions.

37. Judas of Galilee) Concerning Judas of Galilee, Rabbi Abraham in Jussavim, fol. 139. writes thus, "In this time there were three sects: for besides the Pharisees and Sadducees, Judas of Galilee began another sect, which was called Essenes. They caused the Jews to rebel against the Romans, by asserting that they should not obey strangers; nor call any man lord (or governor), but the holy blessed God above." Rabbi Abraham makes a mistake here: the Essenes existed long before the days of Judas of Galilee; but it is very possible that he might have been one of that sect. Josephus mentions the instruction made by Judas of Galilee, Ant. lib. xviii. cap. 1. and says it was when Cyrenus was governor of Syria: see his note on Luke 11. 2. Bishop Pearce supposes that there were two αρεσπαται, taxation or enrolments; and that the one mentioned here took place ten years after that mentioned in Luke 11. He observes also, in conformity with the note on the preceding verse, that the Judas mentioned here, was not only different from that Judas or Theudas spoken of before, but that his pretence for rebellion was different: the former Judas wished to have the empire of Judea; the latter only maintained that it was base and sinful to obey a heathen governor.

38. Refrain from these men) Do not molest them, leave them to God: for if this counsel and work be of man it will come to nought, like the rebellion of Theudas, and that of Judas of Galilee; for whatever pretends to be done in the name of God, but is not of him, will have his curse and not his blessing. He whose name is prostituted by it, will vindicate his injured honour, and avenge himself.

39. But if it be of God ye cannot overthrow it) Because his counsel cannot fail; and his work cannot be counteracted. If he be determined that this doctrine shall prevail, it is vain for us to attempt to suppress it.

Last haply ye be found—to fight against God.) Μακροτ και θεσπειντες, τωπαιντες. Some have thought that they saw a parallel to these words in the speech of Diomedes, when seeing Mars associated with Hector, oppose the Grecians, he judged farther opposition vain, and desired his troops to retire from the battle.

Το θαι: παρα εις γε θηου, δε λαιων αμνη: και νυν δε παρα αυτων Α ης, βροτοι ωπρι τωιου.

40 And to him they agreed: and when they had called the apostles, and beaten them, they commanded that they should not speak in the name of Jesus, and let them go.

41 And they departed from the presence of the council, rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for his name.

42 And daily in the temple and in every house, they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ.

1. Matt. 5. 12. Rom. 13. 2. Cor. 12. 10. Phil. 1. 29. Heb. 10. 34. James 1. 2. 1 Pet. 4. 12. 15. — Ch. 2. 26. — Ch. 4. 20. 25.

Αλλα προς τρωτοι τεταραμμενοι αυτω επισσω εταροι, υπο θεου ε παραυτων ιδι μαχησθαι. II. I. v. 603 Protected always by some power divine; And Mars attends this moment at his side In form a man. Ye therefore still retire, But facing still your foes: nor battle wage However fierce, yet fruitless, with the gods.—Κωρηναι.

40. To him they agreed) That is, not to obey the apostles, nor to attempt any farther to imprison them; but their malevolence could not be thus easily satisfied; and therefore they beat them, probably gave each of them thirty-nine stripes, and having commanded them not to speak in the name of Jesus, they let them go. It was of Jesus they were afraid: not of the apostles. They plainly saw, that if the doctrine of Christ was preached, it must prevail: and if it prevailed, they must come to nought. It was a wise saying of the popish bishops in the time of Queen Mary: If ye do not put down this printing, it will put us down. They laboured to put down the printing, but they could not; and under God the printing, by exposing the wickedness of their doctrine and practices, and especially by multiplying copies of the New Testament, did most effectually put them down.

41. Rejoicing that they were counted worthy, &c.) The whole verse may be read thus: But they departed rejoicing from the presence of the sanhedrim, because they were deemed worthy to be dishonoured on account of the name. The word αυτων, his, is omitted by ABCD, several others, Erpean Syriae, and the Coptic. THE NAME, probably by this time, distinguished both the Author of salvation and the sacred system of doctrine which the apostles preached. To rejoice in persecution, and triumph in the midst of pain, shame, disgrace, and various threatened deaths, is the privilege of the New Testament. Nothing of this kind, as far as I can recollect, appears even in the choicest antique, under the Old Testament dispensation. Some of them fretted and mourned, and sometimes even murmured; some merely possessed their souls in patience: Christians exulted and triumphed in the God of their salvation. This is no mean proof of the additional light and evidence which the New Testament dispensation affords.

42. Daily in the temple) That is, at the hours of morning and evening prayer; for they felt it their duty to worship God in public, and to help others to make a profitable use of the practice. Every man that professes Christianity, should in this respect also, copy their conduct: nor can any man be considered to bare any religion, let his sentiments be what they may, who does not attend on the public worship of his Maker.

They ceased not to teach and preach Jesus) Far from desisting, they became more zealous, yet incessant in their work. They took advantage of the public assemblies in the temple, as well as of all private opportunities, to teach all the truths of their holy religion; and to preach, proclaim Jesus as the only Messiah, that he who was crucified, rose from the dead, and was exalted a Prince and a Saviour at the right hand of God. How little must these men have regarded their lives, who in the midst of such danger could pursue a line of conduct which, to all human views, must terminate in their ruin. They loved their Master, they loved his work, they loved their thankless countrymen, they loved their present wages, persecution and stripes: and hated nothing but their own lives! These men were proper persons to be employed in converting the world. Preachers of the Gospel, look at those men, and learn at once your duty, your employment, and your interest. Live and preach like apostles, and God will crown your labours with similar success.

CHAPTER VI.

The Hellenistic Jews complain against the Hebrews, that their widows were neglected in the daily ministrations, 1. To remedy the evil complained of, the apostles appoint seven deacons to superintend the temporal affairs of the church, 2-6. The progress of the word of God in Jerusalem, 7. Stephen, one of the deacons, becomes very eminent, and confounds various Jews of the synagogue of the Libertines, &c. 8-10. They suborn false witnesses against him, to get him put to death, 11-14. He appears before the council with an angelic countenance, 15. [A. M. cir. 4036. A. D. cir. 31. An. Olym. cir. CCL 2.]

AND in those days, when the number of the disciples was multiplied, there arose a murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in the daily ministrations.

a Ch. 2. 40. & 4. 4. & 5. 14. Verse 7.

b Ch. 9. 22. & 11. 20. — Ch. 4. 23.

NOTES.—Verse 1. A murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews] Those who were here termed Grecians, Ελληνισται, or Hellenists, were Jews who sojourned now at Jerusalem, but lived in countries where the Greek language was spoken, and probably, in general, know no other. They are distinguished here from those called Hebrews, by which they are to be understood native Jews, who spoke what was then termed the Hebrew language, a sort of Chaldeo-Syriac. It has been remarked that Greek words ending in ων, imply inferiority. Ελληνος, Hellenes, was distinguished from Ελληνισται: the former imply pure Greeks, native Greeks, who spoke the Greek tongue in its purity; and the latter, Jews or others sojourning among the Greeks, but who spoke the Greek language according to the Hebrew idiom. Pythagoras divided his disciples into two classes; those who were capable of entering into the spirit and mystery of his doctrine, he called Πυθαγορειται, Pythagoreans; those who were of a different cast he termed Πυθαγορεισται, Pythagorists, the former were eminent, and worthy of their master; the latter only so on. The same distinction is made between those called

2 Then the twelve called the multitude of the disciples unto them, and said, 'It is not reason that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables.

3 Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business.

4 Exod. 15:17.—4 Deu. 1:18. Ch. 1:21 & 16:2. 1 Tim. 3:1.—(Ch. 2:4)

Artisans, and Artificers, Attic and Atticians: the pure and less pure Greeks, as between those called Ελληνες and Ελληνιστας, Hellenes and Hellenists, pure Greeks and Graecising Jews. See Jamblicus De Vit. Pyth. cap. 18. and Schoetigen on this place.

The cause of the murmuring mentioned here seems to have been this: When all the disciples had put their property into a common stock, it was intended that out of it each should have his quantum of supply. The foreign or Hellenistic Jews began to be jealous that their widows were neglected in the daily ministrations—that they either had not their proportion, or were not duly served, the Palestine Jews being partial to those of their own country. This shows that the community of goods could never have been designed to become general. Indeed it was no ordinance of God; and in any state of society, must be, in general, impracticable. The apostles hearing of this murmuring, came to the resolution mentioned below.

2. It is not reason! Ουκ απορον τον, It is not pleasing, proper, or fitting, that we should leave the word of God, that we should give up ourselves, or confide to others, the doctrine of salvation which God has commanded us to preach unto the people.

And serve tables! Become providers of daily bread for your widows and poor; others can do this, to whom our important office is not intrusted.

3. Wherefore—look ye out among you seven men! Choose persons in whom ye can all confide, who will distribute the provisions impartially, and in due time; and let these persons be the objects of the choice both of the Hebrews and Hellenists, that all cause of murmuring and discontent may be done away. Though seven was a sacred number among the Jews, yet there does not appear to be any mystery intended here. Probably the seven men were to take each his day of service; and then there would be a superintendent for these widows, &c. for each day of the week.

Of honest report! Μακροπροσωπων, persons to whose character there is authentic testimony, well known, and accredited.

Full of the Holy Ghost! Filled into the spirit of the Gospel dispensation; and made partakers of that Holy Ghost by which the soul is sanctified, and endued with those graces which constitute the mind that was in Christ.

And wisdom! Prudence, discretion, and economy; for mere piety and uprightness could not be sufficient, where so many must be pleased, and where frugality, impartiality, and liberality, must ever walk hand in hand.

Whom we may appoint! Instead of κατασκευασειν, we may appoint, παρασκευασειν, we shall appoint, in the reading of ABCDE, and several others. It makes however very little difference in the sense.

4. We will give ourselves continually to prayer! Προσκαθησθησμεν, we will steadfastly and invariably attend, we will carefully keep our hearts to this work. The word is very emphatic.

To prayer—See this defined, Matt. vi. 5. Even apostles could not live without prayer: they had no independent graces: what they had, could not be retained without an increase; and for this increase they must make prayer and supplication, depending continually on their God.

Ministry of the word! Διακονια του λογου, the deaconship of the word. The continuous proclamation of the Gospel of their Lord; and to make this effectual to the souls of the hearers, they must continue in prayer: a minister who does not pray much, studies in vain.

The office of deacon, διακονος, came to the Christian from the Jewish church. Every synagogue had at least three deacons, which were called εταροι παρακονος, or δευτεροι παρρες, to feed, nourish, support, govern. The Deacons, or deacons, was a sort of judge in the synagogue; and in each, doctrine and wisdom were required: that they might be able to discern and give right judgment in things both sacred and civil. The Πρωτακων, and δευτεροακων, were also a sort of deacons. The first was the priest's deputy, and the last was, in some cases, the deputy of this deputy, or the subdeacon. In the New Testament the apostles are called deacons, 2 Cor. vi. 4. Eph. iii. 7. Colos. i. 23. See also 2 Cor. xi. 15. Christ himself, the shepherd and bishop of souls, is called the deacon of the circumcision, Αγιος δε Χριστος δευτερος διακονος υψιστου κηρυκτηρος. Rom. xv. 8. As the word implies to minister or serve; it was variously applied, and pointed out all those who were employed in helping the bodies or souls of men; whether apostles, bishops, or those whom we call deacons. Some remark that there were two orders of deacons: 1. Διακονοι του πνεωματος, deacons of the SPIRIT, whose business it was to take care of the alms collected in the church, and distribute them among the poor, widows, &c. 2. Διακονοι του λογου, deacons of the word, whose business it was to preach and variously instruct the people. It seems that after the persecution raised against the apostolic church, in consequence of which they became dispersed, the deaconship of tables ceased, as did this: their successors, who were 4 But we will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word.

5 And the saying pleased the whole multitude: and they chose Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, and Philip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and Nicolas, a proselyte of Antioch:

6 Ch. 11:30.—6 Ch. 8:5, 25 & 21:8.—1 Rev. 2:6, 18.

one of these deacons, who at first served tables, beheld himself entirely to preaching of the word, see chap. viii. 4, &c. In the primitive church, it is sufficiently evident that the deacons gave the bread and wine in the eucharist to the believers in the church; and carried it to those who were absent. Just. Mar. Apoll. ii. p. 162. they also preached, and in some cases administered baptism. See Suicer on the words Διακονος, Κηρυκτος, and Βαρριτος. But it appears they did the two last by the special authority of the bishop. In the ancient Roman church, and in the Romish church, the number of seven deacons, in imitation of those appointed by the apostles, was kept up; and in the council of Neocaesarea it was decreed that this number should never be exceeded even in the largest cities; vide Council Neocaesar. Canon xiv. Other churches varied this number; and the church of Constantinople had not less than one hundred. Deacons were ordained by the bishops, by imposition of hands. No one was ordained deacon till he was twenty-five years of age, and we find that it was lawful for them to have wives. See Suicer under the word Διακονος; and see the note on Matt. xx. 28.

In the church of England, (the parent and nearest to the apostolic model) the doctrine and discipline of all national churches, a deacon receives ordination by the imposition of the hands of a bishop, in consequence of which he can preach, assist in the sacrament of the Lord's supper, and in general perform any sacred office except consecrating the elements, and pronouncing the absolution. No person in this church can be ordained deacon till he be twenty-three years of age, unless by dispensation from the Abp. of Canterbury. There were deacons both in the apostolic and primitive church, who had principally the care of the women; and visited and ministered to them in those circumstances in which it would have been improper for a deacon to attend. They also assisted in preparing the female candidates for baptism.

At present the office for which the seven deacons were appointed, is, in the church of England, filled by the church-wardens and overseers of the poor; in other churches and religious societies, by elders, stewards, &c. chosen by the people, and appointed by the minister.

5. Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost! A person every way properly fitted for his work; and thus qualified to be the first martyr of the Christian church.

Nicolas a proselyte of Antioch! A heathen Greek, who had not only believed in the God of Israel, but had also received circumcision; and consequently, was a proselyte of the covenant; for had he been only a proselyte of the gate, the Jews could not have associated with him. On the word proselyte, see the note on Exod. xii. 43. As this is the only proselyte mentioned here, we may presume that all the rest were native Jews. From this Nicolas, it is supposed that the sect called Nicolaitans, mentioned Rev. ii. 6, 15. derived their origin. Dr. Lightfoot doubts this, and rather inclines to derive the name "from Νικολο nicola, let us eat together; those brutes, encouraging each other to eat meats offered to idols, like those in Gen. xii. 13. who said, let us eat flesh and drink wine, &c." Both Irenaeus and Epiphanius derive this sect from Nicolas the deacon. Clemens Alexandrinus gives this Nicolas a good character, even while he allows that the sect who taught the community of wives pretended to derive their origin from him. See on Rev. ii. 6.

6. And when they had prayed! Instead of nat, the Codex Bezae reads orate, who, referring the act of praying to the apostles, which removes a sort of ambiguity. The apostles prayed for these persons, that they might in every respect be qualified for their office, and be made successful in it. And when they had done this, they laid their hands upon them; and by this rite, appointed them to their office. So then it plainly appears that the choice of the church was not sufficient; nor did the church think it sufficient; but as they knew their own members best, the apostles directed them, ver. 3. to choose those persons whom they deemed best qualified according to the criterion laid down by the apostles themselves, that they should be of honest report, and full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom. Let us examine the process of this business. 1. There was an evident necessity that there should be more helpers in this blessed work. 2. The apostles called the church together, that they might consider of this necessity, and provide for it. ver. 3. They directed the disciples to choose out from among themselves such persons as they judged the most proper for the work. 4. They gave them the criterion, by which their choice should be directed; not any man, not every man, not their nearest relative, or best beloved friend; but such as were of honest report, whose public character was known to be unblemished; and men who were full of the Holy Ghost, the influence of which would keep all right within, and direct their hearts into all truth; and men who were known to be men of prudence and economy, for not every good and pious man may be proper for such a work. 5. Seven persons being chosen by the disciples according to this criterion are pre

6 Whom they set before the synagogues: and when they had prayed, they laid their hands on them.

7 And the word of God increased; and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly; and a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith.

8 And Stephen, full of faith and power, did great wonders and miracles among the people.

9 Then there arose certain of the synagogue, which is called the synagogue of the Libertines, and Cyrenians, and Alex-

1. Ch. 12. 13. — 2. Ch. 17. & 2. 17. & 13. 1. Tim. 4. 14. & 5. 22. 3. Tim. 1. 5. — Ch. 12. 26. & 13. 2. — John 10. 39. — Gal. 5. 6.

andrians, and of them of Cilicia and of Asia, disputing with Stephen.

10 And they were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake.

11 Then they suborned men which said, We have heard him speak blasphemous words against Moses, and against God.

12 And they stirred up the people, and the elders, and the scribes, and came upon him, and caught him, and brought him to the council.

1. Ch. 22. 29. Ch. 13. 26. 17. 13. — Luke 11. 15. Ch. 5. 20. See Exod. 12. Isa. 34. 17. — 2. Kings 21. 10. 13. Matt. 23. 29.

enabled to teach great wonders and miracles among the people.

6. The apostles, receiving them from the hands of the church, consecrated them to God by prayer, imploring his blessing on them and their labour. 7. When this was done, they laid their hands upon them in the presence of the disciples, and thus appointed them to this sacred and important work: for it is evident they did not get their commission merely to serve tables, but to proclaim in connexion with and under the direction of the apostles, the word of life. Let no man say, that any of the things here enumerated was unnecessary; and let no church pretend or affect to do without them. 1. No preacher or minister should be provided till there is a place for him to labour in, and necessity for his labour. 2. Let none be imposed upon the church of Christ who is not of that church; well known and fully approved by that branch of it with which he was connected. 3. Let none be sent to publish salvation from sin, and the necessity of a holy life, whose moral character cannot bear the strictest scrutiny among his neighbours and acquaintance. 4. Let none, however moral, or well reported of, be sent to convert souls, who has not the most solid reason to believe that he is moved thereto by the Holy Ghost. 5. Let those who have the power to appoint, see that the person be a man of wisdom, i. e. sound understanding; for a willing or a blockhead, however upright, will never make a Christian minister: and that he be a man of prudence, knowing how to direct his own concerns, and those of the church of God, with discretion. 6. Let no private person, nor number of private members in a church, presume to authorize such a person, though in every way qualified to preach the Gospel; for even the 120 primitive disciples did not arrogate this to themselves. 7. Let the person be brought to those to whom God has given authority in the church: and let them after most solemnly invoking God, lay their hands upon him, according to the primitive and apostolic custom, and thus devote him to the work of the ministry. 8. Let such an one from that moment consider himself the property of God and his church, and devote all his time, talents, and powers, to convert sinners, and build up believers in their most holy faith. 9. And let the church of God consider such a person as legitimately and divinely sent; and receive him as the ambassador of Christ.

7. The word of God increased.] By such preachers as the apostles and these deacons, no wonder the doctrine of God increased, became widely diffused and generally known: in consequence of which the number of the disciples must be greatly multiplied: for God will ever bless his own word, when ministered by those whom he has qualified to proclaim it.

A great company of the priests were obedient to the faith.] This was one of the greatest miracles wrought by the grace of Christ: that persons so intent on the destruction of Christ, his apostles, and his doctrine, should at last espouse that doctrine as astonishing; and that they who had without the evidence of the miracles of Christ should have yielded to the doctrine of his death and resurrection is worthy of note. And from this we may learn that it is not by miracles that sinners are to be converted unto God, but by the preaching of Christ dying for their offences, and rising again for their justification.

Instead of liberos, priests, a few MSS. and the Syriac, read hæreticos, Jews; for the copyists seem to be struck here with two difficulties.

1. That such persons as these priests could be converted. 2. That the word exco, company, or multitude, could with propriety be applied to this class, which must have been inconsiderable in their numbers, when compared with the rest of the Jews. To preserve the ancient reading, which is undoubtedly genuine, some have altered the text by conjectures: and by putting a comma after exco, and a sed before very liberos make the text read thus: And a great multitude, and some of the priests, were obedient to the faith. This conjecture is unnecessary, as there is no such difficulty here, as to require so disreputable an expedient, which is not recommended by the evidence of a single MS. or Version. 1. The grace of Christ Jesus can save even a murderous Jewish priest; his death is a grand atonement for all crimes, and for the worst of sinners. 2. In the twenty-four courses of priests, there was not a multitude merely, but multitudes; indeed the number of ecclesiastics at Jerusalem was enormous. A great company out of these might be converted, and yet multitudes be left behind.

8. Stephen full of faith and power.] Instead of faith, virtus is a better grace, in the reading of ABD, several others, the Syriac of Babylon, the Arabic, Armenian, Vulgate, and some of the Latin Bibles. This reading Gutbach has admitted into the text. Some MSS. join both readings. Stephen was full of faith, gave evidence to the presence of the Spirit of God; he was full of grace; receiving the fulfillment of those promises, he enjoyed the fruits of the union of the Divine Spirit; and such of the favour of his God; and in consequence, he was full of power, virtus, of divine gifts and graces, by which he was enabled to teach great wonders and miracles among the people.

9. The synagogue of the Libertines, &c.] That Jews and proselytes from various countries had now come up to Jerusalem to bring offerings, and to attend the feast of pentecost, we have already seen, chap. ii. The persons mentioned here, were foreign Jews, who appear to have had a synagogue peculiar to themselves at Jerusalem; in which they were accustomed to worship when they came to the public festivals.

Various opinions have been entertained concerning the Libertines mentioned here: Bp. Pearce's view of the subject appears to me to be the most correct.

